Do you think it’s right or good business to play a Marguerite Clark or Pauline Frederick, or any other Paramount Picture, with its beautiful and costly settings, its unsurpassed direction, its carefully selected stories—for two or three days, and even one day in some cases—and then forget it?

Take for instance, the Paramount Pictures for the week of March 26th, Jesse L. Lasky presents Sessue Hayakawa in “The Bottle Imp” by Robert Louis Stevenson. Here is a wonderful picture that should be shown “extra time” by every exhibitor in the country. Picturesque Hawaii for a background, with an erupting volcano, and a wild struggle in the clear Hawaiian waters, introduced into Stevenson’s charming, mystical tale, puts punch into a great story.

Pallas Pictures presents House Peters and Myrtle Stedman in “As Men Love” by Lois Zellner. The author of many Paramount successes has contributed a rare human interest story of the torn friendship of two men and a fickle woman.

Don’t you think you could use them longer—if advertised properly, or re-play pictures like these, and save money?

Do you think it’s good business to treat a Paramount Picture like so many feet of film?
"See that key—the Mayor of Kansas City gave me that. He said—if you can’t open your new studio with this key use it on the hearts of the American people—so I said, ‘You know me Al’—and boys—I’m going to it—we’ll just simply rock ’em off the seats."

All any exhibitor has to do to get my comedies is to pay for them, whether he is now doing business with the Paramount Exchange or not.

“Paramount Pictures Corporation was selected to distribute my comedies because they have the best ordered exchange offices, give the best service and most courteous attention in the business. I visited most of them on my way east, and I know.”

The Story of a Girl Who Saved A Man's Soul—Never Knowing The Miracle She Had wrought

A Five Part Blue Ribbon Feature by F. Berkeley Smith Directed by Charles Brabin

A Gleaning of Press Reviews Which Give "Babette" A Royal Welcome

"If every five-reel picture produced were as good as 'Babette', there would be little need of ever asking an exhibitor to sign a contract—he would be only too glad to pay his program rentals far in advance."

Moving Picture World, March 31st.

"Peggy Hyland wins new laurels as 'Babette' at the Rialto. Marc MacDermott is unquestionably one of the most attractive rogues on the screen."

New York Sun, March 19th.

"Pretty Peggy Hyland with irresistible Marc MacDermott are at the Rialto in a fascinating picture called 'Babette'. The plot embodies all the thrills which audiences love to feel."

"Babette' delighted capacity audiences at The Rialto, New York's Photoplay Theatre de Luxe, the week of March 18th.

"Greater Even Than 'The Battle Cry of Peace'",

Unanimous Verdict of Philadelphia Newspapers at Opening of Run in Chestnut Street Opera House Means Even Greater Profits for Exhibitors than Astounding Records Made by "Battle Cry"

PHILADELPHIA EVENING LEDGER:
"Womanhood" is about four times as interesting as 'The Battle Cry of Peace' and four times four times as handsome in visual appeal, in realistic sense, in dramatic value."

PHILADELPHIA LEDGER:
"More forceful even than 'The Battle Cry of Peace.' All in all, the best propaganda picture which has yet been shown."

PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER:
"'Womanhood' is perhaps the most wonderful of the many great screen productions of recent date, marvelous in its realism, surprising in its newness, daringly thrilling in the telling of the story."

PHILADELPHIA NORTH AMERICAN:
"Womanhood' seems to be about the best preparedness production yet put on the screen—this because it equals the others in spectacular show and surpasses them in moderation."

PHILADELPHIA BULLETIN:
"An impassioned plea for American Preparedness, produced in a manner which promises to make it a success among presentations of the kind, both as a thrilling entertainment and as a revelation of the dangers that beset this nation."

PHILADELPHIA RECORD:
"There is a plea for preparedness in 'Womanhood,' but this is in great part through the story itself, and the film is not a preaching in the usual manner of propaganda. Wonderfully realistic battle scenes, excellence of photography, and many unusual effects combine to give this picture a foremost position among pretentious and important productions for the screen."

Gentlemen:-

"Beware of Strangers" is completing its third week at the La Salle Opera House where the crowds have been numerous at performance;

In fact, upon two occasions we have had to ask for police reserves to keep them in order.

While the picture is an intensely interesting one, the box-office is conclusive evidence that it is a sound success.

Very truly yours,

Are Motion Picture Exhibitors Human Beings?

Goldwyn's owners believe that they are. Many producing organizations have been wrecked by the character and habits of the men employed to carry on business relations with the exhibitors of America. Goldwyn will make no mistakes of this kind. Its representatives will be able, clean-cut, hard-working business men and they will be gentlemen. They will not be pledge and promise-breakers. They will be men you can depend upon. They will come to you with heads filled with a knowledge of service and promotion. They will, in addition to booking a picture in your theatre, help you sell it to your public.

Besides its tremendously popular stars in plays by the world's most successful authors, and in addition to the ability and standing of its partners, Goldwyn has another big asset and that is:

A skilled knowledge of how to bring people to a box office and sell them admissions when they come there.

BREAKING ALL RECORDS!

Universal Serial and Dramatic Series Setting Fast Pace

From Exhibitors and Exchange men in every section of the country come enthusiastic reports of the marvelous reception accorded the wonderful mystery serial "The Voice on the Wire," recently released by the Universal Film Mfg. Company. Founded on that immensely popular novel of the same name, written by Eustace Hale Ball, famous for his production of "Traffic in Souls," and other notable successes, "The Voice on the Wire" has set a fast pace in serial thrillers that is coming money for Exhibitors. A baffling series of mysterious events, each of which is preceded by a ghostly warning from a mysterious "voice on the wire" gives this great multi-reel picture its name. As John Shirley, famous private investigator, Ben Wilson, the handsome, virile Universal Star, has the opportunity of his successful career. Supported by Beautiful Neva Gerber, and a brilliant cast, with a lavish scenic investment, the Universal's latest serial reaches the highest standard of production. Produced by Stuart Paton, the masterly director of the Universal's stupendous spectacle, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," there is marvelous continuity from episode to episode, and punches galore from start to finish. Here is an opportunity to book a serial that will give you fifteen weeks of capacity business. You can book "The Voice on the Wire" from any of the 73 Universal Exchanges, or from the Home Office.

INCREASING POPULARITY

Greets Brilliant Releases of Universal Screen Magazine

AILED by fans, exhibitors and exchange men alike as the greatest single reel novelty ever filmed, the Universal Screen Magazine, is now, by popular demand, released every week. For freshness of treatment, selection of interesting subjects, timely topics, etc., the Screen Magazine is comparable only to a great popular magazine of wide circulation. One of the principal reasons for the unprecedented popularity of this novel picture is the fact that in it will be found something to interest every man, woman and child who ever attends a moving picture theatre. The subjects include among others, Latest Inventions; Scientific Progress; Beauty Hints; Domestic Science; Lessons in Cooking and Housekeeping; Juveniles; Animated Sculpture; Travelogues; Industrial Progress (showing how articles in common use are made); Our Dumb Animal Friends; What We Eat; Nature Studies; and a score of Miscellaneous Subjects which cover the entire range of human activity. Not only has the Universal Screen Magazine proved immensely popular with the average "movie fan," but it has received the unqualified endorsement of hundreds of noted scientists, educators, preachers, business men, club women, etc. It will pack your house on the dullest day of the week. It is unusual—a winner from the start. Book through any Universal Exchange, or THE UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE, 1600 Broadway, New York.

TEN MUTUAL-CHAPLINS NOW FINISHED OFFER BIG OPPORTUNITIES

There are great opportunities for big box office receipts in the series of Mutual-Chaplin Specials now available at all Mutual Exchanges. These subjects are the most costly, the most carefully staged comedies obtainable. Plenty of time has been taken in producing each picture. The stage settings are elaborate and are carefully worked out in detail. Each and every bit of comic business is thought out so carefully that it is "sure fire" stuff. It gets laughs every time.

Ten Mutual-Chaplin subjects are now finished. Nine are available. They are "The Floor Walker," "The Fireman," "The Yagabound," "One A. M.," "The Count," "The Cuckoo," "The Tick," and "Easy Street." The tenth, "The Cure," will be released on April 30. All of them are widely varied in their nature. All of them are sure to appeal to people of every age. There is amusement in each Mutual-Chaplin Special for all nationalities—all classes. They can be shown with equal success in the largest transit or in neighborhood houses with small seating capacities.

Repeat Bookings.

Exhibitors everywhere are finding it highly profitable to arrange repeat bookings on the Mutual-Chaplin series. If you haven't shown any of them, an exceptional opportunity awaits you. If you have shown them, you can pack your theatre again by arranging repeat showings. Start with the first and show them all at regular intervals. Any Mutual Exchange will arrange the bookings for you.

New Strand Comedies Will Set Standard

Absolutely new standards in one reel comedies will be set by the new series of Mutual Featurettes—Strand Comedies—which are to be released on Wednesday, April 11. These subjects are the most costly, the most carefully staged comedies obtainable, and are handled with the most care. Plenty of time has been taken in producing each picture. The stage settings are elaborate and are carefully worked out in detail. Each and every bit of comic business is thought out so carefully that it is "sure fire" stuff. It gets laughs every time.

Ten Now Finished.

Ten Mutual-Chaplin subjects are now finished. Nine are available. They are "The Floor Walker," "The Fireman," "The Yagabound," "One A. M.," "The Count," "The Cuckoo," "The Tick," and "Easy Street." The tenth, "The Cure," will be released on April 30. All of them are widely varied in their nature. All of them are sure to appeal to people of every age. New Style Torpedo Pictured in Reel Life

Reel Life No. 50, the Mutual screen magazine, released April 12, shows the detailed working of a brand new style of torpedo. In these days of preparedness, theatrical patrons will be greatly interested. Bring them to your theatre to see how Uncle Sam is arming to guard his shores against invasion.

MARGARITA FISCHER IN "DEVIL'S ASSISTANT" PICTURES DRUG EVIL

The terrible drug evil is vividly depicted in "The Devil's Assistant," released by the Mutual Film Corporation the week of April 2. It is six reels in length. It stars Margarita Fischer. It was made at the San Diego studios of the Pollock Picture Plays Company. It is the fourth of the Margarita Fischer Series of Mutual Pictures. It is tensely powerful—highly dramatic—unusual in every respect.

A Powerful Story.

The story of "The Devil's Assistant" has to do with a young married woman who falls under the spell of the drug evil. She becomes addicted to opiums of the strongest kind. Before she realizes it, she finds herself completely enslaved. The new character of the picture is the soul—drives her to deeds of desperation—possesses her will—blinds her with invincible chains to the one from whom she can obtain more "hope." How she eventually awakens to her peril—how she fights and struggles to overcome her slavery to opiums—how she holds those awaiting her complete ruin—forms one of the most grimly powerful—most highly dramatic pictures ever screened.

"The Devil's Assistant" will sound a warning throughout the nation—"it will awaken thousands to the danger that lurks beside them—"it will drive home a moral as an printed work or spoken sermon could ever do. By reading "The Devil's Assistant" you can open the eyes of your patrons to an evil whose power is unsuspected. Bookings may be arranged at any Mutual Exchange.

"Jimmie Dale" Series Has Popular Appeal

Mutual Exchanges all over the country are reporting good bookings on "Jimmie Dale,Alias 'The Grey Seal.'" the new series of Mutual Featurettes produced by the Monmouth Film Corporation. Exhibitors know that mystery-detective stories are highly popular with motion picture fans. But they are the hardest kind of pictures to obtain. Only once in a long while can the exhibitor offer a really high class series of such stories. "Jimmie Dale" Featurettes constitute such an attraction. Stars of the first magnitude are featured in all the releases of this series. E. K. Lincoln, famous everywhere, plays "Jimmie Dale." Supporting cast includes such favorites as Paul Panzer, Edna Hunter and Doris Mitchell. Harry McRae Webster directed the entire production.
Throughout The World
Are Making Millions Laugh.

Mutual-Chaplin Specials stand supreme today throughout the world in the field of motion picture comedy. Nowhere in all filmdom are there comedies on which so much time, and thought and money have been spent. This is the most costly series of comedies ever released. Extreme care has been taken in its production. Cost has always been waived for quality. Ten comedies featuring the Mutual's $670,000 per year comedian, are now available at Mutual Exchanges. Beware of violators! The genuine Mutual-Chaplin Specials are only released through the Exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation in America.

"The Floorwalker"  "The Fireman"

In which Chaplin burlesques the common, every-day happenings of a big department store.

"Quocunque Jeceris Stabit"
("Whichever way you throw me I shall stand")
Each leg of the Isle of Man’s famous coat of arms represents a vigorous kick being given to each of their powerful neighbors by the most independent little people known to history.

Overrun from time to time by its powerful neighbors the Island has been successively IRISH, SCANDINAVIAN, SCOTCH and ENGLISH and yet today is politically independent of them all.

Tynwald Court on the Isle of Man is famous as the oldest known parliament of man.
For a thousand years the Manx-men have gathered once a year on Tynwald day on Tynwald Hill: for no law may bind a freeman until it has been read and accepted on Tynwald day.

Many times in history the Islanders have asserted their ancient prerogatives at Tynwald Court and it is a famous rising of the fishermen of Man and their demands upon a Governor who threatened to have the soldiers shoot down disturbers of Tynwald that forms one of the BIG SCENES in

"The Manx-Man" by Hall Caine
9,000 Manx-men appear in this scene which is correct in every detail; Lord Raglan, The Governor, having given instructions that the regular soldiers be used and every accessory — EVEN THE OLD CHAIR and THE SWORD OF STATE — HIS OWN COSTUME — he ordered furnished for GEO. The type of production that will book at $100 a day and will stand a three day showing in neighborhood houses. A varied and elaborate line of advertising matter available.

The Warfare Of The Flesh

The story is based on the premise that matrimony is a holy institution. That women are inherently good. That no state of virtue, however, is complete until it is won by a conflict with vice and temptation. The drama is developed with a series of cumulative climaxes showing the perpetual and colossal warfare extant through the ages between the forces of good and the forces of evil.

EDWARD WARREN PRODUC
BIG BOX OFFICE CAST

Sheldon Lewis, who starred with Pearl White in the Iron Claw and Perils of Pauline; Walter Hampden, who starred in the Servant in the House; Charlotte Ives who appeared with E. H. Sothern, in the Vitagraph attraction, The Man of Mystery, and who is now starring in the Morosco Broadway hit, The Brat; Marie Shotwell, who appeared in Enlighten Thy Daughter; Harry Benham, one of the stars of the Thanhouser Million Dollar Mystery, and Theodore Friebus, for years the idol at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston, and recently at the Maxine Elliot Theatre in "What is Love."

EDWARD WARREN Production

Big sums of money have been expended on special sets and stage dressing. The entire production was under the personal direction of Edward Warren, who has produced many big winners on various programs. The technical end was handled by the same crew that helped stage The Daughter of the Gods, The Eternal Sin, and Neptune's Daughter.

The production will be ready for release the middle of April.

THE FIRST DEFINITE CONTRIBUTION IN THE PROPAGANDA TO POPULARIZE CLEAN AND WHOLESOME FILMS
FOR ALL RIGHT-THINKING AMERICANS

For a long time there has been developing a country-wide demand for a better class of motion pictures suitable for exhibition before mixed audiences of all ages. From time to time individual producers and groups of producers have provided occasional motion pictures to meet this demand. It has remained for THOMAS A. EDISON, Inc., and FORUM FILMS, Inc., however to provide the first definite and regular contribution in the form of weekly programs of selected and carefully edited subjects.

"EDISON CONQUEST PICTURES" will be published at the rate of five reels per week, each program of that length including a three-reel dramatic production, and shorter comedies, travelogues, and miscellaneous subjects providing a well-balanced program of variety.

"EDISON CONQUEST PICTURES" will have the endorsement and support of national organizations interested in welfare work, educators, community workers, and social bodies, and all individuals as well as organizations which have been instrumental in creating the demand for better films for the entire family. It is obvious that all this interest means new patrons for the exhibitor who links his theatre with this movement.

Some of the productions soon to be released are:

"FOR THE HONOR OF THE SCHOOL,"
By Ralph Henry Barbour.

"THE LANCE OF KANANA,"
By H. W. Franich.

"GALLECHER,"
By Richard Harding Davis.

"UNDER THE GREAT BEAR,"
By Kirk Monroe.

"KIDNAPPED,"
By Robert Louis Stevenson.

"BLACK BEAUTY,"
By Anna Sewell.

"THE LITTLE CHEVALIER,"
By M. E. M. Davis.

"THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER,"
By Mary Shipman Andrews.

Exchanges are now being organized throughout the country to commence releasing "EDISON CONQUEST PICTURES" immediately, not only in the largest cities, but in the smallest communities. If in the meantime you desire any further information regarding these programs it will be gladly furnished from our New York office.

THE BARRIER
By REX BEACH
Produced by The Rex Beach Pictures Co., Inc., Under the Personal Supervision of the Author

"The Barrier" gives you a new idea of the artistic and emotional possibilities of the motion picture. Big, dramatic moments follow one after another. Every passion and emotion of the human heart is brought to life upon the screen.

The story centers upon "the barrier" of race and blood that seems to stand between a young army officer and a beautiful girl—a problem that moves and thrills and fascinates you—one that provides a love story of unequalled charm and beauty.

Do not fail to see "The Barrier"—this masterful portrayal of the rough, rugged life of the last American frontier—of love, faith, pain, joy, courage, struggle, sacrifice—woven into a vivid, truthful drama by a great writer who saw it unfold before his own eyes.

The newspapers of New York, Philadelphia and other large cities unite in declaring "The Barrier" the greatest photo-drama ever produced.

The millions who read Rex Beach's books and stories will find new joy in the pictured version of this great novel.

REX BEACH PICTURES CO., Inc., 440 Fourth Ave., NEW YORK
O. Henry's Delightful Characters Brought to Life in Motion Pictures

From Fifth Avenue—the Bowery—the Western prairies—the little comic opera republics of South America—O. Henry gathered the whimsical, ludicrous and pathetic characters which will live forever in the hearts of untold millions.

Now you can see these marvelous O. Henry stories on the screen—those wonderfully human men and women—those absurdly delightful situations—those thrilling adventures, beautiful romances and astonishing climaxes that have made O. Henry the most widely read and best loved author in the world.

O. Henry Pictures are Broadway Star Features, every one personally supervised by J. Stuart Blackton, for twenty years the dominant genius of the photo-play and producer of world-famous short pictures. Commodore Blackton has been responsible for more big, world-wide photo-play successes than any other one producer. His "Battle Cry of Peace" and other great productions swept the country. All his knowledge and experience—all his genius and talent—have been applied to making these O. Henry Pictures the greatest short features ever produced. A new O. Henry picture each week.

ANNOUNCEMENT!

A DEARTH OF COMEDIES

There is a dearth of good comedies. No doubt at all about it. Movie fans are asking the Exhibitors this question: "Why don't you book more comedies?" And the Exhibitor truthfully replies: "Because I can't get 'em!"

NOW IS YOUR CHANCE

Now is your opportunity, Mr. Exhibitor, to book some simon-pure comedies. Not that knock-down-and-drag-out stuff, but comedy with a plot and with situations containing real humor. Keep your eye on the Selig comedy releases. It's a wise old hunch!

TITLES ALREADY ANNOUNCED

The comedies will be released at once and the titles are already announced, some of them. These include "Mr. Bingo, the Bachelor," "Bill and the Bearded Lady," "The Bloomer Girls," and "Rescuing Uncle." Each and every one is a scream!

WILL BE APPRECIATED

These fun-makers will be appreciated by your patrons. The public wants to laugh. There's too much of the sob-stuff. All we ask is that you take a look at these one-reel comedies at any General Film exchange. To see them is to book them.

AND EVERY MONDAY

And every Monday a new multiple reel drama is being released in General Film service by the Selig Company. "Father and Son" is the latest. There is a capable cast, a gripping story and good photography.

has been made by the State Right Buyers of the country to the offer of franchise for this great five-reel feature.

The public demand may be inferred from the comments of certain important personages who have witnessed advance showings of the picture.

"My police prove themselves splendid actors," said Major JOHN C. GROOME, Superintendent of the Pennsylvania State Police.

By the District—Not by the Day

We submit this editorial to the earnest consideration of producers and distributors; and we invite their criticism if we are wrong.

In the progress of our campaign for longer runs we are more than ever convinced that the daily change is the fundamental fault of the business—so fundamental that other wastes, however great and glaring, are incidental results.

We believe that, with the possible exception of certain small towns, longer runs are everywhere possible; and we believe that the very salvation of the picture business, in particular of the program business, demands that longer runs be made possible.

This won't be accomplished by preaching at the exhibitor. It is very largely the initiative enterprise of the exhibitor here and there that has made longer runs a fact.

And we don't believe that mediocre features are holding back longer runs. The run of features is mighty good today. We see many that should have longer runs and don't get them.

It is absolutely amazing to consider them rushed out and back to the shelf, viewed by a meagre two to five per cent. of the public, when twenty to fifty per cent. ought to and would see them. It is criminal waste.

We believe that just two things are holding back longer runs today—two main things.

One is the fact that pictures are not sold right.

The other is the lack of service that goes with them.

The selling policy of pictures is simple enough. It is this:

Sell pictures so that people will see them—the largest possible number of people everywhere.

Last week we cited the instance of a Southern exhibitor whose first run rental price was so high that it forbade longer runs.

We do not claim that rental prices are too high. That is not the point at issue.

But we do claim that program pictures are being sold by the day; and that this policy directly encourages the one-day run.

Sell pictures by the district—not by the day.

First secure an exact analysis of the population of each city and town—the number of people, the kind of people. Then tell the exhibitor how much you have got to have from his population. And then let him keep the picture until his population has seen it.

More prints will be required, but this extra expense will be a mighty small item compared with the increased gross revenue.

The exhibitor will make more money, and be sure of making it; the producer will make more money, and be sure of making it; and more people will see more good pictures.

We shall have more to say about service. In the meantime we submit the question for an open forum:

Why are program features sold by the day? Why not by the district?
Speaking Editorialy:

Two Rival Businesses

A VERY remarkable situation developed out of the hearing at Albany last week on the bills to legalize Sunday pictures.

We present it as an outstanding record in the history of the motion picture.

The moral involved, too, may be of value in other States where the issue of Sunday pictures has arisen or may come up in the future.

Arrayed against these bills was the largest and most strenuous lobby—if we may call the clergy a lobby—we have ever witnessed in a legislative hall.

Previously a few clergymen have appeared in Washington and at Albany to urge the legalized censorship of pictures. We have been somewhat astounded at the vehemence and malice they displayed; but set this attitude down as the bigotry of a few unceditious individuals.

At Albany this attitude was unmistakably a general one; very plainly there is organized opposition among a very large number of the Protestant and Catholic workers of New York State and their related societies, and Sunday schools to the motion picture.

Very plainly, too, this is the opposition of one business against another, the business of the church against the business of the picture. And the former business fears the other with all the fear, and fight and malice which one and vehement. When it came their turn to listen they exhibited neither courtesy nor fairness. One clergyman passed the lie.

"One of the newer agents," says a writer in Printers' Ink, "told me that last week in his opinion, the man to make the next great hit in advertising would be, he who advocated, strongly and persistently, extreme moderation in statement."

"I do not agree with the idea of extreme moderation," comments the writer. "If the statement is true, it cannot be too forcibly made. It is not the form, but the matter that is important."

Cohan on the Screen

THE magic of pictures, of reproducing "personality and pep" in black and white shadows becomes more and more a marvel as its possibilities are realized. We have heard much about screen requirements. We have seen big stage successes that would not "screen"; and now comes perhaps the most widely known play and star of the speaking stage, George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones," and by skilled production the screen gains a picture which countless generations can enjoy at will.

Cohan is certainly the "longer run"—the fact that "Broadway Jones" and George M. Cohan may not be seen in many cities for an entire week, instead of on one-night stands.

We hope there will soon be a time when the only great difference between stage personality and a good play in pictures, is that the pictured production can be seen by everybody, at one-tenth the cost, playing to at least twenty times the play-loving public.

Good plays must not come and go over night. It is bad showmanship. And the difference in cost of the motion picture makes such bad showmanship now conspicuously worse.

How He Does It

ULIUS HIRSCH owns a $50,000 picture theatre in New Iberia, La., population 10,000, has no competition and enjoys steady prosperity.

How does he do it?

Proprietor Hirsh's answer is very simple. He has the confidence of his people; and he gets and holds this confidence through his advertising.

That's all.

When he has a good picture he says so—tells all about it, why he likes it, why his audience will like it—in adequate newspaper space, and by other announcements.

When he can't recommend a picture, he doesn't. He announces it and the people can come if they want to, but he doesn't urge them. In fact, he says not a word.

Competition will have a hard time breaking into New Iberia.

A fine lesson here for many other exhibitors.

A fine lesson too for many producers; advertising to the exhibitors is just the same as advertising to the public.

A man who thinks he can fool the public right along is a fool himself.

A producer who thinks he is fooling the exhibitor through his advertising is still more foolish; or, else, he has fools working for him.

Honest Advertising

SPEAKING of honest advertising, here's an echo from the recent gathering of 129 advertising men at Pinehurst:

"One of the newer agents," says a writer in Printers' Ink, "told me that last week in his opinion, the man to make the next great hit in advertising would be, he who advocated, strongly and persistently, extreme moderation in statement."

"I do not agree with the idea of extreme moderation," comments the writer. "If the statement is true, it cannot be too forcibly made. It is not the form, but the matter that is important."
Sale of Film by District Is Plan of Paralta Corporation

Carl Anderson is President—Herman Fichtenberg, Chairman of the Board of Directors—Herman Katz, Treasurer—Nat Brown, Secretary and General Manager—Robert T. Kane, Vice-President—Kerrigan and Barriscale. Reported Stars

The Paralta Plays, Inc., with a capitalization of $3,000,000, was formed at Albany last week for the purpose of buying representative feature photoplays and selling them according to the value of the production per theater, and not by the day's run, as is now the common practice.

The purpose of the new company is the production of feature photodramas of the highest class under conditions of distribution that are intended to completely revolutionize this part of the industry and extend to the exhibitor actual cooperation.

The president of the Paralta corporation is Carl Anderson, well known to this industry through his prominent connection with the Lasky and Paramount companies.

Herman Katz, of New York City, is the treasurer. He is identified with very large retail business interests in this city, and is closely allied with manufacturing interests of national importance.

Nat I. Brown, of St. Louis, is the secretary and general manager. Mr. Brown has been long identified with the distribution of films.

Robert T. Kane, of San Francisco, who has been connected with theatrical and film production enterprises for several years, is the vice-president of the company. Mr. Kane will have complete supervision and control of all production interests, and has established his offices in Los Angeles, where, at this time, studios for two producing connections of Paralta are nearing completion.

It is reported that J. Warren Kerrigan and Bessie Barriscale have been signed as stars.

Speaking of the new company and its aim to achieve the exhibitor of some of the impositions he now has to bear, Mr. Anderson said: "We have come into this field the declared friend of the exhibitor from the start. It will be found that our business sympathy is real, and that the cooperation we shall offer in genuine and will prove profitable in actual money."

"We considered the whole subject for fully eight months," said Mr. Fichtenberg, "and the result has been the foundation of the plan which we shall shortly present in full detail to all exhibitors in the United States and Canada, later extending our activities throughout the world."

"Our plan of distribution is based on the development of the exhibition territories to their fullest possibilities of results," said the president.

"For instance, Newark, N. J. There are about 400,000 people in that city. We will determine, in conjunction with an exhibitor, that the territorial franchise for a given section of Newark is worth say $100 a production. That determined, we find that another section, in which there are ten theatres, has a value or $200 per picture; that another section, with 15 theatres, is worth $500 per picture, or that another territory, with but two theatres, is worth but $50 per picture. We aggregate this, and find, in conjunction with the exhibitors, that Newark is worth to us $2,000 per production per annum."

Otherwise, 'Rose o' Paradise' will bring in $2,000 in one year from the city of Newark, and it will only cost each territorial exhibitor, say, $100 to control for one year in his territory—instead of $100 for one day.)"

"Duplicate Film" Case Decision Favors Importer

Three Cents Per Foot Tax Imposed by Collector Is Not Valid—One Cent Per Foot Only Allowed for "Duplicate Negative"

Reversing the decision of the Collector at the port of New York as to the dutiability of photographic film negatives, the Board of United States General Appraisers, upholding the protest of R. K. Bartlett, film importer, against imposition of a duty of three cents per foot on war negatives in his possession, decided that the film in question is a duplicative negative; that it is not as valuable as a positive, and is subject to a duty of but one cent per linear foot.

Voluminous testimony of photographic and camera experts was heard by the Appraising Board. The holding of the Port Collector was that the film in question was an exposed and developed photographic film negative "imported in any form for use in any way in connection with moving-picture exhibits, including all moving pictures, prints, positives or duplicates of every kind and nature."

In rendering the decision in favor of Mr. Bartlett against the contention of the Collector, General Appraiser Sullivan found that the film in question was a duplicate in photographic and legal sense. Following this consideration to its conclusion, it was found that there was full basis for recognition of positives and negatives as two separate and distinct things, with differing values.

Inasmuch as the person holding the positive had not only the most valuable piece of photography, in addition to priority of rights in exhibition, the finding concluded "that Mr. Bartlett's film was a print or duplicate, and as such less valuable," and "the protest is sustained, and the action of the collector is reversed."

Attention was also called by the Appraising Board to a similar decision handed down some time ago in another case where the film in question was a duplicate, but printed from a positive by mechanical means instead of photographed by a camera.

Ince Secures William Hart and Other Stars in Fight

Film circles in Los Angeles were aroused last week at the skilful engineering done by Thomas H. Ince in securing William S. Hart. Bidding against Ince were the heads of nearly every film company. The salary received by Hart is said to be seven times as great as under the old one. The number of Ince-Hart releases is indefinite.

Credit is due Mr. Ince for the fact that not one of his stars has gone to another company. He now holds long-term contracts with Louise Glaum, Charles Ray, William Desmond, Enid Bennett, Bessie Love, Alma Rubens and Olive Thomas.

Fire Delays "The Planter"

Fire totally destroyed the studio of the Nevada Film Corporation at Pasadena on Saturday night, delaying the completion of "The Planter," a ten-reel picture starring Tyrone Power a month at least. General Manager Drum estimates the loss at $25,000.

L-Ko President East Again

Julius Stern, president of the L-Ko Motion Picture Company, has returned from a six-weeks' visit to the Coast studios, and was very well pleased with conditions there.
Sunday Opening Bill Safe in Connecticut

Judge Charles J. Martin's Bill, Providing Open Sundays for Cities

10,000 or Over, Voted Through

TO Judge Charles J. Martin of New Haven, goes the credit for the first successful attempt to puncture Connecticut "Blue Laws," and as matters now stand, the cities of that state have the prospect of being able to have Sunday moving pictures in the near future. The Martin bill, giving cities of more than 10,000 the right to say whether Sunday entertainments shall be allowed, was introduced by his assistant, Harvey H. Josten, has passed the lower house of the Connecticut legislature, and on March 30 will go to the state Senate for action. Predictions are freely made that the Martin bill will pass the Senate by a comfortable vote.

A Baptist minister had much to do with the passage of the Martin bill, through the Connecticut House of Representatives. Just when the House was a bit in doubt, the Rev. Leonard Smith, representative from the town of Mansfield, sprang to his feet, and in one of the most impressive addresses ever given a Connecticut legislature, strongly urged the bill. He traced the history of Sunday from its pagan origin as "Sun day," and brought it down to date.

Mr. Smith pointed out that the measure cut the Gordan knight of a vexing situation by legalizing certain harmless amusements, which at the present time are illegal on Sunday.

For three hours the debate had raged until Mr. Smith took the floor. An immediate call for a vote resulted in the passage of the bill by 137 to 89. In this connection, it is predicted that the Senate will pass the bill by a vote of 20 to 15.

Not all cities in the state will profit by the Martin act, for several are under the population limit. Those that cannot take advantage of the bill are Rockville, Putnam, Shelton, Derby and Willimantic. The cities included in the bill are New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Britain, Meriden, Norwich, New London, Middletown, Danbury, Norwalk, Bristol, Ansonia, Norwalk and South Norwalk, Greenwich, Torrington, Orange (West Haven) and Winsted, also are included by reason of their population. The town of Milford also benefits, though not by population reason.

An effort was made to have the bill apply to all towns of more than 5,000 population, and this too was voted down.

During the debate the plea was made to have the House "take the question of Sunday observance from the realm of hypocrisy and look at it from the common sense standpoint." Representative Rogers rose to declare he knew of men who opposed moving pictures on Sunday, and at the same time played poker all day long on Sunday. Mr. Rogers hails from Manchester. Opposition was based entirely on the principle expressed by Col. Jarvis of Berhn, who declared "this bill will commercialize the Sabbath, which we have had to ourselves for 2,000 years."

Two Odious Bills Squelched in Wisconsin

WISCONSIN theatre owners are not going to be taxed out of existence. Neither are they going to be harrassed by any crank who may think that something in a certain picture is immoral, and throw the theatre manager and all the house attaches in jail.

Last Monday the assembly indefinitely postponed the Pieper bill, that proposed to tax theatres and boxing shows twenty per cent of their gross receipts and required all theatre owners to purchase their tickets from the county clerks, making it a misdemeanor to use other than the tickets furnished by the state.

They also indefinitely postponed action on the Otto bill which made it a misdemeanor to perform a production or exhibition which might be considered immoral. This latter bill was introduced by Assemblyman Otto at the request of Assistant District Attorney Bartelt of Milwaukee. When District Attorney Zabel's attention was called to the bill he declared it was unnecessary and requested his assistant to have it withdrawn.

While the exhibitors won two victories in the legislative halls they also were defeated in an attempt to have the bill be declared it was unnecessary and requested his assistant to have it withdrawn.

The only other bill of importance that is now before the state legislature is the censorship bill. The ... not surprise many people if the bill were squeezed through in the closing hours of the state legislature.

Hammons on Exchange Tour

Vice-President and General Manager Hammons of the Educational Films Corporation of America, left New York last Sunday on a business trip to the West Coast. He will visit Los Angeles, and on the return journey will make the Educational exchanges in San Francisco, Seattle and Salt Lake City.

Low Price Program Service

Aiming at the small exhibitor, President Benj. B. Hampton, of the General Film Company, has inaugurated a new "popular" program service. The program will be sold at 75 cents, with the sales tax paid by the producer. The operation is under the direction of J. W. Fish, the new head of the G. F. Co.'s sales department.

Michigan Censor Bill Goes to Finance Committee

At a recent meeting of the State Affairs Committee at Lansing, Mich., they reported out the Eaton State Censorship bill for motion pictures. This move was given an unexpected turn, however, when the speaker of the House of Representatives referred it to the Finance Committee for approval.

Instead of going to the House and Senate for final vote after the State Affairs Committee finished with it, it is now up to the Finance Committee to first grant further approval. One of the reported regrets in Michigan regarding the Eaton bill is that the House and Senate have not done enough campaigning to defeat it.

The Michigan bill, patterned after the Ohio bill, requires a board of three censors to approve all the motion pictures before they are shown in the state. The charge to the producer is one dollar per thousand feet.

Lasky Distributes Patriotic Slides to New York Houses

Immediately after his appointment as chairman of the motion picture division of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, Jesse L. Lasky distributed to every motion picture theatre in Greater New York, slides asking for patrons' signatures to the declaration of patriotism, and one-sheet posters effectively designed with the Star-Spangled Banner for theatre lobbies. This is one of the very few occasions for which permission was granted for the use of the American flag on lithographic posters. These posters have been mounted on cloth and draped on touring cars, which are covering the theatres of the city, distributing patriotic declaration blanks and collecting signatures.

Mr. Lasky is devoting much of his time to this patriotic appeal to loyal Americans, in an endeavor to obtain two million signatures through the medium of the motion picture theatre.

Triange Reorganization Plans Are Under Way

R. W. France, general manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, has issued the following statement pursuant to the changes in Triangle's producing plans, as announced in the News last week:

"On March 23 I received a telegram from Mr. Hodkinson, the president of our company, who is now on the Pacific Coast, stating that Messrs. Aitken, Sennett, Icke and Hodkinson are signing jointly a wire to all of our first-run exhibitors forecasting the adoption of a new plan which will be of great interest. The details of this plan will be announced to the trade through the press at the earliest possible moment."

Sphinx Company in the Field

Announcement was made last week that Rudra Limited, Inc., has succeeded by the Sphinx Producing Company. A one-reel picture every week, to be handled by the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation, will be released.
Sunday Show Prospects Bright After Albany Hearing

Relief in Film Circles That Legislators Will Await Court Verdict, with Local Option Bill Likely in Event of Adverse Decision—Vigorous Speech by William A. Brady In Feature of Capitol Session

FILM men throughout New York expressed themselves as optimistic over the prospects for Sunday shows in the Empire State following the public hearing at Albany last Wednesday before the joint Codes Committee of the Legislature. The outlook following the hearing indicates that the legislators will await a decision in the court cases testing the present statutes before further action. At the present stage of the struggle, at least, of the Welsh Local Option Bill should the judges, in their decision, prove adverse.

Headed by William A. Brady, president of the National Association, a large delegation of New York film men attended last Wednesday’s public hearing on the Sunday question. The feature of the day was a ringing goaded by the clearly shown bigotry of the objection, with a stirring address that aroused the Senate Chamber to a remarkable pitch. It was evident that the two-fisted attack by Mr. Brady swept alarm through the ranks of the reformers and the fifth industry’s forces in battle array for the Wednesday session.

Mayor Lunn then went on to say that the closing of the theatres on Sunday in Schenectady had resulted in an increase in petty crimes. He declared himself in favor of local option, of allowing the people to decide what means of recreation they shall seek on Sunday.

J. Robert Rubin, general counsel for the Exhibitors’ League, opened the arguments in favor of the local option bill. Other speakers for the motion picture were Harry Robitake, of the New York Board of Aldermen; Dr. Thomas Gregory, Rev. Dr. Jackson, of the Dutch Reformed Church, and Peter J. Brady, of the Allied Printing Trades Council, who gained some of the honors of the day by a ringing address on behalf of the wage-earner.

Senator Franklin McCray, father of Indiana’s Sunday bill, was also a vigorous champion of the screen.

Among the film men present were: W. A. Brady, president of the World Film Corporation; J. E. Brulotaghe, of the Eastman Kodak Company; P. A. Parsons, of the Paige-Exchangter; I. E. Chadwiek, of Ivan Film Productions; Joe Brandt, M. H. Hoffman and Paul Gulick, of Universal; Arthur S. Friend, of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; William C. Smith, of Nicholas Power Company; Rev. Dr. William H. Jackson, of the Dutch Reformed Church; J. Robert Rubin, general counsel of the Exhibitors’ League of America; Samuel H. Trigger, Grant Anson, of the Exhibitors’ League of New York; David Cohen, of the New England Motion Picture and Camera Corporation, stated to a Motion Picture News representative, that Mr. Griffith will probably produce four pictures each year. None of them will be presented at a two-dollar scale of prices, as has been Griffith’s practice of late.

D. W. GRIFFITH sailed a week ago for England, where he will be taken in April at the premiere of “Intolerance” at the Drury Lane theatre, Monday, April 8.
"Ham and Bud" Subjects to Be in Two-Reel Length

The Kalem Company's Ham Comedies are in the future to consist of two reels, this change becoming effective as soon as the subjects made up to this time have been released, the producing company having prepared to begin turning out the longer subjects upon the completion of the one now in production, "Hard Times and Hard Scrapple"—the working title.

According to the announcement made at the studio this week, the Kalem Company has made an investigation of the program field, and found a big demand for comedies featuring the well-known comedians, Lloyd V. Hamilton and "Bud" Duncan, and the investigation brought out that there would be a still greater demand if made in two-reel lengths.

In preparing for the longer subjects, Studio Manager Phil Lang has greatly strengthened the organization. Al Santell has proven a very capable director, and the regular company has been increased by the addition of John Stepping, who has been in comedy with Essanay, American and Universal. Henry Murdock will continue in eccentric and character roles. Unusual attention will be paid to the stories for the new series, and already plans have been made for a number of sensational thrills which will make the Ham and Bud comedies decidedly distinctive.

Gil-Spear Joins Goldwyn as Scenario Head

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation announces the engagement of Adrian Gil-Spear as the chief of its scenario department, effective April 1.

Gil-Spear, who made the scenario of "The Barrier," Rex Beach's recent production of his own novel, and who has just completed the scenario for "The Auction Block," another of Mr. Beach's stories, is also well-known as a poster and magazine artist, whose name and work are familiar to virtually all readers of the larger illustrated magazines.

His last work before joining Goldwyn will be the completion of the scenario of "The Dark Star," a Robert W. Chambers' story for the International.

Denial from General Film

The General Film Company and the Essanay Company wish to announce that the report that the Essanay Company has withdrawn from the General Film Company is untrue.

Shipman Claims Priority in Enlargement Process

The Shipman Photo Process Corporation, of Los Angeles, has taken exception to an article recently published by trade papers, in which was set forth the advantages of a new process for making photographic enlargements from motion picture negative film. The Shipman Corporation claims in a letter to Motion Picture News that their concern was the first in the field, and that patents for the process are filed at Washington.

William Desmond to Appear in "Paddy O'Hara"

William Desmond will soon make his appearance on the Triangle-Kay-Bee program, when he is presented by Thomas H. Ince in "Paddy O'Hara," by J. G. Hawks. Mary Maclver, as the Princess Maryska, is seen in her second leading portrayal. Robert McKim and J. J. Dowling have parts.

R. W. McFarland Declares Lewis Receives Ample Publicity

R. W. McFarland, general manager of the Rex Beach Pictures Corporation, aroused by recent reports in trade papers to the effect that Edgar Lewis, producer of "The Barrier," had not been given sufficient credit in connection with the play, showed to press men last week numerous samples of press publicity in which Mr. Lewis's name appeared generously.

Frank Succeeds Leup

At a recent meeting of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, Peter Leup, of Detroit, tendered his resignation as Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America member of the Board of Directors of the association, and Louis H. Frank, of Chicago, was unanimously elected his successor.

Man Who Made "Exide" Famous Joins Triangle Film

Following the appointment of Cameron H. Bristol, of Philadelphia, as manager of Triangle's special department of advertising, R. W. France, general manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, makes the following statement:

"Triangle Distributing Corporation has created a special advertising department which will be in charge of Cameron H. Bristol, whom we consider to be one of the best advertising men in the country.

"Mr. Bristol has been in the advertising business for over ten years. His most recent connection has been with the Electric Storage Battery Company, of Philadelphia, where he conducted one of the most successful advertising campaigns ever carried on in this country. He made the word "Exide" known throughout the entire world.

"He is now working on plans along special lines, and we are trying to devise the best method of adding to the knowledge which the general public has of the Triangle product."

William Hart's Next Picture Is "The Desert Man"

William S. Hart will make his next appearance under Triangle-Kay-Bee auspices, when he is presented by Thomas H. Ince in a Western melodrama, by Lambert Hil- ler, from the original story by Martin Brown, entitled "The Desert Man.

In the principal feminine role, Margery Wilson is seen as Jennie, the girl who brings gladness to the heart of the "desertman," and thereby inspires him to fight for the betterment of the little town. Others in the cast are: Buster Irving, Henry Bel-mar, Milton Ross, Jack Livingston, Walt Whitman and Josephine Headley. The production was directed by Hart and photographed by Joe August, with direction by Robert Brunton.

Hammons Buys Smith Films

A. W. Hammons, President of the Educational films Corporation, has bought the Smith films of "Alaska Wonders in Motion." The length is six thousand feet.
News' Inquiries Show "Filth Film" Is Dying

Letters to Prominent Film Men in All Parts of Nation Indicate a Tendency to Cleaner Pictures—More Comedies Wanted

Newark, N. J.
Lee Gainsborg, manager of the Newark, N. J., Universal exchange, says:

The demand for sex films is gradually fading, but it seems that they still attract the public. Several sex pictures have hurt lots of houses, and the better class of exhibitors are beginning to realize that although they have reaped a handsome profit on some sex pictures in the past, they have injured their business to a greater extent.

Omaha, Neb.
J. E. Kirk, manager of the Pathe exchange, Omaha, Nebraska, says:

There is a good demand here for one-reel comedies, provided they are good. Every theatre, large or small, wants them. There is little demand for features in less than five reels.

Oregon
F. M. Simonstown, manager of the Standard Feature Film Company, Portland, Oregon, says:

Sex films seem to have the best drawing power of anything, unless it happens to be an exceptionally well-known book or play. These seem to take as well as the sex play. However, the demand for the sex film is getting less and less constantly.

Arizona
J. E. Rickards, manager of The Hip, Phoenix, Arizona, says:

I am compelled, like many other provincial exhibitors, to use the state rights feature, but hope some day to see the big concerns who are marketing programs refrain from taking their stars from the program which they are asking the exhibitor to take for good or bad, and putting them into specials that many times are too big for the contract holder and which turn into strong competition some big house having greater capacity.

Seattle, Wash.
H. Susman of Peerless Feature Attractions, Seattle, Washington, says:

Pictures must be produced that will be at least on an equal basis with the features that are turned out by such companies as Bluebird, Gold Booster, Metro, Paramount, Triangle, etc. These firms have been in the business ever since there was any business, therefore they know the game from A to Z. Unless the newer companies can put up something just as good or a little better they had better save their money and buy beer with it.

Film Pirating Spreads Throughout Country

Burns Detective "Plants" Film Burglar—$100 Bill, Marked, Has Short But Thrilling Experience in Trailing Criminal

An underground system of stealing and selling prints of the newest and most popular film plays which rivals the most thrilling film dramas screened is coming to light all over the United States.

The first cases to get into the courts were in New York, where a few months ago the losses of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company were announced, and a month ago, when through the aid of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry the case prepared by the W. J. Burns Detective Agency for the Fox Film Corporation was pushed through the grand jury and one man is now awaiting trial on a grand larceny charge.

This man was caught by an elaborate "plant" made by a Burns detective, who took an office in the heart of the Longacre Square theatrical section, had his name put on the door in gold letters, and bought, for a marked $100 bill, a Fox film entitled "The Wonderful Adventure." Unlike the usual film play, however, the $100 bill did not have any further adventures, for the detective took no chances, but nabbed the exchange of films before he was many feet away from the office door.

Added to this case comes one from St. Louis, and a new series from Oklahoma. In St. Louis, a feature film of five reels was stolen from a street car, and in Oklahoma the exchange and theatre men are convinced that a gang is working a regular system so complete now that they steal only the films for which they have markets.

This is also borne out by the men with whom Burns detective had his dealings, who informed him that they could get any film of any company he wanted on twenty-four hours' notice.

Each of the stolen films are sold for export to European and South American countries, and the average price is about $10 to $20 per reel, a quarter to a half of the cost of printing the positive. It is reported from St. Louis that the films are reassembled, cut short, changed, and resold for showing in this country.

Goldreyer States His Case

Replying to statements made by Maurice L. Fleischman in a recent issue of Motion Picture News regarding the Fleischman and Goldreyer-Ochs case, Charles A. Goldreyer comes to the front with a letter which would seem to declare that never at any time, either in the preliminary occurrences of the case or during the long public league hearing, was he in sympathy with the complaint, which carried his firm's name. "I have never at any time seen any actual evidence which would justify the charges against Mr. Ochs," is the surprising statement made by Mr. Goldreyer on March 8, regarding his firm's case which attracted such attention during November and December of last year. Mr. Goldreyer lays the blame for the most recent Fleischman statements to internal troubles in the partnership of Fleischman, Goldreyer and Kramer.
Praise for Editorial Stating South's Case

High prices and longer runs,” last week”s Motion Picture News editorial by William A. Johnston, stirred up considerable discussion among New York office executives last week. In addition, southerm film men were quick to praise the editorial as a statement of the case of the exhibitor in that territory whose rentals are fixed on population figures that fail to take into account local conditions.

Nat L. Royster, special representative for "Civilization," voiced the sentiment of those heard from in regard to the editorial. Mr. Royster is a veteran Southern picture man who, as exhibitor and exchange man, has been in close touch with that field for twelve years.

Writing from Cleveland, Tennessee, he declares: "I make eight Southern States and naturally find many and varied complaints from exhibitors. It seems to me that the majority of exchanges in the Southern territory have very good and capable managers who desire to do the right thing by exhibitors. But they are tied hand and foot by their New York office. Most of the Southern exchange managers know conditions in their territory very well, but cannot act without consent from their headquarters.

"As a rule, New York men judge Southern conditions by as they exist in the North, which is a very poor way of judging anything. They make prices according to the population of the counties they play. But the average Southern town of five thousand population. One-third of them are colored and are not allowed in a white picture show. Then how on earth can you set prices on a town of five thousand when that town really has only three thousand whites?"

Fox Endeavors To Put Films All Over World

Export Department Organizes Campaign to Invade Every Part of Globe—Winfield Sheehan in Charge of Task

Preparations are now under way by the officials of the Fox Film Corporation to have their film productions flashed on the screens in every civilized country throughout the world. Plans have been made by the Export Department of this organization to show Fox features and the super de luxe photoplays in which Theda Bara and William Farnum are starred, in Italy, France, Russia, India, South Africa, the Dutch East Indies, Philippine Islands, Panama and the Central American States.

Having recently returned from a trip abroad, Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, had the opportunity while in England to review the foreign field, and has found a great popular demand for Fox Films. In addition, the report has received for the past year and a half from the Fox branch established in Australia, New Zealand, the Argentine Republic and Brazil, show that Fox films are daily increasing in popularity.

Today Fox films are shown in the most out of the way places of the world. They are viewed regularly at Upolu, Samoa, where Robert Louis Stevenson lies buried. Thirty-six miles away, at Pago-Pago, the American Naval Station, Tutuila Island, Fox Films are a regular attraction. They are also seen at Tahiti, one of the Society Islands, Cook Island and the Fiji Islands.

New Company Completes Long Animated Subject

The A. Kay Company, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, was recently organized under the plan of confining itself to putting out short-length topical features. Their first release is an animated subject of unusual length, an 800 foot animated cartoon burlesque, entitled "2,000 Leagues Under the Sea," the first 800 foot animated cartoon ever released. The thread of the story, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," is followed clearly in the burlesque. Paul Terry was the cartoonist.

Close co-operation with exchange man and exhibitor is announced as the slogan.

Frohman Company Announces Advertising Campaign

That there is a lack of sincere cooperation between the exchange man and manufacturer, in the selling and exploitation of super-motion picture productions, is the opinion of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, who have issued the following statement.

"We have read with no little concern during the past two weeks, several signed articles emanating from territorial rights buyers of motion pictures and the impression which has been created to this organization has been indeed vivid. As a result of these observations, this organization has, for the past few weeks, been in active correspondence and consultation with its clientele.

"Beginning with the release of our next production "God's Man," in which H. B. Warner makes his bow under the Frohman banner, we will inaugurate a radically different style of advertising schedule, which we conscientiously believe is in part solution to the want of our buyers. A number of weeks of consistent advertising of our production will, in all instances, be our rule, after the picture has been sold.

Cobe Says Exhibitors Dislike Program Booking

Andrew J. Cobe, president of the Ultra Pictures Corporation, returned Friday from a trip through the Middle West. He reports that business is brisk with promises of immediate improvement.

"The most impressive thing to me," he said, "is the interest manifested by the exhibitors in their demand for independent bookings of features and their growing distrust and dislike of programs.

The exhibitor knows that they are bound to get better pictures for their houses if they can judge the programs to their liking. They believe that they can see what they buy, and the exhibitor has a far better chance of getting something good for his audience by keeping in touch with the independent exchange."
Many Exhibitors Doom the Daily Change of Program Folly

JUDGED by the hundreds of letters which have come into the office of Motion Picture News as a result of its vigorous and merciless campaign for an abandonment of the daily change of program folly, the typical exhibitor of today proves himself to be alert and far-seeing. The editors have been astonished at the extent to which the longer run movement has already spread.

One of the best letters, because of its thoroughness, that the campaign has yet brought forth comes from J. T. Crossley, an exhibitor in Middletown, Ohio. His business, with strong competition, was a failure before he changed over to longer runs.

Read his letter, which follows. We think you will agree that it is the testimony of an expert.

"I have tried with interest your efforts to convince exhibitors that the daily change of program is a detriment to every phase of the motion picture business. I read only the News, and naturally do not know what effort other publications are making to convince their exhibitor readers of the folly of daily change.

"On February 6, 1915, with associates, I opened the Sorg theatre which was wearing a crepe on its front doors. With the Sorg, we operated a 300 capacity house, three-fourths of a mile distant.

"The daily change at that time was the only thing the town would consider. Supposedly with the Sorg on Mondays at the 300-house, and bringing them to the Sorg on Tuesdays, and on every other subject, showing first day at Sorg and second day at the 300-house, excepting the Saturday bill at Sorg, which was shown only the one day. During our operation under this schedule, two houses went out of business leaving seven, which yet remain. During this period we showed Paramount, Fox, Metro, World, Equitable, V-L-S-E, Pathé, Gold Rooster' with some state rights pictures in addition, but apparently without a result.

"One of the best letters, because of its thoroughness, that the campaign has yet brought forth comes from J. T. Crossley, an exhibitor in Middletown, Ohio. His business, with strong competition, was a failure before he changed over to longer runs.

"On September 1, 1915, we began giving Sorg patrons the same picture on Wednesdays and Saturdays. This plan we followed with an occasional exception until November 21, 1915, when we made another radical change, showing Metro on Sundays at the 300-house, and bringing them to the Sorg on Mondays, and on every other subject, showing first day at Sorg and second day at the 300-house, excepting the Saturday bill at Sorg, which was shown only the one day. During our operation under this schedule, two houses went out of business leaving seven, which yet remain. During this period we showed Paramount, Fox, Metro, World, Equitable, V-L-S-E, Pathe, Gold Rooster with some state rights pictures in addition, but apparently without a result.

"Finding that I could not put my ideas into operation with my associates, I called for a dissolution of the partnership, and began rebooking on Paramount subjects to fill Fox dates. In three instances I have shown Paramount subjects two days in return bookings, that had a previous run of three days each and a successful business. Of course, I used choice subjects.

"I then booked Selznick productions to fill part of the time left open by Fox cancellation, and am enjoying the best Lenten season business I have ever experienced in the Sorg.

"As there was no need to tell you we lost money up to the inauguration of the present plan, there is no need to tell you that the Sorg has made money during the past several months, continuously. The new plan of operation was sprung during the hottest season (July and August, 1916) I have seen, and it took but those two months to educate my patrons to my method.

"Consistent, systematic operation, plus personal attention to details has made a winner of a 'dead one.' Fewer brands of pictures and two-day runs with an occasional raise in admission prices were the base of my plans, and results show that I figured it correctly.

"Middletown has a mixed population of about 16,000, seven picture houses with an aggregate capacity of about 3,000 (I do not use gallery.)

"I remain, one of your interested readers,

J. T. CROSSLEY.

The marked advantage of longer runs over daily or four times weekly change, is very emphatically illustrated at Santa Barbara, Cal., a city of less than twenty thousand population, which has four theatres.

All of the house change frequently except the Mission, managed by A. D. Williams. This has a seating capacity of 1,200, uses a four piece orchestra, gives four shows—daily two afternoons and two evenings—and runs the programs three and four days, respectively, without change.

The business at this theatre is materially greater than at any other house, but such has not always been the case. Mr. Williams was managing the Portola, a Santa Barbara theatre of 650 seats prior to his work here. The Mission was then of but 800 seat capacity, and was losing money. The owners asked him to take the management, and he immediately adopted the longer run policy. A few weeks later it was necessary to increase the size of the theatre. An adjoining business room was leased and 300 seats added.

Mr. Williams was the first manager of Santa Barbara to use longer runs, and attributes much of his success to this policy. He uses about the same amount of newspaper and other advertising as the other theatres, and the only difference between Fox Gratified at Success of "Honor System"

WILLIAM A. FOX is gratified at the success which has met "The Honor System," his super-photoplay which is enjoying its second month at the Lyric theatre, New York.

"One of the first things I did was to go over to the studio and ask to see the five completed pictures which I had heard of as having been placed on the shelf for the reason that they were worthless."

"O," said one of the great motion picture experts then in the company's employ, "those pieces of cheese are not worth bothering with."

"I told him I was not looking for expert opinion or advice, but wanted to see those pictures—and he would do well to hurry up with his end of it. Well, all five of those elegantly termed 'pieces of cheese' have since been remodeled and sold, not only recovering the money invested in them, but cleaning up a fair profit and winning strong commendations on the quality of the finished work."

"I have never given out the names of these five picture plays (formerly 'pieces of cheese'). They are 'The Ballet Girl,' 'The Scarlet Oath,' 'The Crucial Test,' 'The Red Woman' and 'Fate's Boom.'"

"We do not have 'pieces of cheese' any more in World-Pictures Brady-made, and I will tell you why: In the first place, we are extremely careful in the selection of our material, and before the work is started everything is laid out in detail and made ready for use on short notice. Then when the director finishes with his work I take hold of the picture and supply any deficiency I am able to detect. After that, perhaps two months before the release date, I go over the play again, and if I find anything of a serious nature requiring time to fix up, the date of issue is postponed, another picture substituted, and we go at our work with all the deliberation that we need."

"In this way our product is made as nearly perfect as lies within human possibility, and we have no percentage of failure at all."

Selznick Tells Why He Bought "The Deemster"

Speaking of his deal with Dr. W. E. Shallenberger of the Arrow Corporation, under which he attained control of "The Deemster" in New York state, Lewis J. Selznick states that he proposes to give this picture the widest possible publicity campaign.

"I am taking up 'The Deemster,'" stated Mr. Selznick, "because it fulfills my idea of what a special feature production should be, in subject and magnitude. There are real brains behind this photoplay, from the author, Hall Caine, down to everyone who had anything substantial to do with its development on the screen. It's a big story founded on a big theme, and it has been made a big thing from the highest standpoint of motion picture production."

Mayor Thomas L. Raymond, City Counselor and Treasurers' of the Grand Army organizations of Newark and vicinity and the New Jersey Soldiers' Home at Kearney have also accepted invitations to be guests during the week.

Universal Not to Abandon Short Pictures

"It is my conviction that the one, two and three-reel dramas are essential to the motion picture business," declares Carl Laemmle.

Statements from the Los Angeles film colony appearing in a recent issue of Motion Picture News to the effect that the Universal organization feels so strongly upon this point, and has had such encouraging experience with them, that they are continually laying more stress upon the one- and two-reel dramatic subjects, and putting more competent and higher-priced directors and companies at work on them all the time. Our program would be no program without them. And it is ridiculous to think of giving up that which we fought so hard to establish and which has been the cornerstone of our success."

Loew Extending His Picture Activities at Capital

Success which has attended Marcus Loew's picture venture with the Columbia theatre, Washington, D. C., has led him to plan an extension of his operation force at Universal City, and we always do at this time of the year, when weather conditions have so far improved that the operation of more companies on the outdoor stages is practical and desirable.

These additional companies, however, will not supersede the thoroughly satisfactory one, two and three-reel dramas which we have been making, and which are more popular now than at any time within the last three years of our experience.

"It is my sincere conviction that the one, two and three-reel dramas are essential to the moing picture business, and not to be touched by its sincerity and its art. It atones for most of the sins of the movies."—Times.

Mothers of France" a World Program Release

Bernhardt Film Stirs New York Audiences—Has Been Bought by World Film Corporation for Release at No Increase Over Usual Program Pictures

"MOTHERS OF FRANCE," the Sarah Bernhardt film which was purchased recently by the World Film Corporation will be distributed through the World Film exchanges as a special attraction at no increase over the regular program cost. This was announced in an exclusive interview for Motion Picture News by the World Film Corporation's sales manager, Richard A. Cradwell.

In their advertisement in last week's News, World Film stated that the Bernhardt film had been bought for franchise holders of World Pictures. It was also stated that the film had been purchased so shortly before time for insertion of the advertisement that the details of the distribution had not been arranged.

Judged by the enthusiastic reception given Madame Bernhardt by the various New York newspapers, "Mothers of France," is considered to be one of the most exceptional films that has ever appeared on Broadway.

The following excerpts are taken from the reviews:

"The applause became so thunderous that the music was drowned."—Tribune.

"We are laying more stress upon them" the Universal as an organization feels so strongly upon this point, and has had such encouraging experience with them, that they are continually laying more stress upon the one- and two-reel dramatic subjects, and putting more competent and higher-priced directors and companies at work on them all the time. Our program would be no program without them. And it is ridiculous to think of giving up that which we fought so hard to establish and which has been the cornerstone of our success."

Post Office Regulation on Film Carrying

At the request of many readers, we are here republishing the Post Office rules regulating the transmission of films through the mails:

"Postmasters are hereby directed to accept motion picture films for transmission in the mails outside of mail bags when packed and labeled in conformity with the Interstate Commerce Commission regulations, as follows:

"Rule 43—(a) Moving picture films must be packed in tightly-closed metal cases included in a strong, spark-proof wooden box; or in spark-proof cases made of sheet iron not less than 0.02-inch thick (No. 25, U. S. standard gauge) and lined throughout with fiber board at least 3⁄16-inch thick, or some other equivalent insulating material. The covers of these cases must fit tightly and must lap over the body at least 3⁄16-inch on the sides, forming a tight joint.

"All packages containing motion picture films must have attached thereto by the shipper a diamond-shaped yellow label, each side four inches long, with the wording printed in black letters inside of a black-line border measuring 3 1⁄2 inches on each side, as follows:

NOTICE TO POSTAL EMPLOYEES

CAUTION

Keep Fire and Lights Away

Sweep Up and Remove Carefully Contents of Broken Packages

The Post Office is not liable for the cleaning or for fire damage caused by negligence.

"These instructions do not apply to motion picture films made of cellulose acetate, which are now mailable."

Skerrett Celebrates Fourth Anniversary with Powers

John Francis Skerrett celebrates his Fourth year as general manager of the Nicholas Power Company on April 1. Mr. Skerrett came to the Power Company in 1913 and during his administration the now famous Cameragraph No. 6-B was introduced to the trade. To his efforts is due in great measure the present splendid organization.

Prior to his connection with the Nicholas Power Company, Mr. Skerrett was chief of the New York Municipal Bureau of Electricity.

St. Louis Exhibitors Discuss Morality Campaign

Passage of a motion requesting all members not to support mayoralty candidates in the matter of running slides in their theatres of them until the views of the body were further outlined, was the most important move of the Theatre Manager and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis, at their last meeting on March 16.

In addition a motion was carried for the appointment of a committee of five to secure views of censorship from new members of the association and report to the association.

New members elected were J. Weil, manager of the World Film Corporation, and J. Finnegan of the Motion Picture Department of the St. Louis Times.

Baltimore Film Men Dance Will Be Big Affair

Strong efforts are being made to secure a number of photoplay stars to attend the annual dance of the motion picture exhibitors of Baltimore, to be held at the Lyric, that city, on Saturday, April 28, and the public is being given opportunity to vote on those they wish to see.

Ballots are being given out at each theatre, and in a few days Louis A. DeHoff, who is in charge of this feature, will head a committee to go to New York and arrange details for bringing the stars here.

Canadian Film Men Co-operate

A delegation of executives of the Ontario Exhibitors' Association met with the exchange men recently and discussed the matter of film deposits. It was decided after a discussion that the exchange members should take it up at their own meeting and act upon the resolutions presented to them by the exhibitors.

This co-operation, it is said, has resulted in eliminating much of the misunderstanding that previously existed between these both branches of the trade.

Believes High Prices Will Drive 60 Per Cent Out

W. H. Coon, Mission Theatre, Amarillo, Texas, Sees Danger Ahead in Present High Cost of Films and High Admissions

THE following letter is full of good, hard sense, and experience. We are glad to say we think Brother Coon's alarm can be quieted. The solution of his troubles is longer runs. If he were right, we would hate to try to see to the end of the road he points out.

The high prices he complains of are not going to drive the substantial exhibitor out of business. The "only house in town" is never going to ask twenty-five cents admissions regularly. Only (as he calls them) "promoters," would predict such a situation. Some say fifteen, most say ten cents, is the logical price for "the people's theatres.

An occasional higher priced attraction will be a blessing to just such exhibitors as Brother Coon. When too many "big stars" enter the field, they will kill their own golden goose.

The important point is that plenty of good stars are taking the place of the ones leaving the present programs.

Keep to your popular prices, Brother Coon. When you pay the extra price for films, add it to your admission charge, but don't book such films oftener than your people want them. That is for you to say, not the film exchanges.

Above all things don't get your people out of this "habit" of coming often; see that if they are asked to spend a little more, they get their money's worth. They can afford the extra price once in a while. Let them know weeks in advance when price is going up, and boost your regular pictures just as strong as the extra features. If the name of the star won't get the extra price without extra boosting, you are paying the exchange for your own work in boosting, not for the merit of the picture. Don't deceive yourself or your patrons. A good example in point is the Victor records, an you pay whatever your fans desire, according to the "star" heard on the record, but the cheaper records are called for by everybody, while the more expensive are sold to the few. So with the pictures.

And don't forget longer runs are coming—when you will get more money out of less rental. For you will pay less for the second and third day's rental, and take in more.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

GENTLEMEN:

As I see it, as an exhibitor of pictures only, the big stars are driving all our patronage to the vaudeville and stock houses, by quitting the programs to make pictures in their own companies. The price is so high the exhibitor cannot pay it.

The public has seen too many good productions in 1916 for a small admission fee to make possible such an improvement in productions as to warrant double the price. Not in this day and time. In 1918 there will be only one picture show in any town of ten to fifteen thousand population. It will use six reels or more, and a big orchestra, with expense so high the house will have to be kept crowded all the time to get by at all.

You cannot charge children 15 cents. Adults cannot pay 25 cents. At least those who have in the past kept the "movie" going, and who now have the "habit" of going right along, when they can go once in two weeks or so only, will soon get weaned from this habit. Then they will notice what they are saving by staying away and quit attending the show at all.

Here is my experience. I ran regular program, four reels, for eighteen months. Quit because I did not make as much money as my investment called for. Then I began running features; Paramount first, having to educate my people about six months before doing any more business than with the regular stuff; next year Triangle was on the market, and I tried to run them two days each, picking out what I wanted. I could not make this go—this in 1916—and Triangle had as good productions as anyone could pick a year before or a year from now; at least 75 per cent of them. Now take a few stars out of each one of these companies; put them in their (Continued on following page) own pictures; charge the exhibitor three times his previous price; and even if he doubles his price it will not go. Take a horse, tie him up on the street where everybody can see him, then take him out to the fair grounds and charge 25 cents a head. Who will go to see him? None more than once.

January, 1938, will see sixty per cent more movie shows than we have now. All but the good managers will go. I have had all kinds of opposition here. Some opened the shows when we didn't have a fence. The exchange men can tell you from their books of these failures. My expenses, since I quit regular program, have increased thirty three dollars a day. Allowing no salary for me, nor rent, nor interest on seventy thousand dollar investment, I have made a little money every month.

The increased expense will not stand for as many shows as have been running, unless the public will stand an increased expense. I believe there is a demand for improved and better pictures. For after all is said and done, we are dependent upon the working class for our patronage.

I suppose some of those "wise" promoters will come back at me, if you publish this, but this is the truth. I am a hobby of mine. As we pay State taxes of eight thousand a year I guess we can get along without it.

Allowing no salary for me, nor rent, nor interest on seventy thousand dollar investment, I have made a little money every month.

Hats Off to Paramount Honor Roll

Harry Day, editor of Paramount's live wire publication, "Paramount Progress," has compiled an honor roll of the Paramount "live wires" who have profited by suggestions gained by reading "Paramount Progress." Through this exceedingly useful publication circulated among the Paramount family, countless hints for improvement have been exchanged between exhibitors interested in the same programs, and box-office receipts have been largely benefited.

Some day we may compile an honor list among the live wires who make use of the News columns, and in the meantime we take our hats off to Editor Day's "Honor Roll" of Paramount live wires as follows:

Eleven Big-Capacity Theatres Have One Publicity Head

Publicity Manager William H. Jobelmann of the T. and D. circuit of theatres, is having his hands full nowadays with the several big pictures these big theatres are running. The T. and D. chain includes besides the two enormous theatres on each side of San Francisco Bay (New T. and D. and Tivoli), the big T. and D. at Portland, Ore., Oakland Photoplay theatre, and "T. and D.'s" at Richmond, San Jose, Sacramento, Berkeley, Stockton, Watsonville, California, and Reno, Nevada.

The appointment of Mr. Jobelmann was announced several weeks ago, when Turner and Dahnken established a "publicity department" to cover their rapidly growing circuit, the largest, by the way, on the Pacific Coast.

Attaches Schedule to Posters

The Empress, Omaha, Neb., has little attachable cards to put on posters in the lobby. These cards say "This picture is shown 11 A. M., 1 F. M., 4 F. M., 6:30 P. M., 8:30 P. M., Monday to Friday and 10 A. M., 3 P. M., 5:30 P. M., 8:30 P. M., Monday to Saturday. The picture begins. Patrons who do not want to sit through the long feature, or those who care only for the long feature and haven't time for the rest, or those who are attracted by one particular picture thus find the signs very convenient.

BEWARE! You are next.

A warning from The Voice on the Wire.

Lobby Turned Into "Dive"

The front of the Garrick theatre, Los Angeles, was made decidedly conspicuous this week by the management having placed in front of the lobby a replica of the famous Barbary coast resort, "Hell Morgan's Place," or "The Satior's Roost." The program for the week included the Bluebird subject, "Hell Morgan's Girl," and the locale of the story being at this resort which was destroyed by the earthquake and fire. Manager Dave Burshon of the local Universal and Bluebird exchange, prepared. The film played to very good business, and Manager H. P. Caulfield of the Midway, Montreal, and who has contributed many articles on publicity adjunct from Artcraft sources Published by Leo Bennett, with not one but two half-tone beauty poses of Little Mary," on brightest red cover, this will no doubt help clinch the ever increasing popularity of the one and only.

Advertising Two-Reeler as Feature Claimed Success

The Essanay Company brings to our attention an idea claimed to have pulled capacity business for a live downtown Western theatre. Instead of filling the lobby with a little of everything (the house not a "feature" house, but ran only short programs), the experiment was tried of decorating the entire front featuring "Max Comes Across." There was enough of this material to make a real feature showing. We think this is a good hint to the houses, where short programs are run — as is often the case on Saturdays, in otherwise "feature" houses. Why make up a band of deuces to show in your lobby, if you can make it all aces?

Door Cards and Novelties from Midway Theatre, Montreal

M. Kashin, who directs the advertising policy of the Midway theatre, Montreal, and who has contributed many articles on lobby display for these columns, does not confine his ideas to lobbies only, as evidenced by a door card which you may imagine was most effective showing the German Kaiser answering "The Voice on the Wire."

"As 'The Voice on the Wire' is the mysterious death summons—or to be exact the summons of the friend to take care of the body after the death—in Universal's newest serial, this cartoon in Canada attracted very great attention. Another novelty which Mr. Kashin had printed in large quantity as throwaways was a curious tempter. Folded so as to be held closed by slipping one flap into a notch, the outside face read "Official. Man, married or single, must read the information inside. Compulsory." Inside it read as follows:

"A Warning to Husbands and Husbands to Be: Try not to speak to any one during the day for about a week if you can. Also do not allow anyone to speak to you. If possible seclude yourself from all people except in the evening, and then see one person and the same one nightly. Even in our big cities a woman's life is oftimes a very lonely one. An honest housewife is a beautiful thing to see, and yet there are fewer other than these wives who realize the bareness there can be in a perfectly comfortable and happy home."

"The Woman Alone." The title is one which should sink deep into the minds of all husbands and husbands-to-be. Carried away by the hustle and excitement of the financial world, few men realize how utterliy lonely the average home can be. The full realization of this will be driven home to you upon seeing the photoplay, 'A Woman Alone,' featuring the beautiful Alice Brady at the Midway, Monday and Tuesday, March 19 and 20, 1917."

Mary Pickford Waltz Latest

"With Swaying Feet—it can't be beat—the Mary Pickford Waltz" is the latest poppularity adjunct from Artcraft sources. Published by Leo Bennett, with not one but two half-tone beauty poses of "Little Mary," on brightest red cover, this will no doubt help clinch the ever increasing popularity of the one and only.

First "Bluebird" Contest Ends—Second Announced

Frank Gould of the Rex, Reading, Pa., Gains First Honors with a Week of Novel Exploitation Ideas

This was the headline feature of the Bluebird Valentine Party held Wednesday night. The pie was, of course, a niftily devised imitation of paper, with bluebird heads sticking up through the top, each attached by a string to valentines carrying admission tickets. The pie was three feet in diameter.

Lobby decorations of "Bluebirds" swinging and twisting on strings, with red hearts from their bills, and mysterious slides with only bluebirds in various poses shown started the people's curiosity. Then rivalry was aroused among the patrons regarding those able to tell what the little birds and the hearts meant—of course, it meant "Tangled Hearts," the name of the first picture. When the big week opened there were separate nights for all kinds of novel entertainment. Monday—Bluebird Prize Night; Tuesday, Bluebird Souvenir Night; Wednesday, Bluebird Valentine Party and Pie Opening; Thursday, Bluebird Ladies' Night (Hand Painted Bluebird China); Friday, Announcement of the summary of the Week's Parties; Saturday, Announcement of those who would be given the various presents.

Wednesday night was "some party"; among other events, was a "tug of breath," between boys and girls, who blew "Bluebirds" back and forth on long strings—the one blowing the bluebird all the way to the further end of the string winning. Quickness of eye and hand also received attention, the children having five-inch letters, B-L-U-E-B-I-R-D, mounted on rulers, each child in a group having to take his or her place on the stage so that all facing the audience read "Bluebird." The group getting there the quickest won. This was repeated several times.

A feature of Ladies' Night (Thursday) was the submission of big and little hand-painted "Bluebirds." The largest was nearly five feet from tip to tail, the smallest, less than five-sixteenths of an inch, visible only under a microscope.

Friday over a hundred persons submitted lists of words spelled from the letters in "Little Eve Edgarton." It was found to be possible to make eleven hundred words from this combination, and many of the entrants in the contest filled out good-sized lists.

A Ford Story from Seattle

Distributing tack cards and such material quickly and efficiently is an absolute necessity with the house that seeks 100 per cent efficiency in this important detail. Jensen and Von Herberg, of Seattle, who operate a chain of theatres over the Northwest, each week place in the business section of Seattle several hundred window-cards, one sheets, three sheets, etc., for their Liberty theatre. The car shown in the enclosed picture was bought for the express and sole purpose of distributing this matter with no waste. Because of the large number of window-card and special displays put out on each show, they have found the car so busy in the only practical way this necessity for efficient and quick distribution.

Gordon F. Fullerton, advertising manager of the Liberty, states that the car was more than paid for by the sale of cuts last year. They have always made it a practice to resell as many of their cuts as possible; to keep down the overhead cost of illustrating their ads.
Horse and Rider “Personally”
Visit Los Angeles Theatre

Riding through the theatre, off the stage and down the aisle on horseback is the latest “Personal Appearance” as pulled off in Los Angeles the other day by Manager D. S. McCarty of the Comedy theatre, Los Angeles. “Shorty” Hamilton was the “star” who included his trusty mount in the leading role carrying away the honors with four feet.

The “Shorty” Hamilton series, produced by the Monogram Film Company for Mutual, got a real boost through this novel idea which will hold records, we think, for at least a few days to come.

Four Distinct Announcements on Small Page Stand Out

Four distinct announcements on a page three and a quarter by five inches (measuring the type, not the page) is shown in the illustration herewith.

Beginning the new serial on the day the last chapter of a popular serial now running ends, and adding a big feature besides to assure a good start for the new serial is the plan of the Queen theatre, Knoxville, Tenn., to keep business “going.”

We illustrate the back page of the Queen News, the small program distributed to patrons of this house in advance of coming attractions. It will be noted that four separate and distinct announcements “stand out” from the typographical arrangement adopted. “Pearl of the Army Ends,” “Mystery of the Double Cross Begins”—three days, Thursday, Friday and Saturday—and extra added feature, Pauline Frederick in “Sapho.” Two days is the longest run on any ordinary feature in Knoxville, but the chance was taken to extend the run to three days as an experiment on “Sapho,” and at the same time take care of the extra crowds sure to come to see all these attractions at once, and the management feels that its confidence was not misplaced.

Did You Tell Your Newspaper About the Chicago Herald?

We published some weeks ago an account of the wonderful success of the Chicago Herald, the liveliest newspaper of that great city, if not of the entire West, in its handling of picture news at any rate.

If you did not see that article on page 1678 of the March 17 issue of Motion Picture News, hunt up your files and READ IT. Take it to your LOCAL EDITOR, and let its fact sink in. HE MIGHT see how an application of these ideas would work out to your mutual benefit.

Here is a recapitulation of what the Chicago Herald has done for itself, while serving the representatives of the “fifth largest industry” at a very low advertising rate for its enormous circulation.

(1) It has a program directory of one hundred and eighty-three (183) theatres.

(2) It has published over four hundred thousand (400,000) lines of paid advertising to stimulate the interest of its readers in motion pictures.

(3) It prints more about Motion Pictures than all its Chicago competitors combined.

(4) Its appropriation for gathering in new “Movie Fans” as readers amounts annually to twenty-seven thousand dollars ($27,000).

(5) It has built up a following for its criticisms by unimpeachable integrity of unbiased daily reviews by competent judges of pictures.

(6) It has secured at great expense the services of Louella O. Parsons, whose writings about pictures are worth reading: a woman famous, sincere, and popular.

(7) It has printed more picture stories, including serials, than all other Chicago papers combined.

(8) It has a real, active, exhibitors’ aid department, to help exhibitors rent only good films.

(9) Sixty per cent of the theatres in the Chicago territory advertise in its columns every day and Sunday.

(10) And its directory of plays at the different theatres is read by everybody who wants to keep up with things theatrical.

Children’s Matinees Still Draw at Omaha

This is a picture of a children’s matinee in the Muse theatre, Omaha, Neb., where such matinees are now holding sway every Saturday in a number of theatres. This photograph was taken on a “poor” day, when the attendance was hardly more than 500. Usually it is nearer 900, and two children are sitting in a seat. Manager Robert Shirley of the Muse, says it is a problem to forecast the attendance of children. The weather, of course, has its effects, but on occasions when a splendid children’s star, with an excellent title and a good story are advertised, the attendance is not as good as in other days, when an inferior picture is shown. Because he thinks its worth while, he will continue the children’s matinees indefinitely, he announced this week.
Releases on K.E.S.E. Program Under New Policy

First Ten Productions Scheduled Under "Feature a Week" Innovation—Yearly Contracts Reported Coming Fast

RELEASES for the first two months under their new policy of a feature each week were announced last week by Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay. At the same time the statement was made that the adoption of the new policy had already resulted in an unprecedented rush of business, and the signing of many yearly contracts by exhibitors.

In New York alone Manager W. E. Raynor reported he expected to have at least 300 new contracts signed in his territory before the policy goes into effect on April 2.

Following are two months releases under the new policy:

The Truffers," by Essanay, featuring Nell Craig and Sydney Ainsworth, April 9; "Builder of Castles," Edison, featuring Robert Harron (Goldwyn)

Business Comedy Next Bryant Washburn Subject

Bryant Washburn is working on another comedy for Essanay titled "Builder of Castles," which is said to be his mirth-provoking picture, following his recent picture "Skinner's Dress Suit." The latest subject will be released April 23.

The story is of a young man, Skinner, who emboldened by rapid promotion in business, decides he can do as well for himself. He resigns his position, engages a magnificent suite of offices, leaves his suburban cottage for an immense town house with an army of servants, and while his wife starts in to conquer society he goes to subjugate the financial world.

The new business, however, approaches the shoals of bankruptcy, but Skinner keeps up the bluff of success to his wife, who tells his former employer's wife and she in turn tells her husband. Feeling a mistake was made allowing Skinner to get away from him, the latter pleads with Skinner to return to the firm just at the time when the young man faces ruin. So all ends well.

Hazel Daly and Harry Beaumont are among the members of the supporting cast.

Placing Triangle Program in Philadelphia

Harry Schwalbe, a well-known film man of Philadelphia, who has secured a long-term contract for the exhibition of Triangle pictures in that section, is negotiating with the directors of the Stanley theatre there to exhibit the first showing of the Monday releases of Triangle. The result of the consideration the Stanley people are giving the proposition will be made known in a few days.

Mr. Schwalbe has already closed a contract with the management of the Arcadia theatre of Philadelphia for the exhibition of one feature each week. He is also making plans to distribute the city so that picture patrons in every section will be afforded the chance to see the Triangle program.

Co-operative Linder Advertising Costs Essanay $35,000

By virtue of the fifty-fifty agreement on advertising expenses of Max Linder comedies that Essanay entered with all exhibitors, a matter of $35,000, has already been laid out by the producing company as their half of exploitation expenses for "Max Comes Across."

Essanay claims an equal amount, if not more, is being expended for newspaper display ads of "Max Wants a Divorce," the foreign comedian's second production.

"Linder's third comedy, as yet unnamed, is reported as nearing completion at Culver City, Cal.
Sequel to "Squaw Man" a Lasky Release April 26

Motion picture rights to Edward Milton Royle's "The Squaw Man's Son," which is a sequel to that author's play and screen drama "The Squaw Man" has been purchased by Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company. It was in an adaption of "The Squaw Man" that the Lasky organization made its bow as a producing concern.

Wallace Reid will appear in the stellar role of this latest production, which is scheduled for release by Paramount on April 26. Anita King and Dorothy Davenport will also be seen in important parts, and other players are Raymond Hatton, H. E. Carpenter, Charles H. Geldert, Ted Ducan, Frank Lanning and Donald Bowles. Edward J. Le Saint staged the production.

Mary Anderson Named as Lead with Moreno

Mary Anderson, or "Sunshine Mary," who has played ingenue parts in Vitagraph Western studio productions, is to be the new leading woman with Antonio Moreno since the departure of Edith Storey. Miss Anderson is one of the youngest of Vitagraph's more prominent players, and has been at the Hollywood studio something over a year, where she was featured in her own comedies and in several feature productions. She has directed the production with William Duncan. The pair will be directed by William Wolber.

Glowing Reports on Pathe's "Double Cross" Serial

"Mystery of the Double Cross," Pathe's latest serial release, is being extensively booked for first-run showing by important exhibitors who never before have shown a serial. It is reported by Pathe, that keen competition has developed as a result of trade showings held during the week of March 18, in all of Pathe's thirty exchange cities.

More than fifty newspapers in the largest cities are being used in the advertising campaign Pathe is running.

Additional Subjects Completed Fill Bluebird's May List

THE arrival of two new features at Bluebird headquarters during the past week has enabled the management to fix the schedule for all of May. "The Clock," which is being shown this week at the New York Rialto, has been set for release April 30, following "The Girl in the Checkered Coat." Just ahead of the last named feature is "A Jewel in Pawn," which goes into the Rialto April 15. Thus the features are reversed from the schedule in their showing at Director Rothapfel's house.

Pathé Augments Comedy Program—Toto, "Hip" Clown, Engaged

FOLLOWING the consummation of a contract, providing for the appearance of Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby in a one-reel comedy each week on the Pathé program, and the warm reception of the first two-reel "Lonesome Luke" comedy at the Rialto and other big "Lukes" throughout the country, a statement from Pathe last week announces the engagement by the Rolin Film Company of Toto, the famous clown of the New York Hippodrome, and outlines a new comedy program.

The company now has a two-reel "Luke" released the third Sunday of each month, beginning March 18, and one "Max Linder" subject every two weeks, sometimes in full reel, sometimes split reel. There will be no more one-reel "Lukes" and no more Mittenthal comedies, and but one more "Skinny" full-reel release and one split-reel with Max Linder.

Toto is what is known as a "posturing" clown. The "contortionist" clown leans backward, bending his spine, Toto, on the contrary, leans forward, and can sink on the ground as gracefully as any dancer. One of his favorite tricks is to bury himself in the oversized topcoat which he will wear in the Rolin comedies. He has arranged for a special costume for pictures.

Two-reel "Lonesome Lukes" and one-reel Myers-Theby, Max Linder and "Toto" comedies will give Pathe a lineup which it is believed will further strengthen the company's program.

Russian Trouble Arouses Interest in Edison Film

The upheaval in Russian government, will react to the benefit of the Edison production "The Cossack Whip," according to the belief of the producers who have received numerous requests for rebookings. This features a five-part subject, features Viola Dana, and was released a few months ago by V-L-S-E. It is a tale of the Russian Empire and the machinations of the secret police system of that country.
A CAREFULLY selected variety program is offered by Universal for the week of April 2, headed by a Red Feather five-act drama, "The Bronze Bride," a human interest story of a wayward son, who is turned out by his father to shift for himself.

In the wilds of the North, so the story goes, his better side asserts itself. He goes, his better side asserts itself. He

Allre McDowell Stars—Comedy Crook Drama in Three Parts

Also Features Program—Usual Number of Comedies Included

Timely and Historical Subjects in No. 61 Pictographs

Included in the sixty-first edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs is a picture entitled "Mission Life in California," showing the old missions of the Golden State founded more than a century ago by the Franciscan fathers. Many of these are now in ruin, but some have been conserved and others repaired and are still in use.

The second installment of animated Picture-Puzzles, by Sam Loyd, also appears in this issue of Pictographs, as does the third title of this story has not as yet been announced it is stated that it will present a type of crook play enlivened by many comedy situations. It was written by George Dana Smith and produced by Edwin Stevens. In the cast are Claude Cooper, Monty Brace and Dean Raymond. The Victor comedy, "Please Be My Wife," written and produced by Bob Leonard, who also plays the leading role, is the other Tuesday release.

The Laemmle two-act human-interest drama, "The Star Witness," is the feature for Wednesday, April 3. It was written by Grant Carpenter and produced by John McCormick. Lee Hill, Lena Basckette and Elizabeth James play the leading roles. The L-KO comedy, "Nabbing a Noble," with Phil Dunham in the principal role, and the regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly will also be released Wednesday.

"Somebody Lied," the Victor two-act comedy drama, which will be released Thursday, April 5, is a story of domestic misunderstandings, produced by Ben Wilson, with Priscilla Dean and Harry Carter featured. The Big U one-act drama, "The Dawn of Decency," and the Powers educational "Hagenback's Wild Animals" are other Thursday offerings.

The Man in the Trunk," the fifth adventure in the Yorke Norroy series, "The Perils of the Secret Service," written and produced by George Bronson Howard, and the thirteenth issue of the Universal Screen Magazine are the releases of Friday, April 6.

The Bison two-act Western drama, "The Burning Silence," is the chief offering, Saturday, April 7. George Pearce and Jane Bernousy are the featured players in this picture. On the same date will be released the Joke contact, "A Book for Him," with Gaul Henry and William Franey, and the Laemmle drama, "The Blue Print Mystery," with King Baggot.

On Easter Sunday four subjects will be released. The Big U drama, "The Terrors of War," with Grace Cunard and Another condition that has caused the producers to take this step is the advance made by exhibitors in their knowledge of the proper manner to present the film. Some of the former subjects were shown without music accompaniments, with poor projection and titles and subtitles that failed to tell the story. It is believed the show value of these reissues will be increased one hundred per cent, when surrounded by suitable music, new titles and subtitles, and expert printing and projection.

"A Million Bid," the story of a man supposed to have lost his life in a shipwreck, leaving a widow and child, but in reality rescued, devoid of memory, has Anita Stewart, Harry Morey, E. K. Lincoln, Julia Swayne Gordon, Charles Kent, Mary Maurice and Kate Price in the cast. Ralph W. Ince directed the picture.

"Captain Alvarez" is a Spanish-American revolutionary story, which when first presented merited praise, from many motion picture critics. Edith Storey, William D. Taylor, George C. Stanley, George Holt, Otto Lederer, Myrtle Gonzales and George Kunkel are members of the cast.

In keeping with the idea of bringing its reissues up to date, Vitagraph is issuing a new line of paper, consisting of stands from one to twenty-four sheets, with each release, sending out new press sheets, and is advertising the reissues as if they were recent productions.
Quintet of Big Plays on Metro April List

Five pretentious photodramas will be released by Metro during April. Of these three have been produced by Rolfe Photoplays, one by Columbia Pictures Corporation and one by Popular Plays and Players. In addition to these five chapters of "The Great Secret" will be released.

"The Waiting Soul," with Mme. Petrova as star, is scheduled for April 2. Burton L. King directed the production in which Stuart Brinsley, Wilfred de Shields, Mrs. Louise Ford, Roy Pfeiler and Mrs. Mathilda Brandage have important parts.

The second April releases comes on the ninth, and is "The Power of Decision," from the pen of George W. Gunn, adapted by June Mathis and directed by John W. Noble for Rolfe. Frances Nelson is starred in the play having the part of a professional model. New York's art life is reflected in this feature.

Dana's next starring vehicle, the exact release date of which is not given, will be released April 16. "God's Law and Man's," Viola Dana's next starring vehicle, is being released April 16. "God's Law and Man's," directed by John W. Noble, will be released April 16. "God's Law and Man's," the title of Viola Dana's next starring vehicle, the exact release date of which is not given.

New Triangle-Kay Bee Player

Lillian Hayward, well-known character actress, was H. I. "cc, to appear in support of his stars "Shorty". Kay Bee plays. She has been signed an important role, in support of Dorothy Dalton, in the new play in which Miss Dalton is appearing, under the direction of Charles Miller.

MARGARITA FISCHER, in "The Devil's Assistant," a dramatic picturization of the drug evil, will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation at the top of its schedule for the week of April 2.

"The Devil's Assistant" is a six-part production from the Pollard Picture Plays studios at San Diego, made under the supervision of Harry Pollard.

While the picture may be classified as a propaganda picture against the drug evil, it is said to be presented in dramatic narrative form, with a story which does not depend on the drug element for its interest and suspense.

"Shorty Solves the Wireless Mystery," the twelfth of the stories in which Shorty Hamilton is appearing for Mutual, deals with intercepted wireless messages, of foreign submarines obtaining the dates of the sailing of American vessels, and shows submarines appearing and receiving messages and then submerging again.

"Kidnapped" is the fifteenth and final story in "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters" series which Mutual is releasing. It tells of a caveman who, when the woman he loves will not do just as he says, kidnaps her and keeps her prisoner on a houseboat. Zena Keefe is said to show to exceptional advantage in this episode.

April 6 marks the release of "The Counterfeit Five," third of the "Jimmy Dale" series.

The Cub Comedy, which will go to the public on April 5, will be "The Lady Detective." George Ovey will be featured in this picture, as he has in the last seventy-five Cub pictures. The Vong "laughers," ready April 7, will be "Why Be Fond," but Ovey enacts the principal role in the story, the plot of which hinges on the result of an April fool joke.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," released April 3, shows two of the three islands in the West Indies recently purchased from Denmark, St. Thomas and St. Croix, and portrays most vividly the beautiful splendor of these islands, and makes paramount the importance of its productions.

"Reel Life," ready April 5, is made up of the following topics: "Rubber," showing the cultivation of rubber plants in Northern Brazil; "A One-Man Submarine," demonstrating how these small but deadly subsea boats will be operated; "Making Bread the Modern Way," taking the spectators on a trip through the modern bakery; and "Magnetism," a series of simple experiments, showing how magnets are made, what substances have the property of attracting and how the compass is based upon magnetism.

Newest Metro a Drama with Mme. Petrova

Mme. Petrova will be seen on the screen again in the Metro release of April 2, "The Waiting Soul," described as a powerful photodrama. The production was adapted for the screen by Wallace C. Chilton, directed by Burton L. King and supervised by Aaron Hoffman for Popular Plays and Players. The subject is termed "a photoplay of conscience" and the scenes are divided between England and America.

Grace Vaughan (Mme. Petrova) is an orphan who finds doubtful happiness upon falling in love with Dudley Kent, a married man. A divorce results, and the two leave for England. Later word that his son by his first wife has been killed, causes Kent in a rage to reproach Grace, and she leaves him. Without money, she is lured to a questionable resort. A visitor helps her escape, she serves as a nurse for three years, and later in America, marries one of her patients without telling him she is married.

Imminent discovery through the meeting of an old friend, and the complicated problem resulting from the knowledge that she is soon to have a child, forces Grace to make a decision. The ending of the play is said to be of continued dramatic situations, as may easily be supposed.

Supporting Mme. Petrova is Mahlon Hamilton, Roy Fisher, Mrs. Mathilde Brandage, Wilfred de Shields, Wyndham Standing and Mrs. Lottie Ford.
Two Bluebirds to Play Rialto, Another Probable

Director Rothapfel is this week showing at his Rialto, the third Bluebird photoplay he has chosen from that program. "The Clock" is the title, and Franklyn Furness and Agnes Vernon are featured. In booking this attraction, about the quickest deal on record was accomplished. "The Clock" arrived from Bluebird's west coast studio a week ago last Friday and was shown that afternoon to Bluebird employees. Before noon the next day, S. B. Kramer, manager of Bluebird's New York Exchange, had invited Director Rothapfel to see the picture, and the deal was closed in less than twenty-four hours from the time the subject reached New York.

At the same time Mr. Rothapfel looked over "A Jewel in Pawn," a forthcoming Bluebird, in which Ella Hall will be featured, and this picture is booked for April 15. This arrangement will necessitate a change of the regular release date for "A Jewel in Pawn" in New York territory, for the reason that April 16 has been set as the time for first runs of the picture throughout the country.

There is one more Bluebird at present ready for release that Director Rothapfel is likely to contract for the Rialto. This one is a Lynn F. Reynolds production, at present entitled "The Code of the Klondyke."

Allied Charities to Benefit by "War Brides" Showings

Sidney B. Lust, of the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Inc., announces having booked "War Brides," which will have a week's showing at Ford's theatre, Baltimore, Md., when a percentage of the receipts will be given to the Allied Charities. The week following, commencing May 6, the film will be shown at the Res- lasco theatre, Washington, D. C., for which hundreds have been extended to the President and Cabinet officials. Twenty-five per cent. of the proceeds from night performances and thirty-three and a third per cent. from matinee proceeds are to go to the charity named.

"Vicar" Endorsed in Cleveland

Cleveland has given the Pathe-Than- houser, "The Vicar of Wakefield," an un-qualified endorsement. In the face of extreme poor weather conditions over a thousand professors and teachers from the city schools gathered at the Stillman theatre on the 17th to witness the first Cleveland screening of Frederick Warde in the adaptation of Goldsmith's great novel.

J. M. H. Fredericks, Public School Superintendant, stated after the performance the picture was the best that had ever been shown in Cleveland.

The Stillman theatre will keep the "Vicar" for a run of indefinite duration.

"Eternal Sin" Draws Heavily at Broadway

Going into its second week at the Broadway theatre, New York, Herbert Brenon's second Selznick picture, "The Eternal Sin," running at the dollar scale of prices, is reported as proving a worthy successor from a box office standpoint to "War Brides," the first picture Brenon handled for Selznick. On the second day of its run the receipts jumped considerably in excess of those of the other offering at the same playhouse.

Florence Reed, the star, has come in for a big meed of praise for her impersonation of Lucretia Borgia, the notorious poisoner, in this picture.

A significant conclusion is drawn by the producers from the presentation of "The Eternal Sin" and its reception by the pub- lic. That is that the fans do want so-called "costume plays," and even tragedy, if the subject is presented in a big way.

Big Brooklyn House Signs For Paramount Service

The Triangle theatre, of Brooklyn, has signed a contract with the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company for exclusive Paramount service, including all Para- mount features and single-reel subjects. The deal was made on Friday, March 3, and the service began a few days later when "The Spirit of Romance" with Vivian Martin started with a week's run at the house. The bookings will be strictly first-run in Brooklyn.

Following "The Spirit of Romance," two other Paramount productions will be shown. They are "A School for Husband's," and "Heart's Desire." The Triangle theatre seats 1,500 people, the seating for which is arranged in an orchestra, balcony and gallery. But two performances are given each day, one beginning in the afternoon and the other in the evening.

Future "Skinner" Subjects Taken by Rialto

The Rialto theatre, New York, which played "Knickerbocker's Dress Suit," the Es- sanay release, featuring Bryant Wash- burn, has contracted to show the three other "Skinner" pictures which the produc- ing body has announced will be made. Manager Rothapfel, contrary to his usual custom, of insisting on seeing a picture before arranging to show it, notified K. E. S. E. upon learning of the producing plans, that the Rialto would take them all.

Los Angeles Likes "Shorty"

The Comedy theatre, Los Angeles, which has been running the episodes of Max- tual's "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton," for three days each week, recently made arrangements to show the pictures for the entire week.
Million Dollar Travel Talk Company Formed by Woods

Following on the heels of the formation of A. H. Woods Picture Corporation comes the announcement from Mr. Woods, of the organization of the El Mendorf Travel Talks, Inc., with a capital of $1,000,000, with Dwight El Mendorf, the noted traveler, lecturer and artist, as president, Mr. Woods as vice-president and treasurer, and Dr. Albert A. Lownenthal, of Chicago, as secretary. The offices of the corporation are at present in the Erlinge Theatre Building, New York.

Mr. El Mendorf has gathered more than 60,000 negatives in the course of twenty-five years as traveler and lecturer in every part of the world. These travel talks, illustrated from this collection, will be presented as an A. H. Woods attraction at prices from twenty-five cents to two dollars first in the large legitimate houses, and ultimately in the moving picture theatres of the country.

New York will hear Mr. El Mendorf early in April, when he will appear in a legitimate theatre for four weeks delivering a series of his complete travel talks.

Initial Gold Medal Play Introduces Hilda Nord

Hilda Nord is making her first appearance before American screen audiences in the role of Kitty Trent in "The Web of Life," the initial release of the Gold Medal Photoplayers.

Miss Nord is said to give a meritorious characterization of a young unsuspecting country maid in the story which was immediately standardized. Work on the picture was started nearly a year ago. It took eight months of constant effort and work to complete the eight reels.

Not only does Colonel Roosevelt appear upon the screen, but pictures of President Wilson are utilized to make the photoplay as realistic as possible.

Commodore Blackton and Mr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, acting on numerous suggestions of Colonel Roosevelt, wrote the story which was immediately standardized. Work on the picture was started nearly a year ago. It took eight months of constant effort and work to complete the eight reels.

New Order of O. Henry Releases

It is announced by General Film, that there has been a slight change in the order of distribution of the O. Henry series. The first subject will be "The Third Ingredient," and following in the release order are "Friends at San Rosario," "The Marionettes," "Past One at Rooney's" and "The Gifts of the Magi."

"War Brides" in Butte

Al Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Feature Film Company, Seattle, Wash., visited Butte, Mont., during the past week making arrangements for a Butte showing of his latest state rights purchase, "War Brides."

"Womanhood" to Have Showing April 1

Plan to Spur Attendance of Nation at Presentations of the Picture—Papers Highly Praise Vitagraph Battle Production

VITAGRAPH'S eight-reel battle picture titled "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," opened at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, Monday, March 19, to an audience of government officials and preparedness advocates.

"Womanhood" is scheduled for a run of three weeks at the Chestnut Street Opera House. It opens in New York City at the Broadway theatre for a pre-release run on April 1, and will be released throughout the country through the various V-L-S-E exchanges on April 9.

Within twenty-four hours after the first public screening of the picture, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the National Preppedness Society, the American Defense League, the National Security Society and the Navy League had outlined plans for a country wide campaign to rally their members and the public in general to see the picture.

"Womanhood" is the brain child of ex-President Roosevelt.

The former president, a close personal friend of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, director general of Greater Vitagraph, suggested to the widely known motion picture magnate that a picture, preaching "preparedness" in every foot of film should be made. The result is "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation."

Commodore Blackton and Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, acting on numerous suggestions of Colonel Roosevelt, wrote the story which was immediately standardized. Work on the picture was started nearly a year ago. It took eight months of constant effort and work to complete the eight reels.

Not only does Colonel Roosevelt appear upon the screen, but pictures of President Wilson are utilized to make the photoplay as realistic as possible.

Commodore Blackton and Mr. Brady both appeared at the opening Philadelphia performance and made addresses in which they told just exactly why "Womanhood" had been made.

Philadelphia daily newspapers, some of which have not been enthusiastic supporters of the "preparedness" propaganda in the past, enthusiastically endorsed the presentation of "Womanhood."

First Sphinx Film "Through the Panama Canal"

Two months was spent by Captain R. W. Van Raven in taking the first production to be released by the Sphinx Producing Company, and which is titled "Through the Panama Canal." This picture will be marketed by the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation.

Comprehensive views of Colon Harbor, the port of entry to the Canal Zone from the Atlantic side, the Culebra Cut, Pedro Miguel and Miraflores Locks, carrying the canal to the Pacific, are but a few of the scenes shown. Others include views of the entrance of the abandoned French Canal, Gatun Locks, Gatun Lake, Workings of the Locks, Emergency Gate and Dam, Wireless Station near Gamboa, Canal Zone and many others.

Forum Film Exchanges Being Widely Organized

Distributors of Conquest Program Will Have Country Wide Facilities—Distribution to Schools and Societies Planned

WITHIN the next thirty days the Forum Films, Inc., will have exchanges at all the important distributing points and the regular release of Edison made "Conquest Pictures" will be started. "Half Back," a picturization of Ralph Henry Barbour's story of school life and football; "Captains of Tomorrow," a dress parade at West Point; "The Dinosaur and the Baboon," presenting a new group of animated manikins; "The Sea Horse," a short study of a little known fish; "A Vanishing Race," a scenic taken on the Blackfoot Indian Reservation; and "Puss in Boots," a fairy tale told in silhouette.

Kenneth Hodkinson, general manager of the Forum Films has this to say in regard to the activities of his organization.

"Our notices seem to have resulted not only in receiving a number of requests from exhibitors, but to have aroused particular interest among churches, schools, colleges, women's clubs and organizations of a similar kind. It is the first time in the motion picture business that a distributing concern has been willing to give attention to booking films among institutions of this kind throughout the country. It is only the natural evolution of the business that the motion picture after serving the public as a diversion and amusement should finally prove its greater worth by acting as an educating factor. This in time will come to be the greatest function of the motion picture."

Cartoon Series Created by Madge

Madge Kennedy, not content with starring honors in the photoplay world, is seeking fame as a cartoonist, and has recently completed a series of humorous drawings for newspaper publication.

The Goldwyn comedienne is said to have evolved a new thought in comic cartoon strips. Her drawings have in the past been praised by Harrison Fisher and other noted illustrators. Mr. Fisher is said to be of the belief that Miss Kennedy's new series will make her famous in the cartoon field.

Larger, Costlier Pictures New Thanhouser Policy

Thanhouser has adopted a bigger and better policy for its productions of the future, according to a statement made by Edwin Thanhouser last week. The acquisition of directors, Van Dyke Brooke and Emile Chautard, was but the first step in the plan.

"Hereafter there will be no Thanhouser productions where the production cost does not come up to a certain figure," said Mr. Thanhouser. "Nor will our features hold to a five-reel length. "The Vicar of Wakefield" is in seven reels. We are just finishing an eight-reel production, and are preparing to fill a ten-reel subject. There will be sumptuous six to ten-reel productions whenever we evolve stories that are big enough.

"The business done on such features as "The Shine Girl," "The World and the Woman," and such features has shown us that the largest profits are in the costlier pictures."
Fannie Ward and Sessue Hayakawa Again to Team

Arrangements have been completed by Jesse L. Lasky and Sessue Hayakawa in a forthcoming production for Paramount pictures. This will be the second time that the celebrated Lasky stars have appeared together on the screen, as it will be remembered they scored a big success in Hector Turnbull's "The Cheat," which was released by Paramount December 13. This picture made such a tremendous hit at the time of its release that it has since been adapted as a play, and is now in process of being prepared for operatic presentation.

The name of the story and the date of release will be made public in the near future. The production will be a regular five-reel Lasky feature released by Paramount.

Jeanne Eagels to Co-Star with Frederick Warde

Due to the success of her initial Thanhouser-Pathe feature, "The World and the Woman," Edwin Thanhouser has engaged Miss Jeanne Eagels for further productions. Desiring to start work with her immediately, Mr. Thanhouser made arrangements with the management of "The Professor's Love Story," in which Miss Eagels is playing with George Arliss at the Chica, which was released by Thanhouser December 13. This picture made such a tremendous hit at the time of its release that it has since been adapted as a play, and is now in process of being prepared for operatic presentation.

The name of the story and the date of release will be made public in the near future. The production will be a regular five-reel Lasky feature released by Paramount.

Role of Fighting Parson Is Bushman's Latest

Francis X. Bushman has begun work on a five-reel feature, with Beverly Bayne as co-star, in which he is seen as a "fighting parson." The title of the play is to be "The Voice of One." It was written by William Christy Cabanne, who also is directing the production in the Quality studios.

This is to be the first of a series of five-reel features, with Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne as stars, and Mr. Cabanne as the director.

Mr. Bushman is said to have the strongest part in this newest production that he has ever enacted. He will be seen as a circuit rider who militantly preaches the gospel as he wanders from place to place. Finally he reaches a lonesome town inhabited by bumpkins, and a lawless element. Here, despite warnings that a minister is not wanted, he settles down, and here he meets the mountain girl, Beverly Bayne. Victory of religion, and victory in love is only won by the parson after a long struggle.

Wholesome Pictures and the Dollar Argument

Julius Steger Points Out in Interview the Business Reasons Against the "Filth Film"—Why Clean Picture Producers "Come Back"

JULIUS STEGER, producer of the latest Norma Talmadge subject and other pictures for the Lewis J. Selznick program, declared his intentions, in an interview for Motion Picture News, last week, to produce no pictures that do not contain a moral lesson.

"The clean picture versus the salacious picture," said Mr. Steger, "is a debate or an argument which is settled by business reasons before the moral reasons begin. The producer of the smutty picture makes a fortune, perhaps, but it is a performance he cannot repeat and 'tis well for the industry as a whole.

"The State-rights buyer falls into disrepute with the exhibitors, who, themselves, have fallen into disrepute, because of public displeasure. The reaction is rapid, up and down the line, consequently the producer of an unclean picture only hesitates as he passes through the industry. This is not a healthful tone he lends to the industry, and the exhibitor himself is not willingly lending himself to this aspect of the game. Perhaps the producer picks up a goodly sized bank roll during the passage. Perhaps not.

"On the other hand, the producer of the wholesome and clean picture can always come back, provided, of course, that his picture is up to the usual standard as far as direction, plot and acting are concerned. The reason is easy to find, and he who runs may read.

"It is a picture the whole family can talk about, and they can look each other in the eye when they talk. They tell their friends, and, of course, the picture draws well. The result is that the exhibitor makes money, the State-rights buyer makes friends of his customers, and he can be sure that they will 'call again,' when he has another picture to offer.

"The reaction is quite contrary to that of the sex pictures, and is instantly felt by the producer. The next time he has a production to sell he can rest assured that the State-rights buyers will burn up the wires asking for options."

"Lady Barnacle," with Viola Dana, Completed

Viola Dana and her company, under the direction of John H. Collins, have practically completed work on "Lady Barnacle," Miss Dana's next offering on the Metro program, and will soon begin work on her following production, as yet unnamed. "Lady Barnacle," which is produced as a photoplay by Columbia Pictures Corporation, is from the pen of Edgar Franklin and has been adapted for the screen by June Mathis.

The title-role of this production provides Miss Dana with a charming part, that of Lackshima, daughter of the Maharajah Bahartari of an East Indian province. The scene is laid in India, and later in the United States. The Indian scenes having been taken in and around St. Augustine, Fla., where the Ponce de Leon Hotel was used to represent the palace of the Maharajah.

Robert Walker, Augustus Phillips, Henry Hallam, William B. Davidson, Ricca Allen and Fred Jones are seen in support of Miss Dana.
A BLUEBIRD EXTRAORDINARY
WINGS"

IMPORTANT: Fifteen hundred Chapters of the Daughters of the American Revolution have arranged through their National President, Mrs. William Cumming Story, to give this thrilling, patriotic picture their heartiest support wherever shown. This is an opportunity for you that may never occur again. Early application for booking reservations is most earnestly suggested.
Now a Bluebird

“Hell Morgan’s Girl”

Made as a State Rights picture, “Hell Morgan’s Girl” so impressed the BLUEBIRD Executives that they bought it outright. All State Rights negotiations were declared off, and all money received for territory sold was returned. This picture is playing return bookings all over the country. It is unusual in story; in place—San Francisco’s “Barbary Coast”; in time—The San Francisco fire; in the cast and the direction—Unusual in every way. Book now for sure profits.

George Ovey Signs a Long-Time Contract with Horsley

David Horsley and George Ovey have signed a new agreement, whereby the latter will continue to supply every exhibitor and every class of motion picture theatre with the subjects adaptable to his needs. The range of General Film pictures covers every nook and corner of the field, and it is claimed to be of the quality which will increase the patronage of any exhibitor who shows them.

The O. Henry stories in two-reel Broadway Star Features will be distributed weekly starting in April, they have been welcomed by exhibitors and public alike, and were applauded at a private showing last week at the Broadway theatre.

"Fortune Photoplays," the series based on the stories that have appeared in the Street & Smith group of magazines, are reported meeting with success on all sides.

Five Weeks of Mutual Offer Wide Variety

Dramas ranging from the tragic "Motherhood," Marjorie Rambeau's war picture to the pastoral "Sunday Jane," are embraced in the Mutual Film Corporation's schedule for the next five weeks.

In this period Miss Saunders and Vance ONeil are making their first appearance in pictures released through the Mutual. Dramas ranging from the tragic "Motherhood," Marjorie Rambeau's war picture to the pastoral "Sunday Jane," starring Jackie Saunders arc embraced in the Mutual Film Corporation's schedule for the next five weeks.

It will be remembered, that when Ovey first joined the David Horsley forces he was an unknown quantity to film fans. He was recruited from the legitimate stage by Director Milton H. Fahrney.

Unlike most newcomers in motion pictures, Ovey did not begin in a small part, but was given the principal role in his first picture, so great was Mr. Fahrney's faith in his find.

The O. Henry stories in two-reel Broadway Star Features will be distributed weekly starting in April. These stories include Marin Sais in "The American Girl," Helen Gibson in "A Daughter of Daring," George Larkin in "Grant, Police Reporter," and "The Ham and Bud" companies. These stories are being aided by a nationwide advertising campaign in daily newspapers. In addition to these features the General is distributing two-reel and single-reel Selig subjects, and the Melies Vim Comedies as well as the Official British Government War Pictures and real fighting on the Somme front and the activities of the British Navy.

The innovation of a four-reel length seems to have satisfied a long-felt want. The first of these is "The Inspirations of Harry Larrabee."

The four series of the Kalem Company distributed by the General are giving great satisfaction, and exhibitors write in daily and tell of the business they are drawing. These series include Marin Sais in "The American Girl," Helen Gibson in "A Daughter of Daring," George Larkin in "Grant, Police Reporter," and "The Ham and Bud" companies. These series are being aided by a nationwide advertising campaign in daily newspapers. In addition to these features the General is distributing two-reel and single-reel Selig subjects, and the Melies Vim Comedies as well as the Official British Government War Pictures and real fighting on the Somme front and the activities of the British Navy.

The third vehicle chosen for Miss Kane is "The Indiscretion of Motherhood," this IS an adaptation of the novel in Charles Sherman, "The Upper Crust."

Unusual Role for Maxine Elliott in Next Picture

Maxine Elliott has started work at the American studio on her second production for Mutual. This will be an adaptation of H. S. Merriman's popular novel, "With Edged Tools."

Blanche Sweet in Picture from Popular Novel

The first feature in which Miss Kane appeared for Mutual was, "Whose Wife?" which is now completed.
The feature of Pathe's program for the week of April 8, is Pearl White's second Gold Rooster Play, "May Blossom" in Patheticolor. "Hazel Kirke," the first feature starring this popular actress, scored a hit throughout the country. Hal Ford and Fuller Mellish will be in the supporting cast in "May Blossom."

The fourth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross" is entitled "Kidnapped." The star of the serial is Mollie King, and she is supported by Leon Bary, formerly Sarah Bernhardt's leading man, Ralph Stuart and Gladden James. The picture was produced under the direction of William Parke, formerly Mansfield's stage director.

Mrs. Vernon Castle is seen in the thirteenth episode of "Patria," entitled "Wings of Death." This well-known star will be seen in thrilling aeroplane feats, guarding our country against invasion is the feature of this episode.

"Max and the Fair M. D." is a one-reel comedy featuring Max Linder. These comedies issued by Pathe have been selected as the best work of this famous actor.

"Know America the Land We Love" is the title of the beautiful Combitone Scenic pictures, the fourth release of which deals with "Arizona." The most interesting parts of this great state are shown including the famous Petrified Forest and the Bottomless Pit—soundings of twelve hundred feet have failed to touch bottom, and other geographical wonders are dealt with. "The Height of Fashion" is the title of the twenty-sixth release of the Florence Rose Fashion films showing beautiful models in advance style.

An International split-reel cartoon and scenic and the Hearst-Pathe News, Nos. 30 and 31 complete the program.

The Astra Film Company is increasing its activities in the Jersey City studios, due to encouraging reports of success from the pictures it has produced in the past. Their one a month release on the Patheticolor Gold Rooster program includes such subjects as "At Bay," "Her New York," "Kick In," "The Shielding Shadow," "Arms and the Woman," and others, including "Pearl of the Army" and "Mystery of the Double Cross" serials which followed "The Shielding Shadow."

Two new serials are now in course of production, one under the direction of George B. Seitz, and the other under the direction of Theodore Marston. Two features are also being produced, one by George Fittenmaurice, and the other by William Parke.

The new serial which Mr. Seitz is directing is based on a popular adventure serial by Fred Jackson. Pearl White, who is universally recognized as the serial queen, will be the starring player. The cast will include Warner Oland, formerly leading man for Theda Bara, who played the part of Baron Huroki in the "Patria" serial; Earl Fox, Ruby Hoffman, and Mattie Ferguson.

In other lines, the activities of the Astra Company are being extended. With the addition of Mr. Seitz to the staff of directors, Philip Bartholomae, author of "Very Good Eddie," and one of the most noted playwrights of the day, is in charge of the Astra Company's scenario department. There have been many recent additions to the Astra Players who now include Pearl White, Mollie King, Creighton Hale, Leon Bary, Warner Oland, Earl Fox, Ruby Hoffman, Helene Chadwick and Mattie Ferguson.

Astra is broadening out—Will Produce Two New Serials

Tanguay Company Being Formed

Eva Tanguay, who is forming her own picture company to begin production at the conclusion of the present theatrical season will have Paul Arlington as author of her photoplays. Mr. Arlington was formerly scenario writer with Essanay, and has written many of Miss Tanguay's song successes. He is preparing two-reel refined comedies and five-part features for the dynamic vaudeville artist.
Lively Debate When Guernsey Upholds His Bill

California Exhibitor Takes Exception to Censor Argument and Starts General Discussion at Reel Fellows Meeting

SENATOR GUY GUERNSEY, who drafted the new censorship bill for Illinois, now in consideration, addressed the meeting of the Reel Fellows Club held Friday night, March 16. Senator Guernsey outlined the plans and workings of the bill and contended that, facing the circumstances of inevitable censorship, the Guernsey bill was the most ideal alternative. He emphasized one of the most salient points of the bill, its allowance for an appeal to three important sources: the director of education, the governor of the state and the courts. All this, Mr. Turney stated, can be done within three days’ time, which makes its principal difference in comparison with other state censorship bills.

Dr. Atkinson, a California exhibitor, visiting in Chicago, was present at the meeting. He arose after Dr. Guernsey finished and disagreed with many of the sections of the bill. This action brought about an interesting and lively debate, which resulted in the entire assemblage joining in and discussing the proposed bill section for section.

The Guernsey bill plans to eliminate the local boards of censors in Illinois. It will put all the power in the hands of a State Board and is said to provide adequate salaries for the making up of a worthy personnel for the board. Opinion on the bill is, however, reported to be divided throughout the state. While many exhibitors are in favor of it as the lesser of a necessary evil, others are making a stand against it. The bill is to be reported out of committee very soon.

Leaks Around the Loop

Simeon Greiver, general manager of the General Feature Film Company’s office in Chicago, has announced that he has resigned to organize a film exchange of his own here. Mr. Greiver’s new venture is to be known as the Silex Film Exchange, but as yet the policy and location of offices is unannounced. Mr. Greiver’s partner in the incorporation, to be Max Herz. Mr. Greiver has for the past three years been in General Film’s offices. He leaves for New York on Monday, March 26, to conclude arrangements on the policy of his new exchange.

Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, mother of Mary Miles Minter, the Matilda star, arrived in Chicago from Santa Barbara, Calif., on Tuesday. Mrs. Shelby stopped off at the Mutual offices and informed them that she was on her way East to get a sniff of Broadway. She is also planning to give orders for the making of daughter Marj’s spring and summer wardrobe.

E. P. Grobe, for nine years a Chicago exhibitor, has joined the sales force of the Fox Film Company. Mr. Grobe, during his term as an exhibitor, operated the Independence theatre, No. 3726 West Twelfth street. He is also a member of the Motion Picture League.

Harry Leonard, western general manager of the Fox Film Company, arrived in Chicago from Los Angeles last week. He spent two days here in conference with J. T. O’Toole, manager of the Fox Chicago offices.

The second Max Linder comedy was shown to big audiences at the Rialto last week.

The fourth of the press sheets, being gotten out by the Mutual Company for feature productions only, has to do with Jackie Saunders in “Sunshine Lane.” The press sheet is of but recent origin, and is said to be meeting with much favor among exhibitors of Mutual feature pictures. The music cues included with the sheet are the work of Joseph O’Sullivan, well known as a composer and operatic expert.

Kleine Move to Chicago First of Several?

The news that George Kleine has at last decided to move his entire general office from New York to Chicago kept film men buzzing excitedly in the Loop on Tuesday. William Jenner, manager of the K. E. S. P. offices here, confirmed the announcement and added that the move will be made on March 31. The entire organization, now at No. 80 Fifth avenue, New York, is to be installed on the eighth floor of the Chapin and Gore Building, No. 61 East Adams street. The present branch office in the Godfrey Building, No. 229 Seventh avenue, New York, will, however, remain.

Ever since 1916, when Mutual and others of the producing companies now centered here, moved from the East, offers have been made to Mr. Kleine to locate. Several times it was reported in the past that this was to happen, but the event never materialized. Now that official word has come forth it has resulted in much conjecture along the Loop as to what effect it might have on the other eastern producing companies. Many of the big men of the film business are of the opinion that it will have a Pied Piper effect on the rest of the eastern companies and bring them all to Chicago eventually.

Loop Firm Takes All Pickford and Fairbanks Subjects

Jones, Linick and Schaefer have closed a contract with the Artcraft Pictures Company to take all their future Pickford and Fairbanks pictures. The J. L. and S. Company conducts nine theatres in the Chicago Loop, but it is planned to show all of the Pickford and Fairbanks productions at the Studебaker theatre exclusively.

The contract is said to have come about as the result of the Artcraft’s showing of Miss Pickford in “The Poor Little Rich Girl,” at the Auditorium, the first time that motion pictures were ever shown in this exclusive house. The putting in of “The Poor Little Rich Girl” there was the Artcraft’s idea of showing the product to local exhibitors and an endeavor to prove to the exhibitor that the quality of picture is what counts, regardless of the house where it is being shown.

$350,000 Independent Producing Concern Formed

The Crystal Photo Plays Corporation is a newly organized $350,000 Chicago concern which plans to produce feature pictures for the independent market. They have purchased the Baker-Swan studio at Peoria, Ill., and are enlarging and remodeling it for the beginning of their production work, which is said to be about April 5.

The officers of the new corporation are: Dr. A. H. Shields, president; W. D. Burford and Charles H. Dixon, vice-presidents; Frank Z. Ames, treasurer; Merrick A. Whipple, secretary, and P. W. Swan, assistant secretary. The executive offices of the new concern are at No. 76 West Monroe street, Chicago.

J. T. O'Toole, manager of the Fox Chicago offices, has considerable fame as a baseball player. Though he has been out of the game for more than three years, last week he received a contract from the owners of the Clinton, Iowa Baseball Club. It offered him the managerial berth at a fat salary. Mr. O'Toole turned the contract back with a refusal and thanks, being too much absorbed in motion pictures to worry about "temperamental pitchers" again. By the way, he is also a brother of the many dollarred pitching beauty of recent fame at Pittsburgh. Mary O'Toole.

The next meeting of the Reel Fellows Club will be held on March 30. City Corporation Counsel Etelson will address the members.

"Dick" Travers, who has starred in Essanay productions for several years, is now under contract to act for the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation.

W. J. Wenold is now assistant to M. G. Watkins, general manager of the American Standard.

Billy Arumon, well-known as the manager of the College Inn, has just been appointed business manager of the Yorke-Metro studios.

Senator Guernsey, who introduced the Guernsey Censorship Bill into the legislature, has asked members of the film industry to write him their opinion of the measure.

New Secretary of Montreal Association

At the last business meeting of the Exchange Managers' Association, Montreal, Eddie Gronean of the Universal Film Company, was appointed secretary to replace Albert H. Beauline, who is retiring from the film business. Mr. Beauline, who has been manager of the Canadian Film Exchange releasing the Mutt and Jeff Comedies, will go back into the steel business at the head of a company that is now being formed in Canada.

Canadian Exchangemen Banquet

The first annual banquet of the Film Exchangemen's Association of Quebec was given in the Blue Room of the Windsor Hotel, Montreal. From every branch of the local industry, the affair was a pronounced success. Seventy-three, representing every branch of the local industry, were present.

T. O. Byerle, the president of the association, presided. Mr. Gerald Barry, president of the Canadian Motion Picture Association, and Mr. Bouchard, M. P. for St. Hyacinthe, gave addresses.

General's Milwaukee Doings

Increases of business in the General exchange, Milwaukee, has resulted in six men being placed on the road by that office. Several promotions include that of H. L. Conway from branch manager to sales manager, and the moving up to the vacated office of H. J. Fitzgerald, who was booker. Jack Camp was made head booker.

Some Winners of Paramount Efficiency Contest

In a further announcement of the results of the Exchange and Salesmen's Efficiency Contest, recently conducted by Paramount, the Famous Players Exchange of Twenty-third street, New York, serving lower Manhattan and Northern New Jersey, won second prize of $250. The Progressive Motion Picture Company, of San Francisco, was awarded third prize, $500, and the Famous Players Film Company, of New England, took fourth prize of $250. As previously stated, the Famous Players Exchange of Philadelphia was the winner.

Harry Danto, of Sherry Feature Film Company, New York, won first prize for the salesmen, based on "money increase" on contracts, receiving one month's salary. C. M. Hill, of the San Francisco Exchange, won first prize, based on the number of contracts secured.

Coast Exchange Movements

R. B. Quive, manager of the local branch of the Greater Vitagraph Company, together with his bride of a few weeks, attended the opening of the new Goddard theatre at Sacramento, Cal., recently. Other prominent film men from San Francisco also attended the opening.

The latest addition to Film Row San Francisco is the M and R Feature Film exchange which has established offices at No. 107 Golden Gate avenue. It is under the management of Charles Rosenthal and will handle Ivan Films and Flora Finch comedies.

Several Vancouver Changes

A new exchange manager has arrived in Vancouver, in the person of E. A. Langley, former Canadian sales manager of the Pathé distributing organization. Mr. Langley has taken charge of the Universal office, replacing Jules Levine who returns to his old position as Bluebird special representative for Western Canada.

William Hanscher, former manager of the Royal theatre and the Opera House in New Westminster, B. C., has been appointed a member of S. B. Taube's staff at the Vancouver office of Regal Films, Ltd., distributors of World Films in Canada.

Another Standard Branch

The Standard Film Corporation has opened a Des Moines, Iowa, office under the management of Marty Williams, for the territorial distribution of Art Dramas productions.

Mr. Williams was recently serial manager in the Kansas City Universal office. He has been engaged in the motion picture business for eleven years in the Middle West, the majority of the time having been associated with Mutual and Metro.
LEANDER RICHARDSON has coined a new one in "photomotorial," which he uses in a story sent out last week. It looks like a cross between a picture and an automobile at first glance, but we would like to know its real meaning.

Boston Premiere of "Joan" a Notable Affair

A CAPACITY audience of social and civic notables, including Governor McCall and Mayor Curley, attended the first Boston presentation of "Joan the Woman" at the Colonial theatre, Tuesday evening, March 19.

Geraldine Farrar, accompanied by her father and mother, and Jesse L. Lasky and a number of other members of the Lasky organization were also in attendance.

There was hearty and frequent applause for Miss Farrar, both on the screen and in person, and just before the showing of the second section she sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

In a brief talk with the reporters she stated that the reports that she was pro-German started in an obscure and unreliable London newspaper, and afterward were circulated in this country, much to her discomfiture.

An orchestra of 22 players rendered Mr. Furst's special music, under the direction of Louis Maurice.

M. J. Garrity is general representative for the Cardinal Film Company of New England, and E. H. Gertsle is manager for the exhibition. Prices for the engagement of "Joan the Woman" are 25 cents to $1 evening, with 25 cents the maximum price at the daily matinées.

All the newspapers gave long reviews on the opening, the Herald devoting nearly a column to the purely social events of the evening, and printing a lengthy statement by Miss Farrar as to her patriotism.

All the papers praised without stint Mr. De Mille's direction, and the ability of his assistants. A few were not sure that Miss Farrar was well cast. The Journal classes "Joan the Woman" with the three or four most admirable achievements in the film field.

The Advertiser found Miss Farrar as Joan "always a handsome figure, compelling admiration and applause." The Globe said Miss Farrar's interpretation was a far greater triumph artistically than anything she has done in the past, and is bound to rank among her finest histrionic accomplishments.

Another "Snow White" Party

Through the efforts of A. D. Flinton, president of the Kansas City Feature Film Exchange, distributors of Paramount pictures in that section, the Nebraska State Journal, of Lincoln, Neb., one of the most influential newspapers in the Middle West, will give a private "Snow White" party to the people of their city on March 23, 24 and 25. The Journal has invited all the children and grown-ups of Lincoln and the surrounding towns to be guests at the Lincoln Auditorium upon this occasion.

Sponsorship promises to take the place of censorship in Spokane.

The latter will still be carried on under the direction of the city council, but the former—the idea of the Spokane Federation of Women's Organizations—has been so warmly greeted at its inception that it seems to have a chance for all but monopolizing the field.

Opposition House in Montgomery, Ala., Building

A new Montgomery (Alabama) theatre, which will run in opposition to the present combine of that city's leading theatres, which include the Strand, Colonial and Plaza, operated by the Strand Amusement Company, is now in course of construction and will be completed June 1.

Hoxie Farley, formerly manager of the Empire, which was purchased by the Strand organization and the name changed to Colonial, will conduct the theatre, which will be run by the Empire Theatre Company.

The new picture house will be on the N. J. Bell estate. The contract was let to James Hodgson, building contractor. Plans were drawn up by Frederick Ausfeld, the architect, and call for a building of Renaissance design, 72 feet front and 115 feet in depth. There will be but one floor, which will seat 900 people. The ceiling will run to a height of 32 feet, however, permitting later construction of a balcony if desired.

New Brunswick Houses Raise Price Scale

Not fewer than a dozen New Brunswick motion picture houses have raised their admission prices during the past three weeks. Where the scale was formerly five and ten cents, it has been changed to 10 and 15. The increasing cost of maintenance, high film rentals, and the scarcity of fuel are said to be the chief factors responsible for the change.
Society Out En Masse at Battle Film Show for Charity

The first showing of the latest war film in Chicago, "Heroic France," multiple reeler, was held on Monday night at the Strand theatre. The picture was arranged by Meri La Voy, and the receipts from its showing are to go to the American Relief Clearing House in France for the American Fund for French Wounded and the American Ambulance Field Service.

The seats for the opening on Monday night were sold at popular subscription, and was almost entirely a society affair. Young debutantes were the ushers. The picture is made up in good part by the showing of famous personages of the Allies, all the way from the President of France to the ambulance and flying corps. The greater portion of the opening of the picture is taken up with these scenes. The last half shows some very interesting and vivid action scenes on the French front such as charges made, prisoners being taken and the big guns in action.

Much of the latter scenes of troop movements, etc., were shown in the "Battle of Picardy" pictures, exhibited at the Strand theatre, New York, some months ago.

New Film Company Formed in Montana

An organization, known as the Yellowstone Park Film Company, was recently formed at Gardiner, Montana, for the purpose of filming current events, advertising specialties, scenes and the wild game of the Yellowstone.

The officers of the new venture are Howard Eaton, president; W. S. Berry, secretary and manager, and Warren E. Hall, treasurer. Mr. Eaton is well known as a tourist guide for Glacier National Park, Yellowstone Park and the Grand Canyon of Colorado. Mr. Berry has for the past fifteen years been a photographer at Gardiner.

Standard's St. Louis Manager a Veteran

J. Erwin Dodson for nine years associated with the motion picture business, and who has charge of the Missouri end of the distribution for the Standard Film Company, reports business exceptionally good in the West. His office is located at St. Louis.

Exchange Man to Managership

W. E. Arthur, who has been connected with the Kansas Feature Film Company for the past several years, has resigned from that company and accepted the management of the Monarch Feature Film Company, located at No. 7 North Dewey street, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Coast Appointments in Mutual

Two appointments recently made in the western branches of the Mutual Film Corporation are those of Mr. Merrick as manager of the Seattle, Wash., Exchange, and A. S. Kirkwood as manager of the Portland, Ore., office.

Kalem's Two-Reel Series in Wide Demand

Kalem's successful booking of their two-part "American Girl" pictures is claimed by them to be an attest to the contention that exhibitors want two-part productions whenever they can secure them. A concentrated selling campaign, backed up by newspaper advertising and reinforced by Kalem's trade paper advertising and circularizing, is said to be producing results.

Marin Sais is the star of the "American Girl" pictures, and Frederick R. Bechdolt is the author. Some of the theatres now showing this series are: The Besse, Omaha; Palace, Louisville; Bijou Dream, New Orleans; Loew's West End, New York; Hippodrome, Buffalo; Iris, Denver; Bijou Dream and Marvel, Cleveland.

"The Whip" in Canada

Charlie Stevens, of the new Canadian distributing company, known as "Superfeatures, Limited," was in Montreal this week looking for offices. The Toronto offices are at 59 to 61 Victoria street. The Montreal office will be located at 204 St. Catherine street, West, Room 105. The first feature released by "Superfeatures" will be the eight-reel "The Whip."

"Mickey" Rose, well known in Montreal through his previous Metro connection, will look after the interests of Superfeatures, Limited, in the Province of Quebec.

Peerless Exchange Moves

The Peerless Film Exchange of Los Angeles, which has been located in the L. A. Investment building, was this week moved to film row, quarters having been secured at 802 South Olive. General Manager E. H. Emmick was down from San Francisco, and spent a week here aiding the local staff. This independent exchange is making a specialty of comedy subjects, and has adopted the name "The House of Comedy."

Los Angeles Houses Change Ownership

One of the best paying small houses in Southern California, and one of the few which has stuck to the five cent admission, the Lyric at Santa Ana, has been sold by H. L. Hulbert to C. G. Orr, the sale being consummated last week by Leo Ryan, Los Angeles theatre broker.

F. J. Shirley has sold the Portola theatre on Main street between Fourth and Fifth, Los Angeles, to Frank MacDonald, who took possession this week. This house recently increased its admission price from five cents to ten cents, and materially benefited the receipts by change of policy.

Singer Back After Tour

Julius Singer, special representative of the L-Ko Motion Picture Company, has returned to New York after an absence of ten weeks, during which he covered 11,000 miles of territory.

Mr. Singer spent a month at the Hollywood Studio of the company, and then started on a tour, visiting exchanges and exhibitors, stopping off at Salt Lake City, Denver, Kansas City, Omaha, Des Moines, Chicago, and other cities.

Pictures Aid Recruiting in Washington

Uncle Sam has found the motion pictures of great assistance in gaining Army and Navy recruits. A campaign is going on in Washington, D. C., with the cooperation of eight of the local motion picture houses for the showing of films of a patriotic order as well as real military activities. Exhibitors, exchange men, operators and others of the pictures industry, are giving their efforts for the furtherance of this movement.

Some of the films that have interested the embryo recruits are the five-reel patriotic thriller, "Columbia's Call," Mobilizing of the National Guard on the Mexican border, the Atlantic Fleet in action, the fall of Vera Cruz, and actions of naval stations and military maneuvers.

That this movement was immediately effective was shown in the daily average recruits of from 10 to 15, which was considerably more than before the picture campaign.

Toy Theatre, Milwaukee, in New Hands

Zambreno and Dunn, operators of the Band Box theatre in Chicago, have taken over the Paradise theatre, formerly the Toy theatre, in Milwaukee, and on Sunday, March 18, opened with "Does Germany Want Peace." Taking forty-inch spreads in all of the papers they have ventured to try something new. They have been in the business for quite some time, and have noticed that the shows that do not have a real story in them are not attended. T. M.-W. Rudolph is managing the Paradise for Zambreno and Dunn.

Fire Regulations Enforced

Stringent inspections and enforcement of the regulations regarding fire prevention faces Kansas City exhibitors following reports that some have been lax in running their houses. Fire Warden J. E. Marvin and his deputies have been granted authority to arrest, and has announced he will use this power on exhibitors who sell standing room in their theatres, or disobey other regulations.

Conquest Pictures to Live Up to Ideal of Clean Films

Expressing the idea that dominates the production of Conquest Pictures, and marketing them through Forum Films, L. W. McChesney, manager of the Edison studios, recently made it plain that every element is to take subsidiary position to the ideal of clean pictures. He stated that while the primary releases of Conquest Pictures may not conform to the standards of present day production, they will be fitted in every respect to meet the strong demand for films that are morally beyond criticism.

Stress was laid by Mr. McChesney, however, on the point that these pictures are not juvenile subjects in any sense of the word. "We continually are going to keep before us the fact, that we are producing and selling an idea, rather than individual pictures, and this is one of the features of our policy that we particularly wish to impress upon exhibitors," said the Edison manager.

War and Its Results Chief Topic of Gaumont Releases

Timeliness is the dominating feature of the Gaumont releases for the week of April 15. "Tours Around the World" No. 24, which reaches the screen on April 17, gives a glimpse of the great underdeveloped territory of Russian Caucasus, showing both the country itself and the natives. It is felt that at this time with the recent change of government in Russia still fresh in the public mind, this topic will be appreciated.

Other divisions of this reel are given up to Copenhagen, capital of Denmark, and Salzburg, an ancient Austrian town.

The Mutual Weekly No. 117 shows what the pictures claim to be the reason for the retreat of the Teutonic forces on the Western front lately. This is the heavy artillery massed wheel to wheel, and the great guns are seen in action. The U-boat chasers which the United States has ordered for protection of its ships are pictured in the trial trip of one of the first turned out. Ambassador Gerard welcomed in New York, and Americans in service abroad are other topics of this reel, the majority of which is necessarily made up but a few days before release.

Cohan and Moore Together Again—On Screen

George M. Cohan in his screen debut in "Broadway Jones" at the Strand theatre, has as his running mate one of his former stars, Victor Moore in a Klever Komedy "Rough and Ready Reggie." It was in Cohan's "45 Minutes from Broadway" that Victor Moore made his debut as a star, in the role of "Kid Burns." It is rather a coincidence, but Cohan and Moore were both making pictures, for the same program, in the same town.

Quartet of Stars on Paramount April List

Lou-Tellegen's Last Appearance in Pictures—Margaret Illingworth Makes Screen Bow—Lasky Has Feature Program

THE Paramount program for April comprises a stellar aggregation of Margaret Clark, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro, and Lou-Tellegen. They will appear in Famous Players productions, and each in a vehicle that is said to be especially fitted for them.

Marguerite Clark will be seen in "The Valentine Girl," which is scheduled for release on April 16. In this production she plays another of the child parts that have contributed to her popularity on the screen. The story is mixture of light fantasy, romance and powerful drama. Others in support of Miss Clark are: Richard Barthelmess, Edith Campbell Walker, Adolph Menjou, Katherine Adams and Maggie Holloway Fisher. J. Searle Dawley is directing.

On April 12 Marie Doro makes her appearance in "Heart's Desire." It will be her first screen appearance since her transfer from the Lasky studio to the Famous Players aggregation. The story is laid on the Island of Brittany, and Miss Doro takes the role of a flower girl. In support of her are Marie Majeroni, Albert Roscoe, Jean Gauthier, Helen Dahl, Harry Lee and Gertrude Norman.

Lou-Tellegen's vehicle will be released on April 23. It is titled "The Long Trail," and will be Mr. Tellegen's last appearance on the screen, he having joined the directorial force of the Lasky Company. Sharing the starring honors with the French actor will be Mary Fuller, who makes her first appearance on the Paramount program in this picture.

On April 30 "Sleeping Fires," with Pauline Frederick, will be released. The character Miss Frederick plays in this screen drama is in direct contrast to the character of "Sapho," her last picture. She is in the role of the wife of a tired and jaded manufacturer, who tries to banish her from his life. The sufferings of mind and body she endures therefrom is the plot of the story. Thomas Meighan and John Sainpolis, both of whom appeared in "Sapho," are members of the cast.

Included in the Lasky productions on the Paramount program for April is the motion picture debut of Margaret Illington in "The Inner Shrine." Following Miss Illington's quitting of the speaking stage she immediately went under the Lasky management. The picture is scheduled for release on April 9.

Fannie Ward in "The School for Husband" is to be released on April 6. In this picture Miss Ward doubles the identity of her character in a manner that shows off her acting powers. Supporting her are Jack Dean, Frank Elliott and Mabel Van Buren.

"The Tides of Barnegat," from F. Hopkinson Smith's novel, will have Blanche Sweet as the star. It is scheduled for release on April 12. In support of Miss Sweet are: Elliott Dexter, Tom Forman, Harrison Ford and Lilian Leighton.

The fourth Lasky production for the month brings Kathryn Williams and Theodore Roberts together as co-stars for the first time. It is entitled "The Cost of Hatred." It is to be released on April 26. The picture plot has scenes laid in United States and Mexico.

Louise Glaum and Dorothy Gish in Triangle April List

THE Triangle feature releases for April 8, have Dorothy Gish and Louise Glaum as the stars. Miss Gish will be seen in a Fine Arts comedy entitled, "Her Official Fathers." Miss Glaum will be starred in a Kay-Bee production of Paris war days, "Sweetheart of the Doomed."

Dorothy Gish's characterization in "Her Official Fathers," is that of the daughter of a late president of a trust company. She is compelled to appeal to the executors for the money inherited by her father's death. So stringent are the provisions of the will that she is not even given "pin money" allowances. Many complications result, a majority of them humorous, in her seeking funds at the hands of the executors. She even starts a run on the bank trying to get money for an Easter bonnet. In support of Miss Gish is Frank Bennett, Sam DeGrasse, F. A. Turner and Fred Warren. Miss Glaum's vehicle is hailed as a highly dramatic one. It depicts the swiftly moving and colorful chapters in the life of a siren of the Parisian demi-monde. She is exciting revenge, for a treachery met with in her youth, from everybody who lingers on her path. How she finally falls under the spell of a great love which leads to her regeneration, and devotes herself to charitable works, winds up the picture in a satisfactory style, and furnishes a denouement that is at once interesting and captivating.

Large Proportion of Thrills in Kalem Pictures for Week

"The Skeleton Canyon Raid" is the title the Kalem Company announces for the sixth episode, in two parts, "The American Girl," series featuring Marin Sais.

Unusual difficulties are said to have been met in the filming of this chapter. For certain scenes about twelve miles distant, and a number of scenes show the principals at a distance of nearly a mile. The fifth and sixth episodes of "A Daughter of Daring," namely, "The Mystery of the Burning Freight," and "The Lone Point Feud," are also featured by picturesque backgrounds of natural scenic beauty.

Helen Gibson's stunt in "The Mystery of the Burning Freight," facing a sheet of flames arising from burning refuse left in the bottom of a coal car, crossing the gulfs of flames after lassoing the brake rod of the car ahead, and finally reaching the cab of a runaway engine, is said to furnish a prolonged thrill. In "The Lone Point Feud," Miss Gibson hangs from a bridge arching over a railroad right of way, and drops in the tender of a speeding engine.

IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

B. S. Moss Gets Mrs. Margaret Sanger

A deal was consummated late Saturday evening between B. S. Moss and Mrs. Margaret Sanger, the birth control advocate, whereby Manager Moss will direct a tour of the country by the propagandist in connection with a six-reel feature, with Mrs. Sanger as the center of interest, and the subject of her agitation the theme.

Negotiations have been in progress since the first of the year, and were about to be closed when the crusader was sent to prison for her utterances on the reform question, she is insistently propounding. The film was about two-thirds completed when her incarceration occurred, but since her release she has been engaged with the co-operation of Mr. Moss and his studio staffs in completing the attraction.

The Message Photoplay Corporation is the title of the Moss unit under which the State rights to the picture will be sold, and the Mrs. Sanger personal tour conducted. The tour will open immediately.

King Bee Two-Reel Comedies Coming

Organization was completed last week of a new film combination for the production of two-reel comedies, headed in its acting staff by Billy West. The new company has for its active head Louis Burstin, Mr. Burstin will be recalled as one of the pioneer incorporators of the original N. Y. Motion Picture Corporation; later he made the success that the Wizard Company enjoyed, and subsequently propelled the Viom combination.

He has gathered a supporting company including Babe Hardy, Ethel Burton, Florence McClain, Polly Van, Joe Cohin, Bud Ross, Ethlyun Gibson and others.

Anchor Picture Completed

James A. Stiles, author and producer of the Anchor Films' six-reel dramatic feature "Hell No, No Fury," announced this week, that the picture is completed and will shortly be offered state rights buyers. Mr. Stiles is the author of the production which was directed by Charles E. Bartlett.

Backer Active in Buying

New Jersey rights to "The Demester" and "A Mormon Maid" have been purchased by F. E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation. Both features will shortly be released through Mammoth.

Lois Weber's Latest a State Rights Release

"Even as You and I," Current Offering at Rothapfel's Rialto, Presents All-Star Cast in Story Highly Praised as Drama and Moral Lesson

ANNOUNCEMENT was made yesterday that "Even as You and I," the latest Lois Weber feature production would be released on the state rights market by the Lois Weber State Rights Department, at 1600 Broadway, New York City, formed especially to handle this production.

"Even as You and I" is this week's attraction at the Rialto theatre, where it has succeeded in attracting unusual attention from the New York newspapers. Manager S. L. Rothapfel, of the Rialto, is said to have booked "Even as You and I" without having seen it, making the remark that "any Lois Weber production is worthy of being booked by any manager without having viewed it in advance.

The latest state rights offering is declared by those who have seen it to be a worthy addition to the list of Weber successes which includes such productions as "Where Are My Children?" "Jewel," "Scandal," and "Hypocrites." It follows the same director's unusually popular "Mysterious Mrs. M."

Ben Wilson and Mignon Anderson head the strong cast presented in "Even As You and I." Others in the list of players are: Bertram Grassby, Priscilla Dean, Harry Carter, Maude George and Hayward Mack.

The story by Ethlyn Gibson was scenarized by Maude George.

The story is given as follows:

"Dominick Carillo and his gentle wife, Selma, begin their married life with all their might and determine never to part, no matter to what straits they may be forced.

"Satan views the scene and realizes he has lost.

"With time the image, Lust, has grown, and its evil beauty has blighted the happiness of Selma. Finally, Cleo is rewarded, for with her sensuousness, she conquers Dominick's honor. But Love escapes her."

"A succession of dramatic events then finds both Carillo and Selma on the downward path, until finally Youth, Love and Honor have been lost, and only Repentance and Forgetfulness remain. Selma embraces Repentance, but Dominick seeks Forgetfulness, and, as the years pass, Penniless, and tortured by the drunkard's thirst, he falls to the depths of all immorality. He tries to sell his few remaining statues, but is kicked from place to place by his former patrons. One day, having wandered unconsciously to the old studio, he meets a former tempter, who refuses to give him money, but hands him a revolver, saying that it is the only help he can spare. Satan thinks he has won the soul of Dominick for certain. But, noticing the familiar abode, Carillo is overwhelmed with memories, and, gazing at the image of Repentance, hesitates, and that moment of hesitancy means the subjugation of the Satan within him.

"Selma enters the studio and sees Dominick. He recoils from her, fearing her condemnation, but she springs eagerly forward, claps the book in her hands, and kneels at her feet, sobbing bitterly; overcome with shame and misery. Satan views the scene and realizes he has lost."

"And so, Dominick and Selma, after bitter experience, humbly steer their way back to the place from which they started—even as you and I."
Since the withdrawal last week of "The Ne'er-Do-Well" from the V.L.S.E. program, Sol I. Lesser, who controls the United States rights on Rex Beach's story of the adventures of the young American in Panama, has already closed for a number of important territories, aside from those which his own offices control.

While in Chicago, Mr. Lesser closed with Aaron Jones, of the Lewis J. Selznick productions, 110 South State street, Chicago, Ill., for Indiana, Illinois and Lower Wisconsin. The New England states have been purchased by Louis Mayer, of the Metro Pictures Corporation of New England, 60 Church street, Boston, Mass.: Minnesota, Iowa, North and South Dakota and Upper Wisconsin by the Supreme Feature Film Company, of 16 Fourth street, North Minneapolis, Minn., Western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky by the Masterpiece Film attractions, 1201 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Greater New York, New York State and Northern New Jersey by Louis J. Selznick, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City; Michigan by Harry Garson, of Detroit, Mich.; Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana by the De Luxe Feature Film Company, 1216 Third avenue, Seattle, Wash.; California, Arizona and Nevada by the All-Star Features Distributors, Inc., 334 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal.

The few remaining territories are now being disposed of by Mr. Brock, president of the Enlightenment Corporation, who in his own trade mark, "The Warfare of the Flesh." The interiors were finished a few weeks ago at the Herbert Brenon studios, and the allegorical prologue was staged and whipped into shape in the South.

"When I secured financial support for my own company, I was elated because of the opportunity and the avenues of progress and achievement it opened up to me," said Mr. Warren in discussing his position as a new trinity in the picture industry.

Sol Lesser is Forcéd to Take Larger Quarters

As a result of numerous purchases in the way of feature productions recently, Sol Lesser, president of the All-Star Features Distributors, has been compelled to move into larger quarters. His office, formerly at 234 Eddy street, San Francisco, has been changed to the three-story building at Golden Gate avenue and Leavenworth street.

"The Whip" in New England

The Whip, the Paragon feature, directed by Maurice Tourneur, where they are being given their initial public presentation, included the first views ever secured, showing a total eclipse of the sun. It was photographed from a Costa Rican mountain peak.

The current week's program at the Rialto contains a Rex Beach installment in which the government lottery at San Jose de Costa Rica is shown. Included are many scenes of the native coffee and sugar industry.

A trade showing to state rights buyers was given last Friday afternoon.
"Who Knows" Will Be Released April Tenth

The first picture to be released under the Bernstein Productions is to be "Who Knows," written by Ethel and James Dorrance and adapted for the screen by Rosie Ashton and Beatrice Morse. This story ran as a serial in Mauney's All-Story Magazine last year and the matter of "sucker money" is the starting point of "Who Knows," which is entering the State Rights field.

"You are doing a wonderful thing for the industry in conducting that campaign," said Mr. Lesser, "and I think Mr. Johnston deserves to be congratulated for the wise and businesslike stand he took in his editorial 'Skyrocketing the State Rights Picture,' which started the ball rolling."

"There is no doubt in the mind of the serious thinking State Rights man but that the 'sucker' who spends his easy money so foolishly on State Rights pictures, in hopes of cleaning up a few hundred per cent profit, is doing wrong for everybody concerned."

"What should interest him most is that he is doing himself a grave injustice. His money, in most cases, goes in, never to come out. He doesn't know showmanship; he doesn't know salesmanship as it is applied to our business. He doesn't know anything about helping the exhibitor, and about all he does succeed in doing is to 'bawl up' a situation bad enough when he took hold of it.

"The exhibitors he sells usually fall down in presenting the picture, because he has been unable, through negligence, to give them the sort of cooperation they need. As for the producer, the failure of his picture at the hands of the 'easy money guy' make his product unpopular, so that his future chances are materially harmed."

"Trooper 44" Now Ready for State Rights Release

A great deal of interest has been aroused among state rights buyers by the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation's film, "Trooper 44." During the past few weeks it has been shown to and inquired over by such men as Samuel Gompers, head of the American Federation of Labor. He pronounced it to be without offense to the union cause.

"Trooper 44" is said to have a decided effect upon the preliminary passage of the bill authorizing the New York state police force which, during last week, passed the Senate, and is now before the Assembly.

Similar bills are said to have been introduced in thirteen other states.

President Boardman, of the E. I. S. Corporation, announces that an extensive advertising campaign will be conducted to establish the film in the minds of the public.

"Trooper 44" is made up of such well-known players as George Soule Spencer, June Drye, W. W. Black, Roy Galbraith, Betty Dodsworth, Roy Sheldon, Walter P. Lewis, and others.

Joseph R. Miles, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, has been appointed sole sales agent for the picture.

Capital Punishment Theme of Late Selig

Forceful and dramatic is the way in which Melba H. Justice's latest drama, "Who Shall Take My Life?" an argument against capital punishment, is described as appearing on the screen. Colin Campbell filmed the picture for Selig and a cast which includes Thomas Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Edward Coxen, Bessie Eyton, Harry Lonsdale and Virginia Kirtley will be seen.

The photodrama will, like "Beware of Strangers," be distributed on a state rights basis.
FROM the Western Vitagraph studios, Corinne Griffith, known to photoplay fans through excellent work in a number of feature productions, has come to the Flatbush Wita studio to be leading woman to Earle Williams. Anita Stewart's illness has disarranged the co-starring schedule of herself and Mr. Williams. Miss Griffith immediately began work last week opposite the Vitagraph male star in a new feature. The new arrival is a blonde, pretty of course, and formerly worked opposite Webster Campbell.

Her first release with Mr. Williams will be in a mystery story with the working title of "Lincoln-by-the-Nine." In other words, Miss Hanlon, a firm believer in defense in case of necessity has gone the limit, and purchased herself a Gatling gun. Each day in a stretch of woods near the studio she spends an hour or so practicing with it. They do say she can aim straight, too—but being descended from Major H. T. Hanlon, who won distinction in the Revolution, Miss Hanlon feels there is but little credit due her for that.

THAT rattling, deafening, war-like sound which permeates the atmosphere outside of the Apollo studios at Fort Lee every day? Merely Alma Hanlon teaching "preparedness" to herself.

The mad craze for salaries by some of our moving picture stars calls for contracts that stipulate the hours of work, and it is only the director that is obliged to work night and day, but the ultimate was reached recently when Director George L. Coxe undertook an operation on his throat, and insisted that the operation be recorded cinematographically, to be used in the Rockefeller Foundation picture he is engaged on.

Director Coxe staged the operation, prepared himself, took his position on the operating table, and then acted the principal role under the influence of ether, which is making a record for sticking on the job that has not heretofore been accomplished.

THOUGH he has directed scores of plays in his long experience in pictures, George D. Baker, Metro director, will appear on the screen for the first time in "Sowers and Reapers," Emmet Wehlen's forthcoming Metro-Rolle production. And this first, and perhaps only time, he merely plays himself as he appears daily on the studio floor. In other words, inasmuch as "Sowers and Reapers" is a story of a picture studio, Mr. Baker consented to play the part of a director in it.

HENRY HALLAM, formerly a favorite tenor in light opera, has engaged to support Viola Dana in Metro-Columbia productions, and will be seen in East Indian parts in her next two photoplays, "God's Law and Man's," a screen version of Paul Trent's novel, "A Wife by Purchase," and "Lady Barnacle," by Edgar Franklin. Both productions have been directed by John H. Collins.

Although Mr. Hallam has had a long and successful career on the speaking and opera stage, he prefers the silent drama, and several years ago began devoting his entire time to it. For four and a half years he played character leads with Kalem, later appearing with the Famous Players, Fox and Kleine companies.

IT is doubtful if any motion picture actress who has attained wide popularity with the public is quite as busy as Miss Smith.

At the Apollo Studio in Fort Lee where "The Great Bradley Mystery," a forthcoming Art Drama is Being Made, Director Richard Ridgely, Edward Hillis, Author, and Lead Florence Short, and HARRY Raver, President of Apollo and Art Drama are Among Those in the Set.
This scenario was furnished by Alfred Solomon, who has hitherto devoted his time to writing and composing vocal music, and now turns his attention to the screen for the first time.

Betty Dodsworth, who played the heavy character of Cora in the E. I. S. production, "Trooper 44," is a new recruit in pictures from the legitimate stage. Her last dramatic role was in support of James C. Hackett in "Macbeth," in which she played a minor role and understudied Viola Allen as "Lady Macbeth."

Although Miss Dodsworth has been playing for the screen but a short time, she has appeared in several important productions, among them Mrs. David Wark Griffith's "Charity," under the direction of Frank Powell; "The Smugglers," under the direction of Sidney Olcott; the McClure production of "Wrath," under the direction of Theodore Marion; "The Traveling Salesman," under the direction of Joseph Kaufman; with Mme. Petrova, under the direction of Burton King in "Trooper 44," and in "The Transgressor," under direction of Edward Warren.

Pathe confidently predicts that Mollie King, star of "Mystery of the Double Cross," the new serial, will, through her work in it, attain great popularity, and become one of the really big stars of the screen. The production has now been finished, and the opportunity given to see it as a whole before the day of release. The unanimous verdict of Pathé executives, is that "Miss King screen's beautifully, has real personality and her work shows a constant improvement."

Miss King is a "stage child," having made her debut before the footlights at the tender age of eight months. She is not yet twenty years old either, and has been identified with a number of stage successes.

Pauline Frederick is rushing the season a bit by beginning to commute to her country place at Mountain Lakes, New Jersey, every day that she is not called for work at the Famous Players studio.

Of course the "commutation" is accomplished via her Stutz runabout which she bought last fall on the personal guarantee of the manager that it could not go under seventy miles an hour on low gear.

Miss Frederick is already beginning a series of week-end parties, the guest of honor of her next one being Robert Vignola who is directing her next production.

Marguerite Snow, while preparing to leave this world for a year's solid work in Toronto, Canada, is having photographs taken by all the leading photographers of New York. She wants to have a year's supply before leaving.

Like many other stage stars who have gravitated to the silent drama, Maxine Elliott finds many differences between the spoken drama and the screen.

She especially is surprised at the methods of rehearsal for picture scenes, having been used to constant drizzling of stage acts in continuity. Instead she finds sequence of scenes thrown to the winds in the production of pictures.

In addition Miss Elliott finds there is not the noise and aimless confusion in a film studio that she had imagined; and, let it be whispered, she does not mind the early rising necessary to picture actresses. Sufficient.

Returning from Saranac Lake after a month's sojourn taking snow scenes for the forthcoming B. S. Moss subject, "One Hour," the company of players spent last week with Director Paul McAllister at the Biograph studio, and then packed up again and departed for Jacksonville where the picture will be completed in three weeks.

The cast includes Zena Keefe and Alan Hale as co-stars, Ina Brooke, Warren Cook, William Marion, Henry W. Pemberton and D. J. Flanagan.

George Fitzmaurice, of the Astra, is at Saranac Lake in the Adirondacks, with Mollie King and a company of twelve players, engaged in the production of a five-part Pathé-Gold Rooster play called "Fifth Avenue."

Out and out American, sweet twenty-three, and a brunette of striking attractiveness is the description of this little actress.

Metro. Ingenue roles are Miss Smith's specialty and whenever not tied up by contract her services are in demand among producing organizations.

Kimball Young's company, Thanhouser, Goldwyn, Essanay, Famous Players and others are among those who have engaged the petite and chic star, who has become a favorite among picture patrons during the past year.

Miss Mason, who has become a favorite among picture patrons during the past year,

Shirley Mason, the petite and chic star who has become a favorite among picture patrons during the past year, is now completing "Little Miss Nobody," in which, during May, Miss Mason will appear in Conquest Pictures, and she now is engaged at the Edison studios in playing the title role in "The Little Chevalier," a three-reel drama based on a story of the same name by M. E. M. Davis. Miss Mason won her first reputation by her appearances in Edison productions.
President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company has been at the Coast, looking after interests and supervising production at three studios in which he is interested—the American at Santa Barbara and the Signal and Vogue in Los Angeles. All three are progressing with their productions very satisfactorily, and Mr. Hutchinson has only words of praise for the management at the three producing plants.

The second of the Gail Kane series at present known as “Edge Tools” is in the making under the direction of Rollin S. Sturgeon, who was especially engaged by the American to film this series. Edward Peil, who scored a success in a dual role in Clune’s “Eyes of the World,” is playing the lead opposite Miss Kane. The role of the husband is taken by Hassan, who was featured in a serial by the Universal, and another is taken by Mary Lee Wise. Al. Vosburg, formerly of the American, appears as the juvenile, and Fred Droom takes an important character role.

More than half of the subjects for the second William Russell American series of five-reel photoplays has been completed by the company under the direction of Edward Sloman. The first, “Her Fighting Gentleman,” has already been released, and coming after this is “High Play,” a tense drama, and then “The Frame-Up,” a comedy drama which has but recently been completed. Francessa Billington plays the leading role opposite Mr. Russell. Harvey Clark takes a character part in this.

The Russell-Sloman organization in preparing this series has gone about it in a painstaking manner. All stories for the six pictures selected and prepared for production prior to the beginning of the series. This enables the entire studio staff to work to advantage in the filming of the subjects, making delays impossible except for weather conditions, and at the same time giving far better technical support to the producing company.

The new Mary Miles Minter series is well under way under the direction of James Kirkwood. It will be remembered that Mr. Kirkwood was in charge of producing all but one of the previous pictures of this star. He has already completed and edited the first one and is now working on the second. The titles for these have not been announced. George Fisher, who went to the American late in the fall and has since played leads opposite Miss Minter, is one of the principal supporting players. Another player very widely known for his exceptionally good character portrayal in American Mutual subjects during the last five years, who is playing with this company is George Periolat.

William Fox, who has been in Los Angeles now for more than two weeks, is to remain here for at least that much longer. He has been in conference with General Western Representative A. Carlos and heads of the production force at the studio daily, planning future productions. After completing his work it is now planned he will accompany Western Representative Harry Leonhardt on a tour of all territory west of Chicago, visiting all the Fox exchanges. Mr. Leonhardt came to the Coast with Mr. Fox, but was called back to Chicago on important business. He is expected to arrive in Los Angeles within the next few days, and will then remain here until Mr. Fox concludes his business at the studio.

The Fox child spectacle, “The Modern Jack in the Beanstalk,” made by the Franklyn Brothers, is completed and edited to such an extent that the directors have taken up the making of another subject, and are now giving but a small portion of their time to the re-editing of the eight-reel picture. The new photoplay put into production will consist of five or six reels, and will be an adaptation from two well-known fairy tales. Francis Carpenter, Virginia Corbin, Violet Radel &amp; Carmen DeRue are the principal child players, with Hershall Mayall and Rosita Marzini in the leading parts.

F. McGrew Willis, who for the past eight months has been free-lancing photoplays while affiliated with Walter Woods under the partnership name of Willis-Woods, has been engaged by William Fox to write original photoplays and adapt others. Mr. Willis has been connected with the photoplay industry in the West in this capacity for the past four years, nearly two years of this time being with Universal, where he wrote a number of Bluebird and Red Feather stories and continuity. His first work for the Fox Company is writing the continuity for a story now being filmed under the direction of Otis Turner under the working title of “The Book Agent.” George Walsh and Doris Parn are the leads for this subject. Mr. Willis has also prepared the working script for “The American Message,” a photoplay based on the old stage play “The Iron Master.” This is now in production under the direction of Frank Lloyd, with William Farnum as star and Jewel Carmen playing the opposite lead. William Foster, who has been with Director Lloyd as cameraman, will be in charge of the photography of this subject.

To facilitate production, each director of the Fox organization is to have his individual stage. The first one set aside for any producing unit was given to R. A. Walsh, and he began work on the new one upon return Monday. Carl Winter, who has been with the company for five years, is working with this company as George Periolat. Carl Winter continues as cameraman for the Mary Miles Minter Company.

X. K. Stout, who until very recently was manager for the Mutual exchange at San Francisco, has been selected by Mr. Hutchinson as assistant for Studio Manager Crane. Mr. Stout has taken up his new work at the American studio now, and is finding it very pleasant after several years in a film exchange.

Another new face at the American studio is that of Frank Buck, who is in charge of the publicity department. Mr. Buck was formerly affiliated with the San Francisco Exposition in charge of the publicity department there. At the close of the fair he came to Los Angeles, and for several months served the Keystone Film Company as publicity manager.

Carl Laemmle Posing With a Lion at Universal City
A. L. CHRISTIE this week engaged Hazel Alden to play lead opposite Neal Burns in Christie Comedies and to succeed Billie Rhodes, who recently was engaged to play in Caukfield Mutual Features. Miss Alden has had a varied experience on the legitimate stage, being a member of the Metropolitan Stock Company for several seasons, and playing in support of Lew Fields in "The Never Homes," "The Little Millionaire," and others. She has been on the Coast but a few weeks, and during that time had her first motion picture experience playing in support of Fannie Ward in "The Heart of Her Child," since she played in the Lady Margaret Illington picture. She is now at work under the direction of Mr. Christie in a comedy titled "Practice What You Preach." Neal Burns, Eddie Barry and George French also appear in this cast.

A comedy with laughable situations created by a bride who insists she will take her pet dogs with her on her honeymoon," Those Wedding Bells," is being given the finishing touches at the Christie studio. Betty Compson, a member of the Nestorites, Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, with little Edith Roberts, are posing for a comedy entitled "Moving Day," which is being filmed by Director Chaudet. The comedians claim there is a big mystery about this film, and for the first time in their film careers insist their sets shall be screened in. This prevents interruption from the visitors' gallery and studio attaches.

Another four-reel drama to be put into production is "The Adirondack Affair," in which Allen Holubar and Louise Lovely are principals, with Eddie Polo in one of the very important roles. Mr. Holubar is directing this production, which, it is said, is to be a part of the regular Universal program.

Fred A. Kelsey, director of Western subjects featuring Harry Carey, in the making of "According to Appearances" needed a fat man for a Western part, and when the employment department could not find the very person for the role, Kelsey went back to grease paint again, feeling sure the experience would aid him in his weight decreasing attempts. The Universal cowboys will play in support of Carey.

"The Fires of Rebellion" is the name selected for a five-reel subject put in production this week with Idia May Park as director. Dorothy Phillips will be starred, and her principal supports will be Lon Chaney and William H. Stowell.

JOLTED JUSTICE," a Vogue farce, has been completed with a cast including Paddy McGuire and René Rogers, who temporarily engaged during the absence of Gypsy Abbott. Rube Miller directed this picture, but does not appear in any of the scenes.

Robin Williamson has put the finishing touches to "Freighted Flirts," an April 1 comedy, with Ben Turpin, Lillian Hamilton and Ed. Lowry.

One Vogue company is now making a lady barber story, and principals of the other are wearing animal make-up for what is spoken of as a tiger story.

The Harold Lockwood company of the Yorke-Metror studio left Thursday of this week for Jerome, Ariz., where E. Mason Hopper will direct exterior scenes for "The Secret Spring," adapted by Richard V. Spencer from the Clarence B. Kelland novel, "The Hidden Spring." Scenes for this photoplay require a real mining town, with smelters and other similar industries in operation, and Mr. Spencer secured the rights to use locations at the United Verde mine for spending several weeks in Arizona searching for locations. The company will have permission to photograph many of the street scenes in Jerome in addition to working at the mines and smelters. Billie West, formerly member of Finkelstein's organization, where she played lead, has been engaged to play opposite Mr. Lockwood in this story. Lester Cunto will be the heavyweight, and Doc. Crane, Ruth Oyerton and others will take important roles.

A CALM has settled over Universal City, and the many tongues have ceased to speak or whisper about the many changes that were made shortly, for be it known President Carl Laemmle departed for the East on a Tuesday, and Treasurer P. A. Powers left on a Saturday. The big producing organization is still honored by the presence of Secretary R. H. Cochrane, who will remain for several weeks. Mr. Laemmle was on the receiving line about all the time he was in the West, and it is very possible he will talk of lunchboxes and "personally conducted" tours of the studio in his sleep for weeks to come. His last days were strenuous, for besides conferring with heads of departments, directors and players, he saw several productions projected, showed the members of the House Committee on Naval Affairs over Ucity, and met more than a dozen exhibitors and exchange men from as many states. Then, too, the producing staff took up some of his time by giving him a farewell reception. P. A. Powers slipped out of town and never said a word to any one, and he was gone some time before his absence was discovered.

Eugene B. Lewis, who is shortly to try his hand at directing a photoplay, following four years of scenario writing, has been succeeded by Jasper Ewing Brady as editor of the scenario department. Mr. Brady served the Vitagraph Company in this capacity for several years, and has been on the Coast for the past several months.

A new organization has been perfected for Director Jack Conway, owing to the absence of Ella Hall from Ucity on a well-earned vacation. Alice Lake, who came to the Coast with Roscoe Arbuckle and here worked in several Keystone comedies, will be the leading woman of this company, and opposite her will appear in the first production Roy Stewart and Herbert Rawlinson. This is from an original story by George Bronson Howard, and will be titled "Hands Up." The story has both an Eastern and Western atmosphere.

President John R. Freuler of Mutual Said Goodbye to Helen Holmes and Others of the Signal Company After His Visit to the MacGowan Studio. Where "The Railroad Raiders," Latest Railroad Serial is in Course of Production.
Reynolds' subjects, is a decidedly out-of-doors photoplay. Myrtle Gonzales is the star, and the supporting company includes George Hernandez, Jean Hersholt and others.

NOW that April 6 has been selected for the release date for the first episode of the Helen Holm series, "The Railroad Raiders," Director J. P. McGowan plans to have the first nine chapters completed by that time. The sixth installment, "The Overland Disaster," became past history for the producing unit this week, which means that a recently purchased Pullman car is now smashed beyond repair. The company is shortly to leave for Nevada, where the nine remaining chapters are to be filmed. Many of the locations to be used are near Las Vegas, where the Signal Company spent considerable time last year.

Reports from the Monogram studio are to the effect that Shorty Hamilton is now working in three two-reel comedies at one time. Number twelve of the Shorty series is entitled "Shorty Solves a Wireless Mystery." This has almost been completed, one of the final scenes being a high dive into the ocean from the mast of a schooner. Shorty took the bath and was so well pleased with the experience that he feels the company shall make other water pictures immediately. Number thirteen, another which is holding the attention of Shorty, is "Shorty Reduces the High Cost of Living." If reports can be believed, the Monogram studio will be the spot where all rioters may go and secure eatables. Production Manager William Clifford makes the assertion that a ton of potatoes and fully half that many onions will be needed for a number of scenes in this comedy. The third in production is being made by Director Bob Gray, and is "Shorty Lays a Jungle Goat." The picture is laid in the Philippine Islands, and the company is having much difficulty in getting the necessary atmospheric quality. Shorty Hamilton, the featured player of this series, served in the American army for three years, most of this time being in the Philippines, and the knowledge he gained of these island possessions is making it possible for the company to add exceptionally good atmospheric scenes and action.

SIX months' practice enabled Helen Gibson to this week perform her most daring act before the camera in the current "Daughter of Daring" production. In this she uses three horses, one of which she rides herself. The stunt is to be a jump of several hundred feet over a speeding railroad train. The horses were running at full speed when the stunt was filmed.

The novel "The Planter," by Roy Neill, has been found ideal locations for the plot, which deals with a band of outlaws who live in a mountain retreat, protected to the very door of their rendezvous, which may be entered only through a huge door in the very peak of the mountain.

THREE L-Ko comedies are nearing completion. One is being made by J. G. Blystone and titled "The Worshipers of the Cuckoo Clock," which has Alice Howell for its featured comedian. This two-reel subject required the building of a lighthouse on the rocky shores near Long Beach, which was torn to pieces for sentimentally thrilling scenes in the comedy. More than one hundred men and two steam dredges were needed to move the building to get the desired action, and the largest tug boat of Los Angeles harbor aided in bringing the collapse of the structure. The building was of such size that it required several weeks' time for completion by the entire technical staff of the L-Ko.

Chaplin Mutual, "The Cure"

ROY NEILL, who has been affiliated with the Ince organization for almost two years, serving in the capacity of assistant director to Raymond H. West, following a very successful career as a legitimate stage actor and playwright, was this week promoted to directorship by Thomas H. Ince, and will film the next Enid Bennett picture.

Director Walter Edwards will have Louise Glau as star for his next Ince Triangle picture he will produce. This is of an underworld type, written especially for Miss Glau by Lambert Hillyer. The role for Miss Glau is that of a girl gangster. Charles Gumma has been selected for the opposite lead, and Roy Laidlaw and Agnes Herring are members of the supporting cast.

One Ince producing company is delayed in work this week because of the illness of Charles Miller, director, who was placed in charge of the filming of the next Dorothy Dalton subject. His illness, it is said, is due to exposure, having insisted upon working in a drizzling rain when suffering a slight attack of la grippe. Members of the company besides Miss Dalton, including Joe King, Lillian Hayward, Mary MacLvor, Alice Taaffe, Donald Lee and others fared much better.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

“Broadway Jones” (Artcraft—Six Reels) REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

Serving to introduce George M. Cohan to the picture world both as a comedian and an author, “Broadway Jones” scintillates with some of the best feature comedy ever shown on the screen. On the stage “Broadway Jones” was one of Mr. Cohan’s best. Its comedy lay in its lines and the manner in which they were read. Mr. Cohan wasn’t thinking of pictures when he wrote it, otherwise he would have added a few more complications and put more of a picture punch in the final scenes. But in the face of the large amount of comedy in the picture, much of which lies in the subtitles, which are excerpts from the play, it is perhaps stretching the point to harp on the few flaws which do the melting into insignificance act before the Cohan personality.

And the Cohan personality is a big consideration. In his vehicle he is constantly making the best of any situation that comes along—always looking for the silver lining in every cloud. Such a spirit of optimism is always immediately appreciated by amusement-seeking folk. And such a personality is all too rare on the screen. That Mr. Cohan is a natural comedian goes without saying, and the various predicaments in which he finds himself throughout the six reels of “Broadway Jones” benefit largely by his presence.

The production accorded “Broadway Jones” is extraordinary. When Director Joe Kaufman wanted to have a cabaret scene at Murray’s, to Murray’s he went. His settings are a marvel in realistic construction, the set of the Knickerbocker Hotel being the most lavish of the lot. With some scenes of Broadway, both at night and in the daytime, and the whole set off by excellent photography, there is nothing to complain of in the way of production. The continuity runs fairly well. Closeups of the stars are used superfluously, but Mr. Cohan most always has something to express in them. The supporting cast, headed by Crawford Kent and Marguerite Snow, does very good work.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Broadway Jones (George M. Cohan), so called because of his love for the famous street, is tired of the old-fashioned business methods employed by his uncle (Russell Bassett) in conducting the Chu-Chu Chewing Gum Company in Jonesville. When Wallace (Crawford Kent), an advertising man from New York, comes to the town, Broadway finally decides that he must see the white light. He journeys to the city, leaving Josie Richards (Marguerite Snow), the stenographer of the company, behind. In New York he sets a terrific pace until his funds are gone. Then he proceeds to become engaged to Mrs. Gerard (Ida Darling), a rich widow. He regrets the engagement soon after, and Mrs. Gerard proceeds to pursue and pursue him. When Broadway receives word of his uncle’s death he goes back to Jonesville. At first he plans to sell the plant to the gum trust, but realizing that he will throw many men out of work by so doing, he assumes charge of the place and installs Wallace as advertising man. Mrs. Gerard, foiled in her every attempt to further ensnare Broadway, contents herself by marrying his butcher, and Josie becomes Mrs. Broadway Jones.

“As Man Made Her” (World Film—Five Reels) REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HELEN BEARE, author of “As Man Made Her,” has gone deep into the intricacies of the double moral standard and has evolved therefrom a highly dramatic picture, seen to the accompaniment of a number of scenes and subtitles that may provoke censorial darts. The construction of the story, though it relies almost wholly on matters of sex, is decidedly good. There are any number of situations of real intensity and of dragging moments there are none. Gail Kane, featured as Claire, gives an emotional and effective performance in a difficult role. Her inclination to roll her eyes at the slightest provocation is perhaps the sole theatrical note in her rendition of the part. Frank Mills is a thoroughly sin-stained Mason, and he plays with excellent restraint throughout, giving in the scenes of the climax, where Mason is under the influence of drink, a masterly characterization. Edward Langford as Harold is a hero whose very naturalness is a rarity, and Gerda Holmes plays the flippant Grace very well.

The production given the story by George Archainbaud is picture-worthy. The realism of the cabaret scene, with its inevitable hula-hula dancer, is marked, and the more intimate scenes and settings of the picture are well chosen. In fact, “As Man Made Her” is in general a picture, the story, acting and production of which is a distance beyond the average. On Broadway it would hugely entertain, but in smaller communities the patron of the theatre may find it too highly seasoned for conservative tastes.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

After her graduation from school Claire (Gail Kane) falls into the hands of Mason Forbes (Frank Mills), and the next seen of her is a number of years later, when she is a noted figure on Broadway. Mason discards her to marry Grace (Gerda Holmes). Harold Forbes (Edward Langford), Mason’s brother, meets Claire and later brings her home as his bride. Mason keeps quiet. His marriage has been a failure. When a child is born to Claire Harold is more in love than ever, but Claire, with revenge in her heart, seeks to attract Mason once again. Mason capitulates, pleads with her to go away with him, but at last Claire’s heart is softened to her husband and child. Mason, angered, tells the secret of her past, but the baby stands as a link between Claire and Harold that nothing can break.

“The College Boy’s Special” (Kalem’s “A Daughter of Daring” Series—Two Reels) REVIEWED BY GEORGE WORTS

A NEW note has been injected into Kalem’s railroad series. In the past, drama and other incidentals have been pushed aside to make room for the spine-snapping thriller at the end. Some new director has taken hold, with the following results, to wit: Helen Gibson proves she can act; her juvenile lead, L.
THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Kalem's railroad players in the present piece are quite sufficient unto themselves, and the story is fresh and vigorous. College boys, not of the forty-year-old-ham-actor type, resurrected from an indifferent casting director at $2.50 a day, but chaps who do the typically brazen and eccentric stunts of the campus product, are responsible for the comedy.

Bob Cotter (L. T. Whitlock), their leader, makes his first false step with Helen in trying to embrace her. The boys plan a picnic and order a case of ice cream. When the railroad does not deliver, Bob motors to a nearby town, and on the way back the car is wrecked. The thrill becomes apparent when a freight car, with brakes locked on a down grade, is required to carry the cream to camp. The flying mail is glimpsed, roaring down the track at its usual breath-taking clip. Helen is informed of the portending smashup and mounts a horse. The box car on its journey passes under a low bridge, with Bob, not looking, standing on the car's roof, with the expected sad outcome. Helen gallops alongside the car, makes a neat leap to the arms of the college boys and sets the brakes—just as the flying mail goes by.

(Astra-Pathé—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This picture, featuring Pathé's popular serial star, Pearl White, was sent to France to be hand-colored. The results, when the exterior scenes of the picture are considered, are delightful. A background of water or trees shows up to beautiful effect in the coloring. In fact, the natural sphere of this sort of color work is nature. When a closeup showing the players is reached the flesh tint is apt to be a little off, and the shade of the hair very often varies. The interiors of “Mayblossom” fail to measure up to the exteriors. The story of the picture, which was written by Anthony Kelly, though molded along conventional lines, is a costume piece. The women wear hoop-skirts and the men laces. Edward Jose in the selection of local players has shown unusual attention to detail. If there was we [ailed to catch it.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Anabel Lee (Pearl White) is courted by Warner Richmond (Hal Ford). They are married, but the affair is kept secret because of the illness of Warner's grandfather (Fuller Mellish). Shortly the old gentleman dies and Warner, having met and fallen in love with a singer, destroys the evidence of his former marriage. Anabel, after an illness, marries a doctor, the sweetheart of her childhood days. Warner returns to his old home after the singer has discarded him. In delireum he tells of his marriage to Anabel to her husband, who attends him. Anabel, knowing her secret told, attempts to kill herself, but her husband saves her just in time. In his ravings Warner overturns a lamp in his shanty, and before help arrives he is burned to death.

“A Man and the Woman”

(U. S. Amusement—Art Dramas—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

So long as Pallas furnishes Vivian Martin with such excellent stories, good direction and exceptional casts, exhibitors may bank on these productions as among the best. And “The Spirit of Romance,” which has been found a thoroughly appealing story, quite in a class with the two previous fine productions with this star.

As maid of all work in the old curiosity shop of Richard Cobb, Miss Martin is introduced in a most novel way by the “theme vision,” we might call it—a fade-in of her future as a wealthy wife. As a consequence, interest that might have been accumulative is only passing fair.

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

At the outset this feature gives unusual promise, which is only partially fulfilled in the later reels. Adapted and produced by Madame Alice Blache from Emile Zola’s “Nantas,” the picture lacks the force of many of the other works made by her studio. Its chief fault seems to be in its cast, no member of which works up any visible show of enthusiasm for his or her part. It appears that in an effort to be natural they have become quite colorless in the rendition of their respective roles.

The opportunities for strong situations have not been realized, largely for this reason. In the denouement the same tempo prevails as in the introductory passages. As a consequence, interest that might have been accumulative is only passing fair. Madame Blache’s work is in the minor details average. "Patria" (International-Pathe—Ninth Episode) REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"The Paw and Scape Goat" introduces a new twist to the plot of the serial and consequently the interest is freshened considerably. The opening of the picture is exciting, with Milton Sills does some sterling work in this number, and Warner Oland is suave and plotting as Huroki.

Mrs. Castle continues on her posing performance, appearing in a variety of weird creations of the costume calculated to set the hearts of rural maidens a fluttering and even goes so far as to allow her pet simian to partake of her cantaloupe in a closeup. It is a picture that will appeal to most classes, and is surely one that is entitled to a showing anywhere.

STORY OF "THE DEVIL'S BAIT"

Two inseparable chums, Dr. Sheldon (William Conklin) and Jason Davies (Edw. J. Brady), on a vacation in Mandalay, just four reels were allowed to do it in. The story is not made into a dramatically interesting whole, and we don't think the public will begin to understand from the picture what a forty-line "synopsis" makes very clear.

"Give Me the Ruby and I Will Save You"

Take a boy is born to them, and they are really happy, but a letter from home rekindles the dying embers of a love for civilization, and he deserts his wife. His father greets him and the boy with open arms, but the boy pines for "mamma," so after a mishap or two a happy reunion takes place.
escape a landside at the famous ruby mines there. They take from the hand of a dead miner a wonderful ruby, and a quarrel results. Sheldon forcing Davies to give him the ruby or be hurled off a cliff.

Years later Davies gets his vengeance. Tempting Sheldon's wife with jewels, he gets her to run away with him, and so steals from Sheldon his most priceless possession, for she also has the fatal ruby. When Doris Sheldon (Ruth Roland) has reached womanhood, Davies, not yet satisfied, uses her mother's own inherited failing to tempt her. Through chance he gains possession of priceless jewels and means to force her to wear them, unknown to her father, who has hidden all the family jewels. He is discovered in time and, pursued, jumps off a cliff, and the ruby is thrown into the sea, where it can no longer serve as "The Devil's Bail."

STORY OF "THE YELLOW BULLET"

The only survivors of a holdup in the middle of the desert are Fred Fowler (Robyn Adair), his daughter Teresa (Lucy Payton), and Harry Hart (Bruce Smith). Carrying Teresa, Fred finds an old cabin with two skulls and a lot of gold nuggets, together with a note saying the location of the Peg Leg Smith Mine will be found in a yellow bullet.

The story then concerns itself with the discovery by Hart of the secret, his perfidy to his companion, finally locking him up, handcuffed, in the cabin until he shall tell him what he has done with the "yellow bullet."

As a matter of fact, after extracting the note from it, Fowler had buried the yellow bullet, and he manages to struggle with his shackles to the place he buried it, and placing it in his emptied revolver, when Hart comes to devil him again he kills him with it, then going mad. He is rescued by Teresa and her lover, Surgeon Lloyd (Neil Hardin) of the border guard, who has organized a rescue party.

"The Skeleton Canon Raid" (Episode of "The American Girl"—Kalem—Two Reels)

HERE at last is a powerful new theme, and the story is well worked out, except that somebody slipped in a weakness that marks the main point, which is the point of law a man cannot be declared guilty of murder unless the body of the murdered party, or some traces of evidence showing that murder has been committed, are forthcoming. The story and players are well chosen, the pictures are good, and it is at least sincere as the husband. Travers Vale directed, while the author is William Addison Lathrop.

Mr. Brady is fond of the domestic drama. "Man's Woman" (World Film—Five Reels)

"Man's Woman" is another picture of marital complications that contains a theme of great possibilities as its basis. The wife of the lawyer has been used to practical independence prior to her marriage, but when she enters upon her new life she finds herself completely dominated by her husband and his two maiden aunts. The dramatic results from this clash of characters are true, and truth never fails in interest. The climax put upon this story seems to have been the easiest way out. There is a murder, the wife is compromised for the moment, and then the husband discovers that she is well worthy of more freedom. To be candid, a more natural ending might have been approached when the realism of the body of the action is considered. The present finale, while it is tense, doesn't strike the life-like note of the rest of the story. But they, as no doubt the producer would tell you, want just such an ending.

In its development the story moves swiftly and logically, with the customary dependence on coincidence. The production is good and the acting praiseworthy. Ethel Clayton as Violet, the wife, does her usual good work. Rockcliffe Fellows, though his general appearance sometimes detracts attention from his performance, is at least sincere as the husband. Travers Vale directed, while the author is William Addison Lathrop.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

After three years of married life Violet (Ethel Clayton) finds herself so utterly without authority in her home, due to the interference of her husband's maiden aunts (Justine Cutting and Eugenie Woodward) who complains to Roger (Rockcliffe Fellows), her husband. He is so taken up as assistant district attorney in attempting to bring a group of gamblers to justice that he neglects her needs. The district attorney (Frank Goldsmith) in league with the gamblers schemes to have a gunman (Johnny Hines) put Roger out of the way. Violet gets inside the plot, lures the attorney to her home, so that he will receive theassin's bullet. In so doing she compromises herself before her husband, but his eyes are opened at last through the services of an old family servant.

"The Law That Failed" (Apollo Art Drama—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

HERE at last is a powerful new theme, and the story is well worked out, except that somebody slipped in putting it together. Scenes appear which have no meaning whatever, which are never explained, but even this does not make a good scenario fail to get over the main point, which is the point of law a man cannot be declared guilty of murder unless the body of the murdered party, or some traces of evidence showing that murder has been committed, are forthcoming.

The real feminine lead in the picture is Florence Short, in the role of Estrella Santos, but Alma Haulon, the featured star, does some very acceptable work as the sweetheart of Luke Rodin.

in the usual way to marry the girl—but there is where the story is different, and its main punch is the trial and the starting setting him free on a technicality, which however does not relieve his conscience.

The actual murder has evidently been eliminated by the censors, and a retake should be made, if possible, to give some excuse for the showing earlier of the secret chamber which we presume was used in some way to conceal the murder.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Luke Rodin (Edward Ellis), cold, almost starved prospector, finds refuge in the cabin of Estrella Santos (Florence Short). Estrella, deserted by her husband, gives him food—just then her husband, seeking the deed to his gold claim, and intending to desert Estrella, returns. Estrella murders him. Luke coming to consciousness with the knife in his hand believes he committed the murder. They go to America. In love with Alice Campbell (Alma Hayden), Luke is told he must marry Estrella or he exposed as a murderer. He chooses her in a fit of rage, but the body is not found, and the court orders him declared not guilty. He cannot bear the final accusing verdict of Alice and shoots himself. Alice realizes he murdered the woman.

"The Bottle Imp"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWS BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

When such master literature is so masterly interpreted as in this production, there can be no doubt of the reception it will receive from picture lovers everywhere.

From the opening scene, in which the author is seen, imper- sonated, telling this wonderful story to the children, to the final fade-out it is art and fancy intertwined with perfect charm (the company having gone to Hawaii to get the native atmosphere), princesses of royal blood acting the parts with Sessue Hayakawa, we are told, to give absolute fidelity to the characters.

The rising of the palace to replace the fisherman's hut the Orient—the Arabian Nights in a modern but semi-oriental setting—meet in "The Bottle Imp," from Robert Louis Stevenson's story.

THE HOME SCENES ARE FAITHFULLY DEPICTED, The characters natural and homelike, and there is everything in the latter of mountain, plain and valley are clear reproductions. The rising of the palace to replace the fisherman's hut the Orient—the Arabian Nights in a modern but semi-oriental setting—meet in "The Bottle Imp," from Robert Louis Stevenson's story.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Lopaka (Sessue Hayakawa), a poor Hawaiian fisherman, falls in love with Kokua, a young girl of royal blood. Scorned by her father, he seeks in the mountains a rare bird whose feathers furnish cloaks for royalty. An old dying priest of Pele tells him the wonderful "bottle imp," a wishing bottle in which Kono, his respective Pole, the imp of the mighty volcano, is confined, only to be released when the last owner is dead. The bottle must be sold always to another for less than purchased. One dying with the bottle still in his possession will go to hell.

Lopaka wishes for and has wealth and servants. He seeks and marries Kokua (Kehua Waipaul). Then he angers the imp and is cursed with the absence of Jeprosy. He has meant to sell the bottle and buys it back to cleanse himself. But he buys it for so small a sum as a penny. He confides in Kokua his terrible danger, when he is stricken with sickness, and Kokua, seeking a remedy, finds an old man who sells her some centimes, worth less than a cent. With the centimes Kokua buys the bottle and Lopaka gets well, only to discover Kokua's sacrifice. Rollins, a drunken sailor, is told by Lopaka that he can get all the drink he wants if he will buy the bottle back with some Chinese "cash," coins of even less value than centimes, Kokuka agreeing if Rollins will buy the bottle from Kokua, for three "cash," he will buy it from Rollins. However, Rollins, in his maudlin state, saying he is going to hell anyway, pays Kokua only one cash for the bottle, so that Lopaka cannot buy it back.

With the magic power of the bottle Rollins now tries to steal Kokua, and in a fight with Lopaka they fall off a cliff together, and in an under-water struggle Rollins is strangled to death.

The death of the last owner releases the bottle imp, and Kono returns to his home, the extinct crater of a volcano, which is seen to burst into activity.

And with the imp's release the palace and wealth of Lopaka and Kokua vanish, and they find themselves happy in Lopaka's thatched hut, rich without worldly wealth.

"Motherhood"

(Frank Powell-Mutual—Five Reels)

REVIEWS BY F. G. SPENCER

THIS picture deals almost fearfully with the horrors of modern warfare, and there is not a shadow of a doubt but the pictures are actual reproductions of the present-day conflict; they are beautiful in their clearness and revolting in their revelations.

Marjorie Rambeau, who has the lead, acquits herself most creditably, but she is so fast becoming known to patrons of the silent drama that to eulogize would merely be to waste words. suffice it to say, therefore, that in this production, where almost every emotion from love to anger, scorn, defiance and fear are called for, she rises superior to the occasion and leaves nothing further to be desired.

The film in its entirety proves conclusively that grim war makes monsters of men, and brings home more powerfully than ever the fact that mothers need their boys just as much—perhaps more, in a sense—as the nation needs them, but in the hour of need, when the nation calls, the mother, though reluctantly, lets go her hold.

The home scenes are faithfully depicted, the characters natural and homelike, and there is everything in the picture to make it a fine box-office attraction. In the second act there is a blurring effect in a stretch of the film that detracts somewhat from the otherwise photographic excellence, but with this exception the interiors and exteriors, the latter of mountain, plain and village are clear reproductions. The characters are uniformly well sustained.

In a typical American home a father (Frank Ford) and a mother (Agnes Eyre) are together reading one of the many books published anent the world conflict, and the story unfolded is of happily married couple, Albert, the husband (Robert Elliott), and Louise, his wife (Marjorie Rambeau).

Across the border, in another country, is another family, represented by the Captain (Paul Everton), his wife (Ruth Byron), and his mother (Lillian Page).

War breaks out and the heads of both families are called to their respective colors, and with the war's progress the Captain's morals become lax, and where he at the outset protected the women of an invaded country, now he becomes as bestial as an...
Two Educationalss

THE Dimars educational, "Feeding the Fish Eaters," is an interesting short number dealing with sea lions, pelicans and penguins. Taken in Central Park, there is a series of scenes showing the keepers tossing fish to the California sea lions. The exceedingly dexterous manner in which the animals proceed to pick the fish out of the air and their high, clean dives form pictures of folkloric value. The African pelican, with its neklike lower bill, and the weird and comical appearing penguins are the subjects for the remainder of the reel.

"Our World as It Appears to the Ant" is a distinct novelty and contains some excellent microscopic photography. In following the ant on his rounds, after he is introduced on the breakfast table, the table cloth, crystals of salt, the pollen of a flower, the fingers and wrist of a human being, and lastly the eyes of the ant himself are magnified many times. Variety is the subject's strong point, and its many scenes are both entertaining and educational.

"The Waiting Soul"

REVIEWED BY GEORGE M. SHOREY

THE story of this picture is a vivid warning to young girls. Whether it is acceptable entertainment for mixed audiences, must lie in the individual judgment of the exhibitor, although we lean to the belief that a program release should not take any chances of offense to the finest sensibilities.

It is Christian teaching that all sin must be forgiven, when sufficiently repented, yet that will not be accepted as present-day ethics. A powerful argument is here offered in favor of giving the woman a chance to redeem herself, which the man always has by our social customs.

In the role of the woman who loves too impulsively, Madame Petrova has an opportunity for some of her best emotional acting, and she has made of a none too strong plot in its power to sustain interest, a finely dramatic production.

The hesitancy between ruining her husband's faith in her and giving a terrible heritage to the unborn child, "The Waiting Soul" is a tense situation.

The suspence to the very end, with the final confession by the husband that he had learned from his bosom friend, before their marriage, of the early life and repentance of the woman who is in love with her, is exceedingly pleasing and leaves a clean aftertaste.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Grace Vauppe (Madame Petrova) falls in love with Dudley Kent (married man) and leaves for England and on voyage meet the Hargroves (Wilfred De Shields, Mrs. Lottie Ford). Mrs. Hargrove, recognizing Grace, tries to persuade her of her error, but to no avail. After a happy year in England, Kent learns of the death of his little boy, and leaves Grace with a terrible denunciation of lies. She becomes the victim of a motherly looking house mistress, from whose optical nightmare she is rescued by Willard Ashbrook (Roy Pitcher). He makes it possible for her to become a nurse under Doctor Blackwell, where three years of ministering to suffering humanity cleanses her soul. Here she meets Stanley Brinsley (Mahlon Hamilton), a patient, and now her first love.

Overwhelmed by his insistent devotion, she becomes his wife. For three years they are childless. Then the great happiness comes. With but a terrible fear. For John Hargrove meets her and recognizes her. He is a lecturer on child welfare, and he very impressively tells the awful effect of such a fear on a child unborn. Overcome she confesses to Stuart, choosing the blow to him rather than worse than death to her child—then only to learn that he had known all from Willard Ashbrook, a chum of his, and married her in spite of her unfortunate past.

"A Woman's Awakening"

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

COMMENCING as a comedy drama and winding up as a melodrama of the usual dye, this picture, written by Frank Woods, makes more than an ordinary bid for popularity, due to its fine production and the effort expended on its theme. The comedy of the first part furnished by the rabid feminist is of a sort sure to find appreciation. Mr. Woods has handled this part of his picture with a fine sense of farce values. Afterwards he waxes melodramatic, and as a consequence instills into his story a sufficient amount of interest to maintain a high degree of suspense.

The picture is also notable as it marks the first appearance of Seena Owen since her performance in Mr. Griffith's "Intolerance." In the role of the girl reared among surroundings reminiscent of anygone day, who is so used to liberty aside to discover a society as shallow as it is advanced, Miss Owen appears to very good advantage. Endowed with an irresistible beauty and an ability that comes natural to her, she plays the role of Paula Letchworth to a degree that warrants no criticism. Charles Gerrard gives an excellent impersonation of the typical society top, and Alma Reubens gives a comely performance in the part of Kate that is bound to be remembered. Chester Withey directed, and the results of his work show to fine advantage.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Paula (Seena Owen), an old-fashioned girl, weds Topham (Charles Gerrard) in preference to Cotter (A. D. Sears). After a time she discovers that his marriage to be a dismal failure. Topham, having wasted all her money, calls upon her for more. She agrees to procure some providing he will divorce her. Cotter, who has remained faithful, furnishes it and Topham believing he again has matters in his own hands refuses to leave Paula. Her mother (Kate Bruce) unable to see her daughter further mistreated by Topham shoots and kills him. Both Paula and Cotter believe each other guilty and it is only just previous to the mother's death that her guilt is revealed.

Spoonwoodes Aitken and Jennie Lee have character parts.

"The Mystery of the Double Cross"

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM J. McGRATH

THE Masked Stranger is unusually prominent in this number of Pathe's latest serial. His identity, or her identity it may be, ought to keep them guessing, if anything can. This episode lacks any sensational thrillers, but the action, moving with the same swiftness which characterized the opening numbers, never fails to mystify and interest.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Bentley (Ralph Stuart) plots to capture Philippa (Mollie King) to ascertain whether she be the girl of the Double Cross. Instead, Bentley finds himself being kidnapped by the Masked Stranger. Later, after he has made his escape, he succeeds in capturing Philippa and Peter (Leon Bary). One of Bentley's henchmen informs them of a strange girl, the Masked Stranger. The arrival of the police and the rescue of Philippa and Peter puts an end to the episode. young girl's part, gives it the lacquer that should make it an acceptable issue. George Fisher, in his customary place opposite Miss Minter, is cast in this picture as a young minister. He fails to fit into the role, however. The other of the main supporting cast are: Harvey Clark, George Periolat, Emma Kluge, Margaret Shelby, Jack Vosburg, Al Vosburg and Arthur Howard.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Liz (Mary Miles Minter) is a village lass who has just lost her mother by death. Her father, John Simkins (Harney Clark) is shiftless and known as the "village drunkard." Notwithstanding this environment Liz keeps the home together and graduates with honor. On graduation day, when every one else in the class has some parent or kinfolk present to greet them, Liz has nobody. Her father is on one of his usual sprees. Even her commencement gown she made.

The new minister (George Fisher) is attracted by Liz and hears her history. He falls in love with her. The minister misunderstands and suspects Liz of an affair with a gay blade of an artist (Al Vosburg) just arrived in town. Not until Liz, saddened and disharvested, is stricken dangerously ill does he come to understand his suspicions as unfounded and her feeling for him.

"Trooper 44"

(Edison-K-E-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWS BY PETER MILNE

Instead of the usual Northwest Mounted Police, those of the State of Pennsylvania take part in "Trooper 44." Save for this substitution Garfield Thompson's scenario contains situations and characters similar to the stories of the Canadian keepsers of law and order. There is the big dance hall scene, and a healthy brawl between the troopers and the outlaws is staged there for a finale, there are exteriors in which the snow covers the surface of the ground and there is, of course, the scene in which the heavy in a drunken condition attacks the girl. There are defects in the story itself, and the action is inclined to be gush. All the other members of the Mounted Police appear at one time or another and ride to the rescue via numerous flashes in the latter scenes.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jack, Trooper 44 (George Soule Spencer) suspects his sweetheart, Ruth (June Dayes) of being implicated in a robbery. In reality a gang headed by Sanford (W. W. Black) in which the new minister (George Fisher) is attracted by Liz and hears her history. He falls in love with her. The minister misunderstands and suspects Liz of an affair with a gay blade of an artist (Al Vosburg) just arrived in town. Not until Liz, saddened and disharvested, is stricken dangerously ill does he come to understand his suspicions as unfounded and her feeling for him.

"The Law of the North"

(Edison-K-E-S-E—5 Reels)

REVIEWS BY PETER MILNE

An engrossing drama of the northwestern, with the mounted police as prominent figures, is presented in "The Law of the North," starring William Nigh and Violet Palmer. A number of beautiful snow scenes with the characters traveling about upon sleds with a train of Alaskan dogs and the acting from star to merest supernumerary is of a highly consistent order seldom seen. That "The Law of the North" will entertain is practically a surety. It is less attempted, which though conventional in basic principles entertains throughout. The others of the main supporting cast are: Fred Jones and Robert Kegerris.

"The Trufflers"

(Essanay-K-E-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWS BY PETER MILNE

There seems to have been opportunities overlooked in the production of this adaptation of Samuel Merwin's Cosmopolitan Magazine story. Perhaps the oversights were intended, for it might be conjectured that in attempting to preserve the spirit and atmosphere of the book Fred E. Wright, the adaptor and director, was fearful of "planting" his characters. At any rate, they are not to be definitely placed until the finale. While, of course, this is something of a drawback to the picture, Mr. Merwin's plot, his expose of certain sorts of people that scatter false ideals over that portion of New York City known as Greenwich Village, is full of nice atmosphere and contains moments of drama and comedy that help the interest to accumulate.

Indeed, for at least two-thirds of its length "The Trufflers" moves with an interest that is delightfully accumulative. Instead of calling the turn on Mr. Merwin's story, the author reverses the usual order and calls the turn on his characters, giving him no small amount of surprises. But even though one may take whole-hearted delight in the comedy furnished by Richard Travers and the same manner in which Mr. Merwin has subtly treated a group of people with unsound ideals; even though one can at times become thoroughly absorbed in the situations of the story, there is a lack of precision and definiteness in its development. Once in a while you are inclined to feel mad at Mr. Merwin for being so obscure and for not taking you more wholly to the story. Nell Craig as Sue and Ernest Maupain as Zanin contribute nice characterizations. Sydney Ainsworth gives rather an invariable breath to the major role. Mr. Wright's scenario and direction are very creditable.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Sue Wilde (Nell Craig) has left her father (John Cossar) because she is unable to stand the sanctimonious atmosphere of his home. When Mann (Sydney Ainsworth), a playwright, meets her she is acting in the theatre of Jacob Zanin (Ernest Maupain), supposedly an ideal character, but a very sly and unscrupulous person. Mann falls in love with her, and so does Bates (Richard Travers), a critic. When Mann discovers that Sue does not love him, he betrays to newspaper men the secret that her father is an embezzler. The old man then kills himself. It is this shock which brings Sue to a realization that the doctrines on the uselessness of marriage and love preached to her by Zanin are false, and she gives up her career to marry Bates. Mann, one is left to believe, goes on being false.

Patrick Callan, Harry Dunkinson and John Cossar appear to good advantage in supporting parts.

"The Blue Streak"

(Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWS BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

William Nigh and Violet Palmer will soon be able to join the big stars and have a company of their own, if they can keep up the pace set in this picture. We cannot imagine anybody not liking this picture, and we believe many will vote it one of the very few near-perfect pictures of the present season.

We say near-perfect because it has an entirely different story from the commonplace; a sense of humor, carried through both the picture itself and the memorable titles, which is inimitable, and a variety of action which makes the Western locale only one of the reasons why it is sure to appeal to the big majority.

General Film Program

"The Deadly Doughnut." Comedy. (Kalem. One reel.)—The outstanding feature of this little item is the importance of the inventor of a machine for making boiled doughnuts. The two longrunning sentences characterize the piece. Wet dough in large lumps of a stranger comes to the rural hamlet of Pleasant Valley, and awes the natives by showing a detective who is supposed to have been employed by Lucretia Borgia in poisoning her various husbands and sisters. In the picture which George Larkin, as Grant, police reporter, sets out to solve and overcome in this episode, a wealthy banker is killed, though the instrumentality of the criminal, by means of Lucretia Borgia's vase, Grant finds that the vase contains three poisoned needles. The exhibition of this film and the exposure of the criminals, is so sudden that the spectator hardly knows what has happened.

"The Mystery of the Burning Freight" episode of "The Daughter of Daring" series. (Kalém. One reel.)—The story of the series is the same, so that the spectators are not greatly interested in this particular installment of the mystery. Gibson tops off the thrill by riding on horseback, climbing aboard the freight and pulling the throttle.

"The Secret of the Borgias" episode of "Grant, Police Reporter." (Kalém. One reel.)—A mysterious vase, supposed to have been stolen, is recovered in the hands of Uncle Sam in case of war, the awakening of Russia to the plans of the Borgias, and other interesting features are depicted in this, perhaps the most up-to-date and entertaining film of the series.

"The Deadly Doughnut." Comedy. (Kalem. One reel.)—Making a name for himself with a new invention, a doughnut maker, is the main feature of this item. The invention is a success, and the doughnut becomes a valuable item in the diet of the American people.

"A Studio Stampede," (Vogue. Sat., March 24. Two reels.)—One of the usual Ben Turpin far-fetched slap-stick comedies, which includes a bit from every phase of such stuff—a little humor and much action, Turpin essaying the role of a detective and Whipple capturing him and winning a thousand dollar reward and the village belief.

"A Stranger Comes to Pleasant Valley." (Gaumont. Tues., March 20. Two reels.)—In this episode, a stranger comes to the village and awes the natives by showing a detective who is supposed to have been employed by Lucretia Borgia in poisoning her various husbands and sisters. In the picture, which George Larkin, as Grant, police reporter, sets out to solve and overcome in this episode, a wealthy banker is killed, though the instrumentality of the criminal, by means of Lucretia Borgia's vase, Grant finds that the vase contains three poisoned needles. The exhibition of this film and the exposure of the criminals, is so sudden that the spectator hardly knows what has happened.

"The Mystery of the Burning Freight." (Kalém. One reel.)—The story of the series is the same, so that the spectators are not greatly interested in this particular installment of the mystery. Gibson tops off the thrill by riding on horseback, climbing aboard the freight and pulling the throttle.

Universal Program

"Shot in the West." (Metro. Mon., March 26.)—An amusing burlesque on the western melodrama in which the boys of the ranch arrange a trick to fool the young woman who is staying with them. But in the end they are the more fooled than the girl, for she is a rich heiress and surprises them to their great amazement. The plot concerns an author who believes a platonist friendship existing between two men is greater than the love of husbands and wives. The plot concerns an author who believes a platonist friendship existing between two men is greater than the love of husbands and wives.

"The Starting Climax." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., March 27.)—A drama of marriage and moral standards that interests because of its intimate manner of taking the spectator into its confidence. The plot concerns an author who believes a platonist friendship existing between two men is greater than the love of husbands and wives. The plot concerns an author who believes a platonist friendship existing between two men is greater than the love of husbands and wives.

"The Secret of the Borgias." (Kalém. One reel.)—A mysterious vase, supposed to have been stolen, is recovered in the hands of Uncle Sam in case of war, the awakening of Russia to the plans of the Borgias, and other interesting features are depicted in this, perhaps the most up-to-date and entertaining film of the series.

Pathé

"Arizona." (Combina.)—Vast rock formations, several expansive glimpses of the Grand Canyon of Arizona... The photography is not good. In the cast are Casson Ferguson, Byrdine Zuber, Frank Owen and Fred Eckhart.

"The Deadly Doughnut." (Kalém. One reel.)—Making a name for himself with a new invention, a doughnut maker, is the main feature of this item. The invention is a success, and the doughnut becomes a valuable item in the diet of the American people.

Motiograph Superiority

EASILY PRONOUNCED BY THE MANY USERS

Read what some have to say—

Watertown, Wis., E. W. Cassell, says:—

You could give us nothing but Motiographs, as they are what we call the best on the market.

San Francisco, Cal., E. H. Roth, says:—

Much credit is due the Motiograph, as the projection is perfect and the picture is absolutely flickerless at any speed, as well as delightfully steady.

Greer, S. C., C. W. Grace, says:—

I am entirely satisfied with the Motiograph’s work.

Charlotte, N. C., H. L. Morrow, says:—

I do not believe that Motiograph Service, Reliability and Perfection in Projection can be equaled by any machine (regardless of price.)

Canton, Ohio, H. S. Klink, says:—

I am using two Motiographs and have a world of praise for them. They do just what the makers say they will do—produce a rock-steady and flickerless picture.

Chicago, Ill., The Famous Theatre, says:—

Fifteen months of use and just as good as new. The projection cannot be excelled.

Chicago, Ill., Rothacker Film Mfg. Co., says:—

We are using MOTIOPHRAHS exclusively in all of our screen inspection work, and we have had innumerable compliments from our customers upon the clear, steady pictures we present.

Cleveland, Ohio, Bronx Amusement Co., says:—

Although our theatre opens at eight o’clock in the morning and runs continuously till eleven at night, being reputed to be the hardest grind in the city, yet we have not had a particle of trouble of any nature with your machines, and they have never failed to produce perfect results in a most satisfactory manner.

Lincoln, Nebr., Hill-San Amusement Co., says:—

We have the reputation of having the best projection in Lincoln and believe that the credit for it belongs to the Motiograph machines that we have in our operating room.

St. Joseph, Mo., W. W. Werthenberger, says:—

The material used in the Motiographs is certainly of the highest quality to stand the grind we give them.

St. Louis, Mo., E. L. Brown, says:—

The Motiograph we purchased over a year ago is giving very good service—in fact, I might say perfect results.

IF YOU WANT MORE PROOF OF THE MOTIOGRAPH’S PERFORMING ABILITY—

We have it in thousands of other testimonials.

IT’S THE BIGGEST BUY TODAY, REGARDLESS OF PRICE.

Gentlemen,

Replying to your letter of the 14th of Feb. will say that I have just installed two of your latest type Powers 6B. Installed them, because after twenty years of experience with different types of machines I have concluded that the Powers with its improved intermittant, loop setter, ball bearings and general construction is the best the market has to offer.

Kindly send me a coarse-screen cut of the 6B as I would like to advertise same in our local paper and let our patrons know that we have provided them with the best.

Yours truly,

Society of Motion Picture Engineers

SUBSCRIBERS and readers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS have from time to time had their attention called to the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, with the result that some have gained a complete understanding of the aims and intentions of the organization whereas others still seem to be in the dark.

The society was first formed by a group of men who were anxious to see the mechanisms employed in the various branches of the industry produce standard goods. For example:

First—It makes no difference whether all the various perforating machines on the market work according to the same mechanical principles or not. The only thing of importance is to see that all the film which is perforated is exactly the same according to a definite standard.

Second—Is in the case of electric current. Under certain specified conditions it is known that a certain current, depending upon whether it is A. C. or D. C., gives maximum efficiency. Therefore, given these conditions, the society is interested in seeing that all the various electrical current devices will, under these conditions, produce this maximum efficiency.

Third—In the construction of theatres we know that projection is the most important feature and that every house must be built about it. We know that the angle of incidence of the light ray is equal to the angle of reflection. We also know that certain projection surfaces have greater reflective qualities than others and that therefore the intensity of reflection is greater or less on one surface as compared with another.

This means that with one surface the maximum angle of reflection to the side can be greater than with another, and still obtain a uniformly good picture all over the screen surface. It is the object of the society to take these facts and work out from them the standard screen to be used under varying circumstances in houses already built. Also to work out as near as possible the ideal conditions under which pictures should be shown, with respect to the screen, so that they may be used as a guide to those who are planning to build theatres.

THESE three illustrations will show the scope of work which lies before the society, and in a general way give its aims. The problems, however, are innumerable, for the lack of standardization in the motion picture field is astounding. It is only through the bringing together of the technical minds of the various branches of the industry and the discussion and working out of the proper standards by them that the desired results can be accomplished.

The society already has among its members some of the best technical minds in the business, though there are others who are not yet members who should be enrolled. The ultimate accomplishment of the desired results can only be obtained through a large and comprehensive membership. It is, therefore, the hope of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that every technical man—architect, electrical engineer, mechanical engineer, screen expert, chair designer, ventilating expert, laboratory chemist—and all others actually connected with the designing, manufacturing and preparing of equipment for the industry or connected with the production of the picture itself, shall become actively affiliated with the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.

The society now has enrolled upwards of thirty active members, who are all working toward the enlargement of the organization and the accomplishment of its aims. Meetings have already been held in Washington and New York—which have had their beneficial results. On April 6 and 7 the Spring meeting of the society is to be held in Atlantic City. From indications this will be the largest, both numerically and in actual work done, which has yet been held.

THE officers of the society want representatives of every company on hand so that they may have a voice in the proceedings. It is not too late. Communications for hotel reservations may be sent at once to Harvey M. Wible, care of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, East Pittsburgh, Pa., who will also give full information as to membership. Action, however, must be taken immediately.

E. K. GILLETT.
Society of Motion Picture Engineers

A GOODLY number of operators have written me asking for information as to initiation fees, dues, etc., of the above named society, and I am taking this means to inform them that this Society of Motion Picture Engineers is an organization whose objects are: Advancement in the theory and practice of motion picture engineering and the allied arts and sciences, the standardization of the mechanisms and practices employed therein, and the maintenance of a high professional standing among its members. The membership consists of Pioneer, Honorary, Active and Associate Members. A Pioneer Member is defined as one who was in the art as a principal fifteen years or more antedating the time of the organization of the Society; an Honorary Member is one who has been actively engaged in designing, developing or manufacturing materials, mechanisms or processes used in this or allied arts for more than ten years; an Active Member is one who is actually engaged in designing, developing or manufacturing materials, mechanisms, etc., and an Associate Member is one who, though not eligible to membership in the active class, is interested directly in the art. The entrance fee is twenty-five dollars ($25.00). The annual dues as follows: Pioneer Members, $250.00; Honorary Members, $100.00; Active Members, $10.00; Associate Members, $5.00, payable in advance.

Publications are issued at intervals on matters of general interest deemed worthy of permanent record and are supplied to each member in good standing without cost. Extra copies are printed for general distribution and may be obtained for twenty-five cents from the secretary of the Society, E. K. Gillett, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, or C. Francis Jenkins, president, 712 Eleventh street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Film Indicator

THE accompanying illustration shows a little device which was designed by brother H. S. Klink, Canton, Ohio, for the purpose of giving warning when the film in the upper magazine was nearly run out. It is so adjusted that a buzzer gives warning when there is but one foot of film left in the magazine. This allows the operator plenty of time to light his other lamp and have everything in readiness when the fade in point is reached. The brother has had this device in operation for almost two years and has never found it necessary to open the door of the upper magazine while the machine was running.

Explanation of sketch is as follows: A—Half-inch brass tube; B—Plunger; C—Contact guide pin; D—Insulated contact; E—Fiber roller; F—Safety for contact guide pin C; G—Magazine; H—Reel.

The A has a slot cut from notch F to contact screw D, which forms a guide for pin C. When magazine is empty you raise the plunger to the top and fasten pin C in slot F, which holds it from falling down. Then when you put an end in you release the plunger which allows the roller to run on the film, and as the reel empties the plunger continues to move downward until pin C makes contact with screw D, thereby closing the circuit and ringing a buzzer which is connected to it, one wire being connected to screw D, which is insulated from the tube, and the other wire can be grounded to any part of the machine.

The device looks quite simple, after someone else has done it, and where operators are desirous of some such warning it is one of the most practical we have yet seen. I believe it would also be possible to set the contacts so as to give warning at any specified point, and it should be of great value to operators who are willing to take the time to construct it.

What Dampness Does to Carbons

THE following letter from the engineering department of the Speer Carbon Company will, I am sure, contain much that will be interesting to those operators who have experienced trouble with damp carbons, and for that reason I am submitting it in full for your approval:

"We feel sure you will be interested in some tests we have been making to determine the effects of moisture in projector carbons. For a long time researches have been conducted in our laboratory and plant to determine the very best mixture for coring material, and now that we have perfected the coring material our attention is being directed toward tests which will establish the facts concerning the operation of this material. These tests were made on the principle imported brands of carbons as well as our own, and the results were the same for all the brands tested.

Three tests were made.

First. The carbons were dampened as if they had been stored in a damp place.

Second. The carbons were placed in our test room which is relatively dry.

Third. The carbons were dried in the top of the lamp house while the lamp was burning.

The damp carbons were burned and the cores were all blown out for a considerable depth, but continuous burning finally dried the cores out sufficiently to prevent further disintegration. In the second test this effect was controlled very much quicker; that is, the cores were not blown out after twenty minutes' burning. The carbons which had been artificially dried kept their cores from the beginning of the test and they were not blown out during the entire run.

These tests prove that all projector carbons are subject to the same danger in connection with the moisture which may be absorbed from the atmosphere, and that drying is very necessary in order to drive out the water which would otherwise quickly turn to steam when the carbon is burned, and force the core out of the center. Operators who have repeatedly written us to that effect obtain better results from drying the carbons above the lamp house before burning them, and the above tests add proof to their statements."

Answer: In commenting upon the above, I can say from my own experience as an operator, the drying of carbons in this manner has been done from time immemorial, many operating rooms are subject to a great amount of dampness, and the blowing out of cores was something that had operators in the air for a long time, and does yet for that matter. It is to be hoped, though that operators will soon be brought to the realization of using PROPER SIZED CARBONS FOR THE AMOUNT OF CURRENT USED. The following recommendation is especially apt for operators who have experienced this trouble: "To prevent blowing out of cores when carbons are put in service it is very necessary that these carbons be THOROUGHLY DRIED, either by keeping them in a warm, dry place or by drying them with artificial heat for an hour or two before using in the lamp.

Operating Room Vibrations

G. P. K., Lexington, Neb., asks: "Will you kindly advise me as to some way in which I can stop the vibration in my operating room? The booth is an overhanging one, with a wooden floor."

Answer: This is more of a question for a carpenter to answer. Not knowing the location of the operating room or how supported, it would be impossible for me to give any intelligent answer. If you will send me a drawing of the operating room and its location I will try and help you.
Troubles of a Small Town Operator

He's in again! The following letter from our old friend is too good to keep to myself, so here goes:

NOVOTNEVILLE, Ia., March 12, 1917.

Mr. I. G. Sherman, Dear Sir: Here I am back again. In your last answer you said you thought I was kidding you do you think I am a humbug. Come and see yourself. I have a little news for you, the electric company of Waterloo are going to run a electric wire to this town, and the boss said he would get a new machine if they do. And you said that I must have done no smoking while I cleaned my machine, I had a reason (reason). My ma was standing by the back door watching me (I don't know whether you mean washing or watching, which?—Ed.) We received a letter from the film exchange that cement was 25c. so we sent the electric company a letter asking them to get the News for a $1.00 a member, but where there is only one member it costs $1.50 a member. The special rate for clubs of six or more may receive the News for the sum of one dollar per member, those who subscribe singly can do so for the sum of one dollar and fifty cents. The trouble you speak of is no doubt caused by undercut teeth on the sprockets, the dirt may have become packed in so hard that the teeth could not engage the sprocket holes of the film properly, and yet this would allow the film to be run although it might cause a jump picture. The only remedy I can suggest is that you get a new intermittent or middle sprocket and put it on your machine. I can imagine that you must have had a "dues" of a time. The drawing is reproduced, but I think you have become a bit mixed up. What is to keep the cover on? The weight will keep it suspended all the time. And if the lard pail is the ordinary wooden kind, you can be sure it is "fire-proof"—NOT. The joke (7) proves again that we in the city have "no sense of humor" for we would not appreciate it. I only hope that you had to feed those Indians until the next week's showing. The picture you mention, I am sorry to say I have never heard of, so I cannot advise you whether it is any good or not. If you get it and keep it in the film can you have made, and anything happens it will surely be a "Fight for our Friends," they will be well fried.

Why Wheels Turn Backward

M J., Wilkes-Barre, Pa., asks: "Can you tell me why the wheels of wagons, automobiles, etc., seem to turn in the wrong direction. Is it caused by the speed of the projection machine, and how can it be remedied?"

Answer: I had thought that all were familiar with the phenomena of the reverse action of moving wheels, but will answer your question as to why the wheels of motor cars, locomotives, bicycles and wagons when seen on the screen often appear to be turning in the wrong direction. Thousands of persons have been mystified by this seeming anomaly, yet the reason is very simple. The camera with which the pictures are taken has a black disc with circular holes around its circumference. This turns rapidly behind the lens, each hole resting for a fraction of a second, in which time a picture is taken on the film. Thus a series of pictures is taken, which, when passed rapidly in front of a light, produces the effect of a moving picture, though this is really nothing but a series of instantaneous snapshots showing successive positions assumed by the moving object. But these successive positions may easily produce an entirely false effect. The Popular Science Monthly illustrates this by a diagram of a four-spoked wheel rotating at such speed that after one picture of the film is exposed the spoke A has turned around just enough to show A at the position of B when the next picture is exposed. It is evident that in this case, if the spoke and the camera keep turning at constant speeds, when the spoke is projected on the screen it will seem to be standing perfectly still. Again, the wheels on fast moving cars often appear as if they were moving backward while the car is going forward. This would happen if the spoke A had been revolving so fast when it was photographed that during the interval between one exposure and the next the wheel revolved all the way around from A to B; when the next exposure was made the spoke appeared at C, and so on.

When this film is run off and projected on the screen the spoke will seem to run backward. No matter how many spokes there are on the wheel it is found that the effect is the same and the entire wheel will appear to turn backward at the same speed as that of each spoke. The so-called mystery is nothing more than an optical illusion.

SLIDES

We received another letter this week dealing with the slide situation, part of which is well worth quoting.

"Since producers have benefited through excellent co-operation of exhibitors, it is to be hoped that they will listen to the urgent demand now being made for better publicity matter, which includes better slides. The exhibitor pays for the slides, and he should receive full value for his money. Feature producers and film exchanges make a large net profit on every slide they sell to the exhibitor, and as the exhibitor pays a good price, he naturally is entitled to a good quality slide. If the feature producers, distributors and film exchange men would stop to realize that the publicity matter which they furnish an exhibitor is part of their service, and that their profit is made in renting the film and not in selling the supplies and accessory advertising matter, they would quickly correct an existing evil in the motion picture industry, which is very much in need of correction. If the film exchanges have the interest of the exhibitor at heart and value his patronage, they should show the proper interest in the exhibitor's business; first, by demanding the highest quality publicity matter that money and brains can produce; and, second, by supplying this publicity matter to the exhibitor at actual cost price. When this policy goes into effect, the entire industry will benefit, and the exhibitor will realize for the first time in the history of our business the real meaning of the word 'service.'"

There is no doubt but what the distributors are making a profit on handling slides. It is only right that they should. If this is beyond the point where it is reasonable for the work performed, then our correspondent is correct when he says it can no longer be classed as a service. The only other way that slides could be handled would be in conjunction with newspaper advertising done by the exhibitor when the slides would be tied up closely with it and supplied to the exhibitor with the understanding that charge would be made only when breakage or other damage is done. This may sometime be adopted. If it is, the cost of the slide will be charged off by the producer as co-operative advertising expense against the cost to the exhibitor for newspaper advertising space.

The American exhibitor is patriotic without doubt. Reports in every section of the country show that patriotic slides are being used in every performance, and the Novelty Slide Company of New York report a very large demand for their various patriotic slides, and for their American Flag Trailers. The latter shows the American flag floating in the breeze; the film is 15 feet in length, and it sells at 20 cents per foot. Additional lengths may be had if desired.

A special patriotic number of Novelty Notes is on the press. This publication contains valuable ideas for the motion picture exhibitor, and this number in particular describes unique and original patriotic performances. Copy will be mailed gratis on request to the publishers, the Novelty Slide Company of New York."

Does Not Want His Answer in the "News"

A CERTAIN operator in one of the larger cities of upper New York State writes for information and requests that his answer be not published in the department. It being impossible for me to answer by personal letters the many inquiries received, it is necessary to use the department, but where brothers do not care to have their names or cities mentioned I will respect their wishes. I can understand the feeling that prompts some of them to make this request and will try and respect them. Here is the letter, omitting the brother's name and city:

"Here I am again. I wrote you some two weeks ago, and sent stamps in my letter for a reply, but I am sorry to say I have not received it. I guess maybe my letter found its way to the waste paper basket, but I am hoping this one won't. In my other letter I asked for samples of the 'Hold-Ark' carbons, as I would like to try them. I have a 'Revolux', 35 amperes, 55 volts. I saw the article in last week's News on this make machine, and I would like to have you send me the addresses of places where I can get information on the handling of these devices and operating as a whole. I just received this week's issue of the News and read again about the 'small town operator.' My heart goes out to him and I wish him all the success in the world, for I am another who started in the same way as he, but I don't know it all yet. I am a member of Local—of this city and there are a fine lot of boys in our local. Hoping to hear from you soon I am yours truly."

Answer: I trust you will pardon my delay in answering your former letter which I now have before me, but owing to the preparations necessary for me to attend the I. A. Convention, it was impossible to clean up my desk before leaving. No letter reaches the waste-paper basket in my office until it has been answered, and while it may take longer to answer than the correspondents expect, they are nevertheless answered. Now, in your former letter you ask for some method to make the lamp leads more flexible. I would not advise you to make any cut in the back of the lamp house. You are probably not using a wire of greater diameter than a No. 6, and if you take this and bend it so as to make it more flexible, and after attaching the ends to the lamp, will draw in say two or three inches of the wire having the lamp extended to its greatest distance—that is the carbon jaws as far apart as they will go—and then use the clamp which the Powers company furnish to hold these wires in position, I do not believe you will have any further trouble. Your request has gone forth to the Speer people and you will probably hear from them in a few days. The other matter I will take up, and let you know the result. The "small town operator" needs all the sympathy he can get, and you are to be congratulated upon your success, if you were handicapped as he has been. Will be glad to hear from you again at any and all times.

Insufficient Data

M. H., McGregor, Iowa, writes: "This is the first time I have ever written to the News in regard to questions. If possible answer the following: We use a Power's 64 machine and Powers's Inductor; our carbons after about five minutes use burn off on the sides leaving tips on the carbons which shut off the light. We are using Speer carbons. I think this may be caused by the transformer. Thanking you in advance for any help you may be able to give I am very truly yours."

Answer: I must call your attention to the necessity of giving all possible information when asking questions through the department. You do not say what current you are using, nor the size of carbons; these two things have an important bearing on the matter. The cause, as far as I can see, must be that you are not using the proper diameter carbons for the amount of current you use. It may be that the setting of the carbons is imperfect. See that the carbons are in alignment, and that the lamp is properly adjusted. Sometimes the lamp works loose and allows the carbons to burn off as you say, after some minutes' use. With the Power's lamp this should easily be overcome for the adjustments of same are such as to allow the carbons to be kept in perfect alignment at all times.

After following these suggestions, if you do not get better results and will send me further data I will be glad to help you further.

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

The following officers were elected at a meeting held recently by Local 61, I. A. T. S. E., to serve during the coming year: President, Fred Klink; vice-president, Fred Custer; secretary, Robert Leister; treasurer, H. S. Klink; business agent, Edwin Bucher; recording secretary, Hal Hughes; sergeant-at-arms, Adam Harlacher. Local 61 meets the third Sunday of each month at Army and Navy Union Hall, Market Avenue N., Canton, Ohio.

A point of information: Is that the hall where "Marty" Higgins keeps his reserves? The department extends best wishes to the local and its newly-elected officers and hopes that the coming year will do much toward bettering the condition of all its members. Can we say more?

S. S. Hutchinson Makes Small Projector

The American Projectoscope is a new type of portable projection machine, the manufacture of which has just begun. The American Film Company, 6225 Broadway, Chicago, III., is the firm behind the new projector. Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, heads the new enterprise and expects shortly to incorporate a special company to handle the manufacture and sale.

The American projectoscope contains a number of unusual features. It is light—weighing twenty-one pounds; compact—folding up to a size no larger than a small suitcase; uses any ordinary electric light socket as its means of securing current—the light being generated in a specially made nitrogen bulb. The mechanism can be started or stopped at any point and held stationary on the screen. There are other features that will also appeal to the buyer seeking a portable projection machine for the display of industrial or commercial films.

Mr. Hutchinson, discussing the American projectoscope, said: "Here is a machine that we can offer without an apology. We have overcome handicaps that gave trouble in previous attempts to construct such a piece of apparatus, we have also embodied stop of any kind other than to change reels in the reel boxes, without damaging the film and without having any illumination trouble. We have found the small projector ideal for inspection purposes at our plant. The stop and start feature alone made it invaluable for this purpose.

The American projectoscope contains a number of unusual features: never before attempted. In generating the light we use three condensing lenses which results in a picture equally good whether projected on a screen eight feet across or a bit of card only eight inches in width. The machine is designed to be so simple that a child can operate it. Standard size film is used, which is so important for the progress of the industry.

Mr. Hutchinson also said: "In actual test, 159,000 feet of film has been run through the American projectoscope without a
Addition to the Cinematographic Bibliography

In the Camera Department of December 23, 1916, pages 4062-4063, we reviewed a considerable number of books on cinematography and laboratory work. The "Cinematographic Bibliography" there published is the only accurate and detailed reference catalog for cameramen which has been compiled to date. In preparing that list, however, a few important works on the subject escaped mention, and for the sake of completeness reviews of the volumes in question are now given.

In this booklet the late Herr Wolf-Czapek, always a keen student of the cinematographic art, explains the phenomena of persistence of vision and lays down the rudiments of cinematographic practice for the benefit of amateurs. As an elementary treatise the book is sound and would prove interesting to cameramen in general because a professional Ernemann camera, described therein, is quite different from any cameras by that maker which have ever appeared in this country. Printed in German.

This book is not a cinematographic work at all, but, nevertheless, it forms an important and indispensable addition to the literature of motion photography. While the bulk of this work is devoted to elucidating the mysteries of stage-craft and the illusions of the showman, there are a number of chapters at the close of the book which deal with the making and exhibiting of motion pictures as practiced in the early days of the art.

A chapter on Chronophotography details and illustrates the experiments of the French pioneer, Marey, while the following chapter illustrates such historically interesting devices as Demeny's "Chronophotographie" (the first Gaumont apparatus), Jenkins' "Phantoscope," Edison's "Vitascope," Lumiere's "Cinematographe" and Casler's "Mutoscope" and "Biograph." All of the early devices are illustrated from woodcuts which appeared in the Scientific American, years back, and this is the only work at present obtainable in which these old time cameras and projectors are figured. As a matter of fact we know of no other picture of the Edison "Vitascope" than the reproduction shown in this work.

Quite aside from the chapters on cinematography, Hopkins' book might contain some hints of value to the producer who likes to stage illusions and other mystifying effects. A variety of such are explained, but the chapters previously analyzed form a document which should be recognized by students of cinematographic history.

When we presented our original "Cinematographic Bibliography" (loc. cit.), a separate review was accorded the English classic—Hopwood's "Living Pictures." Dr. Forch, an employee of the German Patent Office, may well be termed the "Hopwood of Germany," and his book, "Der Kinematograph," ranks as one of the first authorities on motion picture mechanisms. A variety of cameras and projectors are illustrated, ranging from the days of the Lumiere "Cinematographe" to the latest in "natural color" systems. Intermittents of many types are discussed and the geometry of Geneva movements is gone into.

Although Forch's work is published in German, it is of great value, since copious references to French, English, and United States patents are cited, and the book will prove helpful to inventors and students of cinematograph mechanisms.

This volume, by one of the earliest makers of motion pictures on flexible celluloid strips, is perhaps the earliest extended treatise on cinematography. Camera work, perforating printing and developing are dealt with, and illustrations of all the author's early devices and mechanisms are presented. Particular mention must be given the bibliography of articles and the list of patents on animated photography prior to the year 1896.

Although some of Mr. Jenkins' historical statements do not exhibit a strictly unbiased version of things, his book well proves his status as one of the pioneers in motion picture work. "Animated Pictures" is one of the documents of cinematicographic history, and withal, an extremely interesting one.

Following usual custom, all important contributions to cinematographic literature will be reviewed in the Camera Department as quickly as practicable after publication. The reviews given here conclude the "Cinematographic Bibliography," but another and vastly important list of reference works for cameramen is now in process of tabulation.

The new list will treat in comprehensive manner the scientific aspects of photography and should enjoy equal popularity with the reviews previously published. The average cinematographer works in total ignorance of the laws of photochemical action and the physics of the photographic process, but knowledge must be acquired along these lines if advances in cinematographic technique are to be made. The basic literature of the science of photography will therefore be catalogued in the Camera Department, where scientific procedure has always been advocated.

Among the many so-called "secret processes" of cinematography is that by which the images of film positives are toned to various colors, or combinations of colors, while the films are being developed, the deposition of color being produced by the same bath which renders the printed images visible at the time the film strips are processed.

A considerable amount of work has been done of late upon double toning, and some abortive efforts have been made to produce color effects by immersing film positives in a sepia toning bath for a brief period and then in a blue toning bath and numerous other methods of like nature have also been tried in the endeavor to produce something new in film coloring. The results have invariably been bad, but the most encouraging examples of such practice are those in which the colors have been produced at the time of development by the addition of suitable dye compounds to the developing solution, which latter is generally prepared with developing compounds which are little known in every-day laboratory work.

In all instances the self-styled inventors of these coloring processes have kept their methods profoundly secret, not neglecting, however, to make large claims for their so-called natural color processes. It is hardly necessary to state here that no toning or dyeing process can be a natural color process, although in the case of some of the subtractive methods of color cinematography the film positives are subsequently toned or dyed, but the negative records have been photographed through color filters which have selectively recorded the fundamental sensation colors.

Any method by which new effects in toning can be produced is of interest, however, so in the following paragraphs we give an abstract of English patent No. 2562 (1913), in which a process of double toning and toning simultaneously is outlined. The data is essentially technical in nature, but will give the chemically inclined readers a chance to do some experimenting. The abstract follows:

The process consists in developing the latent (printed) images of halogen-silver films with such developers as contain, besides... the developing substance, a body which couples itself with the oxidation product of the developer to form a colored body soluble with difficulty.

The development of halogen-silver photographic films leads, in general, to black picture images substantially composed of silver. Individual cases are well known, however, in which colored images can be obtained directly when developing. Thus, development with Pyro yields a yellowish-brown image, with Indigo a blue image is obtained, and with Thioldioxidyl a red image.

The other customary photographic developers also yield, under suitable conditions (absence of sodium sulphite), more or less colored results. The colors thus obtained are, however, either not very pronounced or, as in the case of developers of the indigo group, not readily obtainable.

It has been found that very highly colored images can be readily obtained, not by using the oxidation products of the developers alone, but by adding to the developing baths substances which become coupled with those oxidation products of the developer which are formed whilst developing, and form colored deposits soluble with difficulty. Depending upon the developing reagents or coupling bodies which are employed, representatives of various classes of coloring dyes or dyes are formed, of which the following are examples:

- para-amidophenols + phenols: Idophenols
- para-phenylenediamines + phenols: Indoxamines and oxazines
- para-phenylenediamines + amines: Indamines
- para-phenylenediamines + thiophenols: Indothiophenols
- para-amidophenols + combinations containing: Azomethine
- para-phenylenediamines

The bodies soluble with most difficulty are obtained with para-phenylenediamine as the developer and phenols or compounds with acid methylene groups as coupling bodies. The para-phenylenediamines comprise the side-chain homologues and nucleus homologues, also the substitution products of para-phenylenediamine in one amido group, the other being free.

Examples:

- para-phenylenediamine, para-toluylene diamine, amido, chloro, monoethoxy and dimethyl para-phenylenediamine. Further, one amido group may be included in a ring system para-phenylenediamine-piperidine. By phenols the side-chain and nucleus homologues and the substitution products are likewise to be understood.

For Example:

Phenols, cresols, alpha-naphthol, ortho-amidophenol, trichlor-naphthol, resorcin-methyl-ether, alpha-naphthol-sulphonic acid. The acid methylene compounds may be either aliphatic or aromatic in nature.

Example:

Ethyl-aceeto-acetate, malonate nitrile, chlor acetophenone, diketo-hydrienedene, nitrobenzyl-cyanide, thioindoxyl. Furthermore, the methylene group may be substituted when the substituting group is split off during the reaction.

Examples:

Chlor-ethyl-aceeto-acetate, thioindoxyl-carboxylic acid. The coloring matter or dye produced in these methods of development can be reduced to leuco compounds which likewise possess developing properties and also yield colored images directly during the developing process when the oxidation products are soluble with difficulty. In this case also is it found that the above-mentioned classes of coloring materials yield the best results. The developing properties of some of these classes are already known; for example, the developer pyramidal N.B. doxydiphenoxyamine is a leuco-indophenol. In this instance, however, only black and white images are produced, and colored oxidation products soluble with difficulty are not obtained, nor do colored images result.

This is preferable to omit the admixture of sodium sulphite or similar bodies when preparing the bath. The employment of water likewise is not advisable, because they change easily into the separate form of employment first described has the advantage that the components can be preserved separately and need only be mixed immediately before development or added when required.

The color developers can also be employed in such form that they may be incorporated into the film or applied in a separate layer to the light-sensitive film stock. Either the leuco compounds, the separate components, or only one of the two may be so incorporated or used. The dye images can be isolated by removing silver through the use of one of the well-known reducers.
There are two ways of identifying Eastman film—one by the clearness of the pictures, the other by the stencil mark

Rothacker Issues Booklet on Moving Pictures

The old adage about practising what one preaches has no abler exponent in modern times than Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company of Chicago. While Mr. Rothacker has been preaching quality in film advertising and film production for the past seven years, he has also seen to it that his own advertising matter was distinctive and well calculated to create respect for his company.

This point is well exemplified by the issuance of an attractive booklet entitled "Moving Pictures," which was written by Mr. Rothacker, and which describes in detail the personnel, the policy and the plant of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company. Through the medium of this brochure we become acquainted with the officials of the company, and are then shown the workings of the model studio and laboratories which the Rothacker firm operate at 1339-1351 Diversey Parkway, Chicago. This is accomplished through the medium of illustrations, which tell their own story, as good pictures should, and when the end of the booklet is reached, one has a clear idea of the appearance of a film studio and the workings of a laboratory.

To those who have not visited the Rothacker film plant, this illustrated description will be an eye-opener, and must surely convince those interested in film production that the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company is equipped for service and efficiency.

The old adage about practising what one preaches has no abler exponent in modern times than Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company of Chicago. While Mr. Rothacker has been preaching quality in film advertising and film production for the past seven years, he has also seen to it that his own advertising matter was distinctive and well calculated to create respect for his company.

This point is well exemplified by the issuance of an attractive booklet entitled "Moving Pictures," which was written by Mr. Rothacker, and which describes in detail the personnel, the policy and the plant of the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company. Through the medium of this brochure we become acquainted with the officials of the company, and are then shown the workings of the model studio and laboratories which the Rothacker firm operate at 1339-1351 Diversey Parkway, Chicago. This is accomplished through the medium of illustrations, which tell their own story, as good pictures should, and when the end of the booklet is reached, one has a clear idea of the appearance of a film studio and the workings of a laboratory.

To those who have not visited the Rothacker film plant, this illustrated description will be an eye-opener, and must surely convince those interested in film production that the Rothacker Film Mfg. Company is equipped for service and efficiency.
Japanese and Chinese Music

How many compositions have you purchased, which were described as Japanese and Chinese, and which turned out to be Japanese and Chinese in name, but almost anything in character, rhythm, and melody?

Here are some real Japanese and Chinese numbers of wonderful tonal beauty, containing many genuine surprises and musical effects, not to be found in other numbers. These compositions are genuine to the last, and are exceedingly well suited for Japanese and Chinese pictures.

No. 1—"Chinese Wedding Procession," by Lucius Homer.
The most exquisite musical thought conceived in years. Its wonderful tonal beauty makes it adaptable for any Chinese picture, of slow or mysterious action.

No. 2—"Chinese Recollections," by Chas. Zimmerman.
An exceptionally fine "Maestroso" in 2/4 in which originality and clever invention are coupled with attractive melodies and orchestral effects, usable for any Chinese scene of processional character.

No. 3—"Hop-Sing" Chinese Fantasia, by E. Katzenstein.
A really faultless Chinese 2/4 Moderato; a musical illustration of Chinese society.

No. 4—"Chinese Serenade," by Chas. Puerner.
A splendid specimen of a Chinese 2/4 allegretto, very melodious, and fine for Chinese scenes of quicker action.

No. 5—"Ching Chang" Galop.
For tumults, confusion, and riots, etc., if played to action.

A wonderful Fantasia in "Tempo di Marcia," on the famous world-known Japanese national air, "Fou So Ka."

No. 7—"Kingdom of Flowers," by J. Ringeben.
A slow, creamy and wonderfully melodious Valse Lente, to be used for Japanese garden, flower and love scenes.

No. 8—"Japanese Cradle Song," by Charles Long.
The title gives sufficient explanation as to what scenes this number is intended for.

No. 9—Chinese Characteristic, by M. Winkler, an exceptional fine number for the purpose mentioned.

No. 10—Chinese Allegretto, by Puerner.
A real Chinese composition, most appropriate for scenes of quicker action.

The Importance of a Good Music Cue Sheet

It was back about 1909 at a small summer resort town on Lake Erie, when I first began to play for pictures. Not much attention was paid to that at that time. In fact, the manager stated he didn't care much whether I played for the pictures during the intermissions as that was when there was only one man in the operator's booth, and there was a short intermission between each reel while another was being rewound. The music played was of course the most popular sort. As I was not aware of the future possibilities of the "movies" I did not give this much serious thought.

In the last two years I have changed entirely from playing popular stuff to music of the better sort as the trend is pointing in that direction. As the pictures become more artistic so do the patrons demanding that the musical accompaniment advance with the progress of the picture.

As every player has his own ideas regarding playing pictures about all the player has to do is be sure that he is pleasing the patrons of the house, and above all, keep awake on the job and not fall into a rut. I would say that to get the best results one should put personal interest into his work, not simply play notes, but endeavor to register the different feeling and emotions the picture brings to him on his instrument. This will please the fine line portion of his audience, and when do you that you will have little trouble from a complaining manager.

Another thing of great importance is the music cue sheet. If compiled correctly, it gives an estimation, these cue sheets are going to be invaluable if the present progress is kept up and they are not simply used as a medium for exploiting the works of different publishers.

When the cue sheets first made their appearance I looked over them and threw them away for perfectly obvious reasons. Last summer my attention was called to the cue sheets on the Bluebird Photoplays. They looked entirely different and I decided to give them further attention. I could see that much improvement had been made. Since then I have been using the cue sheets you have been compiling on all that were being run in the theatre where I am employed. I know I am getting better results.

Imagine the predicament of an orchestra in a New York theatre on the premier of a new musical play to find that the music score of the production had not arrived. The same feeling must come to the movie player if he is interested in his job and desires to make the first show something besides a musical nightmare for the audience. The name of the picture means nothing and the short synopsis of the picture given in the producing company's heralds is often misleading and valueless. Without anything to go by, the player selects tunes at random from his library in the hope that they will fit the picture, at least some of them. How many times after the first show have I found that I had "guessed" wrong and for the second show had to scramble through my library to get proper selections. Some name will say read the story of the picture in the company's publications or the different movie magazines. This takes much time. How many would bother to do it, and besides this does not tell us exactly when a musical change is necessary. A really good cue sheet does this. I am a strong champion of the cue sheet for the player who cannot see the picture in advance, especially such as you are compiling as I feel you are really trying to give a proper musical setting to the picture.

In another letter I am going to pick a certain cue sheet pieces with criticisms. Such cue sheets are a detriment rather than an aid.

Yours truly,

Geo. H. Mapes,
Winter theatre, Akron, Ohio.

Moss's Flatbush Theatre Proves Popular

The Flatbush theatre, one of the many B. S. Moss theatres in Greater New York, located on Church avenue at the corner of Flatbush avenue, does not need to be recommended to the people of Brooklyn.

The theatre is 140 feet wide by 300 feet deep, is absolutely fireproof, being constructed of steel, reinforced concrete, brick and white stone. The entrance to the theatre is on Church avenue, and this side of the theatre is more elaborately finished than the other walls, which have no frontage on any other street. Display frames, which were furnished by the Tresco Persil Company, are fastened to the front wall of the theatre and posters and stills of the attractions at the theatre are displayed here.

At night the front of the theatre is as bright as day, being well illuminated by several five-lamp electric lamp-posts, a number of arc lamps and two huge electric signs, one of which measures about 250 feet in length; the other is a vertical sign and measures ninety feet in height. The use of electric signs is one of the most effective ways of attracting the attention of passersby. A glass-covered marquee adds greatly to the attractiveness, lending the finishing touch to the front of the house. The doors leading into the lobby are finished in mahogany, set with plate glass mirrors. Above the doors are stained glass windows of a neat design.

The theatre is 140 feet wide by 300 feet deep. The equipment consists of two Power's 6A projectors and a spotlight, no other extra attachments being used. The screen is placed directly over the front entrance, and on entering a person walks beneath and up the aisle to his seat near the rear of the theatre. A fire escape has also been put up as a safeguard against any accident that might happen.

The interior of the theatre is handsomely decorated in old rose, white with gold, and white marble trimmings. The side walls of the lobby, instead of being covered with tapestry cloth, have been set with large French mirrors, which is also a convenience for the ladies. The ceiling is set off in panels, borders being of plastic ornament. The semi-direct lighting system is used, fixtures being of the chain-suspended type, with opalescent bowls.

The box-office is at the right as one enters. To facilitate matters in handling of crowds there are two ticket windows. Automatic ticket selling machines have been installed and have proven to be great time-savers.

The projection room, which is in charge of H. Kirks, is at the rear of the balcony, and is constructed of reinforced concrete. The equipment consists of two Power's 6A projectors and a spot light, no other extra attachments being used. The length of throw is 110 feet onto a screen of special combination. The picture is thrown at a slight angle, but distortion is hardly noticeable, the screen being nearly on the same level with the proscenium.

The theatre is lighted by the semi-indirect lighting system, fixtures being on the same order as those used in the lobby. In the center of each of the sidewall panels is a one-lamp wall bracket.
Proves Size No Bar to Lobby Beauty

A FOYER which measures but fifty by nine and one-half feet, yet considered the most attractive in the entire city, is that of the Princess theatre, Milwaukee. This little gem is finished in ivory and old rose. Beautiful draperies of the same general color scheme cover the windows which relieve the monotony of the partition between the theatre and foyer. The wainscoting is of marble and the woodwork mahogany. Indirect lights diffuse a pale yet brilliant glow through the foyer and the entire atmosphere is most homelike and comfortable. At each end is a fountain, in the waters of which swim myriads of gold fish, while the streams trickling down into the water beneath make a delicate music that fills the air at all times.

The foyer is the idea of Frank Cook, the manager of the house, and his good judgment in putting in something classy, and decorating his theatre along most artistic lines is attested by the fact that he has the only ten-cent picture house in the block, all others getting five and ten cents.

Owl Theatre, Philadelphia, a Community House

The Owl, a 500 seated theatre at Twenty-third and South street, Philadelphia, is distinctive for its original name, its attractive exteriors, effective interior decorations, its absolute cleanliness, its stability (never having changed owners or managers) and the live wire methods of its manager, Samuel B. Blatt.

The house was built about three years ago and has never had competition.

It is owned by the Franklin Amusement Company, Inc., the architect being George W. Rehfuss of Philadelphia.

The outside is of brown pressed brick with iron cornice and large electric sign. Dimensions 120x48 feet. The lobby, which measures 30 feet in width and 12 feet in depth, is artistically decorated in white Vermont marble and gilt wainscoting. The floor of the lobby is of a composition tile of neat design. The six inside doors which lead into the theatre are studded with plate glass mirrors and add greatly to the already attractive lobby. The box-office is of white marble and plate glass. The theatre is not equipped with an automatic ticket selling machine, roll tickets being used. The six inside doors of the lobby are all mirrors with marble and gilt wainscoting around the walls.

Owl Theatre, Philadelphia, Wisconsin

There is no balcony. The concrete floors and six large exits to the street make for safety. The walls of the theatre proper are painted pale green with large panels of maroon and orange, within which are life-sized oil paintings of motion picture stars set in gold frames.

This decoration has been much commented upon and copied by other exhibitors.

For ventilation there are two 3-foot exhaust fans, eleven wall fans, twelve large vents through which fresh air is obtained.

The indirect lighting method is used and steam heating. The chairs are from Haywood Bros. & Wakefield of Philadelphia.

There are two projection machines, Powers 6A and 6B, motor driven, with Gundlach lenses and automatic dissolving device. The throw is 71 feet. The screen originated by Mr. Blatt is of aluminum and gold cloth on a solid wall. Perfect projection is the boast of the house. John Hughes is chief operator.

An F. A. North & Company grand piano with a skilled musician in charge furnishes the music at present. An organ will probably be installed later.

There are eight regular employees besides the manager. Girl ushers are used.

There are three daily performances. The prices are ten cents at night and fifteen for special attractions. "The Ne'er Do Well" was one which cleaned up at the fifteen cent figure. Eight reels are always shown with a daily feature. Pathé, Fox, Vitagraph, Triangle, World, Mutual and Art Dramas are run. Theda Bara, William S. Hart, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Alice Brady and Clara Kimball Young have proved the best drawing stars to date.

Advertising is done by weekly programs, window cards, cut outs, original slides, photos and one sheet write ups. Hand bills and banners are used on specials.

A marble drinking fountain with running ice water all Summer is appreciated by patrons. Being in a democratic, residential district the "Owl" depends almost entirely on family trade, some coming twice daily.

Children overwhelm the Saturday matinee when a special comedy is added for them.

New screen decorations are to be placed in the Spring. Vines, flowers and latticework will simulate a Japanese garden.

Special programs featuring the Owl are being already gotten out for the anniversary week several months hence.

Here is a little stunt that aroused interest. Before St. Patrick's day the slide request had been given for each person to bring a pin that day. The pins came in huge numbers. A shamrock featuring the Owl was given out to be pinned on with the pins thus brought.

The feature which gave this house the biggest publicity boost was the presence of a live, horned owl, 18 inches high, in the lobby. People who had never seen such a creature came from far and near to view the strange bird. The children named him "Tommy Owl" and he had a petted existence for many moons,

The Kids in Your Neighborhood Go to the Movies
Who Gets Their Money—You—or Your Competitor?

Do you realize that thousands of exhibitors in the United States have greatly increased the earning power of their theatres by making friends with the kiddies? If you let someone else take the children's trade away from your theatre, you not only lose their nickels and dimes, but the nickels and dimes of their fathers and mothers and sisters and brothers, because where the kiddies go their parents go.

Movie Rings and Buttons are a mighty aid to the up-to-date exhibitor. They help you get the children's friendship and hold it—and the children bring their folks to the theatre of "The Movie Man who gives rings to them."

Each ring comes packed in a neat envelope, bearing the name and address of your theatre. If you want to see your business begin to jump, let us hear from you at once.

are of such superior quality and construction, that they should be exploited and advertised to the limit.

About nine times out of ten, the Paramount Picture would earn the most money.

Take the Paramount Pictures released the week of March 19th.

Jack Pickford in “The Dummy.” Here is a thrilling picture adapted from a famous play. The story has a human interest turn that approaches pathos at times; the direction is all that human ingenuity, not to say genius, could accomplish; a picture couldn’t be more enjoyable, more entertaining—better acted—than this one, and any exhibitor not getting “extra days” on it is missing a big bet.

Pallas Pictures has given us another “hummer” the same week. Even the reviewers “death watch” were aroused to exclamations and applause several times at the trade showing of “The Spirit of Romance.” All the world is romantic and here is a “dream” that pulls at your heart strings. Vivian Martin is delightful as the poor little girl who inherits a fortune “over night.” This is a play every child should see—but “old boys” will like it just as they did “Snow White” with Marguerite Clark.

Can you afford not to get all that’s coming to you out of pictures like these?

Coming April 16th

Pauline Frederick

the star of countless Famous Players successes, whose superb emotional acting on both stage and screen has won for her a place in the hearts of the American public, second to Sleeping Fires her next Paramount Picture, a story of a wife whose husband wishes to divorce her so that he can marry his secretary, will rival "Sapoh," "Audrey," "The Moment Before," "Bella Donna," or "The Woman in the Case." Every exhibitor should arrange for "extra time" on this picture.

Don't miss a chance like this—advertise it big—and you can sit back and collect the profit.

The Box Office Value of Re-issued Masterpieces

We need only look at our neighbors in the theatrical field to realize how long a really good production remains its earning power. "Ben Hur," "The Old Homestead," "Rip Van Winkle"—you know them all, money-makers year after year.

That the same profit can be drawn from original photo-plays is demonstrated beyond question by the highly successful release of Vitagraph's "My Official Wife," and "A Million Bid," and "Captain Alvarez"—two Vitagraph's most extraordinary successes of yesterday, will be big money-makers for years to come.

Human nature is the one thing that doesn't change, as we grow older, and the same thrill and emotions that moved an audience yesterday will move it tomorrow. There's the secret of the exhibitor's profit in re-issues.

We have secured good advertisers to talk to YOU. Listen to them!
J. Stuart Blackton's Soul Stirring Spectacle of the Rebirth of the Spirit of American Freedom — "WOMANHOOD, The Glory of the Nation"

By J. Stuart Blackton and Cyrus Townsend Brady

Produced Under the Personal Supervision of J. STUART BLACKTON

Assisted by W. P. S. Earle

Featuring

Alice Joyce
Harry Morey

And An All Star Cast

Including PEGGY HYLAND, Naomi Childers, James Morrison, Joseph Kilgour, Bobby Connelly, Mary Maurice, Walter McGrail, Edward Elkas, Templer Saxe and Many Other Vitagraph Favorites.

A synchronized musical score has been prepared by S. M. Berg for "Womanhood, The Glory of the Nation." It is so arranged that it can be used without difficulty by a single pianist or organist, or any combination from violin and piano to a full orchestra.
The Screen's Most Inspiring Production Comes at the Greatest Hour of the Nation's Life.

The United States Army and the United States Navy, having chosen "Womanhood" as part of their preparedness campaign, will station recruiting officers with displays of equipment at all theaters during the entire run of the picture.

Open at The Broadway Theatre, New York, April 1st. At The Strand Theatre, Washington, April 8th. Now in Its Third Big Week at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia.

An unusually liberal co-operative advertising arrangement will be made with exhibitors booking "Womanhood" before April Fifteenth.

"Greater Even Than 'The Battle Cry of Peace'"

This Unanimous Verdict of Philadelphia Newspapers at Opening of Run in Chestnut Street Opera House, Assures Exhibitors even Greater Profits than Astounding Records Made by "Battle Cry."

For the Exaltation of Patriotism, the Necessity of Preparedness, the Compelling Power of Self Sacrifice, Especially Among the Women of America in These Troubled and Anxious Times.

WOMANHOOD,
The Glory of the Nation

With patriotic societies everywhere organizing for the defense of the country, with monster mass meetings being held in every center, with the entire nation aroused as never before in its history, this super-production has an audience of millions waiting for it.

Are Crowding Their Houses With It!

And It Is Equally Powerful in Smaller Houses:

The Dominion Theatre, Montreal, P. Q.
"'The Secret Kingdom' is one of the best serials I have ever seen. I think it will go big in every house. It is appealing to all classes."

The Bijou Theatre, El Paso, Texas
"'Secret Kingdom' blocked traffic in front of Bijou Theatre to-night."

The Queen Theatre, Hearne, Texas
"We have shown the first four episodes of 'The Secret Kingdom' to capacity houses each time in spite of bad weather conditions."

Palm Theatre, Rockford, Ill.
"Opened 'Secret Kingdom' to 4327 paid admissions. A big winner for me."

All over the country, in big cities and small towns, the exhibitors' verdict is the same:

"'The Secret Kingdom' is the screen's biggest serial 'success!'"
Apply a Tape Measure To Goldwyn

THE MEASUREMENT of what men can do for you is revealed by what they have done for themselves. Exhibitors are invited to determine Goldwyn's value to their houses by a test of this kind.

The factors behind Goldwyn have produced some of the greatest financial successes of the American screen and stage.

The Goldwyn authors have written plays that made fortunes for themselves and their managers. They are the men and women whose stories have helped make such immensely successful magazines as Cosmopolitan and the Saturday Evening Post.

The five great Goldwyn stars thus far announced possess tremendous name and reputation values. They are: Mae Marsh, Mary Garden, Maxine Elliott, Jane Cowl and Madge Kennedy. Others are to be announced.

All these elements combined spell assured profits for exhibitors.

Universal Screen Magazine a Sensation

EXHIBITORS PRAISE IT

THE U Screen Magazine comes to bat this week with another "punch for Exhibitors. "WHAT WE EAT" is the subject of a highly fascinating series of scenes on dry food products that every person in the country is anxious to see and know about. X-Ray mysterious, shown this week also in Screen Magazine, a subject never before shown to the public at large. "YOUNG MEN WHO DIDN'T GO WEST," showing successful men who did not heed Horace Greeley's advice and yet who made good. Other subjects make this one of the fascinating issues of the week.

Screen Magazine was going to be a regular thing each week. For a real high class novelty to interest, instruct and amuse EVERYBODY who sees it, the U Screen Magazine is a winner from the very start. It equals (with moving pictures) the tremendous popularity of the best magazines in the land. All the subjects of widest interest, that you read about in all the popular magazines, is the type and character of subjects that are shown by the U Screen Magazine. If you haven't as yet booked the U Screen Magazine, and if you can get it before someone else gets it in your territory, take our advice and "grab it now." Enuf said. Any Universal Exchange will take your order.

Universal's Thrilling Series, "The Perils of the Secret Service" Big Winner

THE mere mention of the fact that Marcus Loew, largest theatre circuit theatre owner in America, chooses the Universal's thrilling serial, "THE VOICE ON THE WIRE," means more to Exhibitors than all the advertising in the trade papers means in ten years. Here's evidence of the shrewdest judgment of a theatrical man who has achieved, single-handed, a greater success than any moving picture man in the business. When Marcus Loew books a serial, it's a thousand to one cinch that the serial in plain talk "has got to be there," and "THE VOICE ON THE WIRE" is there in larger measure and in greater power than any serial the Universal has put out to date.

Written by Eustace Hale Ball, author of such successes as "Traffic in Souls," and directed by Stuart Paton, producer of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," headed by BEN WILSON as the leading player, supported by Beautiful Neva Gerber, Joseph Girard and a huge cast of Universal Players, this serial is destined to do more for Exhibitors in the ways of profits and capacity houses than even such successful Universal Serials as "Liberty" and the many other winners the Universal has produced. Get back to the fact that Marcus Loew has booked it for his ENTIRE CIRCUIT, and that the biggest and best houses all over this country have booked it, and there's your answer of the profits and possibilities of this greatest of all Universal Serials.

Then the great new series " THE PERILS OF THE SECRET SERVICE " written and personally directed by George Bronson, Howard, author of God's Men and other successes—writhe KINGSLEY BENEDICT in the lead and with 28 episodes of his series "PETE'S STORIES," a real "YESTERDAY" by itself, we have an opportunity to give your patrons something found nowhere else, something they have been wanting to see—and know how the secret service mean work, both either the big west serial or the weekly series for the biggest business you've ever had. Book thru any of the 73 Universal Exchanges.

Universal Program Service
With Special and Regular Releases—Big Hit With All Exhibitors

Short Snappy Program Subjects the Salvation of Many a Theatre Owner

For complete program service of the most perfect scientific balance to be had anywhere in the world—and for the "open booking" exhibitor, the U. program stands head and shoulders above anything in the industry. From the special releases as shown below, any exhibitor can pick subjects that will help him get his show over when his Big Feature "flops" on him. Subjects have been the savior of many a show. Booking the complete Universal Program brings to you (without one penny extra cost) all the subjects listed here every week. If you "pick" from the specials you must expect to pay more, for in these Specials are short subjects, that (in the hands of any other producing company) would be stretched into 5 reels and offered at "fancy fees." Many a 3-reel Universal Special has the average so-called 5-reeler skinned to death for real entertainment. Book the complete U Program and get the subjects that mean more money, better satisfied patrons and a better show.

“MRS. BALFAME” WITH NANCE O’NEILL STARTS NEW MUTUAL SERIES

THE first production of the Nance O’Neil series of Mutual Pictures is now ready. It is “Mrs. Balfame.” It is based on the celebrated novel by Gertrude Atherton. It is in six acts. It was made at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation. Frank Powell directed it.

Based on Atherton Novel.

“Mrs. Balfame” is the first Gertrude Atherton novel ever filmed. This famous novelist is admired the world over. Her stories are read by millions. A vast number of those who have enjoyed Gertrude Atherton’s novel in type will be instantly attracted by a chance to see the same story in film form. It is a highly dramatic story. It was naturally adapted to presentation on the screen. It deals with a problem of the home. Its heroine is a married woman who defies her husband. Yet she does not believe in divorce. How shall she solve her dilemma? Aside from this sociological phase of the story there is a mystery of the most fascinating sort. Its working out holds interest to the very last foot of the subject. “Mrs. Balfame” is an unusual offering.

Released Week of April 9.

Mutual Exchanges everywhere will release “Mrs. Balfame” the week of April 9. Bookings can be arranged... anywhere. Her name alone will pack the theaters anywhere. See your nearest Mutual Exchange without delay.

Featuring May Ward and Brimming Over With Patriotism IS TIMELY RELEASE

On Thursday, April 12, the Mutual Film Corporation will release through its exchanges everywhere a special feature entitled “A Daughter of War.” This picture is in five acts and stars May Ward, a popular and pretty star. It is a production that is peculiarly timely. It is a picture that fairly bubbles over with patriotism. Every audience that sees it is sure to be inspired by lofty sentiments and love of country. It pictures stirring scenes of the Revolutionary War. Among the incidents depicted in it are the surrender of Lord Cornwallis. The Devil’s Assistant

Margerita Fischer

Mr. Russell appears in an altogether different role than that in which he was cast in “My Fighting Gentleman.” “High Play” is a story of high finance. Its scenes are laid in a big eastern city, and Russell enacts the role of the vice president of a big trust company. Following a call of the state bank examiner the doors of the trust company are closed. The bank examiner, Russell however offers to pay back every depositor and is made... a wire or call at the nearest Mutual Exchange will enable you to do so.

“TIGHT PLAT” is the title chosen for the second of the new series of William Russell pictures. It is from the pen of Julius Grinnell Forthmann. It was directed by Edward Sloiman. It was produced by American Film Company, Inc. It is released the week of April 9.

A Story of High Finance.

Mr. Russell appears in an altogether different role than that in which he was cast in “My Fighting Gentleman.” “High Play” is a story of high finance. Its scenes are laid in a big eastern city, and Russell enacts the role of the vice president of a big trust company. Following a call of the state bank examiner the doors of the trust company are closed. A bank examiner, Russell however offers to pay back every depositor and is made president of the reorganized institution. A love story of powerful appeal runs throughout the tale. Russell is engaged to a voluptuous beauty, but later learns to care for a girl of a far different type. Dropping his first love leads to an exciting scene and the banker is threatened with disgrace by a revengeful clubman. Braving disgrace, Russell avows his love for the girl of his heart’s desire and the story ends with the clubman’s death and Russell’s discovery that he has made the highest play and won.

Russell a Big Favorite.

Everywhere William Russell is adjudged a popular favorite. He has a following today that is second to no other male star of the screen. Each new release seems to increase his popularity. Theatres everywhere report “My Fighting Gentleman” satisfied audiences. Everyone who saw him in that will be eager to see “High Play.” Mutual Exchanges all over the country are prepared to accept bookings now on this newest Russell production.

George M. Cohan Makes His Film Debut at Strand in "Broadway Jones"

The much heralded screen debut of George M. Cohan occurred at the Strand yesterday. Of course, no one knew George would ever do this, but that he would get across and be obeyed by the screen, as the actor, is another matter. Only the accomplishment on the stage of the old showman has been transposed to the motion picture screen.

MARGUERITE SNOW ASSISTS

At the Strand Theatre, George Cohan appeared in the filmed presentation of his stage success, "Broadway Jones", and made a decided hit in the title role. If yesterday's audience is any indication, George Cohan will undoubtedly prove to be one of America's most popular screen actors. Mr. Cohan was accompanied by Crawford Kent and Ida Darling.

GEORGE M. COHAN

"Broadway Jones"

George M. Cohan, who is the man who has written, directed, and produced "Broadway Jones", is now appearing in the play on the screen. He has turned his stage production into a screen spectacle, and the result is a hit with the public. The story of the play is as follows:

George M. Cohan, who is the son of a tailor, was born in New York City. He began his career as a street player, and quickly rose to fame as a Broadway star. His musicals, which include "42nd Street" and "The Music Man", have become classics of the American stage. He is also a film star, and has appeared in numerous films, including "Andy Hardy" and "The Unsinkable Molly Brown".

In leaving the stage more or less permanently for the limelight of motion pictures, George M. Cohan has made a great leap. His new film, "Broadway Jones", is a screen tribute to his stage career. It tells the story of a young man who dreams of making it big in show business. With the help of his friends, he secures a job at a theater and begins to work his way up the ladder of success. Along the way, he meets and falls in love with a beautiful starlet, who helps him reach the top. The film is full of laughs and music, and is sure to please audiences of all ages.

Mr. Walter E. Greene, Pres.,
Artcraft Pictures Corporation,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Greene:—

The opening of your production here at the Strand Theatre, of George M. Cohen in "Broadway Jones", was accorded a reception like of which I believe has never been witnessed in the history of motion picture presentation.

The tremendous crowds who witnessed the performances here yesterday were most demonstrative in their appreciation of same, Sunday, March 26th, with George M. Cohen in his photo dramatic debut "Broadway Jones", at the Strand Theatre, New York, will go down in the annals of theatrical history.

Everyone who witnessed this production left the theatre acclamining it the best of its kind ever produced. Without question or doubt this ought to prove to be a big bonanza for all the exhibitors who play same.

I personally want to congratulate you and your associates as well as Mr. Cohen upon this wonderful achievement.

Hoping within the near future we will have another such picture with George M. Cohen in the title role, I beg to remain,

Yours most sincerely,

S. Edel.

O. Henry's Fantastic "Bagdad on the Subway" in Vivid Photoplays

New York was "Bagdad on the Subway" to O. Henry. Around this whimsical conception he wove the marvelous stories of human life—droll, tender, humorous, pathetic, romantic—which made him the most widely read and best loved writer in the world.

The O. Henry stories in picture form show you the scenes and the people he loved so well and described with such amazing genius—such wisdom, understanding and sympathy.

Over 2,000,000 sets of one edition of O. Henry's books have been sold—10,000,000 people have read them. In addition, these wonderful stories have been published in magazines and newspapers having a total circulation of at least 10,000,000—50,000,000 readers.

Practically the entire population has read O. Henry's stories. This vast audience is waiting to see them in motion pictures. Be the first to book the O. Henry pictures in your locality.

The Trend of the Times

The day is passing when good pictures can be lotted with poor ones, and sold as a program. That system is unfair both to the exhibitor and to the producer of popular subjects.

The earning capacity of good pictures is limited on a program that contains pictures which the exhibitor does not care to show, but which he must book in order to get the money-making releases.

Pokes and Jabs comedies will be distributed on the Open Market so that the producer may receive the full value of his product, and so that these extremely popular comedies may be available to every exhibitor, regardless of his program affiliations.

Territorial franchises for certain states have not yet been awarded. Correspondence is invited with responsible exchanges that can offer their customers service as well as pictures.

Dear Mr. Collins:

I had the pleasure last night of witnessing three of the series of McClure Pictures, "Seven Deadly Sins," the subjects being "Envy," "Pride," and "Greed."

I believe that all of these will be acceptable to, and make money for, the exhibitor showing them, particularly in view of the wide publicity they are receiving.

I was much impressed with the acting of Miss O'Neill and the dramatic situations in "Greed," having enjoyed it more than any picture I have seen in a long time.

SENSATIONAL SUCCESS
(N. Y. Journal.)

"The Whip" is one of the most sensational melodramatic photo-play pictures that has ever been produced.

"The Whip" was played at the Manhattan Opera House for many and many a month, and undoubtedly thousands upon thousands have seen the speaking melodrama. I want to say right here that the thousands and thousands who have seen the production of "The Whip" must for their own satisfaction see "The Whip" in pictures, for surely everyone is interested in the fourth greatest industry in the world.

There is one shot in this picture that is absolutely marvelous, and that is when the Saratoga Express hits the freight car containing the horse called "The Whip." But luckily "The Whip" has been removed before the Saratoga Express hits the car.

"THE WHIP", THRILLS
(N. Y. Times.)

It is said that eight months were consumed in making the film, whose numerous scenes embrace a vast amount of detail. Some of the scenes of country life—of the training of the Whip, of the hunt club with its pack in full cry—are especially fine. Then there are the exciting automobile smash-up, the stirring events preceding the race, and the race itself.

But most thrilling of all is the collision of the express train with the car in which the Whip was being transported. Those who saw the melodrama will recall the race between the motor car and the train, the removal of the horses in the nick of time from the car detached from the train by the villain, and the crash when the express caught up with the car. A real railroad and train were rented, and there is no doubt about the reality of the crash.

"THE WHIP" IN THE FILM IS ENTICING
(N. Y. American.)

Two record successes have already been credited to the great melodrama, "The Whip," and yesterday afternoon it began what will surely be a third.

"The Whip" began its phenomenal career with a two years' run at the Drury Lane Theatre, London. Next came a one-year season when William A. Brady presented it at the Manhattan Opera House in this city. Yesterday afternoon it was presented as a film play at the Park Theatre.

All the great scenes are reproduced with telling effect, and in many cases more thrilling than they were given on the stage. There is a fox hunt, for instance, which for dash, extent and actuality exceeds anything that can be shown in the confined area of the boards and make-believe scenery.

THE SCENE OF THE RAILROAD ACCIDENT IS NO PASTEBOARD THING. IT IS THE ACTUAL SMASH OF ONE TRAIN INTO ANOTHER, A WILD THUNDERING RUSH, AND THEN THE BLAZING WRECKS ON THE TRACK-SIDE.

ALTOGETHER "THE WHIP" IS A CLEAN WHOLESOME, STIRRING FILM PLAY OF THE GOOD OLD MELODRAMATIC SCHOOL THAT SENDS ONE HOME FEELING HEALTHILY EXCITED AND WITHOUT THE LEAST SUSPICION OF A BROWN TASTE IN THE MOUTH OR A DRAB THOUGHT IN THE BRAIN.

BUYERS COMMUNICATE WITH PARAGON FILMS, Inc.

Be sure to mention "MOTION PICTURE NEWS" when writing to advertisers.
A thriller "outthrilled" best describes the screen version of "The Whip," and which will now go on the four-a-day schedule. And that is considerable thrilling, as will be attested to by those who saw the melodrama during its season run at the Manhattan Opera House.

It is said to have required eight months in preparation, and judging from the elaborateness there must have been a heavy "overtime" charge against the production to have crowded in all of the details as recorded in the eight reels.

For downright thrillingness the railroad collision, which was meant to destroy the "dark" horse in the big race, and the actual running of the race the next day, have taken their places among all of the details as recorded in the eight reels.

The Whip," a stirring melodramatic photoplay, had its first screen production yesterday at the Park Theatre, and judging by the enthusiasm it aroused during the afternoon and evening another winner has been produced. The screen version is bigger and more exciting than the stage presentation.

"The Whip" will be known for its train wreck and racing scenes. It is probably one of the best train wrecks to be used in a motion picture play. It was staged recently at Greenwood, Md., and a complete train equipment was destroyed in the rear-end collision. The train at full speed crashes into a car which is lifted clear of the tracks, the boiler of the engine explodes and the train tumbles over an embankment and takes fire.

The "NEWS" advertisers believe YOU worth while; justify them.
What is Your Liberty Worth to YOU?

The liberty of the American people is in jeopardy. The cry of liberty or death heard in 1776 is echoed in 1917. Every American industry is contributing huge funds for preparedness—to strengthen the sinews of the government in this hour when upon the test of our force and endurance depends the future independence of our people.

What is the great Motion Picture Industry going to do? What are you going to do?

The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., has offered its services to the government to assist in attracting a patriotic activity in behalf of the country in the grave crisis that confronts it, and to stimulate interest in enlistments in the various defensive branches of the government by attractive posters and slides, and by compelling advertising and publicity. These services have received the support of Active men in the United States Service.

But to accomplish the vital results for which we are striving, we must have funds! Unfortunately the members of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., haven’t a great deal of money. But they are doing their share.

Are you going to help?

Funds from one cent to a thousand dollars will help.

Selling Pictures Intensively

The other day a general sales manager gave me in detail his selling plan in connection with a certain prominent picture. The picture will be shown first in a dozen large cities at high admission prices, then it will immediately be sold by State Rights.

The selling plan is an excellent one in every respect. It is good salesmanship, practical business, clear through.

And, after all, its fundamental policy is simple enough. The policy is simply this: let all the people see it.

It will be sold so that all the people everywhere will see it—at prices they can afford to pay.

"Why," I asked, "don't you apply this same selling plan to your program features?"

Instead of the expected reply that program features were released too fast to get such attention, or that his hands were tied by other selling policies, he said:

"I am doing just that thing." He has just started, and started, moreover, on his own initiative.

As a try-out he offered his features to a theatre which had never booked them.

He arrived at a price by making a first-hand investigation, himself, of the theatre's district, its quantity and quality of population. He made a thorough investigation.

The exhibitor expostulated over the price. He couldn't get that much money back through his box-office. He could get other features, cheaper, etc.

"Wait a minute," said the sales manager, "you're talking by the day. You are considering my price for a one day's run."

"Aren't you?" asked the exhibitor.

"No, not for the day, nor for two days, nor three days. You can keep the picture as long as you like, as long as you can run it profitably. The price asked holds good for the run. I only ask that you return it promptly, and treat me fairly in every way. I simply want so much money from your district; keep the picture till you get it and your own profit too."

The sales manager didn't stop there. He offered the exhibitor service, too. He has a publicity man covering this exchange territory, a combination exhibitor—advertising man; and this man called upon the exhibitor and will continue to call, laying out plans and material for advertising each feature, beginning several days in advance of the showing.

The exhibitor booked these features and reports gratifying success.

Here we have salesmanship—at least, so it strikes us—applied to program pictures.

First, a logical selling plan; and secondly, service.

Both are designed first to tell all the people in the theatre's district about the picture, and secondly, to give them all time to see it.

It strikes us forcibly that this is the logical and necessary foundation of longer runs; and that the plan is feasible. It is founded, itself, of course, upon a definite knowledge of field conditions, of each theatre's district population; it demands more prints and a somewhat revised system of routing them. But these are by no means insurmountable obstacles and surely the end vastly minimizes them, else longer runs are not what we claim for them.
Protecting the Big Fellow's Investment

A 4n exhibitor came to New York recently with the project of going back home and building a $250,000 picture theatre. He talked with many producers and distributors. He wanted to know from them how he could protect this considerable investment. He wanted to know if he could get the right pictures at the right prices and with the right service—and continue to get all three—so that he could say to himself and to his friends that this quarter of a million dollars' investment could reasonably be made with permanent safety.

He realized, of course, that the same thing he asked for, when put into general effect, would also have to protect the producer and distributor—would have to assure them a return sufficient to enable them and encourage them to develop—continuously—the right pictures at the right prices and with the right service.

He believes—and we agree with him—that the problem of protecting investments will play a vital part in the development of the picture industry.

Children's Shows and Censorship

HIGHLY successful performances for children have been put on in two neighborhood theatres in New York City.

We call the particular attention of exhibitors to an article in this issue by Jane Stannard Johnson, telling just how the needed cooperation was secured and just how the performances were made box office successes.

We also invite the producers' serious consideration of this situation and to a former statement of our voicing a sincere belief that children's shows will go far to offset censorship in securing the understanding and cooperation of the home, the school—and necessarily it would seem—the church.

Surely this is a subject of prime importance, worthy of the earnest consideration of the whole industry.

Pictures and Pews

MANAGER P. E. COE, of the Program theatre, Baton Rouge, La., publishes a "Lost and Found" column in his interesting little program. From the latest issue we glean this item:

"Found—Two Prayer Books."

Canon William Sheafe Chase & Co. assert that the motion picture is making devastating inroads on church attendance.

Can it be that Baton Rouge residents have found a conscience-clearing compromise by carrying their prayerbooks along to the baneful picture theatre?

Lo! The Sporting Editor

TO interpret the Sunday blue laws—or one might say the blue Sunday laws—as applying to motion pictures is to classify the latter as a sport.

Following out this classification the editors of photoplay magazines, trade papers and newspaper departments become sporting editors.

We demand baseball passes, and ring-side seats.

The Forgotten Promise

FREQUENTLY the producer of a picture, to be marketed on the State rights plan, intends to "co-operate" with the buyer and the exhibitor.

We enclose "co-operate" in quotation marks because of the manner in which that word has been abused in the past.

"Co-operation" of the State rights variety means promises that are not kept; obligations forgotten and unfulfilled.

One concern with a picture for sale on the State rights basis has announced its intention to give the word co-operation a new meaning.

A well organized plan to stand by the buyer and help him, and stand by the exhibitor and help him too, is incorporated into the sales contract.

The man selling that picture cannot "hedge." Their promise, in black and white backed by the law of contract, sufficiently protects the buyer.

The sincerity of a promise so well barricaded can hardly be doubted.

Pictures That Plead for All Pictures

PRESIDENT WILSON recently took time from his serious official burdens to view a presentation in the White House of Selig's "The Crisis." Members of the Cabinet also were present.

Last week a complimentary showing of "Joan the Woman" followed by a program of recent comedy releases was given to the members of the Pennsylvania legislature.

Excellent arguments these, and excellent occasions to plead for the just recognition and fair treatment of the fifth estate.

"Womanhood" Patriotically Shown in New York

Vitagraph’s New Seven-Part Preparedness Picture Opened Sunday—Introduced by Burr McIntosh—J. Stuart Blackton Speaks—Enthusiastic Reception

"WOMANHOOD, the Glory of the Nation," Vitagraph’s seven-part preparedness propaganda feature, opened at the Broadway theatre, New York City, Sunday night, April 1. An invitation audience, composed in the majority of those prominent in the motion picture trade, attended. The propaganda offered in the picture is of marked timeliness, as all those at the premiere seemed to appreciate. The theatre was decorated with American flags from top to bottom, both inside and out, and military chevrons stationed in the lobby in honor of the occasion. The girl ushers were dressed as Red Cross nurses.

During the intermission, J. Stuart Blackton, part author and co-director of the picture, spoke a few words thanking his associates, including Cyrus Townsend Brady and William P. S. Earle, who were active in the business of production; the members of the United States Army and Navy who gave of their services; the cast, and last but not least, Theodore Roosevelt for his suggestions.

Burr McIntosh, the author-actor-lec- turer-photographer and preparedness booster, then took the stage, and held it for thirty minutes, informing the assembled multitude just how the country was run and how it ought to be run. Mr. McIntosh’s outburst of enthusiasm in the cause of preparedness gave the whole evening something of the aspect of a preparedness rally, and the audience liked it.

Alice Joyce, Harry Morey, Naomi Chil- ders, Joseph Kilgour, Walter McGrail, Mary Maurice, James Morrison, and others, who took prominent parts in the picture, were present. An interested spec- tator was Enrico Caruso, the opera singer.

The comments of the newspapers follow:

"Womanhood" is almost the first propaganda picture to carry conviction, and one cannot doubt that this photo-drama was conceived and put before the public solely to stir the sluggish to action. The picture certainly teaches preparedness, for it shows the horrors of war and our country desolated and in the hands of the enemy.—Tribune.

Armos were shown in combat. Apparently miles of modern trenches, wire entanglements, bomb shelters, and great guns were spread before the camera. The closing scenes were photographed with the cooperation of the American army and navy, whose executives Mr. Blackton in his speech thanked for their assistance.—Herald.

J. Stuart Blackton has again taken up his trenchant tripod and cinema camera in order to awaken America to military needs. His second preparedness propaganda photo spectacle called "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation" was launched last night at the Broadway theatre with much patriotic fer- vor.—Sun.

Elmendorf Travel Talks, Inc., Organized by A. H. Woods

The Elmendorf Travel Talks, Inc., with a capitalization of $1,000,000, has been organized by A. H. Woods, the theatrical producer, with Dwight Elmendorf, the traveler, lecturer and artist, as president. Mr. Woods is vice-president and treasurer and Dr. Albert A. Lowenthal, of Chicago, is secretary.

A. H. Woods takes under his personal supervision the Elmendorf Travel Talks, comprising over 60,000 negatives, accumulated by Mr. Elmendorf in every country in the world at a cost exceeding $2,000,000. These talks will be presented as an A. H. Woods attraction at prices from 25c. to $2.

Mr. Elmendorf will appear personally at a large New York theatre. On May 1 the Elmendorf pictures will appear in about fifteen first-class theatres in New York, Chicago and other cities.

Mr. Wood intends to set aside special days for children’s matinees.

Educational Film Corporation to Release Minter Film

Owing to the success of "Snow White," the Educational Film Corporation of America will within a few weeks start releasing, on a states rights basis, their latest picture, "The Fairy and the Waif," featuring Mary Miles Minter. E. W. Hammons, general manager and vice-president of the Educa- tional Film Corporation, in speaking of the picture, said: ""The Fairy and the Waif" is based upon the events brought about by the sudden outbreak of the present European war.

First Billy West Comedy Ready in Two Weeks

Laboring under the handicap that he resembles Charlie Chaplin so much that the difference doesn’t matter, Billy West will make his debut in his first King Bee feature in about two weeks.

The name of the picture at present is "The New Stage Manager," which comes from the pen of Harry J. Naughton. This picture is announced as the funniest thing that he has ever written and it is said that the entire cast, which has been engaged on the production, during its progress at the Thanhouser studio at Jacksonville, has been thrown into convulsions continually because of the many ridiculous situations. In fact, Director Gillstrom admits that this is one of the reasons for the delay in finishing the picture.

The officials of the King Bee company declare that when Billy West makes his fifth feature film under the "New Stage Manager" he is going to show the public that there are men in the world just as funny as Chaplin.

The selling of the first release of the King Bee will be under the supervision of N. H. Spitzer, who has been appointed general manager of the company. He needs no introduction to the exhibitors. All his association with the Bluebird company in that capacity, and his work with Lewis J. Selznick, for whom he handled the first Clara Kimball Young releases, have placed him high in the estimation of exhibitors.

Peter Pan Corporation to Handle Motoy Pictures

Contracts were closed last week by which the distribution of the Motoy novelty pictures will be handled by the Peter Pan Film Corporation, of 729 Seventh avenue, of which W. C. Allen is the directing head. First release of the Motoy subjects, which are in five hundred foot lengths, "he is going to show the public that there are men in the world just as funny as Chaplin.

While the appeal of Motoy subjects is principally to children, the fact that adult audiences also find enjoyment in the subjects seems proven by results in Chicago where they have been shown for some time. A number of the subjects already produced have been in continuous bookings, and in some cases even a third showing at the Bryn Mawr, Hamlin, Regent and Strand theatres.

"God’s Man" to Be Given Trade Showing at Rialto Theatre

The trade and professional screening of the Frohman Amusement Corporation’s nine-reel production of George Bronson Howard’s novel, “God’s Man,” in which H. B. Warner is starred, will be super- vised by S. L. Rothafel, President. William L. Sherrill has been enabled to secure the Rialto theatre, with its full equipment, for this showing.
Big Exhibitors Organize Co-operative Booking System

Many of Country's Most Prominent Theatre Men Included in List Planning Co-operative First-Run Bookings on Big Attractions—Move of Widespread Importance

RUMORS current in Times Square's inner circles for several days foretelling the formation of a co-operative booking organization on a country-wide scale received confirmation Monday in news dispatches to Motion Picture News from Detroit. The word from the Michigan city indicates that long-nourished plans for a strongly intrenched co-operative organization of the country's principal first-run exhibitors have at last become a fact. The list of exhibitors mentioned in the new co-operative line-up is an imposing one. The first definite information is understood to have come from the Detroit offices of John H. Kunsky, who will be actively affiliated in the new organization.

Sam L. Rothapfel, of the Rialto theatre, New York, is also recorded in the booking affiliate. Among the others interested are Tom Saxe of Milwaukee, E. W. Mandelbaum of Cleveland, William C. Sievers of St. Louis, Robert Lieber of Indianapolis, and Tom Moore of Washington.

Practically all of these exhibitors control big circuits of theatres. It is also understood that John D. Williams, of San Francisco, has been active in the organization work on the new scheme, and will represent Coast interests in affiliation. It is feared that representation in other sections of the country will be speedily secured, the Pearce interests in New Orleans.

Pennsylvania Wants Regulators, Not Censors

Powerful Interests at Work to Discard Radical Censorship and Replace It with Common-Sense Regulation—Legislative Leaders Active

A DEFINITE movement, backed by powerful interests in the motion picture industry both of Pennsylvania and New York has been instituted to fight in the Pennsylvania legislature for the elimination of censorship and the substitution of a plan providing certain restrictions and regulations for films. These latter are of a kind designed to benefit rather than injure the business alike of the producers, exchange men and exhibitors.

Influential legislative leaders who have been sounding on the proposition are reported to have given assurances that it would stand a good chance of being enacted into law.

The tentative plan discussed calls for a commissioner, or commissioners, to whom shall be submitted by the manufacturer a description of each film proposed for exhibition in the state, along with written assurance that the subject is a proper one. Then, without any but superficial examination, a certificate of permission of exhibition will be issued. If the complaint is upheld the manufacturer will still have the right to appeal to the county courts for reversal. It is stated on responsible authority that within very few days there will be a meeting of powerful representatives of picture interests of Pennsylvania and New York, to be held in Philadelphia, at which every detail of the proposition will be discussed. Decision will be reached whether to introduce the "regulation" bill in the present session of the legislature or whether it is deemed more advisable to wait until the next biennial session.
Paralta "Repeats" to Cost Exhibitor Nothing

"Buy for the Year—Not for the Day," Is Slogan of New Concern—Fichtenberg Comes to New York

PARALTA PLAYS, Inc., formation and plans of which were exclusively announced in Motion Picture News two weeks, ago, in a statement issued from their offices, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, announce that a part of their plan is to give the exhibitors who book their pictures a "repeat," or return showing, at no additional cost.

An exhibitor controls all Paralta plays in his district. For example, one is released called "Rose o' Paradise." He knows the star and company, and, from the information given him, he believes he will be justified in booking the picture for three days or a week. Under the old plan this would have cost him from $300 to $700. Under the Paralta plan it will cost him but $100. He would have taken it for three days, and perhaps for a week under the old scheme, knowing it would pay him a profit.

This leaves him a special margin for advertising, and he takes advantage of it, and makes a special effort to interest all families in his community. He makes the run of the picture. It scores a hit. There is a liberal response to his advertising, and at the end of several days he returns the print. He has made a profit on his run and attracted many new faces to his theatre. The film is talked about, and he soon begins to hear from people who did not see the picture but would like to witness it. A repeat run occurs to him.

Under the old system this would still cost him $100 a day, for actual hits really become more valuable when they are run as a second run, and he announces the booking and advertises it liberally.

He can afford to, for the return booking costs him absolutely nothing except a two-cent stamp to send for the print. He has bought it by the year originally for $75, One of the conditions of the sale was that he keep the picture for twelve months, and he can run it just as often as he pleases, and can make it draw.

Otherwise, when he gives a picture its first run and advertising in his community, and establishes its merit, some other exhibitor, later, cannot book it and reap the benefit of the entire辖区, from one day to one year, as he may himself elect.

In about one week, President Carl Anderson and Mr. Fichtenberg will begin to make known the full details of the Paralta plan by a most comprehensive system of trade paper and direct advertising. All exhibitors who are interested will be immediately placed on the direct communication list on receipt of name and address.

Mr. Fichtenberg, chairman of the board of directors, arrived in New York from New Orleans last Friday afternoon, having come expressly to take an active part in carrying out the plans which Carl Anderson, president, and Nat Brown, general manager, and himself have been developing during the past eight months or more.

Mr. Fichtenberg has so arranged his business interests in the South that he can remain in New York indefinitely and give his sole attention to putting the plans of his company into practical operation. Mr. Fichtenberg's attitude in connection with the enterprise is that of being the personal representative of exhibitors on the board of the new company, which has been formed to relieve the exhibitor of many of the adverse conditions which surround him. Having experienced all these difficulties and obstructions in the worst form and survived them, Mr. Fichtenberg believes he has been able to aid substantially in the development of plans which will practically remedy the worst of the harmful conditions under which the exhibitor now labors.

A sort of slogan of the new company is "Buy for the year; not for the day"—do not rent feature films, but buy them for a territory for a specific time. Otherwise, get a feature film which may be run as often as the exhibitor desires, and, instead of paying $100 a day for it, pay but $100 for a year.

Plan Quick Resumption of Work on "The Planter" Following Fire

Plans are being hastily made by the Nevada Film Corporation for a resumption of activity on their 12-reel production of Herman Whitaker's novel "The Planter," the release date of which has been delayed owing to the recent fire completely destroying the studio of the company at Pasadena.

The production had been practically completed, and Tyrone Power, the star, had accepted an engagement to appear in the California Mission Play when the damage occurred. Dramatic scenes, including the destruction of an entire tropical village by fire and a big fight staged at the same time, meant to put a strong "punch" in the concluding reels of the feature are believed to have been saved from the flames.

SAENGERT and FICHTENBERG Merge Interests in South

Big Southern Coalition Controls Thirty-five Theatres in Four States—New Orleans Headquarters of Concern—Merger Predicates Other Doings

CONSOLIDATION of the interests of the Saenger and Fichtenberg Amusement enterprises, the two largest in the South, was announced last week. By the merger, Saenger and Fichtenberg theatres are under one management. Four states and a half score of the largest cities of the South are involved.

J. H. Saenger is president of the new organization, which will operate under the name of the Saenger Amusement Company, and Herman Fichtenberg is vice-president.

By reason of the consolidation of enterprises Mr. Fichtenberg will be enabled to devote the greater portion of the time to his interests in the Paralta Film Company in New York, and has established himself in this city.

Main offices of the new company are in New Orleans. E. V. Richards will be manager there. That city, by the coalition of interests, is established as the most important center outside of New York. The Saenger string of theatres is exceeded in number only by that of Marcus Loew.

Details of the merger were confirmed last week by Mr. Fichtenberg and also by wire from the Saenger headquarters. There are strong intimations that the move is but the forerunner of other big doings which will have wide effect upon the motion picture industry in the South. Further announcements in this regard are expected shortly.

Both the Fichtenberg Enterprises and the old Saenger Amusement Company, operated extensively in their territory. Some of the cities, outside of New Orleans in which they have interests are Shreveport, Alexandria and Monroe in Louisiana; Houston and Texarkana, Texas; Oklahoma City, Okla.; Pensacola, Fla., and Vicksburg, Miss.

The big theatre of the New Orleans string is the Globe, built by Mr. Fichtenberg. The strand, another large house, erected by Mr. Saenger is to open soon.

Mr. Saenger became established in the New Orleans field only a year ago. Formally headquarters were in Shreveport. At present its chief theatre in New Orleans is the Lafayette, an old legitimate house.

Herman Fichtenberg is a pioneer of the film industry. While motion pictures were still a novelty he opened a "Penny Wonderland" in Canal street, New Orleans, and from that beginning finally became head of a great enterprise. He is also a director and important stockholder of the Consolidated Film Company.

Vim Comedies to Be Sold on State Rights Plan

"Pokes and Jabs," Taken from General Film Program and Will Be Sold Territorially by Jaxon Film Company

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week at the offices of the Jaxon Film Corporation that the "Pokes and Jabs" comedies, which have heretofore been released on the General Film Company program under the Vim brand, have been withdrawn from the General program, and will be distributed hereafter on the open market, through the medium of independent exchanges.

These comedies are single-reel pictures, and feature George Burns as "Pokes," and Walter Stull as "Jabs." Both these comedians are well-known throughout the country, and the local office of the Jaxon company is said to have made the "Pokes and Jabs" release a popular one.

The statement from the Jaxon Company announcing the change in the method of distribution from the program to the open market states:

"This step was taken after a thorough investigation into the possibilities of the open market. We have felt for some time that the program system of distribution places a nearly defined limit on the earning capacity of any picture."

"When good and poor pictures are sold as a program, the returns to the producers from these productions is in proportion to the average quality of the program as a whole."

"Since the quality of picture-making, like every other artistic endeavor, is variable, the poorer productions gain by association with the better subjects, and the more popular pictures are proportionately restricted in their booking possibilities."

"Rights to a greater part of the country have already been contracted for, and it is expected that the remaining territory will soon be disposed of. The first release under the state rights plan will be made shortly."

Sunday Opening Bill Passes in Connecticut

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was notified by long distance telephone Thursday afternoon, that the Martin Local Option Bill, permitting Sunday sports and motion pictures on Sunday, by referendum, in towns over ten thousand, was passed by the Connecticut Senate, 19 to 16. This bill went through the House by a vote of 137 to 89 on March 20, and will permit the motion picture theatres to be open between two and ten o'clock on Sunday afternoons and evenings.

The amendment added to the bill in the House, allowing the town of Milford to be included within the act, was passed by the Senate.

The bill now goes to Governor Marcus H. Holcomb for his signature, and it is understood the governor will sign the measure promptly.

Williamsons Want No Scripts

Williamson Brothers, producers of the Williamson Submarine Expedition picture and other submarine motion pictures, desire to go on record to the effect that they do not want any original manuscripts submitted by photo dramatists.

Vast Machinery of Industry Hammers "Duty Week"

"National Duty Week" is April 8 to 15. The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers are employing all the machinery of the industry to get this idea before every man, woman and child in the United States in ten days. They have undertaken this task after consultation with, and enthusiastic approval by, Lieutenant A. M. Cohen, who is in charge of the recruiting for the navy; Captain G. W. Harvey, of the army; Lieutenant Commander Marian Ep ply, and Lieutenant J. M. Patton. The heads of the largest of the film corporations have given their publicity departments a free hand to conduct this campaign.

Where Is H. M. Wilson?

F. M. Simonton of the Standard Feature Film Company, Portland, Ore., is anxious to know what has become of H. M. Wilson, who was employed by that exchange last October in connection with the production of a "Proten II." Mr. Wilson is described by Mr. Simonton as being "a large man, weighing in the neighborhood of 250 pounds." He was at one time roadman for the General Film Company, working out at Portland.
Selznick Gives Program Another Scorching

Leaves Program "Soft Competition"—Actors, Writers and Directors Must Learn Their A-B-C’s—That’s All the Program’s Good For, He Says

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, follows up his blustering denunciation of the program, as compared with independent methods of release, by another essay, which attains noteworthy heights of cynicism. The article, shown a little because of its length, follows:

Here’s the latest foolish question.

“I see you’re always knocking the programs,” an exhibitor writes. “When do you think the programs will go out of business?”

My answer is NEVER, and I hope I am right. If I thought there was any danger of the programs going out of business I might put a little money into them to prevent it.

I can’t afford to be without this soft competition. If I didn’t have program competition, it would be some other kind.

And there’s another side to the question, just as important.

The program will live because it is the kindergarten of the picture business.

If we didn’t have the program producers in the picture business, where would our actors, actresses, directors, cameramen, technical directors and scenario writers and editors learn the business?

When you put your bank roll into a big production, you don’t want the director spending half his time teaching his staff the ABC of the business.

But what you need in your big productions are specialists. After the man has put in a year or two on the program job, he has learned what he can do best.

Don’t believe this, just because I say it.

Look at what the program mongers are doing, and you get the proof.

All the big stars have been on the program and are out for another. Clara Kimball Young, Robert Warwick, Norma Talmadge, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks —they made pictures for programs until they had made their reputations. Herbert Brenon produced pictures for a program, until he became bigger than the program.

David Griffith worked for a program company, until recently.

Then, as these people became too valuable, they either quit the programs and organized their own companies, or, like Mr. Lahey and Mr. Zukor, their employers saw a chance to get prominent money for their output, and formed companies for themselves.

So there you have it. We can’t get along without the program, because it is the training school of the motion picture business. And I don’t want to see the program go under altogether, because I would rather compete with it than with any other system that confronts the industry today.

Society Woman Gives Praise to "Vicar of Wakefield"

Renewed evidence of the co-operation awaiting the right sort of picture from the best people in a community, is found in a letter written to Edwin Thanhouser, producer of "The Vicar of Wakefield," by Tom North, special Pathe representative, who placed the feature for a week’s run in the splendid new Stillman theatre, Cleveland.

"To Miss Bertelle M. Lytle, socially prominent in Cleveland and now particularly well known as one of the Civic Com- mittee of the Cleveland Federation of Women’s Clubs, the go-moving picture man’s poor praise," wrote Mr. North, "hearing that this lady approved of moving pictures that showed purpose, I sought to interest her in 'The Vicar of Wakefield.' I result was astounding. She went to work with a vim for the picture, lined up her committee—which has strong influence with the mothers of Cleveland—solidly for it, and I doubt not that her co-operation did as much to make the Cleveland showing a success, as all the paid ads in the local papers.

Big Field for Selection in Ella Wheeler Wilcox’s Works

The announcement by Warner Brothers of arrangements to produce and handle the works of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, whose expressive pen until recently was silent for a year—a tribute to the loss of the husband—signals the bestowal of the stamp of approval on the power of motion pictures, by the distinguished authoress.

Perhaps more than any other writings, Ella Wheeler Wilcox’s advanced and poetic teachings, have routed discussion and controversy of deep thinkers and editorial reviewers.

Leah Baird in Mystery Plot

There is a great deal of mystery surrounding the departure of Leah Baird for Saint Augustine, Florida, where she is expected to remain for three weeks. Advertisements have appeared in the trade papers for the past two weeks, merely mentioning the name of Leah Baird.

Edward Warren Explains Why Play Received Its Name

Edward Warren, who has just completed the state-right feature, "The Warfare of the Flesh," featuring Sheldon Lewis, Marie Shotwell, Walter Hampden, Charlotte Ives, Theodore Friebs and Harry Benham, was asked the other day at a meeting of state-right buyers and big exhibitors to explain the significance of the title of the film. The answer given—"The Warfare of the Flesh," said Mr. Warren, has spiritual significance. It does not mean a battle nor a struggle of natures in the material sense. It means the eternal conflict Spirit and Soul wages against the desires of the flesh. In our story we have two dramatic forces. Those of good and those of evil, which are constantly struggling for supremacy between these two forces. They use as pawns the men and women as they have come down the ages since Adam and Eve.

Fox’s Plan to Girdle World Gains Ground

Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal Are Added to List—Offices Established in Many Foreign Cities.

WILLIAM FOX has just added four new links to the chain of countries with which he is encircling the globe. He has concluded negotiations whereby Fox films will be shown shortly in Norway, Sweden, Spain and Portugal. Arrangements for entering other countries are well under way, and the Fox Film Corporation offices at 130 West Forty-sixth street are crowded daily with foreign buyers.

In discussing the foreign situation Mr. Willis had this to say:

"Within the next six months there will be scarcely a country in the civilized world where William Fox Stars will not be shown in the best picture theatres. We have just opened exchanges in Uruguay and Paraguay, and are negotiating with foreign buyers for Chile, Peru, Bolivia and other South American countries. Mr. Fox has taken his time about entering the foreign field, preferring rather to accumulate a large collection of strong film features which would appeal particularly to foreign motion picture theatre owners."
Real Service That Distributors Are Anxious to Give

The First of a Series of Articles—The V-L-S-E Plan

You are an average exhibitor. Every distributor whose films you use owns all the help he can possibly command to bring patrons into your house. How is he going about it? What SERVICE is he giving you? His advertising, his "exhibitor aids," must pull the public into your theatre. Is it doing that?

We are going down to rock bottom in this question of service to you—the exhibitor. We’re going to publish facts and figures—mind you, no hot air! We’re going to lay praise and blame where they belong.

V-L-S-E has a plan for bringing patrons to your theatre which has stood several acid tests. It is based on a fundamental idea, which can be stated briefly as follows: Bring the public to the producer, the meeting grounds being your theatre.

The main idea of the V-L-S-E plan is national localized advertising, meaning that while the advertising is national in its scope, it hits your theatre, no matter where you are, and brings you customers. It amounts to nothing more nor less than merchandising. V-L-S-E takes the stand that it has something to sell you, but that it cannot sell you that product until a market is prepared, until customers are secured, for you.

E. L. Masters, who is at the helm of the V-L-S-E service campaign, believes that every distributor whose films you use owes you all the help he can possibly command to bring patrons into your house. How is he going about it? What SERVICE is he giving you?

V-L-S-E has an excellent service idea in this plan: Every distributor giving you films is going to give you a chance to tell his story. We’re going to publish facts and figures, and give you a single idea to carry away.

This is what we are after: How much real, helpful service is the distributor giving you? Before we’re through, every distributor will be given a chance to tell his story.

V-L-S-E pays for that ad—it doesn’t cost you a cent. But to smash the idea home once more, it is advisable for you to insert a small ad of your own directly under it, calling attention to the fact that Anita Stewart, “Loved by Millions” is on the screen at your house that night.

This point of hitching up the star or the picture to your public through your theatre by means of newspaper advertising is illustrated by the cut on this page of Anita Stewart. V-L-S-E pays for that ad—it doesn’t cost you a cent. But to smash the idea home once more, it is advisable for you to insert a small ad of your own directly under it, calling attention to the fact that Anita Stewart, “Loved by Millions” is on the screen at your house that night.

That advertisement is built upon a single, big idea: Bring the public to Anita Stewart in your house. Of course, such advertising makes Anita Stewart more popular, and, of course, such popularity means more profit for V-L-S-E. But you profit first.

V-L-S-E has an excellent service idea in its electros of small ads. Instead of the usual electrotype, with a thin slot mortised out for the name of your theatre, V-L-S-E supplies only the top and bottom borders, which are tasteful and effective. The type matter and the side rules are set up in the print shop of the newspaper in which your ad appears. Each of these sets of top and bottom decorative borders has a simple order number.

You receive the "Exhibitors Publicity and Advertising Plan Book" for a certain picture in plenty of time to order what cuts and other advertising material you need. In this book is a synopsis of the play, for your program; and the following list of advertising material: paper (from one-half sheet cards to six sheet posters); single column scene cut, double column scene cut, right 11 x 14 sepia photographs, two 22 x 18 hand colored sepia photographs, a musical cue sheet, 5 x 7 photos of scenes, advance slide of star, advance slide of play, stock border single column, stock border double column, single column cut of star, double column cut of star, Hulls, miscellaneous advertising suggestions and newspaper publicity suggestions.

The newspaper publicity suggestions should be published in the newspaper carrying your advertisement, if the publicity matter is good. We have a copy of V-L-S-E’s Plan Book for "Arsene Lupin," containing what is, in our opinion, some very bad samples of publicity copy. It is the sort of stuff that went out of style two years ago, such as, "Earle Williams is a brilliant Horseman," "Earle Williams Jumps Off Stairs," etc. Publicity copy for the up-to-date newspaper must be live, newsy material.

Billboards are used to good purpose in driving home the V-L-S-E campaign. Billboards in your neighborhood carry 24 sheets. On either end of them are pasted

Children's Saturday Performances a Success in New York

Jane Stannard Johnson, Chairman of Committee from Woman's Press Club, Induces Exhibitors and School Principals to Try Plan—Attendance Is Heavy—Similar Efforts in Other Cities Urged

HIGLY successful Saturday morning performances for children have been held in two New York neighborhood theatres for several months past, the Bunny and the Heights.

From a combined attendance at both theatres of about 700 to 800 per Saturday, the attendance has grown to 1,800 to 2,200.

The experience of these two theatres has been so unusual as to attract the attention of the New York exchanges and exhibitors alike. MOTION PICTURE NEWS learned that the performances were given under the supervision of a committee of the Woman's Press Club, and were managed by the chairman, Mrs. Jane Stannard Johnson.

Questioned regarding these performances, Mrs. Johnson said:

"You will recall that at the biennial held in New York last spring, the subject of motion pictures was discussed in the session devoted to the war work of the federated women's clubs, with the recommendation that the individual clubs appoint committees.

"At one of the first meetings of our club in the fall, I made a motion that such a committee by appointed with the purpose of taking up the work of giving children's performances. The motion was acted upon favorably, and I was made chairman of the committee.

"My first step was to select the theatres, and I began in those neighborhoods where the members of our committee resided. Then well-conducted theatres in the neighborhood of schools were chosen, and the proprietors were invited to co-operate in giving these performances on Saturday mornings.

"It might be said here that both the men who finally consented were pessimistic about children's performances, said they never had been successful, and they were sure failure would result now.

"Then the matter was taken up with the principals of the schools in the vicinity. Almost without exception these principals entered cordially into the plan, which was authorized by the Board of Education.

"One principal 'said that where the children went to performances at night they came to school asleep the next morning, and were quite uninterested in study, besides having learned their lessons. Also felt that for the children to see subjects unsuitable for the child mind, though a creditable production in itself, was most harmful. This principal felt the Saturday morning performances would solve the problem of pictures for the children.

"Having secured the theatres and made the necessary arrangements at the schools, my next step was the selection of the programs. In several cases I went into consideration.

"The developement of these performances has been most interesting. At the first one the house was filled to overflowing to see Mary Pickford in 'Cinderella,' and the exhibitor felt his fears had not been justified. The next Saturday there was about half the number, and the third Saturday still fewer numbers. Then the exhibitor was in despair. He didn't say 'I told you so,' but I knew he thought it. He did say he had lost money that day.

"However, the following Saturday the tide of attendance turned, and from that day to the present time the attendance has steadily increased until now at one house we run two shows, at 9.45 and 11.15. At the other house the seating capacity is smaller, and we have several times turned away from 50 to 200 children. The question of running two shows there has been discussed.

"The entire population of the neighborhood where these performances are given seem to be interested. The mothers come in to help and to get information. The librarians encourage the reading of the books when pictures are played, while the teachers offer the tickets as rewards in their classes, these being provided by the exhibitor.

"Sometimes I speak from the platform about keeping order in the lobby and asking the children to help in that work, and a lot of them do. One principal felt the Saturday morning program would solve the problem of pictures for the children.

"Having secured the theatres and made the necessary arrangements at the schools, my next step was the selection of the program. In several cases I went into consideration. The school principal, who expected the children to be kept out of the theatres during the week with the promise that they might go on Saturday mornings. Then I felt that the child to whom such promise was made would be more rewarded for obedience and study should be given a really truly motion picture show. It seemed unfair to select only educational pictures and expect the child to go to school again on Saturday at the picture show.

"I determined upon this policy, feeling not only that the child needed to be entertained quite as much as the parents, but also that the exhibitor's standpoint. From the exhibitor's standpoint, exhibitor is first of all a showman, and whether he is catering to adults or children, his show must be of such character and so appropriate to his audience that his patrons will be pleased, and will come back again and again and bring their friends with them. Besides the program, the exhibitor gave the same music as at his regular performances. So that the show was complete and high class in every detail.

"The development of these performances has been most interesting. At the first one the house was filled to overflow to see Mary Pickford in 'Cinderella' and the exhibitor felt his fears had not been justified. The next Saturday there was about half the number, and the third Saturday still fewer numbers. Then the exhibitor was in despair. He didn't say 'I told you so,' but I knew he thought it. He did say he had lost money that day.

"However, the following Saturday the tide of attendance turned, and from that day to the present time the attendance has steadily increased until now at one house we run two shows, at 9.45 and 11.15. At the other house the seating capacity is smaller, and we have several times turned away from 50 to 200 children. The question of running two shows there has been discussed.

"The entire population of the neighborhoods where these performances are given seem to be interested. The mothers come in to help and to get information. The librarians encourage the reading of the books when pictures are played, while the teachers offer the tickets as rewards in their classes, these being provided by the exhibitor.

"Sometimes I speak from the platform about keeping order in the lobby and asking the children to help, which encourages their interest and pride in their shows. One day I asked them to hand their teachers the names of pictures they wished to see that had not yet been shown. Among the names turned in was 'Sky Island.' If any one knows of a photo chamber picture that is, please advise the editor of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, for it is reasonable to suppose that the youngster's request is well founded.

"Besides the work already in hand and accomplished, I am asked to speak about these performances before some of the Parent's Association in other cities. One such meeting which I attended as a guest, about 400 representative parents were present.'

six-sheet posters announcing that the picture can be seen at your theatre. Posters and 24-sheet are free.

In order to find out how this plan of newspaper and billboard advertising would work in actual practice, V-L-S-E selected two cities, Cleveland, O., and Fort Wayne, Ind., for tests. Cleveland was selected because it is a strong Vitagraph town. Fort Wayne was decided upon for precisely the opposite reason.

There was only one exhibitor booking the Great Vitagraph productions in Fort Wayne, whereas there were five in Cleveland. Now there are six, with all houses drawing well. In Cleveland, approximately fifteen theatres book Great Vitagraph pictures. We are requested by V-L-S-E to withhold from publication the very interesting results, in dollars and cents, which Cleveland has shown. Suffice it to say, that V-L-S-E got back all of the money spent in advertising. Every exhibitor of the fifty recorded increased attendance at Vitagraph showings. And the influence of the campaign was not felt in Cleveland alone. Smaller places, in the Cleveland zone, felt the Great Vitagraph demand.

Besides the various mentioned types of service to the exhibitor, V-L-S-E has other ingenious help. For example, if you will send V-L-S-E your mailing list, a letter, in excellent facsimile handwriting, signed by Anita Stewart, Antonio Moreno, Peggy Hyland, Earl Williams, or whatever Vitagraph star you prefer, will be sent to every one of your patrons. All you have to do is to pay for the postage stamps. The letters, which are written on the star's personal stationery, are in a personal, friendly style, calling the recipient's attention to the fact that on a certain night the star will appear in a picture called—

V-L-S-E also supplies illustrated postcard letters for your mailing list, folders and booklets when appropriate.

"Little Mary " Crosses Continent for Spring Clothes

Mary Pickford arrived in New York last week from California accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford. When a two-weeks' lay-off was found necessary at the Pickford studio in California the actress star immediately proceeded to spend ten of the fourteen days in travel in order to consult with her New York dressmakers on the matter of her Spring wardrobe. Miss Pickford will return to her studios in California after a few days in New York.
"To Kill Daily Change Evil—Rent Films by Territory"

E. R. Pearson, Well Known Chicago Exchange Man, Emphasizes William A. Johnston's Editorials—Under Developed Patronage in Districts of Country Have Meant $500,000 Loss on Each of a Dozen Productions

"More power to your right arm that the newly borned enemy may be exposed to your gaze," writes E. R. Pearson, of Essanay and long prominent in the exchange field. Mr. Pearson, emphasizing Mr. Johnston's editorials against the daily change of program folly, has pointed out, with good points. Probably the most important thing he does is to estimate the amount of money lost to exhibitors throughout the country because the territories in which big pictures have been shown have not been exhausted of all possible patrons.

We consider Mr. Pearson's letter to be one of the best yet drawn forth by our campaign for the longer program run. The letter follows:

"Your 'Right off the Griddle' editorials together with the private individuals' opinions they have elicited are certainly clearing up the fog around the industry's 'chief evil.' More power to your right arm that the many horned enemy may be exposed to general view.

"Since the manufacturer must base his expectancy on the United States as a whole and the exhibitor looks at the film rental based on locality and not per diem is slowly demonstrating that a much larger portion of a locality's population will pay to see a deserving production than was ever before considered possible, and, while this method of calculating rental has been in vogue in parts of some districts for a couple of years and is rapidly gaining in favor, until it becomes pretty generally applied, exhibitors cannot realize the full possibilities of their localities.

"The industry has many examples of noteworthy productions that have shown a 40 per cent, and 50 per cent. of the population of several average localities, and yet same productions showed to an average of 10 per cent. of the population of all localities having theatres in the United States. Of course some localities did not show them at all but certain it is, that the usual proportion of the businesses must have been denied an opportunity because of too short engagements which would not have been nearly so likely had the exhibitors rented them on the basis of locality and not per day.

"We agree with the one item alone can be calculated to have kept a half million dollars' worth of box office receipts away from the exhibitors as a whole on any one of dozens of past productions.

"Theatre clientele in ratio to population is greater in small localities than large, because even a one-day run is proportionately longer there than a two to six day run in the larger localities.

"To see if, there is yet another grave problem confronting us, and that one is the alarming increase in cost of theatre operation necessary to keep pace with the public's insatiable taste for greater costume and more elaborate entertainments as against the very slight average increase of admission prices.

"That problem will probably never be satisfactorily solved except by cooperation between exhibitor and producer."

"While, perhaps 75 per cent. of the film now shown is worth no more than the admission price asked, many productions costing several times as much are shown for the same price that patrons should, and would cheerfully pay far more to see, thus also are thousands of dollars kept out of the box office and the industry; besides by securing deservedly higher admission prices and longer runs a greater earning power both to exhibitor and producer would be demonstrated and instead of the market affording 25 per cent. indifferent film as against 25 per cent. good, the ratio would soon be reversed, the industry's income correspondingly increased and the public interest given a wholesome added impetus.

"Under present conditions, the exhibitors, as a whole, are not to blame for this condition of affairs, because, with rare exceptions, is it easy for the public of an admission fee from a deservedly good production given any protection against nearby localities advertising the same production at a lower price or against his competitor even running it soon afterwards at a very low admission price.

"When an exhibitor contracts for an elaborate attraction for a sufficiently long run to insure good returns for himself, and the rental in keeping with that producer's expectancy from that locality, the producer or exchange should not hesitate to give that exhibitor every encouragement and protection enabling him to safely charge the admission price that the picture is worth. He should be allowed all the time he requires on that production to give the motion picture portion of his locality's population a chance to see it.

"By so doing the exhibitor will soon find his clientele increasing and the ratio of the rental population rapidly increasing, he should cheerfully encourage such producers in every possible way since it so obviously adds to his own bank account and by its emulation by other producers will add more not only to his but that of the entire industry.

"May your ability to inspire deliberation ever increase, reflecting credit and profit on the entire motion picture industry.

"I am,

"Very truly yours,

"E. R. PEARSON."

Douglas Fairbanks has pronounced himself in favor of the News's campaign for longer runs.

"I want to go down on record," said Fairbanks, "as being absolutely in favor of the campaign now being conducted by Motion Picture News, in advocating fewer films and longer runs?"

One theatre in St. Louis has now made a record for long runs of films, in a city that is noted for its short amusement engagements. It has always been impracticable for any theatre manager to attempt to show any production for longer than a week, but J. L. Sweeney, manager of the Central theatre, at Sixth and Market streets, has broken the record twice and thinks there is a chance of doing it a third time with "Hell Morgan's Girl", which is now in its fourth week and still playing to capacity houses.

The first record breaker was "The Little Girl Next Door," which had a ten weeks run about a year ago; then "Damaged Goods," was another ten weeks feature, and between times Mr. Sweeney had films that kept up the public interest for two or three weeks. But the very first seven days of "Hell Morgan's Girl" smashed all previous records by playing to 26,441 admissions at 15 cents each.

Goldwyn Head Again at Desk

Immediately upon recovering from the recent painful injury to his leg, Samuel Goldwyn, president of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, set about reorganizing certain details of studio management and production in Fort Lee, and conferring with many of the big distributing agents and important exhibitors. Mr. Goldwyn is at home, Mr. Goldfish directed from his bed many of the details of the company's organization of its distribution.

French Agent Here with War Action Films

The French government has commissioned Edmond Ratisbonne as exclusive agent of the French Pictorial War Records, to distribute in the United States exclusive official films and photographs of scenes of the European conflict. Offices have been established in the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street.

Backer, of Mammoth, in Capital

Franklyn E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, is in Washington, D. C., for a limited period, in connection with his various state right activities. The Fall of a Nation," handled by Backer, is in the limelight just now.
"Downfall of a Mayor" Will Be Ready May 15

Political Story Featuring Former Mayor Sebastian Has Been Prepared for the Screen—Actual Scenes of Actual Incidents Filmed

"THE DOWNFALL OF A MAYOR" is the title of a new photodrama of politics and the underworld, based on the actual experiences of former Mayor Charles E. Sebastian of Los Angeles, with the real ex-mayor himself in the title role, now being produced by Fred H. Solomon in Los Angeles and vicinity. It will be ready for the screen on or about May 15.

Mayor Sebastian's meteoric career from a policeman pounding the heat to the chair of the chief executive in the city hall, and then to be deposed through the efforts of so-called "Invisible Government" are shown.

His life was one of adventure from the time he was placed in charge of the Angeles underworld as Chinatown sergeant then as Chief of Police and later as mayor, the position he was forced to resign following a sensational trial that filled the columns of newspapers from coast to coast.

"chemically pure" Los Angeles, as it has been facetiously termed was not quite so antiseptic as had been indicated. The unique part of the picture is that the scenes have been filmed in the actual locations where the sensational incidents occurred. Los Angeles police officers, detectives, attorneys and city officials, who figured in the episodes have also taken part in the production of the film.

Fred H. Solomon, a successful Los Angeles business man is said to have)], many of the Pacific Coast studios for Sebastian's services and life story.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter" in Detroit

John H. Kunsky, who has purchased "Enlighten Thy Daughter" for Michigan, reports that he will show it at the Washington theatre for an indefinite engagement following the run of "The Barrier," now being shown there.

Timer No Longer with Ideal

Julius Timer has resigned from the Ideal Studios and Laboratories and Combifilm Pictures Corporation. His future plans are not announced.

Choose "Womanhood" as Recruiting Stimulus

GOVERNMENT officials have selected "Womanhood, the Glory of a Nation," Vitagraph's eight-part preparedness picture, made following a suggestion of former President Roosevelt, as the means to increase enlistments in all branches of the service, the army, navy and marine corps.

Commander Kenneth M. Bennett, head of the Naval Publicity Bureau, with headquarters at 339th street, New York City, has charge of the details as to the best method of utilizing the picture for the good of the country. He is in constant conference with his superiors at Washington, and expects to make an official announcement very shortly.

While nothing has been decided finally, the plan calls for governmental co-operation with exhibitors throughout the country who book "Womanhood." The first move by the government was the sending of a recruiting officer at every theatre in the larger cities during the run of "Womanhood." Lobby displays will be utilized to announce that a temporary recruiting office has been established, and the work will be carried on just exactly as if the theatre had been a regular, permanently established recruiting office for the service. Slides, announcing that a recruiting officer is in attendance, will be thrown upon the screen.

Further plans of the Navy Department are said to contemplate an every evening parade during the entire run of "Womanhood" in all of the larger cities of the country. The details of these evening parades will be felt largely to the exhibitors in whose houses the picture is booked.

As outlined, the plan calls for the paradings to consist of members of the National Guard or a detachment of Boy Scouts. The detachment, each evening, is to be headed by a drum and fife corps, which will play martial music during a short parade throughout the city, which will end at the theatre at which "Womanhood" is showing.

Commander Bennett suggests, that exhibitors who contemplate booking "Womanhood," on its release on April 9, make arrangements for a long run immediately, and then get into communication with the commanding officer of the National Guard of their territory and local Scout Master of the Boy Scouts, and make arrangements for the evening parades and drills. He also suggests that the exhibitors booking the picture immediately notify the commanding officer of the local recruiting office of either the navy, army or marine corps, in order that the recruiting officer may make arrangements to make his assignments.

"Womanhood" is having a pre-release run at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, where it will remain for three weeks from Monday, March 19, when it opened.

The New York premier was at the Broadway theatre, 41st street and Broadway, on Sunday evening, April 1. The run will continue for two weeks.

On Sunday, April 8, the picture will open at the Strand theatre in Washington, D. C., where it will be viewed by members of both houses of Congress.

Committee of National Defense Ends Whirlwind Campaign

The campaign in New York City under the auspices of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense was concluded last week and a complete report of exhibitors' cooperation and activity was made to the Central Committee by Mr. Lasky.

In sending out the following statement and report Jesse L. Lasky, chairman of the Motion Picture Division, wishes to express his personal thanks to all who assisted in the patriotic work.

"With practically every agency, political, commercial and religious, working in behalf of national preparedness during the past ten days, the showing of the motion picture division was more than gratifying," said Mr. Lasky. "When I read the report of the progress of the work of the committee last week I was more than pleased to note a number of expressions of the deepest appreciation on the part of many prominent persons for the manner in which the motion picture industry as a whole, and the exhibitors in particular, had entered whole-heartedly in the Mayor's committee plan."

In his report to the central committee at the meeting held in the Hotel Manhattan Mr. Lasky stated that in the Borough of New York 1,288 motion picture theatres co-operated, in Brooklyn, 280; in Queens, 44, and in Staten Island, 8, making a total of 611.

All reports which came into the Mayor's committee headquarters have not yet been tabulated, but it is estimated that through the channels of the motion picture theatres between 200,000 and 225,000 signatures are obtained.

Vic Johnson Made Publicity Manager of Undersea Films

Vic B. Johnson, familiarly known to the trade as Vic, has moved the tools of his profession to the Longacre Building, and will hereafter be responsible for the advertising and publicity of the Williamson Brothers' productions, controlled exclusively by the Submarine Film Corporation.

Vic has been actively engaged in publicity work for the past four years. He broke into picturedom with Warner's Feature Film Company after an extensive newspaper career. The motion picture section of the Morning Telegraph next claimed his attention. Then came the exploitation of Ditmars' Wild Animal Life pictures, two years in the national copy department of Street Railways Advertising Company, six months in charge of Vitagraph's news service department, and now he has concluded four months with the Kalem Company to take up his present work with the originators of submarine motion pictures.
Exhibitor Believes in Self-Censorship of All Pictures

Through the courtesy of William A. Brady we publish a letter received by him from exhibitor Charles S. Smoot, of Parkersburg, W. Va., complimenting him upon his announced policy of "clean pictures" (spatially mentioning Ethel Clayton in "The Web of Desire," as a well-handled subject), and containing the following constructive suggestions, which will be of interest to all exhibitors:

"As a newspaper man and theatre owner, I was disturbed to kill or modify the Censorship Bill at the last meeting of the West Virginia Legislature in February. I spent considerable time and money, and asked for considerable of the time of my political and newspaper friends, to defeat the bill. Through our family strategy we gained our point and killed the proposition in the Committee Room.

"Immediately following the death of this bill, there came through West Virginia several alleged picture masterpieces, which could have been appropriately associated with Laura Jean Libbey, The Fireside Companion and The Police Gazette, notwithstanding the fact that they were the presentations of two of the leading picture producers.

"In order to make our theatre absolutely proof against indecent and sensuous pictures, we now do our own censoring, and when I find a picture that isn't fit for my own family, I conclude, of course, that everybody's family should be so considered. The picture is cut out entirely. On two or three occasions we have lost the day's program. This, however, is much more preferable than insulting the intelligence of the thoroughly respectable clientele. Your Brady-made World films are the sort that make censorship unnecessary."

Illinois Exhibitors Fighting Guernsey Bill

Fourteen hundred motion picture exhibitors of Illinois last week wrote members of the state legislature protesting against enactment into law of House Bill 467, known as the Guernsey Censorship Law.

W. W. Watts, one of the proprietors of the Gaiety and Vaudette theatres, in Springfield, and treasurer of the State Exhibitors' League, turned out the letter of protest. Each exhibitor will forward it to his representative and senator with his name signed.

The letter states the manufacturers of film today are keenly alive to the fact that only a clean grade of product will go with the public, and that already too many states have in effect to guard against objectionable pictures. The bill is described as "Un-American, harsh and repressive."

ON THE FIRING LINE

Manager Paul G. Coller, of the Palace, Annapolis, Md., reports: "Business here very good. Running Universal program and in addition find Pearl White a big Monday drawing card in 'Pearl of the Army'."

"After one disastrous experience," declares W. B. Carvell, of the Opera House, Alenstville, Ky., "we will never put up a deposit again as long as we can get such pictures as Fox, K-E-S-E, Metro and Vitagraph without deposits. Business is good. We showed 'The Battle Cry of Peace' last fall at 25 and 35 cents, and have 'The Crisis' booked at a 30-cent admission for adults, with children 25 cents.

The manager of the Twin Star Theatre, Ames, Iowa, tried a juvenile program two weeks ago, and packed them in. "But," he adds, "I find that the children don't come in during the week then, as the parents make them wait for Saturdays. Using Fox, Metro and the Ince productions on Triangle, and find business fine. We feel that every exhibitor should knock the deposit and Hoy adjustment systems."

Andrew J. Dvoreszky, of the Post Exchange, Fort Du Pont, Del., expects business to boom with the coming of more troops. He shows on Tuesdays and Fridays, and finds "that Paramount pictures are very well liked by the people of the fort and the civilians."

"Business is booming," is the smiling report from Manager Harry B. Cook, of the Aurora, Baltimore. "We use Triangle, Fox, Metro and World subjects. They are winners."

Harry Webber, of the Abrams Amusement Company, manages the Opera House, Columbia and Dreamland, at Bath, Me., with a total seating capacity of 2,600. He has met with unusual success with a "Friday Patriotic Night" idea. Each Friday night some special patriotic picture slide or novelty is put on, and success has been accorded the showing of juvenile programs once a month. "Business is slow at the Auditorium, Seafood, Del. It has been cut because the people are all up in the powder districts," is the word from J. A. Wright. Mr. Wright has been an exhibitor 10 years, in point of service being declared the fourth oldest south of Wilmington. He is using Mutual and Pathé.

Grifford L. Niles, manager of the Opera House, Anamosa, Iowa, finds business State Rights Man Says Southern Exhibitor Has Troubles

Nat L. Royster, writing from Cleveland, Tenn., tells us the exhibitor is having his troubles in the South. Mr. Royster is special representative for "Civilization," and says he has been making Southern territory as a salesman for twelve years, and has had experience both as an exhibitor and exchange man.

He believes he knows honest complaints when he hears them, and cites the Southern exhibitors' honest complaints as follows:

First, trouble due to head office supervision over branch managers, who know and sympathize with, their customers, but are unable to make the New York man see that colored population, and the low percentage of show-going patrons in some sections are real and not imaginary conditions.

Second, that Southern small town houses are smaller than Northern theatres in towns of the same "population," for the above reasons, and so even a raised admission charge, granting they could get the extra business on a big special, would not, with this small capacity, take care of the necessary extra advertising. In other words, the small house can't play the big features at prices generally asked them in the South. A bad day means actual loss. And it rains a good deal in the Southeast.

Third, exchanges are careless about economy in shipping films and paper. It is rather the rule to have paper shipped in a number of separate parcels, and even films are sometimes shipped separately from the same exchange by the same train.

Mr. Royster also registers a complaint that the Southern exhibitor finds it very hard to tell from the reviews of pictures in the trade papers, just whether a picture will stand all the extra boosting claimed. He quotes Mr. Horner, of the Bohemia theatre, Cleveland, an exhibitor keenly alive to what is going on about him, to the effect that the Southern audience must have absolutely clean pictures, and will make this demand felt at the box-office. Mr. Horner says the best censorship he has is his "cash register."

"Fair," Paramount program is used, and success has been accorded the showing of juvenile programs once a month.

The Opera House, Millsboro, Del., shows on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturday nights, using World subjects. "Business very good" is Manager A. R. Dodd's comment.

Send us your "Firing Line Reports," Mr. Exhibitor. What type of pictures is most popular at your theatre? What player? What new ideas have succeeded? Let us publish your complaints. You needn't bother with a long letter. Get a post-card and write now!
Bluebirds Fly Farthest North

Bluebirds fly all the way from Seattle to Juneau, Alaska, for patrons of the Palace theatre, lobby of which is shown herewith. We do not remember when we have seen a neater or more attractive lobby display, with the regular "paper" of the attraction as the drawing power. It looks as if this enterprise theatre could teach some of the managers closer to "civilization" a thing or two in good taste in lobby decoration, and it is evident its patrons appreciate good pictures put on in a dignified manner.

Georgia Branch of Exhibitors' League Organized

Headed by Ralph De Bruler, manager of the Capitol theatre, Macon, as president, the Georgia branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League was organized at a meeting held in Atlanta on March 21. Other officers elected were: John Evans, manager of the Strand and Vaudeville theatre, Atlanta, vice-president; Willard C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion theatre, Atlanta, secretary.

The new branch will send a strong delegation to the Chicago convention July 14-21.

Better Films for Children Is Aim of Renamed Society

At a meeting of the National Committee on Films for Young People (affiliated with the National Board of Review), held on March 22, it was voted to change the name of the National Committee on Films for Young People to the National Committee for Better Films. The reason for this was that the development of the idea of special performances of selected films in the effort to improve the average of motion picture exhibitions was taking the direction of selected performances for the family group as well as for young people, comfortable and best ventilated theatres in town.

MONTANA.—Butte: The New Rialto Theatre owned by Jensen & Von Herberg is nearing completion and will open early in April. It is said to be one of the finest theatres in the Northwest.

Great Falls: L. E. Freeman, owner of the Gem and Imperial theatres of Great Falls, was in town accompanied by Mr. Freeman on a business trip to the different exchanges regarding his new service. He is pledged to Mutual for third run on Chaplin and reports that Colton is doing a big favorite as ever in this town.

Cohan's Face in Flag Greeted Singing "Star Spangled Banner"

The new Arctraft-Cohan play "Broadway Jones" is preceded on the screen with a picture of the American flag with George M. Cohan's face in the center. Cohan "fans" always associate him with popular lyrics of patriotic fervor. Taking advantage of this, the Stanley theatre, Phila., always alive to the exigencies of the day, distributed copies of the Star Spangled Banner to the audience, requesting them to join in the singing.

As the flag was thrown on the screen, the orchestra started the patriotic air and the audience rose to a man. Patriotism was satisfied and the proper psychology generated for the feature.

"Two-Color" Program Effect

The Stillman theatre, Cleveland, has always led the field in producing a program of typographical art "neat but not gaudy," and the combination effect produced by a Ben Day art design and solid lettering and trade mark on the front page is most striking. It literally gives the effect of two distinct colors, the black and the gray, although the "gray" is of course produced by the Ben Day work from black ink.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

Regent, Montreal, One Year Old

We have received a very neatly conceived program from the Regent theatre, Montreal, Can. It uses its most prominent headline "An Appreciation," brief, yet worded and dignified.

We are asked to "criticize." We can only suggest that the back page might have been used to print briefly to any new patrons who might have attended a forecast of the future, based on a resume of the past programs that had pleased.

Live Wire Clips "News" Story

Complete for "Ad"

Using the bright and snappy stories that appear in Motion Picture News about the stars and pictures, and even photographing the illustrations appearing in the News, is the latest live wire idea evolved by the Rex theatre at Richmond, Va. "Kalem's Dare Devil Larkin Continues His Perilous Way," was the heading of a News story telling of some of the feats of this star, with an accompanying picture of Larkin climbing four stories in a most unusual way, appearing on page 1866 of the issue of March 24.

The "Rex" photographed the stunt, reset the head into "display size" suitable for a newspaper "ad," and used it verbatim as a boost for their Kalem, "Grant, Police Reporter" series.

Every article in the News is carefully written to give the exhibitor briefly and interestingly all the news as quickly and concisely as possible. When you stop to think of it, we wonder the News has not been used oftener for just such a purpose as this. There are many stories in the News it would pay any exhibitor running the picture to make the basis of his "ad" copy. For words are never wasted.

An idea from the Victoria theatre, Philadelphia, can be adopted in any live town where a cameraman can be secured at not too great expense — and nowadays cameramen are pretty thick.

This is for introducing the customary "News Reel" of current events, which many theatres open with their own trademark. After "Victoria News" is flashed appears a motion picture of the theatre itself, with all the busy life in front of it and the wide front of the house showing up conspicuously. As the Victoria is situated opposite the postoffice on one of the busiest corners of the city, the scene is a real live one. This always brings forth pleased comments from the audience.

Have You Offered to Help Your Local Recruiting Office?

The United States Army is co-operating with theatres everywhere, from the big Strand in New York to the smallest theatre in the smallest town where the government has recruiting officers. Have you seen your local recruiting officer yet, and let him know that you are willing to join forces with him in stirring up patriotism and letting your patrons know you are behind the President every minute? It is good policy.

Your patrons will know you are doing it for the common good, and it will help the standing of any theatre to be always first in such thoughtfulness.
Railroad Ties as Ballyhoo Started by “R. R.” Nehls

If you see lobbies piled full of railroad ties, know that the idea was started by “R. R.” Nehls, Chicago manager of the American Film Company. “R. R.” stands for Railroad Raiders.

His method of suggesting this idea to exhibitors was to pick out the three best able to afford a little fun of a rather expensive kind—Marcus Loew of New York, and Alexander Pantages and Eugene Roth of San Francisco.

To each of these he shipped a full-size railroad tie, “express collect.” And he says they liked it. The ties each had painted on the face of them, “Helen Holmes Will Soon Appear in the Railroad Raiders.” Instructions were to deliver personally.

Guests of Honor Rival Stars as Drawing Cards in Sydney

A live wire exhibitor in the downtown district of Sydney, Australia, recently commanded the attention of the film fans by inviting as his guests of honor three very prominent soldiers of the present war in connection with the showing of “Somewhere in France,” a Triangle picture.

These three soldiers had become quite prominent in Sydney through several little publications that they had put out regarding their life in the trenches. One of them had lost an arm, whilst another walked on crutches. Their names were a bigger drawing card than those of the stars in the play. The lobby display of this exhibitor was in keeping with the drama. He used cut-out figures liberally and had a wireless outfit installed in the box office, with the cashier dressed as a female spy.

The theatre, although not in a district that is too thickly populated, was crowded for the three nights to the very limit.

McConville Becomes Maine Theatres, Inc., Publicity Manager

John P. McConville, well-known publicity man, is to take charge of publicity for Maine Theatres, Incorporated, the big circuit whose control includes the Merrimac Square theatre and Playhouse, Lowell, Mass.; Modern and Queen theatres, Manchester, N. H.; Central and Colonial at Biddeford and Saco; Star and Scenic at Westbrook, and Park and Empire at Rockland, Maine.

Mr. McConville, who hails from Portland, and is a former newspaper man, for the past two years has been secretary to Governor Oakley C. Curtis of Maine.

Prior to his service with Governor Curtis, Mr. McConville was for nine years on the staff of the Portland Evening Express and Advertiser, and on the editorial staff of the Portland Sunday Telegram. During this time he was also publicity agent for several Portland amusement houses at different times, and for some years handled the publicity for the Maine Music Festivals and the Portland Automobile Show. Mr. McConville is a brother of Joseph A. McConville, assistant manager of the Famous Players Film Company of N. E., of Boston. It is understood that the Maine Theatres, Inc., will shortly move its headquarters to Boston.

New Sort of Children’s Show Given in Baltimore

Baltimore, last Saturday, inaugurated special children’s matinees with the presentation of a juvenile show at Albaugh’s theatre. Educational, travel, historical and scientific subjects, with talking picture effects were given. While children’s performances in Baltimore have been given before, the Albaugh show was of totally different calibre, being patterned somewhat after that given each year by Lyman H. Howe. A similar performance has been arranged by the Albaugh management for every Saturday afternoon in the month of April.

Patriotic Display at Showing of “Heroic France”

The Strand theatre of Chicago, where Merl LaVoy’s war pictures, “Heroic France,” are being shown for the past three weeks, is attracting attention with the profusion of flags of the Allied nations that decorate its exterior and interior. All the ushers, who are girls, are attired in khaki Red Cross uniforms.

One night last week a delegation of students in uniform from the Northwestern Military and Naval Academy at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, attended a showing of the pictures. They were accompanied by their band and marched down the street from the depot to the theatre.

Two hundred boys in khaki uniforms and about one hundred girls dressed as Red Cross nurses from the Deerfield-Shields High School at Highland Park attended a matinee showing of the pictures as guests of the management.

Strand Boosts Broadway Jones

The Friars’ Club, of which George M. Cohan is “Abbot,” honored the premiere at the Strand with a special parade, which it is understood the Artcraft cameraman filmed for advance use with the film, and later in the week the Lone Star Battalion, Junior American Guard, paraded with fife and drum corps, two hundred strong, from Columbus Circle to the theatre.

This lining up of local interest wherever possible is the boosting that counts, and exhibitors should note that the Strand, New York, does not scorn this sort of advertising as too much trouble, even where patronage is not counted in singles but in thousands. It is this intensive cultivation down to the smallest detail that has made the success of the Strand, Rialto, and other big theatres possible, where advanced prices are charged.

Cigar Stores Help Bluebirds

The “Bluebird” fad is being utilized everywhere by Bluebird exhibitors. Almost anything can be found with bluebirds as a name or decoration, and so when the United Cigar Stores in Toronto, has sales of Bluebird Chocolates, they are glad to borrow decorations from the Bluebird local exchange and boost the pictures along with the candy.

USES CLOSE VOTE ON FITNESS OF PICTURE AS AN "AD"

Exhibitor Paul of the Royal theatre, Galion, Ohio, believes in publicity which some managers would think advisable to initiate, and some not.

Brother Paul was showing Audrey Munson in "Purity." Passed by the Ohio board, he felt sure of his ground, and when the local people set up a howl against the showing he got the mayor to sanction a private review of the picture, with a committee partly appointed by the theatre, partly representative of the ministers, clubwomen, social workers, and the ministers' wives.

This committee passed the picture, 19 for and 13 against.

Brother Paul promptly carried big display space in his local paper, with accompanying news stories, announcing this favorable vote of nineteen to thirteen, permitting the picture to be shown. He also barred children under fifteen.

It is needless to say, as above noted, he "got the money."

Whether it was good business or not, in the long run, depends on how thoroughly convinced the minority "thirteen" were that they should yield to the majority in such a decision. He may hear from this "thirteen" at some later date.

A complete list of the thirty-two citizens who were consulted was published. And it was not stated who were "for" and who "against" among the committee.

Of course this made it necessary for their townfellows to ask each one which way he voted, and there is no question that Brother Paul's method gave his show maximum "publicity."

"WOMANHOOD" AIDS RECRUITING

Secretary of War Newton D. Baker has notified the Greater Vitagraph that he has instructed the Adjutant General of the United States Army to station a recruiting officer at every theatre during the run of "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," in an effort to increase enlistments in the army.

"SKINNER" GETS BIG SEND OFF IN INDIANAPOLIS

Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly "Personally Appear" at Circle Theatre in Real Live Auto—Shortest "Tour" on Record

PLAYERS may come and players may go, but not for a long time will such a genuinely novel entrance and exit be made as was done last week by Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly in connection with the Indianapolis premier of "Skinner's Dress Suit" at the Circle theatre.

Managing Director McCormick figured such an exceptional play required an exceptional setting, and that he went out of his way to provide same will be gleaned from the following description of the effect produced.

The stage of the Circle is a mammoth one, forty feet deep, a hundred feet long and seventy-five feet high. The screen was arranged to drop between two huge columns, and be hid from sight, leaving the stage a magnificent flower garden.

Behind the screen and hid from view by the stage setting a crew of carpenters built a massive bridge, eight feet high and nearly a hundred feet long. On this was placed one of the newest model Premier touring cars with full equipment, chauffeur and ready to make its entrance on its own power.

As the last scene of "Skinner's Dress Suit" faded from view the screen disappeared, and with the stage bathed in the colors of evening, in the distance one heard the shriek of an auto siren, then came the glare of headlights, the smell of gasoline, and, apparently, at a speed of sixty miles an hour the huge touring car drove in upon the stage, bearing Mr. Washburn and Miss Daly dressed in the clothes of the reconstructed Mr. and Mrs. Skinner.

The effect was startling.

Stepping from the car to the stage Miss Daly gave a gracious little speech. Mr. Washburn's remarks on the photoplay, its future based on wholesome plays and clean dramatic thought brought much applause. Following their appearance Mr. Washburn and Miss Daly held informal receptions in the beautiful lounge room of the theatre, greeting several thousands friends and admirers.

The Circle, which has a seating capacity of 1,400, broke all records as a result of this live wire "stunt." Manager McCormick is the alert sort of booster from whom Motion Picture News expects to hear many live wire ideas.
Initial Arbuckle Comedy Ready Apr. 23

The Butcher Boy Said to Set a New High Standard—All Exhibitors Can Book "Fatty" Subjects—Bookings Near Record Mark

_The_ first appearance of Roscoe Arbuckle under the Paramount banner is announced for April 23, on which date the round merry-maker will be seen in the initial Paramount Arbuckle production, The Butcher Boy, a two-part subject. "Fatty" asserts this is the most hilarious piece of screen work he has yet accomplished. The production will be completed within the next few days.

Despite the fact that this first comedy is still in course of production, Paramount has already signed contracts for over two hundred showings during the first week of the picture. In New York City alone there will be over thirty-five showings simultaneously, including the Rialto, the Marcus Loew Theatres, the Fox Theatres, and in many others, and in every big city in the United States bookings are heavy.

The Arbuckle two-reel comedies will be released by Paramount to all exhibitors, without interfering with the exclusiveness of the franchise clauses in their program distribution. This will give others than Paramount exhibitors the opportunity of contracting for these features. Extensive preparations have been made for these comedies by Paramount, and it is believed that before the release date there will be contracts signed in over three hundred theatres during the first week of its life.

This is the mark being aimed at. "Fatty" is directing his production, personally supervising every scene, in addition to acting a strenuous part. Also he has written the greater part of the scenario, and is said to have set himself stunts at which any actor would stop at fulfilling.

Comedy action in The Butcher Boy is said to begin as soon as the print reaches the Strand. Arbuckle's antics as a grocer's clerk and as the butcher of the adjoining butcher shop are said to be convulsing.

Supporting the big laugh-producer is AI St. John, the acrobatic comedian so long associated with Arbuckle, and a new leading lady, Josephine Stevens, of whom much is predicted in a comedy acting way. Her beauty, so say the Paramounters, is beyond dispute.

The addition of two-reel comedies to the five-reel and the single-reel features released by Paramount rounds out a complete service for exhibitors. Besides releasing the productions of Famous Players, Lasky, Pullman and Morisco, they also issue each week, the Paramount-Bray Photog-raphs, the magazine-on-the-screen, the Paramount Burton Holmes Travel Pictures, the Black Diamond Comedies and the Klever Comedies, the latter two released every other week, alternately.

"Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation recently. "We waited a long time before we could secure Mr. Arbuckle, and now that we have him, not only for our program but for every exhibitor in the country, we are going to see that they get the best comedies that can be made. Mr. Arbuckle will not overlook a solitary thing in producing these pictures, and from what I have already seen of the first one, it will be the biggest hit of any two-reel comedy ever produced."

Vitagraph Comedy Releases

"Gall and Gasoline," the latest of the "Big V" comedies made by Director Lawrence Semon for the Greater Vitagraph, is declared by the organization's Efficiency Board to be a class short reel comedy, with a laugh on every film. It is scheduled for release on May 21.

Other comedy releases and their dates follow: April 2, "Dubs and Drygoods"; April 9, "Slopheds and Slivers"; April 16, "Bombs and Blanders"; April 23, "Rogues and Rebelliousness"; April 30, "Jeers and Jailbirds"; May 7, "Chinks and Chases"; May 14, "Heavy Hugs and Hula Hula"; May 21, "Gall and Gasoline."

Augments Vita Sales Force

Joseph T. Hagerty and D. E. Boswell have been added to the sales force of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E, Kansas City branch by Manager Nine.

Mystery Role Again Taken by Earle Williams

Earle Williams, star of many Vitagraph productions, has another mystery role in a five-reel Blue Ribbon feature he has recently started work on and which has a working title of "Lincoln-by-the-Nine."

In The Scarlet Runner series, on through "Ariene Lupin," and again in "Apartments," Mr. Williams has had roles in which perplexing problems were solved. In his latest picture he will act the part of a wealthy man about town, whose hobby is secret service work. Paul Scardon, director, and Corinne Griffith is making her first appearance as Mr. Williams's leading lady.

Five Dollars a Word Offered for Comedy Synopsis

For the best comedy idea of fifty words or less the United States Motion Picture Corporation of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., is offering a price of five dollars a word. All other ideas that are submitted and accepted will be paid for at regular prices.

This company produces the single-reel Black Diamonds which are released on the Paramount program, and decided upon this plan to secure additional high-class material for forthcoming productions.

Leading Lights of T. H. Ince Camp in New Plays

_Quintet of Most Recent Triangle-Kay Bee Productions Is Offered in Month of April—Best Known Stars in Fitting Roles_

DOROTHY Dalton, Louise Glaum, William Desmond, William S. Hart and Charles Ray constitute the constellation of stars that will be seen this month under the Thomas H. Ince banner, on the Triangle program. Each in a new Triangle-Kay Bee play peculiarly suited to his or her capabilities, the quintette is believed to be one of the strongest yet offered by Ince within a single month.

First among the month's offerings is "The Scarlet Runner," starring Dorothy Dalton. This is a drama by John Lynch, in which Miss Dalton plays the role of a temptress, who believes herself to be the reincarnation of Cleopatra. The date of release is April 1.

Following the Dalton vehicle, Louise Glaum makes her first appearance in several weeks in "Sweetheart of the Doomed." This is another drama of the adventuress type, chronicling a chapter from the life of a siren, whose contrition God rewarded in her hour of need.

written by Jerome N. Wilson, prepared for the screen by Monte M. Katterjolui, and is scheduled for release April 14.

William Desmond is the attraction next after Miss Glaum. He will be seen in a comedy-drama by J. G. Hawks, entitled "Paddy O'Hara," released April 14.

The fourth release of the month will be a Hart play, entitled "The Desert Man," by Martin Brown and picturized by Lambert Hillyer. In this, the Western character star plays the part of a desert wanderer—a gold-seeker—who brings renewed life and good cheer into a town that long since had lost all hope of rehabilitation. It will be released April 21.

The month's last release, that of April 28, will be a light comedy by C. Gardner Sullivan, in which Charles Ray is the sole star. This is entitled "The Pinch-Hitter," and is a story of the campus, in which brown eyes and baseballs conspire to make happier the life of a spineless sluggard from the farm.
Motography and unique stunts mark the Black Diamond comedy, "Her Iron Will," released by Paramount on April 30.

The story tells of the comedy company of the Polish Film Company who start out to make some scenes near the Nitro Munition Factory. The "villain" is mistaken for a bomb thrower, a false impression, and the story continues as such. The suspense gives way to some fine comedy as the comic news is put out in the daily papers under the headline that a "snif-ter" girl detective is on the case.

On April 16 the two tramps who have been meeting favor by their work in Black Diamond comedies, reappear in "The Wish Bone." A "dream" theme is employed with laughable results when the hoboes imagine themselves on the pinnacle of society and rolling in wealth.

"Hunting of Hawk" Promises to Better "Kick In"

"Better than 'Kick In,'" That is the verdict of the Pathe film committee on "The Hunting of the Hawk," the Gold Rooster play, produced by Astra, which is to be released April 22. The comparison with "Kick In" is natural, since "The Hunting of the Hawk" has a not dissimilar story, was directed by George Fitzmaurice, who directed "Kick In," and stars also William Courtcnay, whose work was so impressive in "Kick In."

Marguerite Snow is featured with William Courtcnay, thus appearing in a Pathe picture for the first time.

Series Releases

The first of Essanay's new series of "Muzzy Suffer" comedies, presented by Harry Watson, Jr., and titled "The Fried Egg Hero," was released April 1, while the second, "The Soda Jerker," is scheduled for April 8. The rest of the series, released as one-act comedies, are "Wet and Dry," "Truly Rural," "The Ladder of Fame," and "Stop Your Skidding." The "Muzzy Suffer" series, featuring Harry Watson Jr., is an attempt to create a popular character that will appear in eight one-act comedies at weekly intervals.

Quartet of Fox Releases Announced for April

THEDA BARA, Genevieve Hamper, Gladys Brockwell, and Stuart Holmes, are the players who head the casts of the four April releases which William Fox announces. The order of the photoplays will be:

April 2, Theda Bara in "Her Greatest Love"

"Her Greatest Love," a special production; also Genevieve Hamper in "Tangled Lives"; April 9, Gladys Brockwell in "Her Temptation"; April 16, Stuart Holmes in "The Derelict."

Miss Bara's third super de luxe feature, "Her Greatest Love," is based on Ouida's widely read novel, "Moths." J. Gordon Edwards directed the picture, and St. Augustine and Palm Beach, Fla., furnish scenic back-grounds. Adrian Johnson wrote the scenario. Harry Hilliard, Glen White, Walter Law, Alice Gale, Marie Curtis and Calla Torres are in the cast.

J. Gordon Edwards also screened "Tangled Lives," in which Genevieve Hamper has the lead. The cast includes Stuart Holmes, Robert B. Mantell, Walter Miller, Henry Leon, Claire Whitney, Genevieve Blinn, Louise Rial, Millicent Liston, William Gerald, and Hal de Forest. The story is of a psychic theme under- lies the action.

Stuart Holmes is said to have done capable work in "The Derelict," written and directed by Carl Harbaugh.
Play of the Balkans, entitled "Paddy O'Hara," written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Walter Edwards, under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. In "Paddy O'Hara," William Desmond is shown in the role of a young Hibernian war correspondent for a news weekly, sent out to France to secure authentic news from the front. He not only secures one of the biggest "scoops" in modern journalism, but rescues the beautiful Princess Maryska, daughter of a mountain chieftain, and brings her home in triumph to share his Irish hearthstone.

DIVERSE themes and widely differing localities are featured in the Triangle program releases for April 15 and April 22. Robert Harron and William Desmond are the stars of the pictures to be shown in first-run theatres during the week of April 15. Harron will appear in the Fire Arts "transcontinental" drama of politics and love, entitled "An Old-Fashioned Young Man," written by Frank E. Woods and directed by Lloyd Ingraham. William Desmond will be starred in a Kay Bee war play of the Balkans, entitled "Paddy O'Hara," written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Walter Edwards, under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

The plot of "An Old-Fashioned Young Man" centers about the activities of a chivalrous youth, who takes it upon himself to vindicate the honor of a woman, running for the office of mayor of a large Western city, who is the victim of trumped-up charges circulated by her unscrupulous opponents in the political arena. In searching out the evidence that will unmask the instigators of this conspiracy, Harron is called upon to travel across country from coast to coast and visit eight or ten of the principal cities between Los Angeles and New York.

As "Paddy O'Hara," William Desmond is shown in the role of a young Hibernian war correspondent for a London newspaper. Upon the outbreak of hostilities between two imaginary Balkan principalities, O'Hara is chosen by his editorial chiefs to secure authentic news from the front. He not only secures one of the biggest "scoops" in modern journalism, but rescues the beautiful Princess Maryska, daughter of a mountain chieftain, and brings her home in triumph to share his Irish hearthstone.

Bessie Love and William S. Hart share honors as the stars of the Triangle feature releases for April 22. Miss Love will be seen in a Fine Arts comedy-drama, supported by George Stone and the Kiddies, entitled "Cheerful Givers," written by Mary H. O'Connor and directed by Paul Powell. William S. Hart will enact the star role in a forceful Kay Bee "thriller," entitled "The Desert Man," written by Martin Brown and Lambert Hillyer and directed by Hart himself, under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

As Judy, the daughter of an impecunious superintendent of an orphan asylum, Bessie Love has a part that gives her many opportunities to display her talents in finely shaded comedy and pathos.

In "The Desert Man," William S. Hart takes the part of a prospector who is frustrated in his search for gold, and finally takes refuge in the partially deserted town of "Broken Hope," where he is plunged into a series of exciting adventures.

Interesting Shorts Surround Two Dramas on Paramount List

BEOULAH M. DIX'S latest "thriller," "The Cost of Hatred," and F. Hopkinson Smith's story "The Tides of Barnegat," head the Paramount program for the week of April 9th. In the former Kathryn Williams and Theodore Roberts are starred, while in the latter, Blanche Sweet plays the leading role.

The story of "The Cost of Hatred" is of the alienation of the affections of Justus Graves' wife by Robert Amory and of the husband's fleeing the country after he has shot at the youthful lover. Eighteen years later Amory's son is sent as a diplomatic representative to the country where Graves is living, and the latter does his best to enlist his hatred of the father on the boy. Graves' daughter however falls in love with the young man, and eventually they are married. Tom Forman, J. W. Johnstone, Jack Holt, H. B. Carpenter, Charles Ogle, Lucian Littlefield and Lillian Rosme are in support of the stars.

"The Tides of Barnegat" is a drama of the life of a fisher-folk colony. Elliott Moore in the role of a West Point graduate, so as to gain the respect and confidence of the father of the girl whom he desires to marry. He is compelled to fix himself up in a corset-tight suit, which is instrumental in getting him into all sorts of comedy difficulties.

"Sleeping Fires" Next Vehicle for Pauline Frederick

Pauline Frederick, whose most recent appearance was in "Sapho," is to play a completely different type of character in her next production, "Sleeping Fires," scheduled for release by Paramount, April 16.

Whereas "Sapho" was a heartless, uneducated seeker after pleasure, Zelma Bryce, the character assumed by Miss Frederick in the forthcoming Famous Players production, is a woman of high mentality and very evident refinement whose life is wrapped up in her little son. Her husband, attracted by a woman of an entirely different stamp, is doing everything in his power to force Mrs. Bryce to divorce him. Using the boy as a pawn in all his schemes, the frantic efforts of this devoted mother to keep the little chap in her possession, and the final arousing of her mother-love to a frenzy as she sees the boy being taken from her, give Miss Frederick great opportunity to display her powers.
The Power of Decision Metro Production, April 9

Miss Nelson is seen as Margot, an artist's model whose only friend, a poverty-striken artist, dies. At an auction sale of his few effects a noted illustrator is impressed and hires Margot. He later marries her, although already married. Margot later, to save her lover, denies a ceremony was gone through. In another city she meets Bland, a novelist, and although she does not care for him consents to marriage. For his book, "The Power of Decision," Margot's former "husband" Harding, is engaged to draw the illustrations, and tries to exercise his former power over the girl. After many complications Margot and Bland dispose of their troubles and are happy.

General Offer Wide Assortment of Two-Reelers

With the recent announcement of the "Ham" Comedy series featuring Lloyd V. Hamilton and Bud Duncan are to be two reelers, the General Film Company will have for regular service a quartet of two-reel subjects.

Marl's "G" series featuring a group of O. Henry's filmed stories, and the Sech cycle of two-reel dramas which have been a feature of General Film Service, together with the "Ham" series, round out the group of two-reelers of varied subject.

Next "Fortune Photoplay"

R. Henry King, actor-director, is featured together with Lillian West in "Vengeance of the Dead," a forthcoming "Fortune Photoplay." The new series of four-reel dramas being distributed by the General Film Company.

VIOLET MERSEREAU will make another Bluebird appearance April 2 in "Susan's Gentleman," a romantic drama based on a story by Kate Jordan, the scenario by John C. Brownell, and the direction by Edwin Stevens. Maud Cooling, Sidney Dean, Beverly Barker and Robert Congston will be prominent in Miss Mersereau's support.

For April 9 the Bluebird attraction will be "The Pulse of Life," a Rex Ingram production, in which Wedgewood Nowell and Gypsy Hart will be featured. E. Magnus Ingleton wrote the story, a tragic tale similar to others Mr. Ingram has specialized in of late. Wm. Dyer, Dorothy Barrett, Nicholas Dunaew and Millard K. Wilson will have important roles in support of the featured players.

Dorothy Phillips will be the star of Bluebird's April 16 feature "The Girl in the Checkered Coat." This feature will return Miss Phillips to the regular program after her adventures as star of "Hell Morgan's Girl," the "Bluebird Extraordinary," released on March 5 for distribution independent of the program. In "The Girl in the Checkered Coat" the requirements demand that Miss Phillips shall play two roles—sisters of opposite dispositions and assurance is at hand that in her screen career Miss Phillips has never had an opportunity to so display her abilities.

HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

Pathe Sure of Record Results on “Mystery of Double Cross”

Two hundred and seventy-five representative exhibitors of New York attended a trade showing on Monday, March 26th on the New York Roof at which the first four episodes of “Mystery of the Double Cross,” Pathe’s latest serial were shown. The serial was accorded an enthusiastic reception and the New York branch is having a busy time arranging for bookings.

“We are convinced that ‘Mystery of the Double Cross’ will show to more millions of the American public than has any serial of the past,” states J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange.

One of the important factors in the early bookings of a serial is the opinion of the trade paper reviewers, according to Pathe. The reviews of the latest serial which have been published in all of the leading trade papers are being used by Pathe as a strong selling argument.

In addition to the newspaper and magazine advertising, there is a full line of exhibitors’ helps including advance slides, and art portraits of Mollie King, a full line of posters, a wide assortment of novelties, heralds and lobby displays.

First O. Henry Film at Strand

Commercing April 8, the Strand Theatre will show exclusively photodramatic adaptations of the famous O. Henry stories. The first picture of this series scheduled for presentation is “The Third Ingredient.”

United Houses Double Booking on “Broadway Jones”

J. J. Murdock of the United Booking Offices at the conclusion of the advance showing of George M. Cohan’s initial Aircraft play, “Broadway Jones,” at the Forty-fourth street theatre, increased the booking of the picture on his circuit from three days at each house to a week’s run. Mitchel H. Marks, president and general manager of the Strand theatre, New York, in a letter to Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft, said: “Harold Edel, Max Spiegel and myself witnessed the initial performance of ‘Broadway Jones’ this morning. It is a most happy combination of star and play, well produced and to our mind fitting the most popular and fancy. It is commendable efforts of this kind that will insure the stability of the business. We cannot too strongly endorse this production. We are sure that it will meet with favor and success wherever shown.”

Chicago K-E-S-E Bookings

The Hamburger circuit has signed for the new K-E-S-E service, to begin April 15. The other Chicago houses who have contracted for the new service are: The 20th Century, Pastime, Harper, Kenwood, Hamlin and Armitage.

Harry Dull Buys “Maciste”

Harry Dull has opened offices at No. 2 Campau Building, Detroit, for bookings on “Marvelous Maciste,” which he owns, for the state of Michigan.

Big Demand for Paramount’s Preparedness Series

The Preparedness pictures issued in connection with Paramount Pictographs, are being sought by exhibitors in every section of the country, according to reports from the producers.

These single-reel features visualize the needs of the country, and were prepared with the collaboration and backing of the Government, and of some of the country’s foremost army and navy experts. Frederick Palmer, perhaps the best known of war correspondents, directed the making of the subjects.

Theatres everywhere plan to run these pictures during National Duty Week, which is being promoted by the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

Exhibitor Puts “Womanhood” in Legitimate House

Having booked “Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation,” the Greater Vitagraph super-production, for Springfield, Mass., exhibitor George A. Whitney showed his confidence in the picture as a show proposition by putting it on at the Court Square Theatre instead of at his Bijou. At the former house it will play to a larger seating capacity and prices will rule at 60 cents and 25 cents. The booking begins April 2. The Court Square plays ordinary attractions of the legitimate stage.
Walsh to Make "Black Beauty"

A story akin to the famous fictional tale "Black Beauty," and with a horse, already chosen, in the stellar role throughout, is the contemplated production of R. A. Walsh of the Fox forces, who directed "The Honor System."

"There have been several productions in the last year alone in which a dog has figured almost as prominently as the star," says the noted director, "and I have found a horse which is unquestionably the most intelligent animal I have ever seen."

"What my trainer has accomplished with him in the comparatively short time he has had him proves that he is capable of great development, too."

Raoul Walsh bought the horse, which he calls Ajax, last Fall while he was making "The Honor System," which William Fox is presenting at the Lyric theatre, in New York city.

Announced by Paramount

Second "Better Baby Week" Announced by Paramount

Heeding the requests of exchanges and exhibitors, Paramount has set the first week in May as another "Better Babies Week," and in hundreds of theatres throughout the country the "Better Babies" subjects that Paramount issued on its screen magazine will again be shown. Last year's occasion proved a popular success.

The "Better Babies" pictures released in Paramount Pictographs were prepared under the supervision of the noted infant specialist, Dr. Roger Bennet of New York city, and were edited by the Woman's Home Companion which has been promulgating the movement for years.

Arbuckle's Leading Lady Warmly Heralded

Much is promised of Josephine Stevens, the latest Paramount star, who is "Fatty" Arbuckle's new leading lady, who will be seen for the first time in the comedian's initial release under the Paramount banner, "The Butcher Boy."

Many adjectives are used in connection with Miss Stevens' personality and looks, by Paramount. She is really a child of the theatre, being the daughter of Benjamin Stevens, late general manager of the Klaxon and Erlander interests, and Helen Beresford, also well known in the footlight world. She has played in the stage productions "The Argyle Case," "Daddy Long Legs," and "Captain Kidd, Jr."

Selig Studios Busy

Three companies are now at work at the Selig studios at Chicago, and two dramatic companies with star comedians are engaged in the production of "slap-stick" fun.
AN extension in length in "The Great Secret" from fifteen to eighteen chapters is announced by Metro in response to requests from exhibitors. William Christy Cabanne adapted and directed the screen novel which stars Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne.

After the first nine chapters had been shown, letters from exhibitors began to come in to the Metro offices stating that picture patrons were displaying keen interest in the serial, and requesting that it be extended beyond the limit at first fixed. This instance is one of few on record where popular demand from public and theatre managers has necessitated the lengthening of a serial.

According to the producers, scores of exhibitors are conducting guessing contests as to the outcome of the story, and in some cases prizes are offered for the best essays on the serial, the winner to be the one who follows the screen story accurately and comes nearest a correct outline of the secret revealed in the last chapter.

More than 300 newspapers in the country are publishing the novelization of "The Great Secret".

"The Great Secret" Lengthened to Eighteen Chapters

"A Regular Guy" —Author Unknown

Starting a picture in the East and completing it in the West is what Douglas Fairbanks will do in connection with the production of his next Artcraft picture, "A Regular Guy." The scenario of "A Regular Guy" deals with a New Yorker who goes west, and presents a number of thrills, which, however, is secondary to a vein of melodramatic humor, the basis of the story.

In this picture "Doug" hopes to bulldog a steer, ride a bucking broncho and perform a series of other stunts which he has been practicing for some time past.

Immediately following the completion of "In Again—Out Again," now being finished at the Gauntier studio, "A Regular Guy." The script of the new play is now receiving its final preparation for screening at the hands of Anita Loos. The author of the original scenario is a mystic, and Business Manager John Fairbanks is still holding a check made out to "cash" for the careless sender of the script minus the author's name and address.

Second Elliott Picture to Be Directed by Arthur Hopkins

ARTHUR HOPKINS, discoverer and producer of several successful dramatic attractions, will be at the helm in the production of Maxine Elliott's second picture for Goldwyn.

Mr. Hopkins, who is one of the partners in the Goldwyn Corporation, has practically lived in that company's studios since the formation of the Samuel Goldfish, Edgar and Archibald Selwyn and Hopkins alliance, and is now ready to undertake his first cinema production.

While Mr. Hopkins has, from the beginning, occupied the position of chief of the Goldwyn producing staff, he has devoted the major portion of his time to a painstaking study of producing problems of the screen in preparation for his debut as a director of pictures.

Theatre and screen critics have felt that Mr. Hopkins' entry into the picture field would be the occasion for the introduction of new and beneficial innovations in film making, basing their deduction on his successful work in production of stage successes.

As his first subject he is said to have chosen a difficult story which promises to be the most ambitious of three features to be begun by Goldwyn, and one which affords Miss Elliott a wide dramatic opportunity.

In this, her second picture, the star will be supported by Marguerite Marsh, R. Leigh Denny, Donald Galleher, George Odell, Florence Ashbrooks and Helen Salinger.

Latest Selig Productions on General Program

"The Daughter of Gas-House Dan" is the latest of the Selig dramatic productions offered in General Film service. The story has to do with a "gilded youth" who has inherited from his father a tendency to sow wild oats.

The latest Selig comedy in General Film service is entitled "Bill and the Bearded Lady." It is a story of circus life and of a row among the "freaks" of the side-show.

Sun Projecting Room Under New Management

The Sun Projection Room at 218 West Forty-second street has been taken over by S. Efrus and A. Weiss. This room, which seats seventy-five people, is one of the finest rooms in New York City. Alfred Weiss is in direct charge.

Rumors Stop Production

Aside from possible enlistments of motion picture players, the rumors of war have interfered with the production activities of the Mutual-Vogue studios to the extent of barring permission to photograph scenes around the Panama Canal, which were prescribed in a comedy recently undertaken by the Vogue Company. As a result the subject will be shelved for a time being and another, substituted in its place.

Lasky to Adapt "The Varmint"

Owen Johnson's widely read story of Lawrenceville School, "The Varmint," is to be adapted to the screen by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company with Jack Pickford in the stellar role.
Filming Lockwood Feature in Mining Town

The Metro-York Company is on location in Jerome, the heart of the Arizona mining district, making scenes for the Harold Lockwood feature, "The Secret Spring," a production which includes views of some of the most picturesque country of the Southwest.

The location is admirably suited to the picturization of "The Secret Spring," a story which calls for a typical mining town. Jerome fits into the story in many respects, as this city is the site of great United Verde mines, practically owned by a single individual, who is in possession of what is said to be the richest hill in the world, a small mountain valued at three million dollars.

Vitagraph to Inaugurate Wide Ad Campaign

WITH the appointment this week, of Paul N. Lazarus and N. S. Stronge, who will respectively be in charge of the Advertising and Publicity Divisions of Vitagraph, it became known that Vitagraph has had in process of development, for some time past, and it now is at the point of launching a comprehensive and intensive advertising and publicity campaign.

This campaign comprehends not alone the use of extensive advertising space in newspapers and billboards in the interest of Vitagraph exhibitors throughout the country, but involves also, a complete system of service in assisting exhibitors in the presentation and exploitation of Vitagraph subjects.

It is said that the plans for this effort, have been developed along the most thorough and scientific lines, the whole undertaking having been tested from every angle, and its effectiveness proved beyond the shadow of a doubt before any phase of it was finally accepted as part of the general undertaking.

"The Vitagraph Exhibitor," a new house organ, which is described as "a service magazine to exhibitors," will appear semi-monthly beginning with April 1.

This book is likewise handled by Mr. Laurence who will be responsible in the future, for the most of the other forms of direct advertising issued by this company.

It is said that the numerous other activities planned to tie up the national advertising of the Vitagraph Company with the advertising efforts of the individual exhibitor, will be announced at the time that this campaign becomes actually operative, which is now scheduled early in August. With the recent additions, Vitagraph's force of publicity and advertising is constituted as follows:

E. Lanning Masters, advertising and publicity director; Paul N. Lazarus, manager advertising division; Nat S. Stronge, manager general publicity division; Gordon Laurence, editor "Vitagraph Exhibitor;" Fred Schaefer, manager newspaper and magazine division; Frederick James Smith and Miss Adele W. Fletcher, special writers in the publicity and advertising department.

Essanay's "On Trial" Nears Completion

Practically all the scenes for "On Trial," a forthcoming Essanay feature, have been filmed. The release of this production will be announced shortly. The photo play has been adapted by James A. Barrier from the Cohan and Harris stage hit of that title.

Sydney Ainsworth, James Young, Barbara Castleton and Corene Uzzell are in the cast.

Another Subject for Walthall Projected

Henry B. Walthall is studying the script of another Essanay feature, the preliminary scenes of which will shortly be filmed. The title of this picture has not as yet been selected. "Burning the Candle," Mr. Walthall's current Essanay feature, is having a record booking, according to reports from the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service headquarters.

William Nigh to Next Direct

Valeska Suratt has just begun work on a William Fox production under the direction of William Nigh, who joined the Fox organization a short time ago. Miss Suratt herself returned a few days since from Tampa, Fla., where Kenean Bud has finished the scenes showing the star in the screen version of a famous Rider Howard novel.
Screen Acquires Work of Porter Emerson Brown

Goldwyn Signs Author of "A Fool There Was" and Other Noted Works to Three-Year Contract, Effective April First

PORTER EMERSON BROWNE, author, playwright and novelist, as well as the creator of the new vampire type of picture, has signed a three-year contract, giving his exclusive screen services to Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. This contract is effective at once, with the delivery on April 1, of his first manuscript to Goldwyn for production.

There is cause for speculation in the fact that the producing concern does not set off the announcement of Mr. Browne's engagement with word that some noted player identified with the so-called "vampire" roles has also been secured. Whether or not any of its first stars are to essay screen work of this kind is a question which Goldwyn officers do not touch.

Mr. Browne is one of the best known of the younger American authors, and it is interesting to take account of the fact that his dramatic and screen productions have carried to fame several women who now rank among the highest stars of the stage or film. Miss Bara owes her worldwide vogue to the success she scored in her first picture work as the star of "A Fool There Was," which was Mr. Browne's dramatization of Kipling's "Vampire." Katherine Kaelred and Virginia Pearson both found advancement on the stage in this production, and Robert Hilliard found in the leading male role of this play the greatest part he has had in his brilliant career.

Mr. Browne had a long newspaper career prior to writing "A Fool There Was." This work he followed with "The Spendthrift," in which Edmund Breese appeared.

McClure Head Plans Big Year—Finds West Favors Long Runs

NEW production plans of McClure Pictures include the making of at least twelve features a year. The specification announcement is also made that the next McClure series, to follow "Seven Deadly Sins," is to consist of nine big productions, connected as are the Sins subjects, but in a slightly different form.

The series will be divided into three groups of three dramas each, with the stories so told that an exhibitor who cannot devote nine consecutive weeks to showing the entire series will be able to book the nine plays and show them in three different periods as best suits his program.

Shirley Mason will again be the star, and other players of wide reputation will be engaged.

President Collins, now in Los Angeles, negotiating a studio, actors and directors, will shortly announce the title of the new nine-play series and the theme of the stories. A publicity campaign in magazines and newspapers, even stronger than that behind "Seven Deadly Sins," will be launched in behalf of the new series, such publicity having proven itself of incalculable value.

Mr. Collins on his trip West found exhibitors almost solidly against the daily change system and in favor of the full-week bookings.

"Exhibitors on the coast seem bewildered by the large number of features available," said Mr. Collins, "and competition between manufacturers seeking bookings is especially strong. I am convinced the most successful exhibitor is the one who books only the best and runs each feature for one week or longer. The exhibitor by this system has the pick of the market, and establishes his theatre as one where the fan always can find a play worth seeing.

"I find a strong demand for more pictures like "Seven Deadly Sins." These pictures are making money everywhere, and exhibitors are asking when they can have more like them."

Jasper Leaves Horsley

John Jasper, for the past year manager of the David Horsley Studios, has resigned according to an announcement coming from Mr. Horsley. The resignation will take effect March 1st. His successor has not yet been appointed.

Two Metros Starring Emmy Wehlen Almost Finished

"Sowers and Reapers," a Metro-Rolfe feature production with charming Emmy Wehlen as star, is being completed at the Rolfe studios in the direction of George D. Baker, author of the play. Exteriors were taken in Florida for this five-part photodrama, as well as for "The Duchess of Doubt," written by Charles A. Logue and John Clymer, work on which was finished as soon as "Sowers and Reapers" was completed. Thus two pictures with Miss Wehlen as star, directed by George D. Baker, will be finished at almost the same time.

"Sowers and Reapers" is the life history of a great motion picture star whose early years are spent in poverty. George Stuart Christie, Kate Blancke, Walter Horton, Peggy Parr and David Thompson are in the cast.

Buck Connors to Submit Stories For Hart's Use

Following announcement from the Coast that Thomas H. Ince has secured the signature of William S. Hart to a new contract comes word that Buck Connors, the literary Texas ranger, who has contributed many successful stories to McClure's Magazine, the Saturday Evening Post and the Popular Magazine, has also been placed under contract to submit all of his future output to the Triangle-Ince organization with the object of allowing Ince and Hart first choice of any material they may think suitable for screen presentation.

Beban Back in Italian Role

After a brief departure in "The Bond Between," to the role of a Frenchman, George Beban in his next Morosco-Paramount picture "The Marcellini Millions" will revert to his favorite Italian characterization.

In this case he is an Italian truck gardener, and has many opportunities for comic and dramatic action not hitherto afforded him. Helen Jerome Eddy plays opposite Mr. Beban and other members of the cast are Pietro Sosso, Henry Woodward, Eugene Pallette and Adele Portraittoon.
Producing Activity of Goldwyn Is Setting High Mark

Jane Cowl and Madge Kennedy are the next Goldwyn players scheduled to make productions, and upon completion of these subjects the corporation will have six subjects ready for release. Barely four months old the producing company is establishing something of a record for rapidity of production.

Miss Kennedy's first screen appearance will be in a comedy that enjoyed an all season run on Broadway and played engagements throughout the country. Edgar Selwyn and Margaret Mayo have made the scenario.

Miss Cowl is at present reading a number of scripts that are at the disposal of Goldwyn and a decision on her vehicle will be made within a few days.

It is also announced that Mary Garden, now in Europe, will start on her first Goldwyn production in July.

Director Grandon Completes "Heart's Desire"

Francis J. Grandon, director of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, has just completed his second picture for that company, "Heart's Desire," with Marie Doro. As his story is laid along the Breton coast of France, it was necessary to transform the tropical scenery of Florida to the mistic atmosphere of the said coast.

"Caleb Conover" Nearly Ready

Director Colin Campbell is nearing the completion of "Caleb Conover," the latest of Selig features. There is said to be a large number of massive sets and spectacular scenes. George Fawcett will be the star. The cast announced in his support includes such players as Fritzi Brunette, Thomas Santcholi, Eugenie Besserer, Harry Lansdale, Goldie Colwell and others.

Conquest Has Enough Stories

So many good scenarios have been submitted for Conquest pictures that the concerning for the present no longer in the market for scripts.

Many Additions to Casts in Fox's East and West Studios

WILLIAM FOX announces this week the addition of many new players to the casts of pictures which are now, or soon will be, in work. To the William Farnum Company in the studios at Hollywood, Cal., are added Alan Forrest, Florence Vidor, Lillian West and Genevieve Blinn. Miss Vidor was seen in "A Tale of Two Cities" and Miss Blinn appears in "Tangled Lives," a Fox release for April 2.

Three newcomers to Fox Films have been assigned to roles in the next George Walsh feature, which Otis Turner will direct again. They are Florence Mayon, Kenneth Everett and Phil Gastrock. Mr. Walsh's leading lady will be Doris Pawn. Also in the cast are Willard Louis, William Burress and Joseph Swickard.

Swickard will be recalled for his portrayal of Dr. Lanette in "A Tale of Two Cities." George Walsh himself will have the part of a book agent in the photodrama.

June Caprice's new photoplay continues to make good progress. Ethel Cook, John Borkel, Harry D. Southard and Inez Marcelli, who was in "The Mischief Maker," have been added to the cast of the production.

Stuart Holmes, retains the quarter century mark as champion pantomimic sinister with the completion of "The Derelict." Carl Harbaugh had charge of the direction.

"The Derelict" will be released on April 16. Mary Martin, June Daye, Carl Eckstrom, Dan Mason, Olive Trevor and Wanda Petit are in the picture.

Ida M. Park Full-Fledged Director in Bluebird Forces

LOIS WEBER, who did much toward establishing Bluebirds in public favor, having gone "on her own" in the producing field, left the way open for Ida May Park to represent the fair sex in Bluebird screen management. Miss Park has furnished scores of scenarios and has assisted her husband, Joseph De Grasse, in producing numerous Bluebirds. She has gone into the open for her first picture setting.

"The Flashlight Girl," scheduled as Bluebird's release for May 21, was Miss Park's first attempt at producing. "The Flashlight Girl," with Marie Doro in the leading role, will be one of the most striking productions of the Bluebird organization. The story is one of romance and mystery, with a hint of the supernatural. The action takes place in the South American wilds, and the setting is a picturesque one.

Swickard will be recalled for his portrayal of Dr. Lanette in "A Tale of Two Cities." George Walsh himself will have the part of a book agent in the photodrama.

"Honest Japanese Schoolboy" to Be Seen in Pictures

Wallace Irwin's celebrated Japanese schoolboy, Hashimura Togo is to be visualized by the Lasky Company with Acres Hayakawa in the stellar role. William C. De Mille, who has been devoting his efforts exclusively to the scenario department of the Lasky organization the past few months, will take up his directing activities, and stage the Reverend debut of Hashimura.

The picture, which will appear under the name of "Hashimura Togo" will make its appearance shortly after a production in which Fannie Ward is starred with Hayakawa supporting her.

Although the announcement concerning "Hashimura Togo" specifies only one picture, Mr. Lasky states that he has in mind a series of these pictures, as it is difficult to condense into one five-reel production the comic material furnished.
Growth of Pictures Makes Old Terms Unsuitable

Edison Studio Manager Explains Why Company Drops Term "Release" as of No Significance and Adopts "Published"

A BELIEF that the old forms of expression as well as the old methods of marketing in connection with the picture industry are unsuitable and inadequate for present day conditions, led to the Edison Company doing away with the term "released" and the substitution of "published" in connection with the advertising matter and publicity copy of the Conquest pictures. L. W. McChesney, manager of the Edison studios explained this departure recently.

A. J. D. Biddle Is Treasurer of Argus Laboratories, Inc.

The Argus Laboratories, of which Horace D. Ashton is president, was incorporated at Albany last week, with the following officers:

The stockholders and directors of the company are: Horace D. Ashton, president and general manager; W. Whitewright Watson, vice-president; A. J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., treasurer; Professor Edgar J. Wright, secretary; Martin Justice, assistant treasurer.

Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., of Philadelphia, is in the real estate business in New York, and is also associated with his father-in-law, B. N. Duke. W. Whitewright Watson is vice-president of the Robert M. Mullen Advertising Company, and is associated with his father, Walter Watson, in other business interests.

The company will produce short subjects, as well as a Screen Magazine, under the editorial direction of Wallace Thompson, formerly of Paramount Pictographs and lately of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Frank T. Elliott, formerly of the National Association, is in charge of sales and distribution.

Selznick Buys German War Film

Lewis J. Selznick has secured "War on Three Fronts," the Captain Kleinschmidt German war pictures, which were recently given a trade showing at the Wurlitzer Hall, New York.

"Uncle Sam Awake!" Shown at New York's Hippodrome

A preparedness entertainment was given at the Hippodrome, New York, Sunday evening, March 25, at which the Rogson Film, "Uncle Sam Awake!" was shown.

The feature was introduced by Ambassador Gerard. This was his first public appearance since his return from Germany. The picture shows the Atlantic and Pacific coasts which will have to be protected in case of war or invasion, Wilson and his Cabinet, standing Army and Navy, recruits enlisting and training and as finished soldiers, scenes of American trench fighting, sham battle at Mexico, new scenes at West Point, United States coast fortifications, with large guns and mortars in action, laying of mines and explosion, wireless and telephone stations, and new motorcycle batteries.

Arrangements have been made with the Junior Patriots of America by the Rogson Film Company, Inc., to show this picture in the New England states and New York state to help raise funds for this worthy cause.

Many Interesting Subjects in Current Bray Pictographs

In the sixty-second edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs is shown the ballet school of the Metropolitan Opera House of New York City, conducted by the foremost teacher of this art, Otto Bartik.

Dr. George B. Shattuck, one of America's foremost geologists, will show Paramount audiences the secrets of nature's creation of more than 100,000 years ago—old California. "Paul Revere" of Death avenue, who astride a horse rides ahead of every train that runs down that street, where countless accidents have occurred, waving a red flag to give warning of the train's approach. On top of a skyscraper in the heart of New York exists the strangest stock yards in all the land. Here hundreds of cattle are found, waiting only until the butcher can turn them into steaks and chops.

Miss Nanny Goat will make her appearance in this edition of the Paramount-Bray-Pictographs.
Government will Censor Films
Showing Ships of War

Initial steps have been taken by the Government authorities to apply a strict censorship in the event of war. The Universal Film Company's Animated Weekly Department, which produces a news film each week, received the following communication, a copy of which was sent to each film manufacturer:

"Navy Department,

"Universal Weekly,
6000 Broadway, N. Y.

"Gentlemen:

It is requested that your company show no pictures in motion picture weeklies of American naval vessels, preparations and naval activities, and pictures of American merchant ships, unless the same have been properly passed upon by the authorities at the Navy Department.

"It is only by the cooperation of all hands that information can be prevented from reaching possible enemies of the United States or their agents in this country.

"Similar letters have been written to other motion picture companies,

"Very sincerely yours, (Signed) "Josephus M. Daniels,
"Secretary of the Navy."

Actress Urges Action Against Fake Motion Picture Schools

Beatriz Michelena, who is starred in the latest release of the Ultra Pictures Corporation, advocates concerted action on the part of legitimate motion picture authorities against the fake schools of motion picture acting which are in operation throughout the country.

"These schools," declared Miss Michelena, "are doing much more harm than any of us realize. Their real pernicious influence is not the money they take away from the victimized pupils, but the false impressions they create through their advertisements and literature as to conditions in the motion picture profession."

Williams-Roberts Make First Co-Star Appearance

When the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company's production of Beulah Marie Dix's "The Cost of Hatred" is released by Paramount on April 9, it will present Kathlyn Williams and Theodore Roberts as co-stars for the first time.

The production was staged under the direction of George Melford. In the story Miss Williams plays two roles—that of Sarita Graves, the wife of Justus, and later, her own daughter Elsie. Mr. Roberts as Justus interprets an especially difficult role, inasmuch as he is shown as a happy and devoted young husband, but is later embittered by the elopement of his wife.

Timely Russian Atmosphere in Abramson's "One Law for Both"

THE return of Ivan Abramson and his group of players from Florida marks the completion of the Ivan Film Productions' latest special presentation, "One Law for Both." The story's situations, part Russian and part American, are said to be full of powerful, elemental emotions. Mr. Abramson because of actual experience so closely conversant with Russia and her people, claims to have foreseen the present happenings in his native land.

He considers it good luck to have procured the services of an exceptional cast for this, his biggest picture to date. Madame Jolivet as a Russian Joan of Arc, paying a price which the maid of Orleans was not asked to pay, takes the lead in the Russian situations. Leah Baird appears in like manner in the American atmosphere. With Paul Capellani and Vincent Serrano, known respectively as leads with Clara Kimball Young and Pauline Frederick, supporting, the Ivan people feel sanguine that Mr. Abramson's work has found the best possible outlets of expression.

First Scenes of New Bushman-Bayne Subject Being Taken

THE taking of the first interiors for the new Metro five-reel feature "The Voice of One," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars, has begun at the Quality Studios. These scenes are laid in the living rooms of a number of shacks located in a lumber region and furnishes much opportunity for local color and action incident to the home life of the lumberjack.

Director Cabanne has had much experience in filming mining and lumberjack camps and devoted much time to attaining accuracy in these particular scenes for "The Voice of One."

Besides the principals in the cast are W. O. (Pop) Kendall, Mrs. Sue Balfour, Dan Jarrett, Charles Ripley, Frank Leigh, Robert Anderson, Art Ortega and Miss Chi- chester.

There will be quite an array of extra people in the outdoor scenes, for Director Cabanne has planned to build a whole village with two saloons and an imposing main street. This location has not as yet been settled upon. It will be somewhere in the Northwest.

"The Voice of One" has been written by Director Cabanne and will furnish both Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne with parts different from any they have hitherto played.

Brenon’s Latest Marks Reappearance of Hazel Dawn

Hazel Dawn will make her first screen appearance in more than a year in the coming Brenon-Selznick production “The Lone Wolf.” The company has just returned from New Orleans, where exterior scenes for the picture were taken.

Baby Marie Osborn Has Her Own Company

It is announced by Pathé that arrangements have been made for a new series of Gold Rooster features with Baby Marie Osborn, to be released at regular intervals for the next two years. The four-year-old star who has won such popular favor is one of the principal stockholders in a new company, which has been formed to produce these features. She is under the management of W. A. S. Douglas, who was formerly connected with the advertising and production departments of Pathé, and is directed by Eugene Moore.

New Concern Settles on Big Tract Near Baltimore

With the purchase of a twenty acre tract of land by the Ker-Mar Picture Producing Corporation, Baltimore, is looking forward to having a miniature Universal City in its area.

Extensive improvements are to be made of the premises, situated near Herring Run, and a studio of large size, containing developing and printing room will be erected. The company will in all probability establish a zoo and jungle studio shortly, and already a number of animals have arrived.

The first Ker-Mar picture is a serial, entitled “The Haunted Millions,” in which the entire cast is composed of negroes. The subject will be shown exclusively in negro theatres. A life of Booker Washington in five reels and “The Birth of a New Race,” are other negro subjects announced.

The first picture for the general public is to be “The Prodigal Daughter,” in which it is said one of the leading screen actresses will have the principal role.

Olive Thomas, Ziegfeld Star, with Thomas H. Ince

Considerable interest was aroused last week by the announcement that Thomas H. Ince has engaged Olive Thomas, the popular star of the Ziegfeld “Midnight Frolic,” and featured beauty of a late edition of the “Follies,” to create important roles in forthcoming Kay-Bee productions. Miss Thomas, now in California, has already been assigned the lead in one of the first plays that Ince will do under his new arrangement with Triangle.

Miss Thomas made her screen debut a few months ago with Irene Fenwick in the Paramount production of “A Girl Like That,” in which she created an excellent impression.

Galleher a Goldwyn Player

Donald Galleher, well known stage juvenile, has been engaged to play in Goldwyn’s second Maxine Elliott picture. He is known to theatre-goers principally through his work, over a period of years, in “The Silent Witness,” “The Battle Cry,” “Judith Zaraine,” and “Our Mr. McChesney.”
Bluebird Shifts Release Dates of Two Subjects

In the territory served by the New York branch of Bluebird, including New York as far north as Poughkeepsie, Long Island and Eastern New Jersey the pre-release of Bluebirds at S. L. Rothafpel’s Rialto necessitates a change in issue for two features. “The Clock,” shown last week at the Rialto is regularly scheduled for April 30, and “A Jewel in Pawn,” to be shown at the Rialto, April 16, will be there on release date. To give Director Rothafpel the exclusive on “A Jewel in Pawn,” the date for that picture has been switched with “The Clock” for New York only. Consequently the correct release dates, announced to avoid confusion among exhibitors, will be: “The Clock,” April 16; “A Jewel in Pawn,” April 30, in New York territory only. Outside of the New York branch the release dates on both features will stand as originally scheduled.

Ogden Co. Promises Highest Class Production

Expect to Set New Mark in Clean Five-Reel Comedy Dramas with Happy Actor—Author-Director Combination Working

In the three-fold promising combination of Lillian Walker, film star; Aaron Hoffman, author, and Harry Raver, director, Ogden Pictures Corporation, believes they are bound to produce a class of pictures that will mark a step forward in the industry. Lester Park, general manager, who is completing arrangements for release methods and organization of a company to support Miss Walker, sums up the ideas of his company in its productions as follows:

“They will not be preachments, but five-reel comedy drama features fitted to Miss Walker’s unquestioned talents. The directors’ aim to have them answer the demand for cleaner, better pictures by combining the exposition of a basic, significant idea with high entertainment value. The distributing arrangement, which is being worked out, will give these features the widest possible circulation.”

The Ogden studio will be the first motion picture studio to be placed in operation between Chicago and the Pacific Coast. Manager Park has been in the picture business for 14 years, and was the first man to exhibit a film in Utah. Albert Scowcroft, a leading Utah business man and also a pioneer in the film business, is president of the corporation. The secretary and treasurer is W. Fred Bossner, familiarly known to Broadway as “Boz.” Mr. Bossner was for a considerable time expert “theatre doctor” for Paramount. J. J. O’Connor, associated for 16 years with some of the biggest manufacturing concerns in the country, is general representative. The other directors are: W. H. Bates, president of the Utah Construction Company, Mayor Abbot R. Heywood, of Ogden, and Fred G. Taylor, secretary and general manager of the Amalgamated Sugar Company, R. B. Porter, of the Dee interests in Utah, and Dr. W. H. Petty, director in many Utah organizations.

Big Boston House Plays “Pride and the Devil”

Art Dramas production “Pride and the Devil,” has been booked into the Modern theatre, Boston, which, occupying the position of the Rialto and Strand theatres of New York, has been noted for showing only the biggest features. The engagement is for a period of two weeks, and is said to be but the first booking of a number of Art Drama series.

Strong Supporting Cast in First Fairbanks Film

Seen in support of Douglas Fairbanks in his initial Artcraft picture, “In Again—Out Again,” are a number of well-known players, including Arline Pretty, Arnold Lucy, Ada Gilman, Frank Lalor, Walter Walker and Albert Parker. The production is expected to be completed in a few days. Artcraft officers report that they have already received a number of requests from exhibitors in the Western country for advance booking arrangements of this initial Fairbanks subject.

Contest Planned to Choose Art Drama Trade-Mark

Following the announcement recently made that Art Dramas had under consideration the advisability of holding a contest to secure a suitable trade-mark for the concern, the offices have been flooded with suggestions, none of which, however, have fully pleased Harry Raver, president of the company.

It has now been decided to hold a contest, though the details have not as yet been worked out. The contest will be open to all and Mr. Raver with several artists of note will act as a jury.

Arterfacts Go Well in Philadelphia

Boyd Cunningham, Arterfact manager for Philadelphia, has sold the “Poor Little Rich Girl” to the best theatres in all the larger towns in his territory. Arrangements are now being made to handle the towns of from 2,000 to 4,000 inhabitants by the proper scale of prices. This release has attained the largest popularity of any recent Mary Pickford in this section.

Critic Calls “Vicar” Most Picturesque Production

Robert Irant in “The Cleveland Plain Dealer,” says: “The first photoplay to reach the screen bearing the hall mark of the Photoplay League is “The Vicar of Wakefield.” This play without any doubt deserves this stamp of approval as it fully meets all the requirements in making a picture, one of the worth-while sort. The play is pictured in a red-blooded fashion, and there is nothing stilted about it. It is a most picturesque production.
Telegrams of Good Will from Ince and Hart to Exhibitors

Telegrams were sent all first run Triangle exhibitors by William S. Hart and Thomas H. Ince on March 28. Hart’s telegram read:

“I have this day renewed my contract with Thomas H. Ince Triangle plays for a period of two years. My reason for doing this is because I consider the present lineup of Triangle the strongest of any in the country. I assure you that my efforts will be to make my future productions bigger and better than ever.

“W S. Hart.”

Ince’s telegram read:

“Are you cognizant of the fact that we have re-engaged the following famous and money-drawing stars for a long period: William S. Hart, Bessie Love, Louise Clam, Dorothy Dalton, Enid Bennett, Charles Ray, William Desmond, together with the raving New York beauty, Olive Thomas? Do you realize that this is the strongest aggregation of recognized box-office attractions on any program today? In addition to the above we have the new de luxe Bessie Barriscals pictures for one year, the finest ever produced under my supervision, released monthly. These pictures, with the fact of great extra cost in production, will be released on regular program. Have your exchange show you Bessie Barriscals in “The Snarl,” to be released May 6. All of these pictures are produced in the finest equipped studios in the world, with the scenario department still headed by C. Gardner Sullivan, so progress and prosperity of Triangle should be assured.

Watterson R. Rothacker of the Rothacker Film Company, gave an illustrated lecture before the members of the Cleveland Advertising Club at Cleveland on March 28. He spoke on the educational and advertising value of the motion picture.

Booking Firms Hold Show for Penna. Lawmakers

Favorably Impress Solons with Long Show in Which “Joan the the Woman” Features—Mutt and Jeff, Scene, Triangle Also SEVERAL prominent producing and booking firms co-operated in presenting on March 28 in the House of Representatives, Harrisburg, for the entertainment of the members of the Pennsylvania Legislature and their friends, an elaborate and varied program of motion pictures. It was the fourth annual affair of the kind, and though the specific motive of those who arranged the entertainment for the lawmakers is not made clear, it was very evident every effort was made to impress the solons favorably with regard to the motion picture industry.

The feature of the evening was Geraldine Farrar in “Joan the Woman.” The film was taken direct from the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York City, where it has been playing with so much success, and with it went twenty members of the theatre’s fine orchestra, accompanied by Louis Maurice, the director. Jim O’Keefe, chief machine operator of the Forty-fourth Street house, went along to see that everything was done properly from the viewpoint of the men in the booth, and he was accompanied by three other operators from New York to attend to the minor details.

It was the first time “Joan the Woman” ever was shown in Pennsylvania, and the film play was the subject of enthusiastic comment by the legislators and their guests who filled the hall of the house to its utmost capacity.

Another firm to contribute to the success of the evening’s entertainment was the Stanley Booking Company, of Philadelphia. This company not only provided the booth and motion picture machine that were shipped here from Philadelphia especially for the occasion, but sent along Mr. Gale as a sort of general supervisor of all the arrangements for the show.

In addition to the Farrar film, the exhibition included two Mutt and Jeff pictures, “Catiline Island” scenic and the Triangle’s “Nicotine Baby.” The performance lasted until after midnight.

Garson Hunting Studio

Harry I. Garson, of Detroit, and personal representative for Clara Kimball Young, is on a flying trip to California, where he went to secure a suitable studio for Clara Kimball Young productions. Mr. Garson, who is managing director of the Broadway-Strand theatre in Detroit, and who controls the output of Selznick pictures in Michigan, is expected back in Detroit the early part of April.

Epidemic May Bar Children from Detroit Houses

The Detroit Police Department threatens to prohibit the admission of children below certain ages to the motion picture houses unless the scarlet fever epidemic in Detroit subsides. At present there are 1,200 such cases in the city, and the number seems to be increasing instead of decreasing.

K. C. Club Queen in Pictures

The Kansas City Screen Club will send Miss Ivy Fuller of Manhattan, Kan., Queen of the Screen Club Ball, on March 6, to Universal City for a tryout in May. Miss Fuller won a prize in a beauty contest before the Screen Club event, while she was a student at the physical culture educational classes of Harvard in 1916.
M.E.P.E.A. Establish Quarters for Exposition

The headquarters for the National Exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America were established last week on the fourteenth floor of the Masonic Temple, Chicago. Ludwig Schindler, manager of the convention plans, is in charge, and announces that within the next ten days preparations for the annual meeting will be in full swing. The convention will begin July 14, and will be held in the Coliseum.

Manager Schindler's office, according to the schedule, will be a hive of industry from now until the gavel calls the convention to order. Most of the minor details are already disposed of. The work on the program is said to be progressing encouragingly. Mr. Schindler announces that one of his earliest moves will be an appeal to the producers and accessory manufacturers to make an early reservation of floor space, in order that the exposition can be satisfactorily planned.

The personnel of two committees already appointed are as follows: Finance Committee, Peter J. Schaefer, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer Co.; Nathan Ascher, of Ascher Bros. Selig, Selig Company; Watterson Rothacker, Rothacker Film Company; George Kleine, Kleine Optical Company, and John R. Freuler, Mutual Film Corporation.

Exhibitors Attend Hearing of Guernsey Bill

A committee made up of the Chicago branch of the Exhibitor's League attended the hearing on the Guernsey censorship bill at the capital, in Springfield, Ill., on Wednesday, March 28. Heading the committee was Dr. Sam Atkinson, secretary of the Motion Picture Freedom League, of Los Angeles.

Dr. Atkinson has been in Chicago for some weeks past fighting the Guernsey bill at every opportunity. He it is stated, is to take the initiative for the committee in the recommendation to kill the bill.

The sentiment on the proposed bill is tantalizingly divided. There are those among the exhibitors, who favoring the bill, are of the opinion that it is the only alternative and will take the censorship out of the hands of the police and politics. Those lined against it contend that the passage of the bill will only allow loopholes for more drastic censorship.

Kleine Forces Arrive

The forces of the Kleine general offices at New York and Chicago, which has been moved to Chicago, arrived here Sunday, April 1. They will occupy the eighth floor of the Chapin and Gore Building at 61-63 West avenue.

International Complications Narrowly Avoided by Theatre

Dunn and Zambreno, operators of the Bandbox theatre, Chicago, who took over the Paradise theatre, Milwaukee, this week, almost ran into international complications in the presentation of their picture: "Why Germany Will Win the War."

As an advertising feature they hung out a number of German streamers and dressed up several men in the uniforms of various countries, among them being a United States army uniform. A department of Justice operator, working in Milwaukee, ran across the man in the United States uniform and acting under a government regulation, which prohibits anyone not a soldier wearing the United States uniform, ordered the man off the streets and doff the uniform.

Incidentally, he suggested that the German colors come down and that the other men in the uniforms of the Allies and Central powers be laid off. The suggestion was immediately acted upon and the result is that a large American flag is now about the only attraction on the Paradise theatre front.

New Fox New York Exchange to Open April 12

PlANS have been made at the home offices of Fox Film Corporation to signalize the formal opening of the new quarters on the tenth floor to be occupied by the New York Exchange.

Exhibitors from all parts of the territory covered by this exchange are expected to be present when Jack Levy and his force of seventy-five take possession April 12.

Mr. Levy has been in charge of the local branch since June, 1916. He and Winfield Sheehan, general manager of Fox Film Corporation, are attending to the preparations for the festivities. Prior to his appointment to his present duties, Mr. Levy was the manager of the Philadelphia office.

Invitations to be present at the coming event have been issued to every exhibitor served by the New York Exchange, but motion picture exhibitors, whether users of Fox program or not, will be welcomed.

The William Fox stars working in the Fort Lee, N. J., studios, who are not on "locations" will make every effort to greet personally the men who show their pictures.

Just three years ago, in the days of William Fox's Box Office Attraction Company, the New York Exchange was established on the tenth floor of the Leavitt Building in Forty-sixth street. As the Fox photoplays have forged their way to the front, more room and more employees have been needed.

The immediate results following the announcement by Mr. Fox of his super deluxe productions for 1917 were so gratifying in point of volume of new business, that it became imperative to give the New York Exchange even larger floor space.

In addition to the regular releases, Mr. Levy's office handles the Foxfilm comedies which are released weekly independent of the Fox program. Since January 1, 1917, it has also taken over the work of the branches in Newark, N. J., and New Haven, Conn. These changes have proved effective because of the advantages to the exhibitors through concentration.

The territory included in the activities of the New York Exchange is New York State up to Albany, Connecticut to the Connecticut River, and New Jersey as far as Trenton.

Branch Shift in Vitagraph

W. F. Barrett has been appointed manager of the Toronto office of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, succeeding L. H. Watrous, who goes to the Boston Exchange.

News of St. Louis Offices

Bob Worth, salesman for the St. Louis branch of Pathé, was notified by the home office in New York last week that he headed the list of a hundred of the most enterprising Pathé salesmen from all over the country, in placing Pathé films in the theatres of the country.

The L. C. F. Exchange, at 331 Olive street, St. Louis, is now under the management of Joe Levy, who was appointed to the position on the resignation of F. J. Fegan, former manager.

Minneapolis Branch of General Guests of Meyer

Phil K. Meyer of the Minneapolis branch of the General Film Company tendered his employees and co-workers a "feast" on Saturday evening, March 10 at the American Grill. The dishes of the dinner were named from famous stars and production of General, and during the evening a play, "Team Work," was given.

Noteworthy Booking Mark

J. S. Hebrew, Philadelphia manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, reports to the main office that during the week ended March 17, his branch booked 134 theatres in Philadelphia for an average run of a little less than two days each. As there are approximately 185 motion picture theatres Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features were shown in the majority of them.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

P. A. Powers arrived in town last week from the Coast.

A. Hallow, representing the Standard Film Industries, Inc., of New York City, is now in Baltimore.

Will M. Elliott, handling "Joan the Woman" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," out of Detroit, for the Barnett Film Attractions, was in New York last week, returning Saturday to Detroit.

C. Francis Jenken, of Washington, is in town.

Charles E. Barklett, director, is on from Los Angeles.

R. Amsterdam, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia, is in town.

ALL THE NEWS THAT FITS, WE PRINT

Longacre Square, N. Y., April 14, 1917

EDITORIAL

Alexander Woolcott, dramatic critic of the New York Times, grew wrathly and we dare say almost foamed at the mouth, when Elsie Ferguson announced her intention of taking up picture work. The esteemed critic asserted that the business of picture production is one that every good actor despises. Then the only good players of real prominence it might seem are Maude Adams and John Drew, Julia Arthur and Laurette Taylor, and — who else is there anyway? Then according to the Woolcott formula, William Gillette is a miserable actor, Emily Stevens just now engaged in putting over a bad play with a brilliant performance, must rank with the poor ones and has been, Mary Pickford is, of course, a witched actress, and Sarah Bernhardt was never any good at all we deduce. As for Mae Marsh, Douglas Fairbanks and Miriam Cooper, there is no hope for them at all, and Milton Sills and H. B. Warner and Henry Walthall have nothing to look forward to in an artless field. And if one is to fit the news to all that Alexander prints such a versatile actor as Charlie Chaplin must needs go back and begin again.

By LONGACRE

DON'T some kind hearted director enlighten us as to why the Pennsylvania station and never the Grand Central is seen in pictures?

EDDIE MULEN, who occupies a publicity desk in the Universal office, announced the acquisition of a son and heir last week and according to Eddie, who is nothing if not original, both mother and child are doing well. Under no conditions will the offspring become a press agent, nor will he be named after any picture star or president. Well, to coin, a phrase, congratulations, Eddie.

OUR idea of the height of scenario department efficiency is contained in the announcement made by the United States Motion Picture Corporation of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., offering five dollars a word for comedy ideas of fifty words or under. Wonder whether a, say, and the are included on the price list.

SCREEN warfare seems to have some of the horrors of actual conflict about it. McClure Pictures recently spent over four thousand dollars on some battle scenes.

CLOSEUPS of domestic animals have been unusually plentiful this week. It's a wonder some director doesn't offer a prize for the discovery of some new house pet.

THE mythical kingdom of Europe has lost its romantic glamour since the European war began. It ought to be easy for scenario writers to lay such stories in Asia or South America instead.

THOSE maxims of optimism which come from Douglas Fairbanks via Bennie Zeldman may be all very true. "The actor may think he is working for money. He isn't. All that he wants is applause." Such words — what would June say, we wonder, if on pay day she was handed a card bearing the words "Many thanks"?

SAM RORK'S "Mack Sennett Weekly," a four page sheet dwelling on the merits of Keystone comedies is one of the few bright spots in an otherwise dull week. When he lists such alluring beauties as Edith Valk, Ethel Teare and Beulah Sunshine, one secretly longs for fare to Los Angeles and the freedom of the Keystone studio.

LILLIAN WALKER'S smile has "made her the idol of all people from pole to pole," which, take it from us is quite the height of a p. a.'s enthusiasm.

THE fact that among the "outcasts" of "The Derelict," are a former physician, a poet, a former construction engineer and a writer is no reason why the picture should be advertised as containing an all star cast.

W. FRED BOSSNER, known as "Boz," disappeared westward several weeks since and now looms up on the horizon as publicity secretary for the Ogden Pictures Corporation of Ogden, Utah, as well as secretary and treasurer for the Ogden Pictures Corporation. One of his side partners is the mayor of Ogden.

BILLIE RHODES, it is said, carries insurance on her eyes. The cute way she has of casting them about is rather dangerous at that.

FROM under the heading, "Nursery Rhymes," we pick Will we select the following dedicated to Myrtle and man. In its masterly conception, its potent meaning, and its spontaneity of rhythm, it is only equaled by the Tidden Ballades now being extensively quoted throughout. Mr. Willis is certainly crowding the Bronx poet for honors and further rivalry betwixt the twain, as it were, will be watched with exceeding interest.

Oh Myrtle, oh Myrtle, tell me if I ask it. Why did you start the "Valley O'Moon?" "Peer Gynt" and "Wild Olive," it was sure a task. It sure brought you th' "American Beauty" soon. Oh Myrtle, oh Myrtle, oh Myrtle quoth I, How is it your prestige has gone up so high? To blaze your name upon the sky, May others join you? Aye, by and by.

The following comes under the signature of "Alaska Bill," and is very obviously something of a cry in distress. But evidently the fellow who wrote it has not been in the picture business for any great period of time. Recollect the flood of "Where Are You?" and "Where Is My?" pictures a few weeks after Lois Weber's production "Where Are My Children?" made its appearance.

"... YET the teacher, so far as I have seen, always maintains her poise, her sweetness of temper, her willingness to shoulder burdens, and her interest in the children. The school teacher? God bless her!" William Farnum said a lot more in an outburst of sentimental reverie. Passing over the fact that the effusion is of immediate interest to the American picture industry, we rise to ask where Mr. Farnum went to school? "Her sweetness of temper," indeed. As the school boy with a pillow on his south end remarked, "One can never tell when they movie stars are jesting."

Lillian Walker's smile has "made her the idol of all people from pole to pole," which, take it from us is quite the height of a p. a.'s enthusiasm.
Minneapolis Planning for Convention Session

Committee Planning Big Exposition—Entertainments for Attendants Specially Planned—Exhibitors’ Discussion

At the meeting held last week at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, the larger part of the time was devoted to discussing the progress of the Convention Committee on its work for the big convention to be held May 1, 2 and 3.

It was unanimously decided that an exposition involved so much work by the members that the important matters would be neglected and the purpose of the convention lost sight of. Therefore, it was agreed that merely a convention would be held this year, with all the day hours devoted to the several important matters which are now under discussion by the Northwest Exhibitors’ Corporation, and the evenings to the entertainment of the out-of-town exhibitors.

All entertainments for the members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ Corporation of the Northwest will be absolutely free. The form of entertainments have been fixed as follows:

- A banquet to be given at the West Hotel, which promised to be the best ever given, full of fun and entertainment. A grand ball for the exhibitors and public, which will positively be the biggest ball ever given by the Northwest exhibitors. A midnight show, at which will be represented the best talent the Twin Cities can furnish. A cabaret entertainment, which will satisfy the hearts of all exhibitors.

The Northwest Exhibitors’ Corporation wants it understood by their out-of-town members that this entertainment will not be paid for by the individuals, but by the organization, and promises the exhibitors the best time they have ever yet enjoyed at any convention.

Meetings will be held every day, and all the matters which have attracted so much attention of late, and which mean so much to the exhibitors, will be ably taken care of. Arrangements will be made for the exchanges to meet the out-of-town exhibitors and have ample time to display their new features.

Nebraska Censor Bill May Die in Committee

The censorship bill at present before the Nebraska Legislature has little chance of passing despite that it was approved on first reading in the House, according to a statement of an influential legislator made last week.

The press of other bills has so far kept this particular one in the background and a committee of the legislature has been appointed and is busy weeding out all but the most important bills.

“Even if the censor bill, as a special order, survives this cutting process,” the lawmaker is quoted as saying, “I and many others I know will kill it. It is a useless bill.”

If this measure does not survive, the numerous attempts to get censorship Sunday closing, fire protective and occupation tax laws in Nebraska will have been in vain, all other bills having been killed.

Capt. Bonavita, Famous Trainer, Killed by Bear

Captain Jack Bonavita, animal trainer at the David Horsley studio, died last Monday evening from injuries received an hour previous in an encounter with an eight-foot polar bear in the training arena at the Horsley plant.

Bonavita has served as trainer for eighteen years, and during that time won for himself an international reputation. Eight years ago when attacked by lions at Luna Park, he lost his arm. He has been clawed in many parts of his body. No one was near the training arena at the Horsley studio when Bonavita was first attacked.

When Count Pietze, another trainer arrived after hearing the noise, he found Bonavita on the floor with the bear over him. The animal was shot by a traffic officer who was called.

The funeral was held Wednesday evening so that his many friends of the film industry could attend. The burial was in charge of the Elks.

Preparation Made for F. I. L. M. Clubs Convention

The F.I.L.M. Clubs throughout the country, aspiring to become a national association will hold their annual convention at Chicago, beginning May 8. There are fifteen of these clubs in as many large cities of the United States. All will be represented and every manufacturer of film is invited to send a delegation of members.

The chief business during the convention will be the forming of a national association. A constitution and by-laws will be drafted and officers elected. The committee in charge of the arrangements for the convention at Chicago are: William H. Jenner, secretary; Harry Weiss and H. W. Drucker.
Imperial Tax May Be Laid on Nova Scotia Houses

Taxation of the theatregoers of the Province of Nova Scotia, the rate of taxation ranging from one cent on a five cent ticket to ten cents on a ticket costing more than fifty cents, is provided for in a bill recently introduced into the House of Assembly by Premier George E. Murray. This bill, which amends the act governing theatres and cinematographs, states that each person attending a performance at a theatre shall pay upon admission thereto a tax to His Majesty for the use of Nova Scotia, the tax collected to be approximately twenty per cent. of admission fee.

The measure provides that the tax be collected by the owners of the theatre by means of tickets issued by the Board of Censors.

Kansas Review Body Named

Governor Capper of Kansas has appointed the new censorship board, and it assumed its duties in Kansas City, Kansas, April 1.

This board, however, is not called "censorship," but the "Board of Motion Picture Review." There will be no appeal board, but appeal may be taken from its decisions to courts of the counties.

Following are the members who will pass on the pictures to be seen by Kansans: Chairman, Mrs. J. M. Miller; Mrs. B. L. Short, and Miss Carrie Simpson, who was a member of the old board.

New Concern Forms to Handle Art Dramas in Southwest

Under the name of "Southwestern Art Dramas, Incorporated," F. M. Sanford and L. C. McHenry, two well known exchange men in the Southwest territory, have organized to handle the Art Dramas program in that section. The company has taken over a floor in the Fotoplay Building in Dallas, Texas.

Mr. Sanford is president of the concern. Mr. McHenry vice-president and assistant general manager, and A. Peckert, secretary and treasurer.

Detroit Exchange Brevities

Paul C. Mooney, district manager in the central west for William Fox productions, announces that on April 1 a branch office will be opened in Indianapolis to take care of bookings in the state of Indiana.

M. S. Bailey, division manager at Detroit for the Detroit Universal Company, has resigned to become president and general manager of the Metropolitan Company, specializing in animated cartoon film advertising, with offices in the Peter Smith Building.

Will M. Elliott, recently assistant manager of the Detroit exchange of Vitagraph, and former special representative and publicity director for the Detroit office of Paramount, has been appointed manager of the Detroit office of the Barnett Film Attractions, Peter Smith Building. This firm has Michigan on "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and "Joan the Woman."

The Fable of the Wise Guys Who Were Blind

By WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER

ONCE upon a time the moving picture business made oodles of money quickly, and apparently easily, for many men who waxed rich and eloquent and who employed press agents.

And these reputation-building boys got busy and busted into big type and preferred positions early and often with columns that made the story of El Dorado look like a split reed industrial.

Press pens made dimes dollars and built a statue of Opportunity entirely of celluloid; and the Dear Public read, envied and nervously toyed with the purse strings.

Then along came the Wallingford horde, grabbed a few facts, some fabulous figures, and juggled them publicly, prominently and promisingly, and the stage was set for the Special Edition bandits who star in the separation act.

Moving picture corporations grew like Topsy—a flock of Topsies—and the mantle of easy-gotten wealth draped over the shoulders of a crowd of our well-known pioneers, was some glittering garb. The fit wasn't always exact, and the style era had changed, but—gosh!—how becoming and alluring it seemed to those looking in from the outside.

And so, a lot of summer resort literature was printed, peddled and perused, and the come-on conversation interested a flock of people who ambushed to be in the "among those present" crowd with Selig, Kleine, Laemmle, Blackton, and the other big time magnates.

Not a few of those who arrived on the one-a-minute schedule aspired to crowd Mark Pickford or Douglas Fairbanks off the screen, and sometimes the promoter threw in this opportunity along with a stock certificate in exchange for a certain amount of real money, or an iron bound mortgage on the old home, or a lien on the Victrola, flivver or Saturday envelope.

Occasionally, after having garnered the coin, some of these promoters had the presence of mind to actually start a picture, but more often they didn't let a small matter like that interfere with the more important business of selling certificates.

So we find the moving picture business classed by many with the South Sea Bubble and wild cat gold mines, and we have more than a few indignant "investors" who believe that Baron Münchausen and Captain Kidd are more representative of the moving picture industry than Thomas A. Edison.

The bee does his work well on people who fall for the get-rich-quick idea and the fakers continue to horn in on our "reel" industry and spread the gospel of untruth.

Moral: Hold a dollar close to your eye, and you can't see the sun.

Penna. Legislators See "Joan"

On Wednesday evening, March 28, a special invitation exhibition of Cecil B. De Mille’s production, Geraldine Farrar in "Joan the Woman," was given at the Hall of the House of Representatives in Harrisburg, Pa., for members of the House and Senate of Pennsylvania as well as the state officials. IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

Edgar Lewis' Latest Bought by Frank G. Hall

"The Bar Sinister," Lewis' First Film to Follow "The Barrier," Sold to Newark, N. J., State Rights Man

EDGAR LEWIS' latest photodrama, "The Bar Sinister," the first to be produced since the release of "The Barrier," has been bought by Frank G. Hall, a prominent state rights' buyer of Newark, N. J., at a price said to have been $150,000.

The deal was consummated a little over a week ago, shortly following Mr. Lewis' return from the South, where "The Bar Sinister" was produced.

Mr. Hall bought the picture without having seen it, basing his decision on Lewis' past performances. Lewis is now at work cutting, assembling and writing in the titles. He expects to have the film in shape for a trade viewing some time during the first week in April.

According to Charles "Feature" Abrams, who handled the financial details of "The Bar Sinister," the sales agreement signed by Mr. Hall when he took over the picture provides that Mr. Lewis must spend a minimum of $30,000 in trade paper advertising.

"The Bar Sinister" will contain nine or ten reels, and relates to life in the turpentine country of the South. It contains a fight scene, which is said to excel that in "The Barrier."

Mr. Hall has not yet announced how "The Bar Sinister" will be handled. It may be sent out at a road show, or it may be sold territorially.

Michigan Exchanges Report Big Demand

Solid bookings until May 26 are reported by J. O. Brooks, manager of the Madison Film Exchange, Detroit, in connection with "The Crisis," which that exchange owns in Michigan. It ran for three weeks at the Washington theatre, Detroit, and is to be brought back in March for a return engagement.

"Bookings are being asked by exhibitors in every part of Michigan, large and small," said Charles Muchman, manager of the State Film Company, Detroit, in connection with "Civilization." This feature will start an indefinite engagement at the Washington theatre, Detroit, in March.

Longer runs and increased bookings are reported in Michigan by J. W. Loranger, manager of the Paramount Exchange in Detroit.

Masterpiece Buys Rights to "The Ne'er-Do-Well"

Korson and Amsterdam of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, 1225 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., have added another feature to their state rights purchases this week by a deal with Sol. L. Lesser of San Francisco for the Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey rights to "The Ne'er-Do-Well."

"The Ne'er-Do-Well" was originally presented in this territory at the Forest Theatre at $1 prices, where it played three weeks to capacity business.

"Beware of Strangers"

Leon D. Netter, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, 1201 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, Pa., has purchased the Ohio rights to William N. Seelig's production, "Beware of Strangers," featuring Thomas Santchi.

Four Prints of "Civilization" Being Used in Michigan

Four prints of "Civilization" are being used in Michigan by the State Film Company, 221 Broadway Market Building, who control the state rights.

Six weeks have already been secured in Detroit on one print, which is in addition to the three weeks' engagement at the Washington theatre.

"Civilization" is being sold to Michigan exhibitors on a flat rental basis, instead of percentage, which is the case with most of the big features.

"Who's Your Neighbor" to Be Sold Territorially

The Masterdrama Productions, Inc., at 116 Nassau street, New York, have begun production on Willard Mack's story, "Who's Your Neighbor?" Prominent in the cast are Evelyn Brent, Christine Mayo, Frank Morgan, Anders Randolf, William Sherwood, George Myron, Franklin Hanna, Brian Raymond, Mabel Wright, Gladys Fairbanks and others.

When completed, "Who's Your Neighbor" will be distributed on the state rights plan.

Stars of "Sin Woman" to Make Personal Appearance

Announcement is made that the seven-reel photoplay, "The Sin Woman" has been completed. The picture is the product of the George Backer Film Corporation, of which George W. Lederer is the general director.

The principal stars of the picture are Irene Fenwick, Reine Davies and Clifford Bruce.

It is the plan of the company to send these stars out on tour to the various cities where the picture will be shown.

Augustus Thomas, George Hobart and Winchell Smith have been commissioned to write and acting prologues to the filmed story. It is the Lederer-Backer plan to take the stars to the principal city of each state where state rights buyers may require co-operation, and through the medium of the novelty attract popular and critical attention to the picture.

"The Witching Hour" Sold for Western States

Lester Park, representing the Photoplay Exchange of Salt Lake City, Utah, has consummated a contract for his organization with President William L. Sherrill of the Frohman Amusement Corporation for the exclusive rights to the Frohman master production, "The Witching Hour," for the territory of Colorado, Wyoming and Utah.

Christie Comedies Sell in West

Charles E. Christie, business manager of the Christie Film Company, has closed contracts for the release of Christie Comedies in all states except Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. In addition, the company's subjects are going to Australia and the Orient, and negotiations are now under way for European and South American rights.
Philadelphia Ideal Exchange to Handle Griffith Reissues

The newest exchange to enter the state rights field in Philadelphia is the Ideal exchange, 235 N. 13th street, where it occupies an entire three story building. Albert Teitel, general manager of the Ideal Exchange is well known as the former president of the Ideal Laboratories and studios at Hudson Heights, N. J.

The Ideal exchange has a New York office at 206 Broadway. The building occupied by the Philadelphia office was erected especially.

The Ideal intends handling Griffith reissues. It has also acquired the rights to "Ne'er-Do-Well" Selling Rapidly

Sol Lesser, who bought the Selig seven-part feature production, "The Ne'er Do Well," for sale on the territorial plan, reports that the picture is selling rapidly. Mr. Lesser has held on of the production and is exploiting it through his own organization. He is gratified at the results so far and expects to announce the complete sale of territorial rights in the near future.

Many Inquiries Come Regarding Lois Weber's Latest

Following the announcement that the Lois Weber seven-part feature production, "Even As You and I," had been booked for the Rialto theatre and was to be subsequently released on the stage, inquiries have come in to the Lois Weber state rights department, 1600 Broadway, from leading film men in all parts of the country. Those who have been able to view this picture have been unanimous in declaring it a great film achievement.

The cast is headed by Ben Wilson and Mignon Anderson. Others in the cast include Bertram Grassby, Priscilla Dean, Harry Carter, Maude George and Hayward Mack. The story is by Willie Woods and the scenario by Maude George.

"Ne'er-Do-Well" Selling Rapidly

"The Birds' Christmas Carol"

The Frieder Film Corporation of Chicago and Lankershim, Cal., makes its initial bow with a five-part offering of Kate Douglas Wiggins' story, "The Birds' Christmas Carol," work on which was completed recently at the big Lankershim studios.

The Birds' Christmas Carol" numbers its readers by the million and has been one of the most popular of the entire Houghton Mifflin line. The Eastern publishing house refused numerous offers before disposing of the film rights owing to Miss Wiggins' determination that it be produced with the care and artistry that made her story so popular.

DIXON BOARDMAN, president of the E. L. S. Motion Picture Corporation, under whose personal supervision the five-reel feature "Trooper 44" was produced, announces that in all probability he will now proceed to make a series of features, each complete in itself, but each enlisting the services of the Mounted Troopers as a picturesque background.

It is also announced by the E. L. S. concern that they have inaugurated an "Exhibitors' Advisory Department," and upon application to the publicity bureau of the concern the E. L. S. people will be glad to furnish not only press sheets, cuts and general publicity matter, but also give special advice as to the best means of advertising "Trooper 44" in the particular sections in which it may be played. The picture is being sold on state rights.

In this connection it is interesting to note, say the heads of the concern, that legislation is now pending in thirteen states for the establishment of a state police, and, in fact, in New York state such a bill has been already passed by the Senate. The above-mentioned fact, it is pointed out, lends peculiar advertising value to "Trooper 44," particularly as ex-President Roosevelt has stated that the mounted police force would make magnificent cavalry in time of warfare.

L. Rosenbluh Says Pictures Must Be Built for Market

Louis Rosenbluh, directing head of the Variety Films Corporation, believes that a picture must literally be "built to order" for the state rights market, or else it will not succeed.

"It was something less than a year ago," said Mr. Rosenbluh, "when I decided that the Independent market was growing in importance again, and reaching that stage of development where it could absorb big, important productions. At this time, I made an effort to secure production arrangements looking forward to the creation of a story, based on theme, which, according to a prominent legislator, was to be widely discussed in various stage lawmaking bodies.

"After considerable difficulty, I secured a production arrangement with a big producer, who placed at my disposal, such of his numerous, well-known personalities as were available.

"I could have had big stage names, but selected instead, known screen personalities who had attracted me by their previous work. Then I chose a director who had earned an excellent name for his artistic, dramatic productions.

"Then I gave them unlimited time in which to make the picture. And six months later, I received the finished negative. I could have disposed of it at once, I presume, for it was a very interesting picture, with big moments, powerful climaxes and sufficient heart interest to compel comment. And the project, even six months ago, was timely. But I wanted to study my field."

Trade Showing for "Fated Hour" to Be Given April 9

The Cines Film Corporation announces that a trade showing of their latest production, "The Fated Hour" will be given state rights buyers, reviewers and all others interested, at the Simplex projection room, fifth floor of the Candler building, New York, at three o'clock Monday afternoon, April 9.

"The Fated Hour," according to Cine officials, is a melodramatic six-reeler.

Mr. Rosenbluh also has on hand several thousand feet of carefully selected educational subjects.

The recent German offensive and retreat along the western front has drawn attention to the Germanic Official War Films' production, "Germany and Its Armies of Today," which is being disposed of on the state rights plan.

While the Germanic Company's films do not show the fighting, they make up for the lack of this feature by depicting economic conditions and industrial activities far within the peaceful zone.

"The Deemster" Sold in Many Territories

B. Amsterdam of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, of Vine street, Philadelphia, purchased "The Deemster" for the states of Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia. The deal was completed on Wednesday, March 28. Mr. Amsterdam, who is associated with L. Korson, will present "The Deemster" in the North End theatre, Washington, the week of April 23 for a run of four weeks, and the same week in a legitimate theatre in Baltimore for a period of two weeks, and possibly more.

Mr. Amsterdam is arranging a press club showing at Washington the week of April 16. He advises that he will handle "The Deemster" throughout his territory as a road attraction, playing all the larger cities.

Mr. Amsterdam purchased "The Deemster" possibly at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, in the course of the next five or six weeks on an elaborate scale.

F. E. Backer, president of the Dreadnaught Film Corporation, left for Pittsburgh, Detroit and Chicago to complete a deal on the Hall Caine drama, "The Deemster," for eastern Pennsylvania. Mr. Backer will present "The Deemster" possibly at the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, in the course of the next five or six weeks on an elaborate scale.

Mutt and Jeff Cartoons Go Up to One Thousand Feet

In celebration of the anniversary of Bud Fisher's animated cartoons of Mutt and Jeff, H. Grossman, the distributor, has decided to increase their length from 500 feet to 1,000 by the addition of an educational subject of a scenic or industrial nature.

According to Mr. Grossman, exchanges buying Mutt and Jeff films will be given the full-reel subjects on an unusual basis, made possible through his activities in the foreign market.

Mr. Grossman already has on hand several thousand feet of carefully selected educational subjects.

Germanic War Films Timely

The recent German offensive and retreat along the western front has drawn attention to the Germanic Official War Films' production, "Germany and Its Armies of Today," which is being disposed of on the state rights plan.
PETITE Gladys Leslie is coming in for many kind words from her employers these days, and ambitious plans are being made for her. Recently Edwin Thanhouser, believer in the theory that with proper material a star can be developed almost over night, declared he was fully warranted in his contention by the manner in which Miss Leslie had come to the front. Van Dyke Brooke, new director of the “find” goes farther and states he is certain the actress will make a profound impression.

JOE KAUFMAN, director of George M. Cohan’s first Arctraft picture, “Broadway Jones” met with a painful auto accident last week at Englewood Heights, N. J. Mr. Kaufman was returning home from the studio in his machine through a heavy fog which settled behind the Palisades when he ran into another car head on. Mr. Kaufman suffered from several painful lacerations and after treatment was taken to his home in New Jersey where he is resting.

WHEN Albert S. Hart, a six-footer, went so far in his pursuance of realism as to fail to “pull a punch,” Montague Love, after a painful auto accident, was fully warranted in his contention by the manner in which Miss Leslie had come to the front. Van Dyke Brooke, new director of the “find” goes farther and states he is certain the actress will make a profound impression.

ALL of Viola Dana’s studious hours in Red Cross technique have not been wasted. Recently she was able to render first aid assistance to two of the players supporting her in her forthcoming Metro-Columbia production when Robert Walker, George Morling and Fred Kallgren severely cut their hands in a struggle for possession of a knife in one of the tense scenes in “Lady Barnacle.”

BY strange coincidence Ada Gilman, who appeared in Douglas Fairbanks’ first starring vehicle on the speaking stage, also plays a supporting character in his first photoplay produced by his own company for Artcraft Pictures, “In Again-Out Again.”

When “Doug,” as a budding stage star was about to appear in his big part for the first time Miss Gilman spent over an hour soothing the nervous actor. Her kind words finally had their effect on Fairbanks who scored a big hit. The next day Miss Gilman was surprised to find her dressing room filled with flowers and a note of deepest appreciation. As “Doug” became more widely known Miss Gilman, who is now some sixty years old, prized the little note more highly and when he returned to his dressing room at the studio recently, after finishing his first scene for “In Again-Out Again,” he was surprised to find on his dressing table the same note neatly framed together with a huge bouquet and another note from Miss Gilman wishing him success in the initial picture produced by his own organization.

THEDA BARA has almost completed her work in the second super de luxe production which J. Gordon Edwards has been directing at St. Augustine, Fla., and will return to the Fort Lee studios in the first week in April.

“The Maelstrom,” the new vehicle for Earle Williams, has been completed at the Vitagraph studio by Director Paul Scardon, in spite of numerous drawbacks. Mr. Williams and Dorothy Kelly did the final scene last week and the script was turned in as finished along with a sigh of relief by the director.

On one day, during production, five members of the cast were out through illness. At another time two of the players were knocked out while staging fights. Later John Robertson while doing a drop through a trap with Earle Williams was so severely injured he was out for several days.

MAE MARSH, who made one of the screen’s most charming “boys” in “The Wharf Rat,” will return to masculine garb for a portion of her second Goldwyn production, now being made by John W. Noble.

In anticipation of the rapid completion of this subject Goldwyn has already selected Miss Marsh’s third production which will get under way the latter part of April.

GOLDWYN’S wide exploitation of Mae Marsh is not to interfere with the career of her popular sister. Photoplay fans with whom Marguerite Marsh is a favorite will be glad to learn that Marguerite has been given an important role in the second Goldwyn picture in which Maxine Elliott is to appear and which was begun last week under direction of Arthur Hopkins.

EVERY star is said, by the P. A.’s at least, to have a hobby. Now it is discovered that Alma Hanlon’s is the collection of battle flags.

The Art Drama star recently bought at the auction of a prominent millionaire’s collection what was described as the flag carried by Joan of Arc in the battle of Orleans, and has added it to her collection of the colors of all nations and periods.
THOMAS H. INCE is to supervise a greater portion of Triangle films made on the West Coast. The last week has seen indications of increased activities at the Culver City studios, and the transfer of a number of former Fine Art players to that studio.

Mr. Ince intends to increase his producing staff to ten directors. The number heretofore having been six and seven. Then, too, at the studio there is work going on toward the building of a new enclosed stage of the same type as the others built heretofore. Several months ago it was announced the studio costing a half million dollars was complete. The additional stage is to be built at the extreme south of the lot, just beyond stage No. 3.

In the past few weeks, Mr. Ince has added two directors to his staff; Roy Nye and Victor Schertzinger. It is understood he will not have under his supervision, any of the former directors at the Fine Arts studio, although Chester Withey, whose most recent production was "The Bad Boy," has a contract which continues for a number of months. Mr. Ince, it is understood, desires to use only directors who have learned his manner of picture production. All of the directors who have been with him for several years at the Ince school, and the list includes Reginald Barker, Raymond West, Walter Edwards, Charles Miller and William S. Hart. All of these advanced from either assistant director or actor to the position of director.

A number of former Fine Art players under contract with the Majestic Company are now engaged at the Ince studio at Culver City. Alma Rueben is playing opposite William S. Hart. Bessie Love, it is stated, is shortly to be cast in a subject, and Mildred Harris is already playing in a picture at the Ince plant.

DIRECTOR REGINALD BARKER, Clara Williams, an other Ince players totaling in all fifteen, are home from San Francisco, where they spent ten days making dock scenes and others aboard an ocean liner. This photoplay was written by J. G. Hawks, who is a native of San Francisco, and spent all his boyhood days there.

Thos. H. Ince has engaged another leading woman in the person of Olive Thomas, who has for the past two years been with Ziegfeld's "Pollies." Miss Thomas arrived at the studio this week, and will shortly begin work in her first Triangle-Kay-Bee production.

The first studio to adopt electrical advertising, is the plant of Thomas H. Ince at Culver City. For the first time the mammoth electric sign built on top of the three-story wardrobe building was flashed on this week. This has three separate parts. At the top is a large circle in the center of which a flame starts and proceeds to the edge. After this is shown the name of Thomas H. Ince is flashed on in white within the ball of fire, and then the words Triangle Studios is spelled out, while below a triangle are the trade-mark letters Ray-Bee, flashed on and off alternately. The sign is approximately sixty feet in length, and stands about forty feet above the roof of the administration building, from which point it may be seen for about ten miles in either direction. It was built and erected by the Greenwood Sign Company, Western, which has branches in a number of cities.

WITH the rainy season over, Universal City is to take on greater activities. In fact, the past week has seen the employment of great numbers of extra players required for big scenes, the making of which have been delayed until weather conditions were settled. Twenty of the twenty-six directors are daily at work, and statistics gathered one day during the past week show that sixty-two automobiles, six of them big forty passenger sight-seeing cars, were needed to convey the producing companies to outside locations in Pasadena, the mountains, on the deserts, and at the beaches. On this day, more than 700 people were engaged for extra parts.

But few new productions were taken up at U City this week. Of the number, two are two-reel subjects, one will consist of three reels, and another of five. The Lyons-Moran Nestor organization is making "A Rag Time Riot," and the Ince are still at work on the two-reel subject, "Twenty Thousand Legs Under the Sea." Henry McRae is directing a thriller entitled "Dropped from the Clouds," which will feature Eileen Sedgwick. A number of the Universal cowboys take part in the picture, which includes some sensational aeroplane work. The George E. Marshall Western Company, which has Janet Eastman and Neal Hart playing the leads, is making "Ole Turns the Tables." Director Marshall wrote this two-reel story, and is using several of the Universal cowboys in its making.

Herbert Rawlinson, who has been on a vacation, is back at work as the featured player in a five-reel subject, entitled "Hands Up," adapted from a story by George Bronson Howard. Playing opposite Mr. Rawlinson is a new leading woman for Universal films, Alice Lake, who was introduced on the screen by Roscoe Arbuckle when he was working in the East, and came West, and was with him at the Keystone. Jack Conway will direct this picture.

Ruth Stonehouse is taking the part of an uncontrollable inmate of an orphan asylum in three-reel comedy-drama; "The Lovable Thief," which Miss Stonehouse is directing herself.
THE Universal Serial Company filming the ten episode subject, "The Voice of the Wire" with Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber in the featured roles, and Stuart Paton the director, are now on the ninth episode. Upon the completion of this serial another of sixteen episodes will be taken up. It is an adaptation from the story by Joseph Reacli, titled "Looch."

A number of Universal companies will complete the multiple reel subjects on which they are now working within the next few days. Included in this list are: "The Fires of Rebellion," being made by Ida May Park, featuring Dorothy Granger and William Stowell; Lynn Reynolds Company making "The Three Guardians;" "The Kentucky Cinderella," being filmed by Rupert Julian; and Allen Holubar, who is directing the making of "The Adirondack Affair." The Jack Mulhall Company filming "Speeding Up Susan," will not complete their subject for a week or ten days. This consists of four reels, and will be the first one of this size turned out for the new Universal program.

Debates to the thirteenth annual convention of the American Association of General Baggage Agents in session in Los Angeles, spent a day at U City this week as guests of General Manager H. O. Davis. On another day Mr. Davis had as his guest Colonel John B. McDonald, who is making an inspection of the artillery and cavalry of the West coast and mountain states.

NOW that the eighth episode of the Mutual-Signal serial "The Railroad Raiders" has been completed, Director J. P. McGowan has arranged with Frank H. Spearman to write the fiction version of the Helen Holmes serial. Mr. Spearman is author of "The Girl and the Game," "Whispering Smith," "Held for Orders," and many other popular novels. The fifteen installments will appear simultaneously with releases of the serial in a large number of metropolitan and small city newspapers.

The recently purchased Pullman car was crushed to pieces Sunday, when a very realistic wreck was staged at the Lasky Studio. The car, which was moved forward by a passenger train at the rate of thirty miles an hour, left the track and rolled down a forty foot embankment. Following this, a wrecker crew of the railroad cleared up the debris in the usual way. The scene was made at a point where the boulevard parallels the railroad, and scores of auto parties stopped and offered aid in taking the injured to a hospital. According to the sheriff, six persons were killed, but in reality no one received a scratch. The making of the wreck was witnessed by a crowd estimated to consist of two thousand people. The wreck scene will be a part of the sixth episode, "The Overland Disaster."

THE Al. E. Christie Company is engaged in filming "Practice What You Preach," which will introduce Hazel Alden, their new leading woman. It is a farcical tale of a father fooling the parents by masquerading as a minister who is to marry their daughter, and in the end the minister does marry her, but he is not the groom. Neal Burns, Eddie Barry, George French and Stella Adams make up the cast.

EASE has been taken on the studio at Santa Monica by a new organization, the Baron Long Film Company. Mr. Long is the owner of the Vernon Country Club, near Los Angeles, and Sunset Inn at Santa Monica, and his company will make Sunset Comedies consisting of one-reel. Albert W. Hale will be general manager of the company and supervise the production.

Lou-Tellegen arrived at the Lasky studio early this week, and will shortly begin directing there. Harry Irwin, formerly head of the property department at the Ince studios, has been engaged by the Lasky Company, and the former head of the property department there, H. C. Higgins, has been promoted to the art department, where he will work with Wilfred Buckland.

The Mary Pickford Company went to Santa Cruz this week for coast scenes for the coming Arbetta subject, which it is said has to do with early frontier life of the days of the vigilantes. Elliott Dexter, Horace Carpenter, Charles Ogle, Director General Cecil B. de Mille, Janie McPherson, Director of Photography Alvy Wyckoff, were in the party which in all included about twenty.

Director Robert Thorneby, Vivian Martin, Sessue Hayakawa and other members of the Lasky Company are home from San Diego, where scenes were made early this week.

WITH three companies working at the David Horsley studio now, two of these making multiple reel subjects of five reels or more, gives the plant an atmosphere which bespeaks the result of Mr. Wilbur with director Harrish Ingram being in charge of the production. This picture will serve to introduce a new leading woman whom Mr. Horsley engaged recently while in New York with Crosby.

General Manager W. A. S. Douglas this week saw the making of the first series of the new "Little Merry Sunshine" pictures by the Lasalida organization, being directed by Jerome Moorhead. The first picture as made will be titled "When Baby Forgot." The Lasalida Films, Inc., as stated exclusively in recent issue of Motion Picture News, has leased space at the Horsley studios for all production which will be made there. The personnel of the supporting cast for the series has not entirely been decided upon, but Frank Newberg will be the leading man. Director Moore was selected by Pathe to direct the "Merry Sunshine" pictures. He was formerly affiliated with Thanhouser, where he was in charge of the Gladys Hulette release.

John Jasper, who for the past year has served as business manager of the David Horsley studio, tendered his resignation this week to become effective March 31, and a contract has been made with Norman Manning to succeed Mr. Jasper.

Mr. Manning has served in this capacity at the studios of the Balboa Amusement Producing Company, Long Beach, since the inception of Horkeimer Bros. in the film industry more than three years ago. Mr. Manning thoroughly understands every phase of motion picture production, and his will to the Balboa forces will no doubt prove very beneficial to that organization.

A contract for services of Milton Farney, director of the Cub Comedy Company, was renewed this week by David Horsley. Recently George Ovey was placed under a new contract, all of which points to the fact that Horsley Cub Comedies will continue on the Mutual program for many weeks.

AFTER a week spent in the decidedly Western mining town of Jerome, Arizona, the producing company of the Yorke-Metro organization, headed by Harold Lockwood returned to Los Angeles Friday. Jerome, Arizona, the producing unit officers found an ideal place for filming scenes for the coming release, "The Hidden Spring." The United Verde Mines owned by Senator Clarke, the greatest producers within the boundaries of the United States, are located at Jerome, and it was around these that many of the scenes were made. Hundreds of the miners worked with the players in many situations, and the company was given the privilege of using company streets or buildings while they were there. E. Mason Hopper is in charge of filming this production, and the scenario was prepared by Richard V. Spencer.

F. J. Balshofer arrived in Los Angeles this week after spending several weeks in the East. Part of his time was spent in investigating the film market in Eastern cities, and upon his return he announced he had come to the conclusion, better stories and better productions were needed, if motion pictures retained their present position as the most popular amusement of the American public. For this reason he plans to take more time in the making of each Harold Lockwood subject, and considerable more money will be spent for the filming of each one. Scenarios are now in preparation for The Haunted Pajamas, adapted from the stories Perry Elliott andaptioned for the "Yellow Dove" from the story by Geo. Gibbs. Many of the big scenes for the coming Selig production "Caleb Conover, Railroader" were made this week by Directors Colin Campbell and the time more than four hundred people being used. A local legitimate stage theatre was leased for several days, and here a rousing political meeting continued for days. George Fawcett is a featured player of this photo- play, appearing in the name roll.

"The Lad and the Lion" is in production under the direction of Al Green who has Vivian Reed, William Machin and Al Fishon as principals. This picture will consist of five reels or more, and is by Edgar Rice Burroughs, the author of "Tarzan the Ape." The photoplay will be of a melodramatic type, containing a number of sensational scenes, including a spectacular wreck. Burroughs, author of "Tarzan the Ape." The photoplay will be of a melodramatic type, containing a number of sensational scenes, including a spectacular wreck.

It is the plan of these producers to combine microscopic motion pictures with comedy situations, and in their first reel they show the effect of a new eye salve which gives to the eye microscopic power. A number of interesting scenes are worked in showing the flow of blood in veins of the hand, the capers of a flea, the actions of a lady-bug and many similar shots.

Mr. Wing is a well-known scenario writer, having been affiliated with Selig for a number of years and later has free-lanced a number of well-known photo-plays. This is the second time that Wing has followed the Tholhurst method of making microscopic motion pictures has been used. The first was for inserts in the Fine Art-Triangle picture "The Microscopic Mystery." Pictures are drawn from a light which does not kill the microscopic subject being photographed. The combination of comedy and microscopic views make a very interesting novelty picture that will add merit to a program.

Mary Anderson and Antonio Morino are to be co-starred in the next Vitagraph subject, directed by William Walbert. The title of this is "The Lady Sheriff." The studio is an interesting place. We couldn't get the hang of any of their stories, but they acted just like we knew what they was doing. Charley Christie showed us through the property room--"You're breakable, eh?"

Right in the center of this cross fire of comedy was Charley Sebastian, our former mayor. He's working in the story department for Cubby whom.

The picture company plans to take more time in the making of each Harold Lockwood subject, and considerable more money will be spent for the filming of each one. Scenarios are now in preparation for The Haunted Pajamas, adapted from the stories Perry Elliott andaptioned for the "Yellow Dove" from the story by Geo. Gibbs. The Caulfield Photo Plays Company, have completed the first four releases for the Mutual program, the one-reel standard feature being made under the direction of Scott Sidney.

Billy Rhodes, the star of this series will be seen first in "Her Hero" and following this will come "When Mary Took the Cooks Out" and "Walked Uncle" and "The Kleptomaniac.

President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Film Company, Signal Films Corporation and Vogue Films, Inc., departed East Saturday, March 24, after spending four months in the Western States. While no statement was given out by Mr. Hutchinson, it was learned that there are no changes of any importance concerning future policy of the producing companies are to be inaugurated in the near future.

PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOURS IN FLYCKSVILLE

With the arrival of Spring this week, a hanker for the green outdoors overcame us, and while wandering, past Monday night, we solved the problem of where we were going next. We got an insight from the six foot letters stuffed Chrissie Comedies. The next two minutes were spent in the midst of the melting pot of comedies, just off the kitchen.

At Christie was making scenes at one end of the block with Neal Burns as affdine young lover, and Betty Compson was the cut-up belle of the evening. She looked just like one, but we can't say it was from practice. Eddie Barry was wearing the cloth as a substitute, and George French charged him the stuff. George is worse than a village pirate for making people.

The other end of the block. Hen, Lebrum was making a megaphone. Hen, really needs one for his heart is so strong. Billie Ritchie was all screwed up about the mustache, and Gerrie Selby looked as if she was about to have a good time. Sahl she had on silk pajamas.

In right of the center of this cross fire of comedy was Charlie Sebastian, our former mayor. He's working in the story department for Cubby whom.

He's working on the giving scene now. Doc. Stafford was telling us how to act, and from the prop- man we learned our former mayor's life was soon to be seen on the screen. We wonder why some people don't like what they do and some people won't like what they see.

The studio is an interesting place. We couldn't get the hang of any of their stories, but they acted just like we knew what they was doing. Charley Christie showed us through the property room--"You're breakable, eh?"

Congratulations are due Ceci deMille—He's a father. The boy thrives and a letter was adopted from an orphanage.

Bill Bertram played Indian this week along with directing for Balboa, just for diversion, and they say Bill made an excellent Indian.

Bill Werdington is not moving around as briskly as before, the cause a big bug piece of scenery that he bought last week. He was no bones broken, but Bill lumps a little.

Requisitions—that's a popular word at City—on day this week called for eleven pianos, and Property Master H. Sims had the time of his proping career stretching six to that number.

“The Whip”
(Paragon—Eight Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

MAURICE TOURNEUR has made a very fine photodramatic production of this famous melodrama; it has all the old earmarks of this, for Mr. Tourneur could not make it over into another play entirely; it has been so elaborated and changed, however, that only the melodramatic main points of the play will be recognized as making the success of it in pictures.

There is meat enough to this plot to warrant its making a fine feature of ordinary length, and the real talent of Mr. Tourneur has been used in developing the incidental plot to sustain interest through a two-hour show. He has succeeded admirably. Our only criticism would concern minor flaws in the wreck scene.

The theme of the picture in general follows the original play of Cecil Raleigh and Henry Hamilton in its essential thrills, and a wonderful touch is given the introduction of the characters by the fox-hunt, the hounds in cry, and the introduction of even the live fox in a very clever close-up. The incidents of the horse-box and the race-track scenes are handled in a manner beyond comparison with ordinary previous attempts at this sort of thing.

“The Whip” is a much better than ordinary picture, because it has been so painstakingly done. It is a perfect example of directorial genius that entitle the picture to a place on the honor roll. THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Joe Kelly (Alfred Hemming), bookmaker, “has it on” Baron Sartoris (Paul McAllister) and his consort, Mrs. Tudge Beverley (Warren Cook), whose daughter Diana is loved by Hubert Brancaster (Irving Cummings).

Kelly forges a check of Brancaster’s and uses the two villains as false accusers to convince the Beverleys that he is a worthless sort. Mean meantime, Harry Anson (Dion Titheridge), a jockey in the employ of the Beverleys, and his sister Myrtle (Jean Dumar) know the secret that “The Whip,” an uncontrollable but very fast horse has become docile and will win the handicap event in the coming races at Saratoga. Brancaster, learning of this, wagers twenty to one with Kelly on “The Whip.” Sartoris, who seeks to dishonor Myrtle, learns of this and plans to wreck the car in which “The Whip” is shipped to the race-track. The plot fails, because Brancaster learns of the villainy and races to the car just in time to release the horse and jockey as the limited crashes into the car. Joe Kelly, turning on his accomplices, sets Brancaster right, and the tables are turned in favor of Brancaster, who, with his fortune retrieved, is reinstated.

“The More Excellent Way”
(Vitgraph—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY’S story is exceedingly difficult to express in motion pictures. Vitagraph has given it a beautiful, and in fact an exceedingly photodramatic production.

Charles Richman, as the man too old to win the young girl’s passionate love, in competition with a young blood, whose youth and dash alone attracted the girl, is an ideal type for such a part. We liked his handling of the role of John Warburton as well as anything of the kind we have ever seen.

Anita Stewart, as the girl who didn’t know how impossible it was to give up her passion for the man who appealed to her through his goodness of heart and soul, met the requirements of such a difficult

High Finance”
(Fox—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

THIS is a feature that will go well anywhere, for it carries a finely developed plot, the picturization is uniformly good, and the small love affair running through it is so delicately handled as to reflect great credit on the director, Otis Turner. The photography of the Western scenery, and particularly of the mine-shaft, is commendable; and the interiors, too, are well selected and clearly reproduced.

The theme carried throughout is that “money is easy to get, if one is not particular how he gets it”; and George Walsh, in proving this theory, acquits himself well, as doubtless his father, whom he stung for $100,000, will readily admit. THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Preston Platt (George Walsh), after a particularly strenuous night of revelry, is called to account by his wealthy father, Jonathan Platt (Herschell Mayall), and informed that his allowance, long overdrawn, would be immediately stopped. The son, suffering from a headache of the “morning after” variety, remarks: “Oh, I didn’t know you wanted me to go to work,” and adds: “Oh, shucks, money is the easiest thing in the world to get, providing you don’t give a damn how you get it.” He therefore, under the name of William Black, applies for and obtains a position as guide and valet to a most feminine youth, Ethelbert Van derpool (William R. Marr), and goes West with him to inspect the Free Booter mine, in which Ethelbert is interested. Free Booter stock has been a drug on the market, and many a joke has been cracked at its expense. Further, Preston Platt recalls the fact that Pringle, his former valet, had some such stock, which he decides to turn to good account.

Pringle, therefore, is instructed to go to Jonathan Platt and buy a little more Free Booter stock, merely as a means of getting the skids. Then a few hundred pounds of rich ore are shipped to the mine, a fake explosion is staged, and the rich deposit discovered.

Of course, the papers carry an account of the rich find, and Preston’s father and a business rival try to beat each other getting to the mine to buy options, or maybe outright control. Pringle, the former valet, conducted himself well, and unleads his stock for $100,000 to the first arrival. Jonathan Platt, annoyed at being unable to reach the mine in time, buys a half interest from this purchaser for $100,000. The certified checks have changed hands, the son makes his appearance, and the discovery of a shipping tag convinces the buyers they have been bunted. But the son has made good his boast, and is reinstated in the good graces of his father.
part exceedingly well. In fact, if there is anything to be questioned about the popularity of this picture it must be in the story itself, which depends for its pulling power entirely on the tension of such a situation as is created here.

We would say in houses appealing to the highest class of patronage, such as the Rialto and the Strand (Manager Rothapple has announced this picture for presentation at the Rialto), this play will be a big card. Where so-called "punch," with variations and not merely one tense situation elaborated is called for audiences may get restless. Sex appeal, however, can usually be depended on for strong pulling power, and this is decidedly a play with strong sex appeal to adult audiences.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Chrissey Deselden (Anita Stewart) is John Warburton’s (Charles Richman) ward. When Robert Neyland (Rudolph Cameron), a ne’er do well, with an inherited taint for liquor, to whom Chrissey is engaged, insults her in an intoxicated condition, Chrissey shrinks to protection to her guardian, and impulsively accepts his offer of marriage.

After the ceremony, when John demands the kiss and affection he expects as a husband, he finds Chrissey cold as ice. Then he is told that she never promised him love.

He discovers her with Bob, and utterly discouraged, he leaves her. She goes to Reno, to get a divorce, and while there Bob tries to ruin John in the stock market. When Bob wires for Chrissey’s money, to use in this nefarious way, John’s old friend, Col. Taylor (Chas. Stevenson) wires her the facts, and she refuses, with the result Bob, instead of John, is ruined. Bob commits suicide and then she realizes she is now mature enough to appreciate her patient, but always loyal husband. He receives the first real kiss and both are for the first time really happy.

"Mr. Dolan of New York"

(Jack Mulhall, Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

With House Peters, Myrtle Stedman, J. W. Johnston and Helen Eddy, an all-star cast has been assembled around a good plot idea, and E. Mason Hopper has given us a five-reel, beautifully staged production; but for nearly three full reels it is introductory, "getting acquainted" with the characters—nothing else.

And no audience will appreciate being dallied with for more than half an hour until enough plot can be gathered together to finish with the right dash and interest. The first reel is devoted to showing the faith of the lover in his sweetheart, and the friendship between the two men who were to be forced into rivalry later by the peculiar twist to the plot. The second reel is devoted to showing the innocence of the country girl and the danger of her being spoiled in the fast company of Diana Gordon, which is none too easy to grasp by those who have seen Miss Stedman in her many previous roles as the innocent and placid one. The third reel leads up to the impulsive declaration of love by Diana to Paul and his sacrifice to save Keith’s feelings. In each one of these three reels a single scene or two of a little child is injected, why appears later, when she is the central figure of the plot.

From the point when, a little more than half way through the play, Diana confesses her love for Paul and he, seeing Keith observing them, pretends he is the disloyal one and goes to him. The others are perfectly cast and do splendid work. But who can imagine Miss Stedman faithless to her true lover and vampire the other man? Even though, in the last scenes, as the repentant wife she is great.

Boyhood friends, Keith Gordon, wealthy architect (J. W. Johnston), and Paul Russell, surgeon, especially skilled in infantile paralysis cases (House Peters), mutually discuss Keith’s love for Diana, his wife, and are very happy in one another's company. Diana (Myrtle Stedman) is obsessed with a love for Paul; and when Marjorie (Helen Eddy), Keith's innocent sister, comes to visit them from the country, she cannot bear to see Paul falling deeply in love with her. When she hears Paul about to propose to Marjorie she finds a pretext to interrupt them, and thus herself at Paul's feet. Just then Keith comes in, and thinking only of the terrible blight on Keith's happiness if he shall discover Diana's unfaithfulness, Paul lets Keith believe he is the one at fault.

Paul; and when Marjorie (Helen Eddy), Keith's innocent sister, comes to visit them from the country, she cannot bear to see Paul falling deeply in love with her. When she hears Paul about to propose to Marjorie she finds a pretext to interrupt them, and Keith's little child is stricken. Diana calls Paul to their aid, but Keith refuses "even the life of his child, for a blind girl". Eleanor's (Florence La Badie) sight is restored. She leaves him, and it is only years later, after Eleanor has been insulted by a butler. Whatever misunderstanding existed between the two is then smoothed over.

Thomas Curran, Ina Palmer, Harris Gordon and Ida Darling are others in the cast.

There can be no doubt that audiences will enjoy this play as much today as they did at the time of its first issue.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Robert Wainwright and Marjorie Bateman are the directors of "A-Kay". There is not a dull moment in this eight hundred feet, which we are told is the longest cartoon on record; few titles and those well placed and really humorous, help rather than hinder the continuity. Several of the "big scenes" in the play are taken off with the keenest appreciation. But first, last and always such a picture as this will turn the kids almost inside out with enjoyment.

(A-Kay Company—Eight Hundred Feet)

This initial release of "A-Kay" will tickle the children, and the grown-ups who like "trick-cartoons" nearly to death. The idea that gives the picture license to run eight hundred feet without a stop in the burlesquing of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea," one does not have to see the Universal big production first to appreciate the kind of humor evidenced in the burlesque.

Paul Terry, who "animated" this picture, clearly has a fine sense of the ridiculous in all forms. He shows the "Captain" on a barrel, which navigates over or under the water, with equal facility. He makes hundreds of feet of comedy drawing the tropical fishes in their briny element at play. His take-offs are near enough characteristic of the originals to make the fun all the greater. The "cow-fish," with horns like a cow, and the mermaid leading a dog-fish, are samples of the great ingenuity shown in this travesty on undersea wonders.

"20,000 Feats Under the Sea"

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

Here is a picture that pleases the eye and twangs the nerves that thrill. It is check full of good acting, plenty of action and, above all, has the very best of photography to augment this. It abounds with plot and intrigue, and has the good red-blooded Northland as its background.

Shirley Mason is the announced star of "The Law of the North," but the caliber of her satellites in the cast, and the scope allowed them, demands equal praise for all. The story has Love as its backbone, with the usual byways of honor and dishonor...
We were gratefully surprised at the novel twist which made this really a suspense story which the audience could not guess out beforehand. In the main it is expected, of course, that the events pictured are a "frame-up," but that the "frame-up" is a friendly affair is the surprise, for we are so used to the simple and obvious in pictures nowadays we had thought this was just another one.

Hiding from the Police

The corporal’s love is sincere, but he hesitates, and for a time is lost through Edith’s misunderstanding of his actions with the half-breed girl of the post (Sally Crute). In the meantime the young factor betrays the half-breed girl, throws her aside and marries the maid he loves. The half-breed starts out for revenge. The factor kills her. Circumstances lay the blame upon Corporal John. Edith makes a few discoveries; lays a clever trap for the factor, and in his vanity he admits the crime. At this crisis a shot through the cabin window ends the life of the factor. It was the Law of the North.

From which it can be seen that "Apartment 29" has exceptional merit in its plot, and we will add that Earle Williams is seen at his best, and the rest of the players, including Ethel Gray Terry as "The Girl," and Denton Vane, are well cast.

The drug traffic has a good many dramatic possibilities. It is almost as fruitful to the scenario writer and has evolved therefrom a highly sensational melodrama. Subtlety was not Mr. Heustis’ aim. He calls a spade a spade, and consequently when he wants to show a beautiful woman degraded to the point of...
"The Family Honor"

(Word Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WITH a story furnished by Adrian Gil-Spear which is peculiarly French in character and not always adaptable to the tastes of the American public, "The Family Honor" maintains average interest throughout its body, but fails to convince in its climax. The sight of a father who places honor above lovecommanding his son to kill himself—attempting to force him to kill himself—is not altogether natural. One is more apt to smile than to thrill at it. The character of the actress, Marcia, is, too, rather an unsympathetic one. An announced vampire in the opening scenes, the author has chosen to transform her into a heroine on his own account. Says he: "Marcia, you're a heroine now; act like a lady," and she proceeds to do so, although she herself goes through no marked transposition of character. Such acts on the part of an author seem to emphasize any artificiality that the story possesses.

The cast of "The Family Honor," headed by Robert Warwick, by unusually good work, has managed to put the story over to some extent. Mr. Warwick has less to do than usual, but plays his role with his usual force and feeling. Henry Hull and June Elvidge register effectively in the more prominent roles of Anthony Wayne and Marcia. The direction of Emile Chautard is in general satisfactory.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Anthony Wayne (Henry Hull) becomes interested in Marcia (June Elvidge), an actress, and forsakes his fiancee (Berda Holmes). Marcia shortly tires of the boy. His brother, Captain Stephen Wayne (Robert Warwick), in attempting to straighten out his brother's affair, falls in love with Marcia himself. Straightway she reforms, seeing in Stephen the man she really loves. Anthony falls in with bad company and robs his father (Alec Francis). The old gentleman is attempting to force Anthony to commit suicide, when Stephen arrives and accuses himself of the deed. With this the father's eyes are opened to his mistake and he pardons his sons, accepting Marcia into his home as the wife of Stephen, while Anthony goes back to his fiancee.

"The Girl in the Checkered Coat"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A vehicle to permit Dorothy Phillips to offer two strikingly contrasting characterizations, "The Girl in the Checkered Coat" is a very good thing. In its dramatic substance it is rather lean, but the author, E. M. Ingleton, has provided sufficient material for a story of gathering interest, which winds up in a climax that is sensationallly melodramatic if not altogether logically motivated. A fine production has been tendered it by Director Joseph De Grasse.

"The Test of Womanhood"

(Joseph R. Mule—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOEBY

THIS picture has impossible inconsistencies and a serious confusion of story, which are hard to reconcile with the present-day standard of production. Pretentious sets, showing a mythical "Turannah" city of the Old World, are spoiled in their effect by obviously modern locations and flashes, even including our familiar telegraph pole and electric lights.

These defects could be overlooked, however, if the story had a clearness and continuity that would be understood by an audience, and if several of the heavy scenes had not been rendered lacking in effect because of the impossible situations required to be imagined as true.

Stuart Holmes does his best to put over an impossible hero.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Akkadia is overrun by its militant neighbor, Turania. War is rampant, and Carl, a Turanian officer (Stuart Holmes), revells with his brother officers in unbridled lust. Marie, an Ackadian governess, takes his fancy. And for trying to protect her mistress from his insults she is rewarded by a personal assault. Recovering from a dazed unconsciousness, she tells her story and how she found lying beside her, murdered, her sweetheart's brother. Carl, contritely, tells the truth, that he really loved Marie, and came to his senses just in time to leave her unharmed, and that the murdered man was killed by him in self-defense.

After a series of complications, including the rescue of Marie from the hands of her own sweetheart, who had ordered her execution for the death of his brother, this man and woman of war-ravaged countries are united in love, based on each having stood the fire test trial of manhood and womanhood.

Miss Phillips accomplishes much in delineating the characters of Mary Graham and "Flash" Fan. By the skilful application of makeup she appears as a sweet young girl on the one side and a sneaking pickpocket on the other. It is not stretching the point in the slightest to say that it is hardly possible to believe that the actress is both Mary and "Flash." Only the most detailed examination brings the fact to light, so one can pardon the assertion of the Bluebird people in a brace of leaders that Miss Phillips does unusually clever work. But an audience is not blind, and just in passing, Miss Phillips' brilliance might be left for the public to discover, which it certainly will.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

"Flash" Fan (Miss Phillips), a pickpocket, is tracked to her lodging house by the police. In the room next to hers is Mary Graham (Miss Phillips), a worn-out shop girl, who has collapsed from starvation. "Flash" hastily wraps her checkered coat about Mary, and as a consequence the innocent girl is arrested. An investigation brings out the fact that the girls are sisters. The mistake is discovered and she is allowed to go free. She enters the household of Miss Maitland (Mrs. A. E. Witting) and shortly becomes as a daughter to her. Her romance with David Norman (William Stowell) progresses and culminates after Hector Maitland (Lon Chaney) has introduced "Flash" into his aunt's home as a maid, intending to rob her of her valuables. Both "Flash" and Hector are defeated in their scheme.

"Her Official Fathers"

A COMEDY of the lighter sort, "Her Official Fathers" makes a delightful impression, due to the presence of Dorothy Gish in the stellar role. There is nothing at all approaching heavy in the makeup of the story, though it manages to maintain the interest and create a sustaining thread of suspense despite the lack. Miss Gish is at all times effective in her part, plays her scenes with a nice appreciation of their comedy values and is as attractive as ever in appearance.

Roy Somerville prepared the scenario from a story by Hugh S. Miller, while Joseph Henabery and Elmer Clifton directed.

The work of all parties concerned is adequate. Frank Bennett gives quite his best to the role of the bank clerk and the support, consisting of some of the best known members of the Fine Arts stock, is excellent.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

After the death of her father, Janice Webster (Dorothy Gish) is left to the guardianship of the several directors of a bank. The two hostile vice-presidents of the directorate (Sam De Grasse and Fred Warren) desire control of Janice's fortune, and while one courts her himself the other gives the job to his son (Milton Schumann). She, however, disappoints them both by marrying Peabody (Frank Bennett), a clerk in the bank.

"The Bond Between"

A THEATRICAL under the direction of George Beban and Donald Crisp are a good team in providing story and direction for the character star to have full opportunity to display his well-known emotions seems to us most apparent, due to this picture. We do not think Mr. Beban registers as well as a French dear old gentleman as he did in his previous Italian characters. The

The Old Music Master Strikes a Sympathetic Chord

"Sweetheart of the Doomed" presents Louise Glaum in the role of an adventurer who is changed for the better through love. The story, though it contains at times unusual appeal and presents a story that is on the whole dramatic, the ordeal with which the author has chosen to inflict the woman...
THE tenth and eleventh episodes of "Patria" were staged out West and Marie Walcamp and a whole troop of soldiers played the parts of sheriffs and Indians. Miss Walcamp, who does not seem to have lost her dramatic ability, takes up the tenth episode with an extra thrill. She plays the sweetheart to all the doomed, and playing the heroine, the scene falls down somewhat dramatically. The zeal of the writer seems to have given her the better of his perspective. This is also shown in the subtitles, which are far too emotional and sentimental to be read without a smile. Miss Glaum is given more opportunities for acting in "Sweetheart of the Doomed" than she has had in some time, and accepts them all. The production given the story by Reginald Barker leaves nothing to be desired.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Honore Zonlay (Louise Glaum), a notorious adventuress, lives to make all men pay for the treachery of one man. She enlists General Durand (Thomas Guiteau) by posing as the protege of another general (Roy Laidlaw). When Durand learns her true identity he casts her off. Honore at last meets her ideal in the person of Paul Montaigne (Charles Gunn), a dispatch bearer. He is willing to overlook her past. When war comes he is reported to have died in service, and Durand, in a spirit bordering on revenge, places her in a hospital as sweetheart of the doomed. One day Paul is brought in, severely wounded. He is given up for dead, but the care and nursing of Honore restore him to health.

"The Hidden Children"

(Metro—Five Reels) REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

This play may appeal to those who have read Robert W. Chambers' colorful story, but to others it will be a puzzle. Oscar Apfel is accredited with having both adapted and directed the production. Either in his hands or the cutting room such havoc has been wrought with the story itself that an average audience will wonder what it is all about, and we are certain Mr. Chambers would not recognize it as his creation, a notion left to titling, and that handled in a poetic, rather than a dramatic, mood.

There are Indians, and more Indians, and they do not seem very real. There is a hop-skip-and-a-jump narrating of a double-barreled plot: a girl seeking her mother and a boy fascinated by the girl. The dramatic incidents caused the hero and heroine to become "hidden children," the reason of the story itself, we would say, is barely referred to, even in the titles; instead, "sus pense" seems to be sought.

And the result is that failure to register the big punches that could have been there.

Robert Chambers wrote a story that is dramatic in spite of its strange incidents. It is not a story that does not so readily adapt itself to the pet star requirements of the modern photoplay, and that is the pressure, the director's troubles began. But that does not excuse so badly written and poorly made a plot resolving itself mostly into the wandering of two love doves through the forest, with faithful Indians, and hostile Indians, and some early colonists for good measure, and a few fights the audience hardly knows what it all about.

This picture is nowhere near up to the Metro standard, and even the stars cannot save it from being dull.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

An ancient custom of the Indian tribes is to "hide" children with a friendly tribe, later to be brought back to their own tribe, alive or dead, and pure of blood. Two hidden children, Evan (Harold Lockwood) and Lois (May Allison), meet and love. But Lois will not trust man, and not until Evan has saved her mother from being assassinated by a cruel Indian chief, is his complete happiness with her made possible.

"The Clock"

(Bluebird—Five Reels) REVIEWED BY ROBERT CHAMBERS

This play is nowhere near up to the Metro standard, and even the stars cannot save it from being dull.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

A dissipated youth (George Soule Spencer) goes to the country to reform, meets a girl (Hilda Nord), induces her to go to the "big city," where he attempts to have a fake marriage ceremony performed. The girl's childhood friend (James Cruze) intervenes and furnishes a genuine minister. The husband continues to inject life into her difficult part. James Cruze also did his best with the scattered material at hand. The other players were rather indifferently cast.

"The Web of Life"

(Bluebird—Five Reels) REVIEWED BY ROBERT CHAMBERS

It is a light comedy, ingeniously evolved, and much of the humor is derived from its subtitles. These are composed of very natural-spoken lines, and are good for many a laugh. Aaron Hoffman is the author of "The Clock." He has kept away from the conventional in more ways than one, and Director William Worthington, it appears, has tried some ideas up to a good degree. Mr. Hoffman didn't bother at all about drama. There is very little of it present. The episode in which the villain hires a crook to steal the clock is rather forced, to tell the truth, but then one doesn’t have to take it seriously. It’s the comedy that counts, and “The Clock” can unhesitatingly be termed excellent in this respect.

Franklyn Farnum is featured as the extremely unpunctual hero. His personality is attractive, and he benefits largely by the role provided him. One thing, however, Mr. Farnum should exercise more care over his make-up in the close-ups. A fetching smile doesn’t get the smiler anywhere if the border of grease paint can be seen by the eye. Agnes Vernon is a very pretty and natural heroine, while the support is of the best.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jack Tempest (Franklyn Farnum) gets into all sorts of trouble because he is never on time. His fiancee, Vivian (Agnes Vernon), becomes peeved at his excursions, and her father (Mark Fenton) becomes angry and takes her away to the country. Jack receives word that a distant uncle has died leaving him a clock, which he must wind at ten every night, setting the alarm for six in the morning. If he doesn’t hold to these stipulations he loses a fortune. The peculiar inheritance proves the making of him, and then, after he’s smoothed matters over with Vivian, he discovers that she was his “distant uncle.”

Frank Whitson, Frederick Montagu and Willis Marks contribute good performances.

“THE MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS”

The mystery enfolding the dual personality of Philippa Brewster becomes more clouded than ever in this episode, entitled “The Life Current.” Bentley, the heavy, proposes to her and is accepted, and when Peter Hale asks her for an explanation, none is forthcoming. The identity of the Masked Stranger still remains unknown.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

After Bentley (Ralph Stuart) has been accepted by Philippa (Moira King), he resolves to get Peter (Leon Errol) tied to a gas jet preparatory to hanging. The Masked Stranger comes to his rescue, and in a fight with Bentley accidentally wounds Peter. He is taken to a hospital and immediately operated upon. In the midst of the operation one of Bentley’s gang cuts the electric wires of the hospital. The Masked Stranger arrives just in time to hold them together, that the doctor may go on with his work.

“THE CURE”

There is but one thing to be said against each succeeding Chaplin picture. That is, that it gives one too exclusive a taste in their comedy seeking among the films. To see one Chaplin after the other, and add one’s laughter to the widespread echo, means that there is very little else among the fun-making films that will satisfy that taste. The newest Chaplin, “The Cure”, tops off the feast of fun he has furnished in the past in great style.

One of the big points in its favor is the fact that Charlie works almost throughout the entire picture in his maudlin, gyrating, fish-eyed character of the “funny drunk.” In this characterization he made his first fame in vaudeville; in it he is well-night inimitable, and chuckles always change to convulsions with an audience when the plot of his pictures calls for alcohol to be mixed with his antics. The action in “The Cure” all takes place at one of those “health water” resorts.

Charlie, of course, makes his entrance early as a “patient” seeking a cure for his alcoholic tastes. Every move thereafter is a signal for laughter as carefully obeyed as a railroader’s orders. To seek superlative terms for each Chaplin comedy as they come forth is a hardship and an impossibility. The last one always makes me think that there is nothing new to be concocted by Charlie as laugh-making stunts. But the scenario of “The Cure” has a plentitude of new business in it that dispenses the idea that there is nothing new under the sun for Chaplin.

“The Lone Point Feud”: a episode in Palisade, N. Y. (Kalem). The rapid pace of thrills and good drama set by the film in its opening number is well maintained throughout the present episode. The practice established by a new director, who formerly dealt strictly with the railroad, and of alternating the excitement with moments of quiet, increased the interest. The story deals with the fight between the railroad sleeping car conductor and his helper, and the shadowy figure who identically names the conductor at the southbound train. The train, when discovered by the conductor, is bound and gagged and thrown into a baggage room. It is readily apparent that the plan of the inhabitants is to have the trainmen for their own benefit. The conductor, with the help of his helper, manages to escape. It is an excellent film, with the added interest of a comedy attitude in the portrayal of the characters. The cast includes: George Pearce and Jane Bernoudy are the principals.

“The Railroad Smuggler.” An episode in Hollywood, Calif. (Universal). Frederick Bechdolt obtains an excellent story from his friend and director, who has previously written and directed for the company, and has produced a picture that is a welcome addition to the Vugres that have appeared before.

“The Vulture of Skull Mountain,” an episode of “The Vulture of Skull Mountain” series. Two reels. “The Vulture of Skull Mountain” series. (Kalem). This melodrama, written and directed by A. W. Rice, is rather obscure in its silent passages and the mystery element is obscured in its dialogue. The story is good, and things happen rapidly. The Kalem motorcycle is used effectively.

“Someday Late,” (Victor. Thur., April 5.) —In which a comedy-drama, or rather melodrama is offered here. The story is average. The cast includes: Bruce Kellogg, Claire Dray, Dennis O’Brien, the central figure is the hard-working husband, who derives only a scant salary from a menial job, and the wife is the center of attraction. “The Awakening of Helen Minor.” (Drew Company. One Reel). —The play of the former actress, who has the talent of the public, is here rendered in the company’s new branch of comedy in this offering. Hubby is very much concerned when his wife gives birth to a baby in the hospital, and is taken by surprise when he discovers that the baby is a girl. Hubby and wife have a baby girl, and are delighted with her. Hubby is a popular character in the company, and his acting is commended by the critics. The cast includes: Bruce Kellogg, Claire Dray, Dennis O’Brien, the central figure is the hard-working husband, who derives only a scant salary from a menial job, and the wife is the center of attraction.

“Burning Silence,” (Bison. Two reels, Sat., April 7.) —This melodrama, written and directed by John B.Release, is a well-crafted story, with the addition of Jane Bernoudy, who does some good comedy work. It was written by Fred Palmer.

“Family Tree,” (Victor. Tues., April 10)—In which both husband and wife have a passion for pedigrees and high society. The cast includes: Bruce Kellogg, Claire Dray, Dennis O’Brien, the central figure is the hard-working husband, who derives only a scant salary from a menial job, and the wife is the center of attraction. Operators’ Licenses

The motion picture film, when of the inflammable type, is dangerous unless properly handled. The care which is taken with it cannot be too great, yet, when properly handled by a competent person, there is but little danger. An insurance man the other day was comparing film with gasoline. He made the remark that when automobiles were first used the rates were high because of the supposed great danger, but that now they are getting used to them, scale of rates is reduced. The same will be the condition with film. It can be seen, therefore, that film traveling through a machine under normal conditions is not dangerous. This test is interesting, but it does not prove that danger is not continually present, for it is.

Too great care cannot be taken nor should an operator be allowed to run a machine until he has been thoroughly trained and made ready for his job. We have a law in New York that no man should run a machine without a license, but the trouble has been that these licenses could be obtained before the man was qualified to even enter a projection room. All that had to be done was to go to one of the so-called operators schools, learn some facts by heart, and answer the questions put to him by the examiners. His actual knowledge was a blank, yet he received a license and if he could get a job he was a first-class operator. This is wrong.

Take a much less responsible task and one which needs less knowledge and brains—the operating of a trolley car. Here a man not only has to know what each lever will do under certain conditions, but he must have a certain apprenticeship under a motorman who has proved his worth and knowledge before he is allowed to operate a car alone. If this is so in this case, how much more important it is in the case of motion pictures.

It is for this reason that we hope to see the amendment to section eighteen of article two of chapter twenty-six of the laws of 1909, introduced by Senator Walker at Albany on March 15, 1917, passed. The amendment reads as follows:

“A license shall not be granted to an applicant unless he shall have operated a moving picture projecting machine and its connections, in an enclosure or operating room, in a theatre, hall or other place devoted to the public exhibition of moving pictures, for a period of not less than six months prior to the date of the application; the application must be in writing and must be accompanied by the affidavit of the applicant to the same effect.”

This will mean that before any man is allowed to operate in a theatre he must have had proper training. It will put the burden of responsibility on the shoulders of the examiners and will relieve the theatre manager of the moral responsibility which he has to a greater or less extent at the present time. The more responsibility which can be put on the examiners the better, for it is up to them to see to it that no man works in a theatre unless he is qualified; and if it is put up to them, as it should be, they will be made responsible for allowing an incompetent man to receive a license. It is a move that should meet with the support of all competent operators. This to a large degree will do away with our fire risk, high insurance rates, etc., and will hasten the time when all inside and outside the industry will become accustomed to the motion picture film as they eventually must.

E. K. Gillett.
Operator's License

The proposed ordinance introduced to the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York by Alderman Robitzek, to amend subdivisions 1, 2, and 3 of Section 43 of Article 2, Chapter 5, of the Code of Ordinances, relating to operators of motion picture machines, had a hearing held in the City Hall, Tuesday, March 30. Present at the hearing were H. S. Wynkoop, Chief Inspector of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity; E. C. Stewart, representing the International Projection Association; Joseph Tyroler, president of Local 453, I. A. T. S. E. of Westchester County, who is also an Examiner for the City of Yonkers, and I. G. Sherman. The proposed amendment reads as follows: Be it ordained by the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York, as follows: Section 1. Subdivisions 1, 2 and 3 of Section 43 of Article 2, Chapter 5, of the Code of Ordinance relating to the operators of motion picture machines, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"Section 43. Operators of motion picture machines. (1) Licenses required. No person shall operate any motion picture apparatus or any connection thereof, unless he shall have been duly licensed as hereinafter provided. (2) Application for a license. Any person desiring to act as a motion picture operator shall make application for a license as such to the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, who shall furnish to each applicant blank forms of application, which he shall fill out and file with the Commissioner, and such application must be accompanied by the affidavit of the licensed operator to the effect that the applicant has served as an assistant to such licensed operator for a period of not less than six months prior to the date of application, except any person who has operated a motion picture machine and its connections for not less than six months may present his own affidavit stating that he has so operated a motion picture machine and its connections in an enclosure or operating room in a theatre or hall devoted to the public exhibition of motion pictures. The Commissioner shall make rules and regulations governing the examination of applicants and the issuance of licenses and certificates; provided each applicant shall be given a practical examination under the direction of the Commissioner, and further provided that no license shall be granted to any applicant unless he shall have served as an assistant to a licensed operator for a period of not less than six months prior to the date of the application. This Ordinance shall take effect immediately."

After carefully reading the proposed amendment and listening to the expressions of those present, the board decided to take the matter up in Executive Session, there being many points which had not been covered and for which no provision had been made.

The Board of Aldermen were most considerate and desirous of enacting some law that will be equitable to the operators of Greater New York, and we await further developments. There is need of some sort of an amendment whereby the "home" operators will be protected and yet give the out-of-town licensed operator a chance, particularly the union operator who is licensed in some other city and who is temporarily operating in New York. It is my understanding that the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity now issue permits to these men which allow them to so operate, and in this way no great injustice is done. The one serious point at issue seems to be concerning the apprenticeship clause, and it is to be hoped that the honorable board will evolve some plan whereby this clause can be covered in such a way as to be agreeable to all concerned. We will have more to say on this subject later.

Busy Screen Co. Representative

Grant Heth, Michigan representative for Minusa screens, has been appointed manager in Detroit for the branch of Erker's, at 35 East Grand River avenue. Mr. R. E. Miller, present manager, will return to the St. Louis office in several weeks. The Minusa screen will continue to be represented in Michigan by Mr. Heth just the same.

Third Eye for Operators

It has long been recognized as a fact that all operating rooms, thoroughly equipped, should also contain a good glass whereby the operator would be enabled at all times to make careful scrutiny of the picture being projected, and thus keep it in perfect focus. This is especially true where the length of throw is very great. I have visited many operating rooms, and in nearly all of them have found some sort of a glass for this purpose. Some of these glasses were absolutely worthless, their magnifying power being nil. It was only recently that I discovered what I believe to be an ideal glass. This glass is called a "Monocular," from the fact that it only calls into use one eye, and as it is possible to so arrange it by various adaptations, such as a wire frame to encircle it, allowing it to be brought into position at the operator's port for observation of the picture, and thrown out of position when not in use, thus leaving the hands of the operator free to perform his other duties, it should meet with great favor among operators. The monocular resembles a power field-glass, or a prism glass that has been cut in half longitudinally, and that is what it really is. With the high quality of lenses used and the perfected prism, the enlargement of the object under observation is very great, and it will allow the operator a more detailed view of the picture being projected than any glass I have yet seen. Local unions where this glass has been shown have been loud in its praise. Manufactured by the Crown Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y., makes of the well-known "Marlux" projection lenses, is sufficient guarantee as to its quality. To those interested in this "third eye for operators," I refer them to S. E. May, manager, Crown Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y., who will be pleased to give them any further information. It is worth while investigating, and you are under no obligations in doing so.

Lucas Supply Company Issues Catalogue

Mr. Harry K. Lucas of the Lucas Theatre Supply Company, Atlanta, Ga., has just issued for the trade a most attractive 150-page catalogue, showing the various lines of goods carried by his company. The stock includes everything for the theatre, from the projection booth to the screen, as well as the various accessories for the lobby and the house itself. Mr. Lucas states in the front of his catalogue, that owing to the uncertain conditions brought about by the European war it is next to impossible to quote prices accurately from day to day, and that the cost of the various equipments are subject to change without notice. Caution is given. This must be borne in mind in the case of every dealer for the country and when ordering from catalogues, the exhibitors should remember that they are ordering, subject to this variation in price.
International Projection Association

n association of motion picture operators under the above name was chartered on February 28, 1917. The or ganizers and temporary officers are as follows: A. Polin, president; Harry Schere, vice-president; Morris J. Rotker, recording secre tary, and Edgar Stewart, chairman of the board of trustees. The pur pose of the association is to promote projection by the exclude of ideas, lecture courses, etc. Club rooms are to be open when there is no meeting of the members, and the operators may come together and enjoy the social and other benefits to be derived through such intercourse.

Any motion picture operator holding a city license is eligible for membership in the I. P. A. The next meeting is to be held at the Cortland Casino, 585 Cortland avenue, near 151st street, Bronx, New York, on Monday, April 9, at 12 o'clock midnight.

The question that might be asked is answered by Brother Stew art in these words: "It is not a union; it will not play politics. It is a fraternal and social association; simply this, nothing more and nothing less." If it is kept that way there does not appear to be any reason why the International Projection Association should not meet with great success. And they have my best wishes.

Geneseo, Illinois

G. C. H., Geneseo, Ill., writes: "As I have not been a reader of the News for any length of time, I cannot find anything relating to my trouble in the books I have, so will come to you for a little assistance. I am operating a Powers's 6A machine, and find that the intermittent sprocket is worn a great deal. Would you advise me to get a new sprocket and try it. If you answer "can I do so, or would it be better for me to get a new sprocket all ready to put in. If so, please advise me what a new intermittent movement consists of, and the price of same."

Answer: I believe that I have treated this in some previous issue, but for your benefit will say that I do not think it possible for you to do a successful job in installing a new sprocket in the intermittent, for you say that you have only been operating for about six months, and this is a rather difficult job for even an experienced operator to handle. The better way would be for you to send to the factory and get an entire intermittent movement, already assembled, and by following the directions that come with it you should be able to install it, and then return the old one for an overhauling. The entire framing carriage, with all parts assembled, ready for quick installation, can be purchased for less than $30.00, and the insurance against faulty results upon the intermitent, through improper fitting of parts, is well worth the small outlay, and you will then have what practically amounts to two machines, for the intermittent is the heart of the projector.

Ground Blows Fuses

M. J., New York, writes: "Will a ground on the lower carbon jaw of the lamp blow a fuse when the arc is struck? If not, what is liable to happen? Will a ground in the rheostat, connected on the negative side and placed on a conductor, blow a fuse when striking the arc? If not, what would happen?"

Answer: To answer your questions in rotation I will number them. (1) If you were getting your current from a two-wire system and it was insulated and the ground was heavy enough it would blow the fuse. But if it was a three-wire Edison system with a grounded neutral, and the neutral was attached to the lower carbon jaw, nothing would happen. (2) Covered in answer no. 1. (3) It would depend upon the "ground" as to what would happen under the conditions you have outlined. If one of the coils were grounded to the frame of the rheostat, and the frame itself was insulated from the ground, nothing serious would happen, though you might get a shock should you accidentally touch the rheostat. Were it an Edison three-wire system and the rheostat the members may come together and you will then have what practically amounts to two machines, for the intermittent is the heart of the projector.

Film Catches

H. A. B., Milwaukee, Wis., asks: "Can you inform me the cause of the film catching on the intermittent sprocket? I never had this trouble before and have been running my machine over a year. It seems that whenever a loose patch or bad spot in the film reaches the aperture it will catch on the intermittent sprocket and rip off a piece of film and wrap it around the sprocket in such a way as to choke the machine and stop it. Can this be remedied, and how?"

Answer: The remedy is quite simple. Get a new sprocket. This fault is no doubt due to the sprocket having become badly worn and the teeth undressed in such a way as to catch the film in pulling it down past the aperture, but not being able to release it again, and this causes the sprocket holes on one side or the other to become stripped and wind about the sprocket. It hardly seems possible that this would cause the machine to become so choked up that it would cease running, unless you were not paying strict attention to the operation of the machine. When this happens it should never tear more than one inch, or even with the foot off film, for if you were giving your undivided attention to the operation of the machine it could be stopped almost instantly, and thus save this unnecessary wear and tear upon the film.

WE SELL ON THE INSTALLMENT PLAN

ANNOUNCEMENT slides have already been prepared by the Excelsior Illustrating Company, 219 Sixth avenue, New York City, for the Douglas Fairbanks feature, "In Again—Out Again," presented by Artcraft Pictures Corporation. This is the first production produced by Douglas Fairbanks' own company. The slides contain new advertising ideas, are hand-colored, portraying a good, clear, crisp announcement.

THE Radio Mat-Slide Company, 121 West 42nd Street, who are manufacturers exclusively of Radio Mat Typewriter Slide, announce that since the general publicity given in the newspapers on the probable outbreak of war, that exhibitors are using their slides to make announcements on this timely topic. Dealers are sending in repeat orders, and it is said that they are adding many new dealers to their list.

THE Greater New York Slide Company, 154 West 45th Street, state that they are increasing the production of their unbreakable mica slide. This slide is also made up into a clock slide. The exhibitor can change the hands to any hour or minute and flash on the screen the exact time. This courtesy is appreciated by the patrons who haven't time to stay for the showing of the entire program.

THE Easter slides released by the Excelsior Illustrating Company, New York, have met with marked success. Mr. Knopfleman, general manager of the company, in speaking of these slides, said that they had made up only one design for this occasion, but that he had placed the art work in the hands of his best artist to secure the most attractive announcement possible. He also said that he had received a great many orders from exhibitors requesting special patriotic slides.

THE screen will, no doubt, play an important part in aiding the United States Government in recruiting men for service in the Army and Navy. The following telegram was sent to Mr. Carl Laemmlle, of the Universal Company, by Mr. Josephus Daniels, Secretary of the United States Navy.

"You have Department's permission to display slides and trailers on moving pictures requesting American youths to join the Navy. Thank you for your patriotic offer. Please confer with Commander Bennett, Navy Publicity Bureau, 318 West Thirty-ninth street, New York, regarding suitable texts for slides. Department has wired him instructions."

Commander Bennett has supplied text matter for the slides, and the Universal are calling on exhibitors to show the slides as part of their patriotic duty to this country.

The Novelty Slide Company of New York have prepared the slides. Every American exhibitor should place his screen at the disposal of the government; make this your contribution to the good cause.

San Francisco's Searchlight Attractive

The Searchlight theatre one of San Francisco's newest motion picture theatres located at 28th and Church streets, San Francisco threw open its doors to the public during the month of August last year.

The theatre is operated by Seymour and Porter under the management of George Seymour and has been doing capacity business since its opening night.

The plans for the theatre were drawn up by Welsh and Carey, well-known architects of San Francisco. The measurements of the house are fifty feet in width by one hundred feet in depth, and is a frame building.

The lobby of the theatre measures 15 feet in width and 25 feet in depth and contains several display frames of brass and some of wood. The interior of the theatre is finished in cream and chocolate colors the side walls being divided into panels making neat and attractive appearance.

A gas heating system has been installed instead of the usual steam or furnace heat. The theatre is lighted by the semi-indirect method, electricity being used. The seating capacity of this house is 400, the opera chairs having been furnished by Heywood Brothers and Wakefield.

The projection room is equipped with two Simplex projectors and a Wagner White Light Converter. The length of throw is 75 feet onto a screen of special construction.

The program for the week is made up of Triangle, Fox, Mutual and Universal productions, there being from 6 to 8 reels shown at each performance, admission prices are 5 and 10 cents, the same price for both matinee and evening.

GARWOOD, N. J.
Odd Film Splice

A. C., Grants Pass, Oregon, sends in his interesting letter, a diagram of the way in which he splices his film, and says in part: "In looking through the Projection Department of the News, I have seen many ideas from other operators which have been of great help to me, so now I have one of my own that I am submitting to you, and would also like your opinion on it. It is in which I splice my film, and I believe the diagram will explain itself. In splicing, make the cut as shown at X and make lines A meet. This gives you a solid sprocket hole base and makes a soft and pliable patch. The cutting out of the center portion prevents the patch from becoming hard and stiff. Sometimes I lap two sprocket holes, and at other times three, but I find that three makes too big a lap." Answer: At first I was inclined to throw aside the diagram as being N. G., but studying it awhile, and finally taking a piece of film and giving it a try, I came to the conclusion that there was some merit in the scheme. I have always favored the one-hole patch, but I can see now where your method has much in its favor. First, the two-hole sprocket base will give a greater surface for the cement, and secondly, the center, being cut out, will do away with the clicking noise that is so noticeable when an extra heavy patch passes through the projector. Operators might try this stunt, and see if it will do the things it thinks it will.

Mercury Arc Rectifier

W. Young, Ohio, asks: "Is it possible to change a Mercury Arc Rectifier that has been working on a 110 volt supply from a three-wire system to a 220 volt supply, that is the two wires of the same system, and how should I go about it? Also please be so kind as to explain the action of the rectifier. For your kindness in responding at an early date accept my thanks." Answer: In regard to the Mercury Art Rectifier, that's where I live. For a number of years I operated almost exclusively on current taken through a rectifier, and from all I have read on the subject, as well as my own experiments, I believe the changing from 110 to 220 volts will be a very simple matter. Simply change the position of the two link connections shown at "B-B" on page 2274 (October 7, 1916, issue of the Motion Picture News). In that illustration the links are in position for use on 110 volt current. To operate on 220 volts all that would be necessary is to loosen them and connect to binding posts marked "X-X." The starting and maintaining in action of the rectifier may be explained briefly as follows: When the machine switch is closed and the carbon touched, or the arc is struck, the shaking magnet is excited and operates a plunger in such a manner as to tip the tube. In tipping the tube the mercury that is in the starting anode is spilled and flows into the mercury cathode. This forms a bridge, over which the current flows through the various parts of the rectifier, so on back to the generator. The current is now flowing through the mercury instead of the tilting magnet, which has now become weakened to such an extent as to allow the tube to resume an upright position, and breaks the stream of mercury between the two electrodes. The heat of the arc which has now been formed vaporizes some of the mercury and this vapor reduces the resistance of the path between the two electrodes and starts the arc, being immediately picked up by the main anodes. The current is now sufficiently strong to operate the cut-out magnet, which cuts the starting resistance and tilting magnet out of circuit while the rectifier is working. The alternating current now flows through, or into, each anode alternatively, passing current through the cathode to the arc lamp. As this is the positive wire, the negative returns to the neutral point of the main reactance; thus it is that the current flows only in one direction through the arc lamp. The rectifier is dependent upon the action of the tube, which is in effect an electrical check valve. When the mercury has become vaporized, as described in starting, the metallic vapor acts as an electrical conductor and allows the current to pass from either of the solid anodes to the mercury cathode, but as the mercury offers a high resistance at its surface and acts as a check valve, it will not allow the current to pass from it to either of the solid electrodes, and so the current must flow from the anodes to the cathode. I might say here that on my return from the I. A. Convention I stopped off at the "Electric City," and was shown by G. H. MacClellan, of the General Electric Company, a device which I am hopeful of seeing installed wherever the G. E. Rectifier is in use, in conjunction with two projection machines. I am under orders not to give this device any publicity, but feel that I must whet the curiosity of operators who have tried to overcome the difficulties which they have met with in "stealing" the light. I am fondly hoping that I will soon be permitted to give out the dope on this device, and I am sure it will be a godsend to such operators as mentioned above. And when permission is granted me, I will go the limit to describe in full its wonderful possibilities.

I hope all brother operators will keep this department posted as to anything new or unique in the industry.

THE MASTER MODEL STANDS FOR PERFECT PROJECTION

Pictures Not the Same Density

Ithaca, New York, writes: "Am using two Powers's 6B machines, motor driven; Speedco Arc Controller; Hallberg Rotary Converter, with two arc control instrument board and a Hallberg Economizer, with a double throw switch for emergency only. Using Speer carbons, 3/4-inch top and 1/2-inch bottom; current at the arc is 55 amperes at 52 volts. Have a 1421/2-foot throw, and am getting a picture 171/2 feet wide. We are running pictures only, giving three shows a day, featuring Paramount, Triangle, World, Vitagraph, Artcraft and Selznick productions. It seems to me that I have an excellent equipment and that I am projecting a very good picture, but the manager complains that the light is not steady; being bright and then dim, and I am at a loss to understand this (the hands on both the ammeter and voltmeter show no variation, other than three or four amperes), unless it is the dark scenes he is complaining about. We ran "Pantha" a few days ago, and the print was very dark, and the manager thought by raising the amperage it would help. I then used all we had, but it seemed to make no difference on the dark scenes, only making them more noticeable by the glaring of the picture when a light scene was shown. Now, I claim that the fault lies in the film and not in the apparatus, but he thinks it is either me or the equipment. If I am wrong, I should like very much to know it, and if the manager is wrong, I should like to know that also."

Answer. There seems to be no question but that you are right in this instance, for, as you say, the meters show no variation other than the three or four points which are caused by the burning of a longer arc, the fault must lie in the film itself. The equipment cannot be blamed for this, neither can you. A number of films have had this fault, some of them more than others. And I think it is due to the method in which the printing is carried on. There seems to be a "flicker" in the film itself, as if the lights were burning unsteadily; at times above capacity, and at others far below capacity. While I am not into the secret of the various methods of developing and printing positives, I know that the complaint of your manager is a just one, and, instead of blaming you, he should take it up with the exchange, and they in turn with the manufacturer. The only remedy that I could suggest under existing conditions would be to give the dark scenes all the amperage you have and cut down on the lighter scenes; this will call for your whole attention, but is the nearest way that you can be assured of fairly good results with film that has not the same density in its entirety. Should that condition be present in every picture you show, that would be something else again, and would call for a deeper probing as to the why and wherefore. Would like to hear from you again regarding this, and hope that your manager will realize that an operator cannot put on perfect results unless he has the right tools to work with, the tools in this case being clear film.

Let me hear from you again, and as often as you can. In the meantime I will endeavor to get other operators' views on the same question.

The Commercial Aspects of Color Cinematography

The following communication on "Natural" Color Cinematography has just been received from a writer who, while formerly prominent in photographic journalism, has been actively identified with the motion picture industry in recent years:

"According to the newspapers and trade journals, there appears to be at the present time a revival of interest in 'natural' color cinematography. As this is a subject in which I have taken great interest for the last twenty years, perhaps you will be kind enough to admit a few remarks in right of the further fact that, after my interest in cinematography, I was also concerned in the making of photographic color films which please by their brilliancy and contrast?" In reply:

Since the foregoing communication has been extensively circulated, and since it well expresses the arguments of the picture-makers who have large investments tied up in ordinary (black and white) motion picture propositions, it appears desirable to set forth the facts regarding color photography and cinematography in order that misapprehension may be avoided with regard to the practicability and commercial worth of natural color cinematography. In that which follows facts shall, therefore, take the place of pronouncements, and it will be our endeavor to set forth in unbiased manner the exact status of motion pictures in natural colors.

Knowing our correspondent as we do, and having due respect for his scholarly mind and literary prowess, we are surprised that he should circulate a critique on color cinematography without being in possession of exhaustive data on the subject, and without having attempted to verify all of his statements by an investigation of all of the processes which have reached the demonstrable stage. In that which follows facts shall, therefore, take the place of pronouncements, and it will be our endeavor to set forth in unbiased manner the exact status of motion pictures in natural colors.

Considering now in detail the points brought forth by the correspondent, we agree that such a colorful and animated scene as he describes might well be taken as the test subject for a motion picture color process. Such scenes have been recorded by color-cameras with varying degrees of exactitude, and it has recently been shown that views of such character and, in fact, objects comprising a much greater range of "natural colors" may be faithfully reproduced by color cinematography.

In the past some unsuccessful attempts along this line are on record, but it is true, and not all of the methods now being exploited can be said to faithfully reproduce the coloration of the objects about us, but in addition to the chemical and physical means mentioned by the correspondent, the physiological aspects of the proposition have recently come in for some consideration by the color cinematographers.

The physiological aspects of color perception, as applied to photography, were taken into account years ago by F. E. Ives, of Kromskop fame, and upon delving into the photographic writings of our correspondent we note that at one time he specifically recognized the possibility of reproducing "natural" colors by photography through recourse to the principal - say the Young-Helmholtz- Maxwell triangle of the sensation. This was years ago (1899), however, and he may well be pardoned the slip of memory, but we have next to consider his remarks concerning the inadequacy of halogen-silver emulsions, aniline dyes, and the electric-arc for the purpose of photographically reproducing the sunlight scenes and objects about us.

It is a considerable length of time since the correspondent was actively interested in photography, and in ensuing years tremendous advances have been made in the science and practice of photography. With the rationale of these improvements perhaps he is not fully acquainted, but it should be apparent to all who are in any way interested in color photography (or cinematography) that the pictures are, in the majority of instances, recorded by the light of the sun itself.

Let us now see what we can expect of the aniline dyes as vehicles by which to record or reproduce the colors of nature. There are literally tens of thousands of aniline dyestuffs capable of duplicating any color, hue or shade which man can conceive of. From the days of Ives and his Photochromoscope up to the present era it has been known, and amply demonstrated, that by the selection and admixture of suitable dyes (anilines, of course) one can construct color filters which are capable of reproducing, with scientific exactitude, the fundamental color sensations just as they have been determined by authorities—such, for instance, as Maxwell, Helmholtz, König or Abney. Moreover, the dyes are to be dosed even when considered as pigments, for their apparent hues are due to selective absorption, which is the exact manner in which the hues of natural objects are produced. The apparent hue of most objects in nature is due to the fact that they have selectively absorbed some constituents of the sunlight which falls upon them, and the color of dyes is made apparent in the same way.

The limitations of the haloid salts of silver as regards responsiveness to the less refrangible spectrum rays was for years a serious obstacle to the proper recording of color values (luminosities) by photography, but here also advances have been made, and now the makers of photographic materials use these materials in their emulsions in our correspondent's photographic days—are regularly supplying dry-plates and films which are capable of portraying the relative luminosities of objects photographed, just as they appear to the normal eye.

Now what about the competency of the electric-arc as a substitute for sunlight? Upon spectroscopic examination it is readily apparent that the constituent rays of the electric-arc crater are capable of so stimulating the retina as to form white and consequently all other colors, while the luminosities of the fundamental sensation colors as excited by the electric-arc are not sensibly different from the sensation luminosities of noonday sunlight. This was demonstrated before the Royal Society of London by Sir William Abney, and proven by physical measurements of a refined nature.

If, therefore, our photographic emulsions, our coal-tar dye-

A Film Concern with a Music Department

THE Williamson Brothers, "Submarine Film Company," Longacre Building, New York City, have established a music department, and intend to have arranged and published a perfect musical score for every kind of feature-making film productions.

The department in question will be under the direct personal charge of Mr. M. Winkler of the Carl Fischer Music Publishing House. Mr. Winkler has achieved an enviable reputation in this particular phase of amusement, and is recognized as an authority upon the subject of music for motion pictures. In addition to acting as Musical Editor for several of the foremost trade papers, he has arranged music for such productions as "War Brides," "Idle Wives," "Eternal Sin," etc. Mr. Winkler also arranged musical scores for different state right buyers for such productions as "The Common Law," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," "The Dumb Girl of Portico," and many others.

As the first step in the perfection of his organization, Mr. Winkler has engaged the services of M. L. Lake, a composer of exceptional reputation, who is already engaged in preparing the musical themes for the first new production of the Williamson Brothers.

After the original compositions are completed by Mr. Lake, the incidental music and arranging will be taken in hand by Mr. Winkler. The completed score will then be carefully timed to the picture, and will correspond to the exact running time. In order to make these scores available to the small exhibitor, a plan has been devised whereby the exhibitor can rent them from his exchange or from the executive offices of the company at the smallest outlay.

A New Field for American Composers

The great American opera has not yet been composed. Who knows but what the photoplay will be the field from which will spring the flower of American music?

The old masters have drawn their inspirations from the literary sources of their period, and all of them have had their themes, which formed the foundation of their works. Music has always had a cause. Such enjoyment at the bottom of every musical composition. To express musical thoughts and ideas was always the aim of the great composers, but they did not always succeed. It was left for Wagner to be the inventor of the musical thought, i.e., to express the human emotion in musical ideas (motifs)—but, alas, some of his followers have gone to extremes. Suffice it to say that he established certain, musical ideas which cannot be separated from the emotions which they express without accompanying their expression by word.

We have automatically become accustomed to associating musical ideas with our feelings without knowing the reason for doing so. We unconsciously express these feelings in pantomime with facial expressions. If we hear pretty music, we smile; should we hear a gruesome theme, we shudder; do we hear sad music, we are moved to sorrow, and so on. But the old masters would rely on the words, either in the lyrics or by the way of title to help them out—so we have "Traumerie" and "Serenade" and "Spring Song."

But why was it necessary to give them a title? Was not the music itself sufficient to express the thought? Shall we say that they were musical thoughts and ideas in the "making," for now when we hear these themes we know instinctively what they express? The great new field within the boundless area of the photoplay is now open to the composer. The undesignated emotions are flashed before him in rapid succession, and all of them he has to copy in his musical notes. No longer does he have to wait for his inspirations; they are at his very door.

A composer need not state that he is going to write a tone poem on the "Tempest." The "Tempest" is prepared; all he needs to do is to express it in musical language.

For the photoplay there are no limitations, and so to the music writer for the silent drama the field is the world.

This is why William Furst, who wrote the successful score for "Joan the Woman," spent weeks in the atmosphere of the studio with the players who were enacting so stupendous a production, which has become an epoch in the motion picture history.

The real beauty of this special music cannot be gleaned in one hearing. Music students will do well to go and see this picture with the purpose of studying the music, and go over it, since it furnishes as much enjoyment and study as going to the opera. There are moments when the audience is moved to heights of emotion and enthusiasm to rise to their feet, but one must not forget that the music has played an important part to attain this result.

To write an opera some composers have spent years in suitable surroundings. Mr. Furst did his work in a few short months; part of it was done on the train from Los Angeles to New York.

The score is equally as large as many operas, since it takes almost three hours to perform.

We would not go so far as to call this a great "American Opera," but up to the present time it is without doubt the greatest new American composition for the photodrama. The Cardinal Film Corporation is to be complimented on giving opportunity for this stupendous step in the right direction for the cause of music with the photoplay.

The Allen, Calgary, Up-to-Date Theatre

THE Allen Theatre, owned and operated by the Allen Theatre Company, Limited, located in the heart of the business district of Calgary, Alberta, at 117-119 Eighth avenue, is of modern construction.

Construction plans were drawn up by J. C. League, and the house was completed during 1914. The theatre measures 50 feet in width and 120 feet in depth, and is constructed of concrete, brick and steel.

The front of the theatre is neatly finished. The lower part is very plain, while the upper part of the building is finished in Roman Ornament, on most approved lines. An electric flash sign about twenty-five feet in height, having an abundance of different color lamps upon it, adorns the front, keeping the theatre in the eye of the public at all times.

The ground floor of the building is occupied by the auditorium and two small stores. The lobby, which measures 20 feet by 25 feet, is finished entirely in white Vermont marble and tile. The box office is constructed of black and white marble, plate glass, topped with a stain glass dome. The doors leading into the inner lobby are finished in mahogany, with small plate-glass windows in them. The box office is equipped with a Tamco Automatic ticket-selling machine. Display frames in the lobby were furnished by the Newman Manufacturing Company.

The projection room is at the rear of the balcony, and is equipped with two Power's projectors of a late type. The length of throw is 70 feet onto a Mirroroid screen. The Indirect lighting system is used, fixtures being of the chain-suspended type, bowls being of metal.

For ventilating and heating, the American Blower system has been installed, this method working out to perfection. A Kimball pipe organ of large dimension and a 10-piece orchestra furnish the music for the pictures.

The seating capacity of the theatre is 854; 554 orchestra seats and 300 balcony, finished in mahogany, were all furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago.

Elaborate Crandall House Planned

ANOTHER large picture house is to be added to Washington's amusement group. This comes as the sixth of the chain of Crandall theatres, which are located in the important sections of the Capitol City. It will be known as the Metropolitan, and will be at Tenth and F streets, forming the third of the amusement structures planned for this new motion picture district.

The others are the two houses of Marcus Loew—the Columbia, now in operation at Twelfth and F streets, to be much enlarged, and his new theatre shortly to be built on Thirteenth and F.

With a wide frontage on F street, which will be the entrance, the Metropolitan structure will have an L-shaped base, offering ample space for the plans for one of the largest amusement structures in the city. The acquisition of the property, it is stated, involved the outlay of about $450,000, and the theatre will cost $800,000. Plans are in the hands of Reginald W. Geare, who is also the architect for Crandall's Kneckerbecker, now under construction at Eighteenth street and Columbus road.

Busby Theatre One of the Largest in Oklahoma

THE Busby theatre of McAlester, Oklahoma, is one of the largest theatres in the state of Oklahoma. It is controlled by the McAlester Theatre Company and operated under the management of A. C. King.

The house was completed in January, 1916, and has all of the latest modern improvements, such as are to be found in newly constructed theatres. It is located in the business section of McAlester and is constructed of brick and white stone, stairways, etc., being of cement and cast iron. Measurements of the structure are 100 feet in width by 150 feet in depth.

The front of the theatre is artistically finished with white stone and white woodwork trimmings. There is a small store on each side of the entrance to the lobby, which ought to prove good investments as refreshment parlor or bootblack parlor. Above the entrance doors leading into the lobby, which measure 30 feet by 45 feet, is a large glass-covered canopy and a huge stained glass window, which measures about thirty feet in height. The interior of the theatre is finished in cream color. An overhead fan ventilating system, used in conjunction with a steam heating system, keeps the house at a comfortable temperature at all times.

The theatre has a seating capacity of approximately 1,400, there being 557 seats on the main floor, 437 on the balcony, and something over 375 gallery seats. The American Seating Company furnished the chairs. Indirect lighting system is used, the fixtures being of the bowl-shaped chain suspended type.
The projection room, in charge of Dick McCulley, is equipped with two Power's 6 A. motor-driven machines. The length of throw is 56 feet onto a Mirroid screen. A generator set is also used.

The Busby has the largest stage of any theatre in the state of Oklahoma, measuring 45 feet by 90 feet, large enough to accommodate the most pretentious road show now traveling. The music for the pictures is furnished by a piano. For the vaudeville acts an orchestra is maintained.

Paramount, Metro, Pathe, Bluebird, and all big state right productions, are shown at this theatre. Mary Pickford, William S. Hart, Florence Lawrence and Marguerite Clark prove popular favorites here.

There are four performances daily, consisting of 5 or 6 reels each. The admission prices are five and ten cents. The management of the theatre advertises extensively in the daily newspapers and on billboards.

Empress an Up-to-Date Canadian House

The Empress theatre of Kamloops, B. C., is an up-to-the-minute house located on Seymour street in the business section of Kamloops. The theatre is owned by C. O'Keefe and operated under the direction of A. K. MacMartin.

The structure is composed of brick, concrete faced, measuring 45 feet in width and 110 feet in depth. Mr. Bell of Vernon, B. C., was the architect.

The front of the theatre is finished in the Adams style of architecture and is well lighted for night display by arc lamps, incandescent electric lights and an electric sign.

The lobby which measures 18 feet by 18 feet is neatly decorated. It contains many brass display frames which were manufactured by the Winnipeg Brass Fixture Company. The box office is centered between the two doors leading into the theatre and is constructed of plate glass and concrete. The doors leading into the theatre are finished in mahogany and have French plate glass mirrors set in them.

The interior of the theatre is attractively finished in brown lending a comfortable and homelike atmosphere to the house. The walls are paneled and white scrolls in plastique ornament the finishing touches to the interior.

Steam heating and electric lighting is used.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 600; the comfortable opera chairs having been furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago.

The projection room which is in charge of Frank J. Suave is equipped with a Power 6 A motor driven projector. The length of throw is 90 feet onto an aluminum screen.

A four piece orchestra consisting of piano, violin, cello and traps and drummer furnish the music for the pictures. For certain pictures an organ is used.

Fox, World, Bluebird, Mutual, General, Famous Players and all high class productions are shown at this theatre. There are two shows daily consisting of 6 reels each and matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Admission prices are 5 and 10 cents at matinees and 10 and 15 cents in the evening.

Mr. MacMartin, who is a "Live Wire," has opened a nursery with a nurse in charge for matinee performances. This is to encourage mothers to come and bring their babies along with them.

The theatre advertises extensively in the daily newspapers, on billboards throughout the city and by distributing heralds.

Organ Inventor Attends Installation

Daniel W. Barton, inventor of the Bartola organ, and Charles E. Pyle, manager of the Bartola Company, went to Pontiac, Mich., last week, where they aided in opening the new Oakland theatre. It is said to be one of the finest motion picture houses in the state. A Bartola organ has been installed.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

California

The building of the Bank of Coronado, at Coronado, which is approaching completion, is to have a theatre annex on the Loma avenue side, with a spacious lobby entrance from the Orange avenue front. The theatre structure, work on which will begin immediately, will be 95 by 145 feet in ground dimensions, will seat 1,000 persons and will have the most artistically and beautifully designed and decorated proscenium and boxes of any playhouse in the bay region. The auditorium will have an unusually lofty ceiling, and the seating arrangement will be on a liberal scale. In the basement of the building will be located the steam-heating plant for both the theatre and the bank building.

Idaho

The Raymond Hotel property, owned by James B. McCrane, the Paramount theatre at Lewiston, Idaho, has been opened to the public, with Allen H. Hilton as manager. The theatre is 26 x 100 feet in size and has a seating capacity of 500. It is the intention of the owner to install a balcony, however, which will add 200 more seats. The house has been beautifully decorated inside and the outside is provided with a large marquee. Two rest rooms open off the lobby. Allen Hilton, the manager, is well known throughout the West. He has been in the motion picture business since 1908. For the opening, a six-page supplement to the Lewiston Tribune was prepared.

In the long run you will get the most for your money by buying all of your supplies from “FULCO”—the One Price House.

Bids are invited from builders and contractors by the Hoffman Company, Philadelphia, architects, for the construction of the new Stanley theatre at the southwest corner of Nineteenth and Market streets. Plans have been completed call for one of the most elaborate moving picture theatre buildings in the country. The structure will be of steel and concrete and will be erected throughout. It will have forty-five aisles leading to the balconies, lobbies, a new ventilating system and a dozen moving stage lights among the features. The building will have a frontage of 130 feet on Market street by a frontage of 180 feet along Nineteenth street.
Mr. Wells has just returned from a tour of the cities on the circuit of which he is the guiding spirit, and found conditions excellent. The show houses are all doing good business and the people generally are optimistic. James Vason, of Wheeling, has let the contract for the erection of a new theatre to be erected at Wheeling. The theatre will be called the Liberty and it is expected to be completed by early fall. It will be one of the latest theatres in the Stogie City and will seat 2,500. It will be beautifully decorated and will be up to date in every respect.

WASHINGTON

Wilbur Robinson of the Bijou theatre, Northport, has purchased lots at Center and Fourth streets and will erect a modern movie theatre building as soon as weather conditions permit. The second story will contain a dance hall.

The new Pantages theatre at Tacoma will soon be ready for occupancy, the Jones building in which it is to be housed, fast approaching completion. The exterior on the Broadway and Ninth street fronts are to be finished in glazed terra cotta, and the structure will be one of the most imposing in the city.

WISCONSIN

The "New Butterfly," Kenosha’s latest theatre, was opened March 17 to capacity business. The theatre is located on Milwaukee avenue and is owned by Ernst Klinkert and Charles Pacini.

If negotiations now pending do not go awry, Sturgeon Bay will shortly have a grand motion picture theatre. John W. Pelton, of Appleton, is the man who is in charge of the project and from present indications the new venture will be an assured fact by early fall.

The Community Moving Picture theatre, 55th and Greenfield avenues, will open to the public on March 28. The house was built by Geo. E. Lebel, proprietor of the West Alps House, and is first-class in furniture and equipment.

Mr. Lebel, who will manage the house, promises the best pictures that money can buy.

Supply Firm Establishes Northern Offices

THE Independent Film and Theatre Supply Company, with offices in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg, have opened a branch exchange and supply depot in St. John, N.B., with S. Starfield, a former city salesman in Montreal, as resident manager. The new house is to be a separate head, but with the same management, the Perkins Electric Company is also establishing a branch supply in St. John. Together with these, Mr. Starfield is to have oversight of the Standard Film Service exchange, which until recently handled the Metro pictures.

Who Gets Their Money—You—or Your Competitor?

Do you realize that thousands of exhibitors in the United States have greatly increased the earning power of their theaters by making friends with the kiddies? If you let someone else take the children’s trade away from your theater, you not only lose their nickels and dimes, but the nickels and dimes of their fathers and mothers and sisters and brothers, where the kiddies go their parents go.

Movie Rings and Buttons

are a mighty aid to the up-to-date exhibitor. They help you get the children’s friendship and hold it—and the children bring their folks to the theatre of "The Movie Man who gives rings to them."

Each ring comes packed in a neat envelope, bearing the name and address of your theatre. If you want to see your business begin to jump, let us hear from you at once.

SCORES A TRIUMPH AT

The Broadway Theatre, New York

Enormous Crowds and Splendid Press Reviews Forecast Country Wide Landslide for "WOMANHOOD"

New York Evening Journal

"'Womanhood' is a film of the hour. It is needless to mention the cast, as they are all stars, acting to perfection. Practically every important government official, men notable in public life for their efforts in the cause of preparedness and every army and navy officer stationed in the East, attended the opening performance."

Morning Telegraph

"Fifteen hundred American men and women were aroused to enthusiasm last night at the premier of 'Womanhood.' They threw convention aside and yelled, stamped and cheered during some of the more stirring moments of the play. 'Womanhood' is a decided triumph from a photo-artistic point of view. The battle scenes have even more power than those in 'The Battle Cry of Peace.' Directing and photography triumph in the scenes in which Zeppelins are sent crashing into the sea."

Evening World

"If you have seen 'Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation' reel by reel, picture by picture to the very end, you can say that you have seen something worth seeing. Here is no commonplace movie, but an appealing and convincing spectacle built on romantic lines."

New York American

"'Womanhood' differs from most military plays in that, instead of containing several thrills, it is one long thrill. It is indeed a soul-stirring spectacle. Throughout, there runs a beautiful love story. The technical work of the film has been excellently managed."

New York Tribune

"Great outburst of patriotism at film's premier. 'Womanhood', almost the first propaganda picture to carry conviction, is excellently staged and wonderfully well cast."

New York World

"Because of its patriotic appeal and timeliness, there is no question that 'Womanhood' will win great popularity all over the country. Its battle scenes are of marvelous pictorial effectiveness."

New York Herald

"A patriotic rally developed at first showing of 'Womanhood' at the Broadway Theatre last night. Had a recruiting officer been there, he would have had a busy night, the spectators being moved to applause and cheers."

This splendid five-reel production, "THE HERO OF THE HOUR," featuring dashing Jack Mulhall, is the kind of feature that makes people love to go to moving pictures. It is absolutely distinctive. It’s the kind of play that every theatre clamors for but rarely gets. It’s the kind of play that sends people away bristling with enthusiasm for more pictures of this kind. It’s a crackerjack. Book it for the popularity it will bring your house. It’s ten to one you’ll play it and repeat.
TWO GREAT OFFERINGS

NOTABLE as have been the many past successes produced by the Universal in the serial field, there are none which in so short a time have taken such a firm hold upon the minds of the fans which brings them back, episode after episode, as "The Voice on the Wire." The mysterious voice, giving its ghostly warning over a disconnected telephone, baffling every turn of the ingenious traps laid for it by John Shirley, private investigator, stimulate the curiosity and apparently raise in the minds of the audiences the same perturbation that Ben Wilson, in the character of Shirley, so aptly depicts on the screen. Beautiful Neva Gerber, Shirley's charming assistant, who has rescued from the clutches of a gang, also has the fans guessing. Like Cronin, the chief of police, they do not know whether she is "on the square" or not. And so they come back night after night in the hope of finding some clue that will settle, in their own minds at least, the cleverest mystery story ever filmed. The story is from the popular novel of the same name by Eustace Hale Ball, author of "Traffic in Souls" and many other notable successes. It was directed by Stuart Paton, the successful producer of the Universal's stupendous spectacular submarine drama, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," and bears every evidence of his master hand. Supporting Mr. Wilson and Miss Gerber are Joseph Girard and a large and brilliant cast. The production is lavish in the extreme, and is well worthy of the phrase, "The Universal's latest and greatest serial." Fans, Exhibitors and Exchange men alike are enthusiastic and, as everyone knows, that is proof positive that a serial is big and very much worth while, as an entertainment and as a profitable box office attraction. Bookings may be made through any of the 73 Universal Exchanges or through the Home Office of the Universal. For those Exhibitors who for any reason do not care to run a serial or connected film story, the Universal has prepared a remarkable novelty in the form of seven two-reel dramas, each COMPLETE IN ITSELF, released under the general title of "The Perils of the Secret Service." The stories were written by the famous American novelist George Bronson How-ard, world-traveler, playwright and author of "God's Man," one of the literary sensations of a decade. The stories here offered are based on the famous "Yorke Norroy" series which appeared in a magazine of wide circulation recently, and it is gratifying to note the eagerness with which their filmization has been greeted. As Yorke Norroy, diplomatic agent of the Secret Service, Kingsley Benedict, the popular Universal star, has the opportunity of his career. Cool, suave and resourceful, he holds his audiences in breathless suspense, always to triumph in the end. He is supported by a different Universal woman star in each of the seven stories and the entire series gives a wonderful example of this capable actor's versatility.
PROFITS PROVE PROGRAM'S POPULARITY

Exhibitors Giving Universal Program Show Are Reaping Good Profits and Growing in Popularity

In every section of the country there are Exhibitors who have found that switching from “features” to program they have changed their business from one of loss to one of profit. Any Universal Exchange man can give you the actual proof whenever you want it. The reason is that the public don’t care to arrive at a theatre late and find that they must see the last half of a feature first; in other words, look at a picture backwards. They like to go to the movies when they feel like it, stop in for a few good short and varied subjects, and leave feeling that they had their money’s worth. On the Universal Program there is always something to please everyone, no one is ever disappointed. If one subject does not please there is sure to be several that do, and the patron goes out to BOOST YOUR HOUSE.

"THE SINGLE CODE" IS SECOND CRANE WILBUR MUTUAL PICTURE

The second of the Crane Wilbur series of Mutual Pictures is released the week of April 16. "The Single Code" is its title. It is five reels in length and contains innumerable, powerful situations. Thomas Ricketts directed it. Mr. Wilbur is surrounded by a capable company headed by Florence Prity.

Deals With Old, Old Problem.

The story of "The Single Code" deals with an old, old problem. It raises once more the question of whether the man is equally entitled to blame with the woman—whether there should be a single code of morality equally applicable to men and women. Mr. Wilbur appears in the role of Hugh Carrington, a young purist, who writes and preaches "I believe in a single code of morality. Why blame the woman for a sin which you committed? I say man is the greater sinner, for he is of the stronger sex." Yet when sin enters his own home and both himself and his bride falter in the path of righteousness, he seeks absolution for himself and condemns his helpmate. Crying, "You are different. You are my wife!" he rushes away, and so the double standard wins a new advocate.

Released Week of April 16.

"The Single Code" is released the week of April 16. Bookings on it can be made now at any Mutual Exchange. "The Painted Lie," the first of the Wilbur productions released as Mutual Pictures, is showing to tremendous success. There are four others still to come. Reservations can be made for all of them at this time.

Coming Ann Murdock Film Has Big Setting

In "Outcast," the coming Ann Murdock production which is to be one of the first offerings of the Empire All Star Corporation to the Mutual Pictures, a 120 foot stage setting, representing Monte Carlo, will be shown. It depicts the famous gambling resort with true fidelity and is one of the largest ever created. Still another big scene in this same picture depicts the Hotel Savoy, London. More than a hundred players appear in support of Miss Murdock in these massive sets. Reservations on the Empire All Star productions in which Miss Murdock will be seen can be made now at any Mutual Exchange. The exact release date of the first of these Mutual Pictures will be announced later.

MARY MILES MINTER STARTS NEW SERIES WITH "ENVIRONMENT"

A NOTHER Mary Miles Minter five-reel feature is released by Mutual Film Exchanges everywhere the week of April 16. "Environment" is the first of the second series of Mutual Pictures starring Mary Miles Minter. It was written and directed by James Kirkwood. The American studies at Santa Barbara, California, were used for its staging.

A Quaint New England Story. "Environment" is a typical Minter production—sweet and wholesome, filled with smiles and tears. It is laid in a quaint, old fashioned, New England village. Miss Minter is cast as a native of the village loafer and ne'er-do-well. On graduation day she meets for the first time the new minister, who promptly proceeds to fall in love with her, though her clothes are not so fine as those of her girl friends, and her home is anything but inviting. Through a strange combination of circumstances the heroine is placed in a decidedly bad light before the minister. For a time he thinks her anything but a "good" girl. But the old saying that "The darkest cloud has a silver lining" is aptly illustrated in this picture, for just when all seems hopeless to the minister, everything is explained satisfactorily to the pastor and the daughter of the village loafer becomes the bride of the minister.

Strong Supporting Cast.

George Fischer is again Miss Minter's leading man in this picture. Assisting them in the production appear such favorites as George Periolat, Margaret Shelby, Jack Vosburgh, Harvey Clark, Lucille Ward and Al Vosburgh. "Environment" is now booking at all Mutual Exchanges. Exhibitors are still packing their theatres with the first Minter Series and open dates can be arranged for them also, enabling a manager to arrange a whole Minter week for his house if he so desires.

"A Daughter of War" Is Timely Released

Just now while things are at fever heat—while bands are playing and recruits are rushing to the colors, exhibitors have an opportunity of doing their bit to aid the country by showing "A Daughter of War." This is a Mutual special of five reels, starring May Ward. Its scenes are laid in 1776. It is released April 12th. Home patriotism among your patrons, stimulate recruiting. Kicking the slats out of the cradle

Yea, bo! That’s just what this reel is doing.

The kickingest, fightingest, make-’em-want-it-against single-reel in the whole industry is “Reel Life”, Gaumont’s Mutual Magazine in Film.

“Reel Life” sits with its feet in the Gulf of Mexico, and its hands in the Atlantic and Pacific, while it cools its head in Hudson’s Bay. It covers the country as king of the magazine single-reels.

“Reel Life” is faster than a Cuban revolution, more interesting than a centipede putting on its boots, and more profitable (for what you invest) than Standard Oil.

Step right up, gentlemen, and get your order in right away for one day a week. You get all the best pictures of things worth writing about in magazines. And your patrons come back next week for more.

There is Something New Under the Sun.

It is Triangle's new booking policy.

You can read all about it, Mr. Exhibitor, in the news columns of this magazine.

This policy means the dawning of a new day—a day of solidly-based prosperity and success—for every exhibitor who heeds the call.

Read our message. If you are a Triangle exhibitor, it means much to you. If you aren't, it means everything—the solution of your biggest problem; the assurance of better days than have been possible under any existing system.

Triangle Bulletin No. 222 gives detailed information of the new plan. Be sure you get your copy.

THE VICAR OF WAKEFIELD

"It is almost as human and delightful on the screen as it is between the covers of a book; and Frederick Warde, who acted before the camera as the kindly old Vicar, interpreted the character with as close an approach to perfection as cinema interpretations can hope to achieve."

N. Y. World.

POTS-AND-PANS PEGGY

"Another very entertaining Thanhouser picture. It is a grateful relief to view a picture that avoids the sordid side of modern life."

Exhibitors’ Trade Review.

HER BELOVED ENEMY

"A mystery story from a little different angle, that may be added to Thanhouser’s ever-growing list of unconventional screen stories."

Sunday Telegraph.

HER LIFE AND HIS

"A mingling of the lives of Henry Ford and Thomas Mott Osborne, told in an entertaining and melodramatic way. Climaxes are well constructed, human interest strong, and acting first class."

Sunday Telegraph.

A MODERN MONTE CRISTO

"Used just the underlying theme of the novel—namely, revenge—and provided a vivid, colorful tale and one almost as elaborate in presentation as the transference of the original story might be to the screen."

New York Mail.

THE IMAGE MAKER

"The broad sweep of color supplied by the followers of the ruler of the Nile and the Arabs of to-day are in keeping with the character of the story."

Moving Picture World.

HER NEW YORK

"Isn’t it a remarkable thing what a film-producing firm can do with a good scenario? Thanhouser has released for Pathé’s program one of the best—yes, one of the very best—features ever turned out."

Variety.

WHAT IS OUR AMERICAN WAR NEWS SERIAL?

A graphic record of America's entrance into the European War, our program of industrial and military preparedness, our development of American resources to aid our cause, and of our stirring campaigns by land and sea in defense of American rights.

It will be issued in weekly installments of one reel, as events dictate. These releases will not only mark the apex of modern war correspondence in subjects, but in quality of film also. Titles will be tinted and illustrated, fade-ins, dissolving effects, and fade-outs will be used, and a general high standard of screen excellence will characterize the pictures.

THE FIRST EXCLUSIVE AMERICAN WAR NEWS WEEKLY.
THE ONLY INDEPENDENT WEEKLY.

YOUR OWN PRODUCTION

This will be your own production, direct to you from your own camera correspondents who work under the supervision of Captain Robert R. Reynolds. Prints will be sent you with no name or trademark thereon, for attaching to your individual leader (furnished by us).

EXHIBITED AS YOUR EXCLUSIVE NEWS SERVICE.

ADVERTISING

Most alluring advertising matter will be supplied you at standard rates. Twenty-four, three, and one-half sheet lithos in regulation colors, slides, set photos with each release, souvenir American flags, printed news bulletin blanks for posting war bulletins, life size paintings of your special war correspondent for lobby display and autographed photos for distribution to your patrons are being gotten ready for arousing local interest in this greatest of war pictures.

MUSIC

Patriotic national and sectional song and march scores will be supplied for musical accompaniment.

Entrancing Romances in Pictures

The O. Henry story is the story you can never forget. With a swift, sure hand he sets his simple stage, fills it with delightfully human and absurdly romantic men and women whom he alone could portray, and makes them play out those droll comedies and pathetic tragedies which will live forever in the hearts of millions of people all over the civilized world.

O. Henry stories make motion pictures you can never forget. They bring to life upon the screen the vivid, picturesque, whimsical characters—the quaint, surprising situations—the sudden, unexpected climaxes that move you to laughter or to tears.

O. HENRY
BROADWAY STAR FEATURES

These Wonderful pictures have a vast audience ready-made, for practically the entire population has read the O. Henry Stories.
Each O. Henry picture is a faithful reproduction of the story, with all the great author's whimsicality and droll humor. Each is beautifully produced under the direction of Thomas R. Mills.
Millions of people are waiting to see the O. Henry Pictures. Their box office value is far above the average. Book them now—be the first to show them in your locality.

DISTRIBUTED BY GENERAL FILM CO., Inc.
Everything entitled comedy isn’t comedy. The Exhibitor has learned this fact to his own expense and to the sorrow of his audiences. The audiences have paid their good money for promised laughs and have felt like crying.

Good comedy is not easy to produce. As much time, thought and care must be put into comedy production as in other plays—more, sometimes!

The Selig Polyscope Company is releasing a number of one-reel farce comedies. Up to date they include, “No Place Like Home,” “Over the Garden Wall,” “Everybody Was Satisfied,” “Mr. Bingo, the Bachelor,” “Bill and the Bearded Lady,” and “Romance and Roses.”

General Film Company reports these comedies are fulfilling a long felt want; that they are being booked on sight. If you like good comedy for your theatre, book the Selig comedies.

“The Daughter of Gas-House Dan,” a drama of love and politics, is the latest Selig multiple reel drama announced for General Film Service. There’s a lot of action and a gripping plot.
Aim Before You Fire!

When you are hunting big game you take careful aim before you shoot. Random shots bring poor results. Are you firing at random or aiming carefully to get good photoplays? When an Essanay "Black Cat" feature or the "Is Marriage Sacred?" series are sighted pull the trigger quick. You are sure to bag a good one!

Read how the exhibitors of Chicago rate these two series in their own reviewing service:

"Is Marriage Sacred?" "The Pallid Dawn"—Essanay drama featuring Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold and Ernest Maupain. Subject is interesting; good clean entertainment. Will be enjoyed and go over very good with any audience. Acting, photography and scenery very good. Rated 95." Don't fail to book "The Wifeless Husband" and "Meddling With Marriage."

An Unusual Request

was made by Governor Whitman for the privilege of a private showing of "Trooper 44" for the Governors of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Delaware and their aides-de-camp on the occasion of their conference to devise effective means of co-operation and action during the war.

The interest of the Governors was so intense that the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation was then requested to show the picture before the members of the Senate and Assembly and other officials of New York State. This showing of April 3rd in Albany evoked enthusiastic applause and appreciation.

Although this drama is in no sense a propaganda picture, the producers of "Trooper 44" are now deluged with requests for showings of this film in the thirteen States where legislation for the creation of a State Police is pending.

The E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation announces that it is not at liberty to make any more private showings of this picture since the enormous interest aroused must be conserved for the advantage of the state right buyers.

THE GREATEST MOTION PICTURE PRODUCTION OF THE AGE

READ WHAT THE CRITICS WRITE

"The Frohman Amusement Corporation's picturization of George Bronson Howard's novel stands as the most intense dramatic picture of extra reels of both recent and distant date."
Peter Milne in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"The most striking photoplay of a modern story I have ever seen."
Agnes Smith in MORNING TELEGRAPH.

"One of the most beautifully staged, well acted and effectively produced pictures that has ever been shown."
Harriette Underhill in N. Y. TRIBUNE.

"'God's Man' is an ambitious photoplay dealing with an ambitious story. There is no denying the effectiveness and high quality of both."
Tom Kennedy in EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW.

"Forcefully human and effectively truthful."
"WID."

"'God's Man' should set a new pace in flimdom."
J. E. Edwards in THE BILLBOARD.

"I consider 'God's Man' one of the three or four really great pictures which have been produced. Many pictures have all the qualities of greatness except story. 'God's Man' has all that the others have, plus story."
S. M. Weller in N. Y. REVIEW.

The reason why this is a STATE RIGHT PICTURE is because it has the same relation to a Program picture that a BEST SELLER has to an average book. It has all the talking points and HIGH SPOTS that are essential to the success of a STATE RIGHT PRODUCTION. It is rich in subject matter, in title, in presentation, cast and exploitation ideas from the box-office viewpoint. It is a safe and sane investment for the safe and sane BUYER and EXHIBITOR. The theme is a spiritual as well as a material analysis of the eternal conflict between mind and matter. It is a BROADSIDE against slanderers of VIRTUOUS WOMANHOOD.

Here is the cast:—
Sheldon Lewis, who starred in The Iron Claw; Walter Hampden, who starred in The Servant in the House; Charlotte Ives, now starring in the Morosco Broadway hit, The Brat; Marie Shotwell, appearing in Enlighten Thy Daughter; Harry Benham, of The Million Dollar Mystery, and Theodore Friebus, for years the idol at the Castle Square Theatre, Boston.

The feature was produced and directed by EDWARD WARREN, maker of many successful state right attractions.

EBONY COMEDIES

The New Comedy Creations That Not Only Make Them Laugh But Make Them Talk

Talk—mouth to mouth advertising—is the best yet. Get the people talking about you and their curiosity will be aroused to such an extent that they are going to drop in on you just to see what you are doing.

If you want to reap the full benefit of mouth to mouth advertising—the kind that pays better than any other kind—book Ebony Productions. They create talk; excite curiosity. They will get the fellow and his family who seldom, if ever, attend your theatre, when nothing else can. Then when they see one Ebony they are going to come to see the next and the next.

Ebony Comedies are opportune. Their novelty makes them big attractions. All you have to do is to announce the exhibition of an Ebony and, right at this time, it will create more curiosity than the announcement of any photoplay you can run. And attract—they will flock to see it. Exhibitors everywhere are being convinced this is a fact. So will you. Try an Ebony. If you haven't booked one, begin with this release.

“DAT BLACKHAND WAITAH MAN”

It’s running over—brim full of the funniest situations you ever saw. Every one of the cast brings a laugh. Actors are colored. That’s why.

Just imagine—picture in your mind, what would take place in a colored folks hotel, when all of the guests are having the kind of a good time no other but these people can have, and are anxiously awaiting a feast of fried spring chicken and hot biscuits being prepared by the big fat, black cook, the boss of the kitchen, when a blackhand letter is received from a discharged waiter threatening to blow up the place, and it is finally blown up. Imagine this, if you can, as it is then, and only then, that anyone can begin to realize the unheard of humor and naturally funny situations there is in this snappy one-reel Ebony Comedy. By all means book it. Get it from one of the following:

Speaking Editorially:

The Picture and Patriotism

ON April 6 a new America was born. We stand today upon a new world position and facing a gigantic task. Every man, every individual at work in this industry, wants to do his share, be it great or little. And the immediate opportunity is facing us. The Associated Motion Picture Advertisers have crystallized the patriotism of the industry. Through slides, film leaders and trailers, posters, and newspaper publicity they will spread that propaganda so necessary to the immediate mobilization of the country's great resources. Everyone can help the movement—manufacturers, distributors, exhibitors and all. If you cannot, yourself, make or display this propaganda, you can make a contribution, however modest, to the cause. It is a great and good one. Help the motion picture do its share.

Motion Picture Indigestion

TOO much food causes indigestion. Too much reading causes mental indigestion. The analogy is obvious: Too many motion pictures in an evening cause motion picture indigestion.

But the ultimate consumer—in this case the exhibitor—may rest assured that a two million dollar burden will eventually land on his shoulders. It remains for the exhibitor to say whether he will accept the load. In proportion to his activity during the next few days may the prospects of escaping it be measured. In its present form the Wheeler Committee's bill is easily the most outrageous bit of legislation that an exasperated and much hounded industry has yet faced. The counts against it are many and varied, each arousing a new sense of amazement at the lawmaking attitude toward the motion picture. It creates a one man censorship with almost despotic powers. Its positive tax levies a fine on quality and rewards inferiority. It levies a tax, not on profits, nor even incomes, but on the very tools of the industry. It stamps the motion picture—in law-maker's eyes—blood-brother to the liquor traffic. Its apparent solicitude for the religious and educational value of the screen is a sham—and we face the astounding prospect of being taxed for the dissemination of news, the aid of education and the work of the church.

It shows the way to the tax-hungry legislators of the nation—and in equal measure it is a call to arms to men who would prove worthy of being recorded in the ranks of the fifth industry.

Facing the Industry's Greatest Battle

THIS is the account of an "old timer." The old timer ran a picture show in the "opera house." He charged an unvarying price of admission. His program was liked, as he was liked—because both could be depended upon. When the question of a new wing for the high school came up, his opinion was taken as seriously as the town banker's.

Along came a bright young fellow, with new-fangled notions, who built himself a dazzling theatre, installed sensational pictures, and charged ten cents, against the old timer's fifteen. The old timer changed his attitude—not a hair's breadth. He continued to be a figure in the town's activities. The Bluebird distributing manager tells us he cannot afford to give paper to exhibitors free. The daily program change makes it impossible, he declares.

Has anyone anything to say?

Stop-Watch Advertising

LAST week we published an article on the efforts of V.L.S.E. to render service to the exhibitor. The main point of that service seems to be to bring folks into the theatre by newspaper advertising. The plan is succeeding, because V.L.S.E. demands of its exhibitors runs longer than a day. If that advertising depended upon daily program change, would it be a sound investment? The Bluebird distributing manager tells us he cannot afford to give paper to exhibitors free. The daily program change makes it impossible, he declares.

A ROUSED by the exclusive forecast of the Wheeler Film Bill, appearing in last week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS, film men are already beginning to gather forces for one of the most vital struggles the industry has yet faced. Faced with a levy last week's Motion Picture News, film men are already beginning to gather forces on the industry that has been estimated at $2,000,000, and also the realization that the prospects for victory are of the slimmest sort. New York's Legislature closes its session within the next two weeks, and political wiseacres prophesy that the hold-up legislation will be jammed through in the maze of hasty lawmaking, that marks the close of the Empire State's legislative terms. A united drive on Governor Whitman to induce a veto will then be the only course left.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS' forecast of the bill tentatively agreed upon by the Wheeler committee gives the industry its first news of the proposed levy. During the week copies of the bill reached New York city, and at a meeting of the National Association, held Friday afternoon, consideration was given to the drafts. The official statement then declares: "It is decided that the proposed motion picture license and tax bill was so unjust and unfair that the National Association is opposed to it."

It is not likely, however, that the opposition can prevent the introduction of the bill in both Houses of the Legislature during the coming week. As told in last week's News, the bill provides for the erection of a motion picture department in charge of a commission, and as many deputies as necessary. It will then be necessary for exhibitors, operators, producers and distributors to secure licenses, at annual fees, from this commission.

The provision of the proposed bill stating the annual license fees is as follows:

1. By an applicant for a producer's license, two hundred dollars; by an applicant for a distributor's license, three hundred dollars;
2. By an applicant for an exhibitor's license, five dollars, if the place of exhibition has a seating capacity of three hundred or less; ten dollars, if the place of exhibition has a seating capacity of more than three hundred and not more than six hundred; twenty-five dollars, if the place of exhibition has a seating capacity of more than six hundred and not more than one thousand; fifty dollars, if the place of exhibition has a seating capacity of more than one thousand and not more than fifteen hundred; one hundred dollars, if the place of exhibition has a seating capacity of more than fifteen hundred and not more than two thousand; two hundred dollars, if the place of exhibition has a seating capacity of more than two thousand.
3. If an applicant for an operator's license, two dollars.
4. If a license, other than an operator's license, be issued for a term of less than one year, the license fee shall be proportioned accordingly, but a minimum fee of one dollar shall be charged for any term. Such a fee, other than a fee for an operator's license, may be charged for the state tax collector. The fee for an operator's license shall be paid to the Commissioner, prior to the issuance of the license."

But the provision of the bill that is contested on to result in a million dollars turnover tax is the one where every foot of negative film "sold, leased, distributed or exhibited" in the State. The schedule sets the tax figure in proportion to the cost of the production of the negative, plus a "fair and just proportion of the producer's overhead." This section of the draft reads:

\begin{align*}
\text{If one dollar and fifty cents or less, one-quarter of a cent per foot.} \\
\text{If more than one dollar and fifty cents and not more than two dollars, two cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than two dollars and not more than three dollars, one cent per foot.} \\
\text{If more than three dollars and not more than four dollars, one and one-half cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than four dollars and not more than five dollars, two cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than five dollars and not more than six dollars, two and one-half cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than six dollars and not more than seven dollars, three cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than seven dollars and not more than eight dollars, four cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than eight dollars and not more than nine dollars, six cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than nine dollars and not more than ten dollars, seven cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than ten dollars and not more than twelve dollars, eight cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than twelve dollars and not more than fourteen dollars, nine cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than fourteen dollars and not more than sixteen dollars, ten cents per foot.} \\
\text{If more than sixteen dollars, eleven cents per foot.} \\ \end{align*}

An estimate of the footage released in New York State each week, with four and five the average number of prints on each subject, will bring speedy conviction that the statement of two million dollars as the probable return to the State is a conservative one.

In addition the proposed bill allows the commissioner drastic powers whenever he shall determine that a motion picture exhibited, or about to be exhibited, is improper. For violations of any of the bill's sections, the commissioner may at his own discretion revoke the license, court action through a writ of certiorari being the only appeal.

Free showings of educational and religious plans are exempted from taxation, but such pictures are not exempt from the positive film tax, which applies to all films "sold, leased, distributed or exhibited."

Red Cross Charity Ball Plans Are Maturing Rapidly

Many prominent players have announced their intentions of being present at the movie charity ball.

This week prominent film actresses will attend a session of the stock exchange in the afternoon and another in the evening in order to give the artists an opportunity to sell tickets to the brokers.

Noted film actresses will sell tickets at the restaurants at night. All restaurants have signified their willingness to allow the selling of tickets, while every film and legitimate theatre box office is acting as selling agencies for the sale of tickets.

A number of professional dancers will make their appearance on the floor of the ballroom, including the Amazons, White and Rock, the Marinis, Dickson, Joan Sawyer, Mrs. Castle and a host of others have consented to appear.

Many film companies will be represented. Mrs. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Belmont, the Ben Ali Hagans, all have secured boxes. William R. Hearst will be present.

F. P. Lasky Signs Billie Burke for Two Years

Billie Burke, winsome stage and screen star, is shortly to return to the silent drama, having signed a two-year contract with the Famous Players-Lasky combination. Arrangements for the reappearance of her wife in the films were completed by Florenz Ziegfeld. Miss Burke will soon take time from her maternal and other duties to begin operations in "The Mysterious Miss Terry," written by Gelett Burgess. Her film work will be confined to the summer months, as she expects to pursue the drama during the theatrical season.

In "Perry," a Triangle production, and "Gloria's Romance," a serial, Miss Burke has on past occasions made her bow to motion picture fans.
A UNANIMOUS vote by the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of Philadelphia to affiliate itself with the Pennsylvania League, and to become part of the National organization, followed by application for its state charter were most important of several noteworthy steps marking the renaissance of the body, taken at a meeting on April 6.

Fred Harrington, national organizer, stimulated action by the Philadelphia body, and outlining the fight against necessity of vigorous unjust bills up before the Legislature. In particular he pointed out the injustice of the measure which would tend to prevent attendance of a child in a motion picture house unless accompanied by an adult.

Another resolution passed at this meeting was to the Mayor and Home Defense League of Philadelphia, offering any theatre of its members to the city for any purpose whatsoever.

The high-water mark of the meeting was reached when the announcement was made that the state convention for 1917 will be held in Philadelphia in June. Committees will be appointed to take in all the leagues throughout the state. Men known to be the hardest workers and the best boosters will be put on the committees. It is the determination of the Philadelphia League to make this convention one long to be remembered for its novelty, its brilliance and its results.

After the meeting a luncheon was held at which Mr. Harrington again spoke on the necessity of co-operation between exchange men and exhibitors. Edwin Meek, manager of the Philadelphia World Exchange, outlined the steps which had been made for hand-in-hand work between every branch of the industry. As a closing work Mr. Harrington urged all to work hard and long for the Philadelphia convention.

Charles H. Goodwin, secretary of the Philadelphia League, was appointed state secretary, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of James Dell.

Subsidiary Selznick Company Is Formed

Lewis J. Selznick has organized a subsidiary company to be known as the Film Advertising Service, Inc., which he has placed in charge of his son, Myron Selznick, who holds the position of purchasing agent in the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises. This new company is formed for the purpose of distributing the exchange and exhibitors advertising novelties of all sorts for the exploitation of Selznick Pictures.

Mr. Selznick, Jr., will leave New York this week on a complete tour of the Selznick exchanges to arrange the operations of the Service Company. He will be accompanied by E. J. Doolittle of the National Printing & Engraving Co., which concern holds the contract for producing all posters used for the Selznick pictures.

St. Louis Exhibitors Meet

At the last meeting of the St. Louis Exhibitors’ Association, Mr. Bob Taylor manager of the Red Feather department of Universal, was admitted to associate membership, and Mr. Lew Bent, manager of the Missouri Amusement Company, making two new members. The Legislative and Grievance committees reported activities, and a motion was carried to have the Grievance Committee prepare a substitute for the objectionable deposit system.

This association is becoming recognized as a force in civic affairs, and listened to a plea by Colonel Rumsey, representing Mr. Connell, requesting that it not inordinate any mayorality candidate, assuring the association that Mr. Connell is not in favor of censorship, or of Sunday closing.

Julius Timer Engaged to Direct Motoy Pictures

Charles P. Jaeger, president and general manager of Toyland Films, Inc., of Chicago, producers of Motoy pictures, has engaged Julius E. Timer to supervise and direct productions.

Mr. Timer was previously with the Ideal Film Studios and Laboratories and the Combine Pictures Corporation. Before that he was associated with the Fox Film Corporation, Biograph, and other equally well-known concerns. Mr. Timer has been in the film game more than ten years.

Mr. Jaeger states that his company has in use fully equipped studio facilities having five stages. Five companies are at work.

The American rights of the Motoy films have been purchased and will be distributed by Peter Pan Films, of 729 Seventh avenue, of which H. C. Allen is manager. F. Brockliss has bought all foreign rights.

Fairbanks Bids Newspapermen Farewell

Douglas Fairbanks has said good-by to the East for the time being. He is now on his way to sunny California to produce more Artcraft pictures accompanied by John Emerson and Benny Zeidman. He left New York City for Easter, and on the Saturday previous a luncheon was tendered him at Murray's by Artcraft to which members of the trade and daily press were invited. Speeches were scarce. Of course, Mr. Fairbanks made one and lived up to his reputation as a comedian by making every one laugh. Al Lichman acted as toastmaster, and called upon Kelcy Allen for a speech, but the first nighter declined. K. C. B. was more agreeable, and spoke of his visit to the Eastern Fairbanks Studio. The luncheon was served in the Peacock dining-room at Murray's.

Film Activities in Britain

An English correspondent of Motion Picture News has a number of things to say of value to producers and distributors. Excerpts from his letter follow.

The new British Censor has just issued a letter saying that in future, films which deal entirely with crime will not be passed.

We are not so wonderfully pleased with national flags that we use our own in our productions—cut yours down to the minimum if you are thinking about us when you start your production.

Comedies, give us comedies. Short, good, laugh-making comedies and comics. It doesn't matter wild films. In-spoke or straight long as they are not nonsensical. For preference one thousand footers.

Extensive Western Advertising by General

As a part of the General Film Company's campaign to acquaint the people of the whole country with its films, the Western office of which Fred H. Meyer is manager, has just placed contracts for more than 150,000 lines of advertising in the daily papers. The advertising each week tells where the stars may be seen, in what they may be seen and the nature of the drama.
Merger Stories Denied Flatly From All Quarters

Merger Stories Denied Flatly From All Quarters

Reports printed on Saturday and Monday by trade papers, and given a veracious appearance in their presentation, to the effect that a merger involving consolidation of General Film, V-L-S-E and K-E-S-E was in prospect, were emphatically denied, and branded as containing not the slightest basis of truth late Monday.

In this respect Walter W. Irwin in his official capacity as general manager, treasurer, secretary and a director of V-L-S-E, said: "The rumor that the V-L-S-E is to merge with the General Film Company, and the K-E-S-E, or with any other distributing organization, is absolutely without foundation. Of all the rumors that daily spread through the motion picture industry, none has been brought to my attention so completely devoid of substance as this one."

"I have read the article published this morning, and am totally at a loss to understand how any official connected with either of the three companies could say that such a combination was even contemplated."

"The V-L-S-E has been importuned in the past to join its sales organization with the sales force of one or more other companies, but has never considered such a proposition, for the reason that the V-L-S-E is far too successful by itself in furthering and promoting the good-will of Vitagraph and of its trade-mark."

"Moreover, the V-L-S-E has entered into many contracts with exhibitors under which they are extensively advertising Vitagraph product, and thus enhancing the prestige and good-will of their theatres, and Vitagraph and the V-L-S-E purpose to see that nothing shall interfere with the proper execution of those contracts."

"You, therefore, are at liberty to say, in fact, it is requested that you do say, that the V-L-S-E has not contemplated, does not contemplate, nor does it intend to contemplate any merger with any other distributing company."

Much significance is attached to the announcement issued by General War Pictures to the effect that its war films have been withdrawn from the General Film program, and will be released by Pathé instead.

It will be recalled that these films were secured especially by General Film by an arrangement with the British war office.

Benjamin B. Hampton, when questioned regarding the rumors of his resignation from General Film, said: "I entered General Film last December as president, with the intention of doing all in my power to straighten out the affairs of the company. I had expected to remain until this was accomplished, and I am perfectly willing to remain longer if the directors should deem it necessary."

Motion Picture Engineers at Atlantic City

The meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers was held at Atlantic City on April 6-7. It is the hope of the society that with the future progress of the house in relation to projection was taken up, and will be incorporated in the final draft of Dr. Kellner's article.

All these papers will be in bound form, and can be obtained within a short time from Mr. Jenkins, 712 Eleventh Street Northwest, Washington, D. C.

In discussing definitions Mr. H. A. Wilkins brought out strongly the advisability of using such terms as "movies," "still," etc.

Mr. N. T. Brown, though unable to present a paper on screens owing to experiments at his factory, ... time should be during the annual convention of the Exhibitors' League of America, July 14-22, inclusive.

Eclair Suit Settled

From the office of the Eclair Film Company, Inc., comes the announcement that the suit instituted against them and other allied companies and individuals by the Société Française des Films et Cinématographes "Eclair" of Paris, France, shortly after Emmanuel Jenkins, 712 Eleventh Street, has been withdrawn by the French company and a satisfactory agreement has been reached.
Triangle to Produce Specials Once a Month

W. W. Hodkinson, in Los Angeles, Outlines Plan to R. W. France for Combined Program and Open Booking Plan

TRIANGLE is about to put into effect a new service which will combine the best features of the program system together with all the advantages that attend open market booking.

R. W. France, General Manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation of New York, has issued the following statement relative to this new distributing plan.

I have just received a letter from W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, who is at present in Los Angeles, in which is outlined in detail the new plan.

We are firmly convinced as to the soundness of the program method of distribution and thoroughly believe that this method will inevitably survive all others, we nevertheless realize that the present chaotic and unsettled conditions (brought about principally by sky rocket promotion tactics and irresponsible and destructive management), make it necessary for us to inaugurate some modification of the program idea. Briefly, our plan is as follows:

1st. He can book the special picture. A schedule of prices is being arranged which will little more than cover our costs. Our plan does not include any idea of making large profits on these productions but rather to allow our exhibitors to book them at a price which will enable them to make a profit, and this is practically assured to them as they will not have to pay for some program release which must lie on the shelf.

2nd. In the event of his rejecting the special production the exhibitor may re-book any Triangle subject which he has already shown at a fifty per cent reduction from the price he originally paid for this subject.

3rd. In case the exhibitor does not care to book the special production or re-book a Triangle program feature he is free to go into the open market. He will have to pay a rental charge to us for the period on his program which is left open through our release of the special production.

"The purpose of this plan we are frank to say is to supply to our exhibitors a type of production which we cannot afford to give them for the moderate sum paid for our regular program service, and we believe our course will be appreciated."

Outrageous Film Measure Killed in Minnesota

Due to the energy and effectiveness with which the Legislative Committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the Northwest, attacked a bill introduced in the Minnesota Legislature, intended to restrict the power of exhibitors, the measure has been killed.

The creators of the bill desired to regulate a motion picture theatre and everything in it, including the operator, machines and films. It was also the object to regulate advertising of all kinds and to impose a tax in order that the regulators could meet their expense accounts.

The license fees should have defeated the bill by their own absurdity. Every theatre giving more than fifty entertainments annually was to be taxed from $5 to $10. Those open for only one performance were to be taxed $1. For each advertisement, motion picture "or representation of the same" the exhibitor was to pay $1.

Every operator and assistant was to pay $2 for the privilege of being examined.

No "Sentimental Nonsense" in Paralta, Says Fichtenberg

Herman Fichtenberg, the chairman of the board of directors of the Paralta Productions corporation, who took up his residence in New York the past week, says in reference to the new venture on which he has entered:

"While I am approaching this proposition primarily from the standpoint of benefiting our own exhibitors, there is no sentimental nonsense in it.

The Paralta plan of production will mean good plays as well presented as talent and generous outlay will permit. Our plays will not be photographs of a star five to six thousand feet long. The star will have a conspicuous play in each story, of course, but we propose to make productions that will enable an average player for other talent to be seen. We do not propose to kill our stars in public interest by overrunning them in our screen stories.

The publication of our plans and details of Paralta plays will be begun in extensive trade press advertising in editions dated April 28, which will be issued April 10."

"The People vs. John Doe" Changed to "God's Law"

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has changed the title of the Universal state rights feature "The People vs. John Doe" to "God's Law," and exhibitors and state rights buyers are now offered this film under its new name: "The People vs. John Doe." This production which was directed by Lois Weber, producer of such film successes as "Where Are My Children?", "Hypocrites," is "Even as You and I," "The Dumb Girl of Portici," and scores of others, is an argument against miscarriage of justice in our courts. It is a severe argument against capital punishment.

Unfair Legislation Knifed in Western States

SUCCESS has crowned the efforts of the exhibitors and exchange men in their war to prevent the passage of unjust legislation in Colorado, Arizona, Wyoming, Utah, and it is believed the censorship bill in California will be killed in committee.

The first censorship matter to come up, was in Utah where the bill died in committee after several very sensational public hearings.

In Colorado there were two pieces of legislation proposed. One was brought by the National Welfare Plays corporation, who took up his residence in New York the past week, says in reference to the new venture on which he has entered:

"While I am approaching this proposition primarily from the standpoint of benefiting our own exhibitors, there is no sentimental nonsense in it.

Real Service That Distributors Are Anxious To Give

The Second of a Series of Articles—The Bluebird Plan

Are you, as an exhibitor, satisfied with the service that your exchange is giving you? Is the distributor who is so determined to rent you films, equally determined to help you bring people into your theatre to see those films? That's what he ought to do! If he is not, he is not giving you a square business deal.

We are going to give every distributor a chance to tell his story. Last week you learned what V-L-S-E is doing. This week, Bluebird is "on the mat." Next week is Paramount's turn.

If you have cause to doubt the statements that any of these distributors make—tell us.

BARNUM stated that the public enjoys paying money to be fooled. Barnum was a showman. His theory has been applied to the motion picture theatre with unhappy results. Barnum moved on at the .

The Bluebird catechism might be expressed thus:

Exhibitor: What are you?

Bluebird: What you are a merchant, not a showman.

Exhibitor: Entertainment, without misrepresentation, to the public.

Bluebird: Whom do you liken yourself unto?

Exhibitor: The butcher, the grocer, the druggist.

On its surface, that creed might sound as if it were not true. The Bluebird succeeds because it has more money than any other exchange. Bluebird takes the attitude that the truth is self-evident.

Bluebird has built a service plan which links expert knowledge of better business—bigger audiences—to you individually. If your audiences do not satisfy you, Bluebird and its corps put themselves at your service. They like to be considered as doctors in allaying your ills. They express it bluntly: If you have a problem to solve; if your attendance for any reason has dropped off, we have a man in your section who will work with you; and his service is free.

This service considers no "dream stuff." Every suggestion is for your financial benefit, is practical, is localized. What does for Oshkosh does not always suffice for Os- kaloosa. The "stunt," for example, that you, an exhibitor in Iowa, Kansas or Louisiana, parade a live ostrich in front of your cashier's window to draw crowds, as was suggested by one so-called trade publication recently, earns exactly what it deserves from the Bluebird corps—a loud chuckle.

In addition to local exhibitor service, general service sheets small but comprehensive, are provided, telling you how best to advertise a coming play. We have on the desk before us the exhibitor's plan booklet of "Polly Redhead," which contains, besides the story and cast, cuts for newspaper advertising and a list of good advertising display lines.

The publicity copy, which you are supposed to clip and send to the newspapers, is, in this instance at least, not strong. It reads as if it had been hastily written.

All of the lobby photographs are better than average. They areclamatic, interesting, and they arouse a desire to see the play.

The "stunt" suggestion we consider excellent. It costs little, and it can be used anywhere. We print it verbatim:

Mr. Exhibitor: Have the following invitation printed and either mailed to the names on your mailing list, or handed in your programs. Properly worked up, it cannot help bringing you Big Business. If you ask the publicity man at your BLUEBIRD Exchange to help you, you can obtain his assistance in working up novel and effective stunts.

You Are Cordially Invited to Attend a Get-Together Party

TO BE HELD AT THE (theatre name here) ON (day and date here)

Every Red-Haired Man and Woman Attending will be Admitted to the Presentation of "Polly Redhead"

A Bluebird Photoplay

As the Guest of the Management (come and count the redheads)

The paper for "Polly Redhead" comprises a one-sheet, a three-sheet and a six-sheet, any or all of which the exhibitor must pay for. We believe that the exhibitor should be furnished paper free. The Bluebird distribution manager's reply is that if the posters remained for six months or more, like Uneeda Biscuit posters, the exhibitor would get them free. The daily program change, he says, prevents free paper. Nevertheless, we believe in free paper.

Another Bluebird patron getter is a circular letter, furnished free, which the exhibitor sends to his mailing list. Four of these letters, which are well worded and attractive, sent out for four successive Bluebird showings in a community bring up the patronage to a point where no more letters are necessary.

One of the latest devices to drive home the you-are-a-merchant—not-a-ballyhooer notion, is to bring about co-operation between the exhibitor and some well-known druggist or candy store owner. So far, this plan has been tried only in certain Eastern states, where Repetti candies are sold.

Repetti makes a trademarked brand of chocolates called "Bluebird." The Repetti local agent and the Bluebird exchange man (Continued on page 2480)
Sherman Will Sell All Territory of "Crisis"

THE remainder of the territory of the United States for "The Crisis" is to be sold. Harry A. Sherman and his associates decided on this step after acquiring the world rights to two new features which will demand undivided attention.

Mr. Sherman, in one of the quickest and most spectacular campaigns in filmdom, sold the greater part of the country last fall, reserving for himself only the territory he controls for "The Birth of a Nation," together with the New England states, Illinois, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas. A few days ago, he disposed likewise of the New England territory, and is now offering everything else for sale.

The territory remaining is to be sold in six blocks. The first consists of Illinois alone. The second includes Wisconsin, Minnesota; and the two Dakotas. The three Southwestern states, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas constitute the third group. North of these are combined Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas. Finally, there are two Western divisions, the first including Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming, and the second Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho.

"The Crisis" has been thoroughly tested by Mr. Sherman, and the various state rights buyers who have already acquired territory, and has more than met expectations. Mr. Sherman himself staged it in his Lyric theatre, Minneapolis, where it ran for four weeks to more business than was ever accorded a feature film in that city, with the single exception of "The Birth of a Nation." This hit was scored in spite of the fact that "The Crisis" at that time had no great metropolitan run back of it. Similar hits were scored afterward in St. Louis, Detroit, Pittsburgh, Louisville, Indianapolis and a number of other cities. A short time ago, it opened in New York, with ever prospect of a long and prosperous run.

"The Crisis" is founded on Winston Churchill's novel. It is from the studios of William N. Selig, and is generally considered Selig's masterpiece.

Ralph and John Ince to Produce for Open Market

Ralph Ince has contracted with the Harry Rapp forces to produce "To-Day" for them, which will be exploited as an Ince production, after which he will devote his entire time to the Ince concern's efforts. He will begin actual work on Ince features May 1.

The idea of release and distribution to be followed by the Ince concern will be of the franchise nature, the distributing exchanges receiving the entire twelve pictures, with the usual financial obligations imposed upon the exchanges. Five territories have already been closed for the entire output.

Balanced casts will be employed. "Balanced casts," according to Mr. Ince, are more susceptible to direction and absorb the directors' ideas better.

John Ince, who will share activities with Ralph Ince in all productional matters, most recently created "Sealed Lips" and "The Struggle" for the World Corporation. Since he resigned from the World staff he has traveled, accumulating a library of elaborate sunsets, cloud effects, coast and maritime views, which he will place at the disposal of the organization which bears his family name.

N. A. M. P. I. Has New Members

Important additions to the membership roll of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry were made at a recent meeting of the executive committee, when the following companies were unanimously elected to the class indicated: Sanger Picture Plays Corporation, producer, Class A; Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, producer, Class A; E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation, producer, Class B; Argus Laboratories, producer, Class B; Acme Lithograph Company, Supply & Equipment, Class 3.

Third Anniversary Celebrated by Strand Theatre

The Strand theatre will celebrate its third anniversary this week and an elaborate display was made at a recent meeting of the executive committee, when the following companies were unanimously elected to the class indicated: Sanger Picture Plays Corporation, producer, Class A; Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, producer, Class A; E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation, producer, Class B; Argus Laboratories, producer, Class B; Acme Lithograph Company, Supply & Equipment, Class 3.

Werner Also Concerned

Arthur M. Werner, who is associated with Charles "Feature" Abrams, was equally concerned in the sale of Edgar Lewis's latest production, "The Bar Sinister," which, as "Movie Picture News" announced last week, has been sold to Frank G. Hall, of Newark.

Masters Goes to Washington to Tell Plan of Film Patriots

E. Lanning Masters, secretary of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, who are making an appeal for a patriotism by means of the screen, has gone to Washington, D. C., to present the association's plans to the National Council of Defense. Various mediums used by the association, such as film leaders, slides, posters, newspaper advertising, and stories, were sent in sample form by express.

At the last meeting of the association, Charles Moyer of Paramount, was elected to co-operate with the Vigilantes, a body of writers and artists who are working along the same general lines as the advertisers.

"The Deemster" Opens at Broadway

Hall Caine's "The Deemster," converted into a photoplay from the book of the same title, will be the attraction at the Broadway theatre, New York, beginning Sunday, April 15.

A special orchestration, together with appropriate effects, will be introduced to lend atmosphere to the new production.

An erroneous idea has gained currency that all of the territory for "The Deemster" has been disposed of, W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, wishes to announce that such is not exactly true, and states that, although many very important sales have been made, there are a number of states still available to the right people.

Florida Exhibitors Meet to Fight Sunday Bill

For the purpose of perfecting their organization; discussing the Sunday Closing Laws in Florida, protesting against the decision of the National Association, forty-eight Florida exhibitors met in Jacksonville, Sunday afternoon in the offices of the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, owners of a string of theaters throughout the South. C. D. Cooley of Tampa, manager of the Strand theater in that city was elected president of the Exhibitors League of Florida with I. LaBelle, manager of the Bonita theatre, also of Tampa, was elected secretary. The session was closed to all but exhibitors, not even the exchange men being allowed to attend, as it was believed the minutes should not be made public on account of the Florida Legislature being in session at the time, and the league wanting any undue publicity given to the fact that they intend fighting the Sunday Closing Bill which it is understood, will be introduced in the legislature during the present session.

The league decided to hold another meeting in Jacksonville in the near future for the purpose of selecting delegates to attend the Chicago convention in July.

Bill Would Bar Children Under 16 from Picture Shows

Among other bills affecting the industry now up for consideration of the Pennsylvania legislature, is one introduced by Representative Reading, of Philadelphia, which would prevent any child under sixteen years of age, unaccompanied by an adult, to attend a motion picture show. There is a clause excluding from the provisions of the act, "any exhibitions for purely educational, charitable, fraternal or religious purposes."

Exhibitors declare the bill if passed, would go far toward crippling the motion picture industry of the state.

Goldwyn Corporation to be Own Distributor

GOLDWYN Pictures Corporation will own and operate its own distributing organization in all of the principal distribution zones of the country. This announcement by Samuel Goldfish ends the speculation that has been going on since the Goldwyn Corporation was organized last December.

Plans Under Way to Open Offices in Larger Cities of Country—Decision Is in Answer to Exhibitors' Wishes

Goldwyn feels certain that its determination to own and operate its own branches without outside assistance represents the sanest and best thought in distribution.

One of our strongest efforts will be made in aiding exhibitors in the presentation of our pictures in their theaters and in solving many of the troublesome house problems with which he is vitally concerned.

Selznick Puts Lid on Exchanges Selling Inferior Pictures

Lewis J. Selznick declares that he will not sell his pictures through exchanges handling inferior grades of films. He has decided that the franchise system is a failure.

Wherever the Selznick Pictures have been distributed through exchanges which handle a class of film that Mr. Selznick does not regard as up to his standard, branches of the home office will be established immediately.

"I have been forced to take this step," says Mr. Selznick, because of the actions of my own franchise holders. They have been displaying rhinestones and diamonds in the same showcase. The exchange man who is loaded up with cheap films naturally has to work twice as hard to sell them as he does to sell the good ones, which he lets take care of themselves. Also, he uses my pictures to bolster up his junk. This has got to stop."

Jesse E. Lasky Leaves for New York to begin a visit to his Western studios, where, among other things, he will take up with Cecil DeMille the production, this summer, of two new Farrar features. "Mr. DeMille has wired to me to hire a new star for the Lasky Studio. Last summer he visited the Lasky Studio. Impressions of the great success of 'Woman,' reports of the great success of other Lasky productions, have brought to Lasky the most intelligent picturegoer; there is less rank sensationalism."

In Fairness to Rev. F. J. Finn

The Rev. F. J. Finn, pastor of St. Xavier's Catholic Church, Cincinnati, and a sincere worker in the interests of the better motion picture, was recently attributed in publicity department statements with having condemned the Ohio Censor Board for banning "Hypocrites." As a matter of fact, Rev. Finn, after witnessing a private exhibition of this subject did state that he considered the intent of the picture as good, but said he did not believe it suitable for exhibition to the general public, and hence thought the Ohio censors used good judgment in banning the film.
Seek Film Board of Trade in San Francisco

Fully realizing the need of an organization of the exhibitors, exchange men and others of the industry, the managers and owners of the larger theatres in San Francisco are working for an affiliation with the Exchangemen's Board of Trade of San Francisco. It is the plan of the leading exhibitors to have an organization associated with the exchange men, but conducted by its own officers.

The plan already suggested, provides that the two organizations shall work together by a committee system, there being a committee of three from each organization to work together. The meetings of the exchange men and the exhibitors will be conducted separately, but all will work toward the same end. By such an organization it is believed that difficulties which arise between exchange men and exhibitors can be disposed of to the mutual advantage of all concerned, and at the same time they will be all amalgamated into one organization to fight anything of an unjust nature which threatens the interest of either.

Plans for such an affiliation will be discussed shortly at the regular meeting of the Exchange men's Board of Trade to which a number of the larger exhibitors of San Francisco will be invited. The list includes Eugene Routh of the Portola, Messrs. Johnson of the T. & D. Circuit, L. Greenfield of New Filmore and New Mission theatres, Lorre Sheehan of Rialto, Jack Parkington of Imperial, Tim McCollough of New York, and others.

Bronx Exhibitors Meet

A well attended meeting of the Cinema Association of the Bronx, Local No. 2, was held on March 29 at association headquarters. The Sunday Opening Bills and other pending legislation were discussed.

Adolph Baunefriend tendered his resignation as trustee, which was accepted with regret. A. B. Samuelson of the Art theatre was elected to fill the vacancy.

A resolution was passed, making April 12 Bronx Maternity Hospital Day, throughout the theatres of the Bronx.

Forster Theatres, Brooklyn, Employees' Third Annual Ball

The Joseph Forster Employees Association, comprising everybody from Manager Thoms to the newest usher, is looking forward to a grand old time April 18, at Arcadia Hall, Brooklyn, when the third annual ball of the employees of the Central, Gleebe and Summer theatres will be held. These three theatres combined seat in the neighborhood of three thousand, and as they are picture theatres exclusively this meeting is a very large patron representative of the best class of picture fans.

This year's carnival and ball promises to be a "humdinger."

ON THE FIRING LINE

"With our patrons we find that it is necessary to change from one program to another frequently," declares Leo Montler, of the Majestic, Cullom, Ill. "At present we are using Fox and Paramount, while big crowds never fail to respond when we put on big shows and charge 25 cents."

The Cissna Park (Ill.) theatre uses Universal service, giving two shows a week, on Tuesday and Saturday, with business "fair." An occasional special attraction is offered on Thursdays.

"My opinion of the Pennsylvania censors would not look good in print," declared C. C. Hubert, of Newark, Del., who finds that they spoil many of his subjects. "I am using Fox, Paramount, Metro, Mutual, Pathé and Artefact. Isn't this 'some' program?"

D. Lee Short, of the Opera House, Bridgeville, Del., says that the only kick he has is against the weather man who has given him rain every other day for the past five weeks. "Business in general is good," he adds. "I show on Wednesday and Saturday, using Paramount and Vitagraph subjects."

"Seven days a week of Mutual Pictures is our bill," says the management of the Champion theatre, Birmingham, Ala. "And business is very good."

S. V. Crowe, of the Princess theatre, Boiseville, Miss., declared "We boast of having the best pictures and prove it by showing Paramount, Triangle and K-E-S-E." Jack Auslet is manager of the Princess.

"My greatest kick is on the deposit and contract systems," comes from J. C. McKee, of the Electric theatre, Bolivar, Mo., "Business is not so very good. I have been using Mutual Service mostly for the past three years."

George S. Poulin, of Page's Hall theatre, Ayer, Mass., finds "Business booming. I am now running Metro and World features, changing twice a week. After Easter I expect to run Mary Pickford's productions."

H. M. Ernst, owner and manager of the Atchison, Kan., Airdrome, announces that no picture will be too great or too high-priced for his house this season.

St. Louis Exhibitors Protest Free Picture Shows

The free picture show bugaboo is again staring the St. Louis exhibitors in the face. This time the free pictures will be shown by an advertising concern, who propose to utilize a moving van, on the back of which will be adjusted a screen, the pictures to be projected from the inside. The program will consist of mostly advertising films, with enough comedies and other subjects to keep the public interested.

The Exhibitors' Association appointed a committee to look into the matter, and it was found out from the city authorities that the moving van shows cannot be stopped, or even be made to pay a license, if no admission is charged.

Cincinnati Exhibitors Make Patriotic Offer

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce at its last meeting adopted resolutions offering the hundred screens of Cincinnati motion picture theatres for use by the War Department officials as media for increasing enlistment in this city. The resolution was adopted unanimously. Telegrams were sent to Secretary of War Baker, Secretary Daniels of the Navy and President Wilson, making the offer and stating that the nature of the appeals would be left solely to the government officials.

Odorous Bombs in Cleveland

At the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League meeting this week, at Cleveland, O., it was learned that several motion picture theatres have been seriously annoyed by the throwing of stink bombs. To combat this difficulty, a committee of three prominent league members, namely, B. J. Sawyer, Walter Horsey and Adolph Mahrer was appointed to enlist the aid of Mayor Harry L. Davis and Chief of Police Rowe. In order to make their objections to this nuisance more emphatic, the league will advertise a reward of $100 for the arrest and conviction of anyone found guilty of throwing these bombs in any motion picture theatre.

Mormons Object to "Mormon Maid" in Utah and Idaho

Strong sentiment against the showing of "A Mormon Maid" in Utah and Idaho, strongholds of the Mormon church, is crystallizing in these states, following the publication of reviews of the film, which give the impression that "A Mormon Maid" is an attack upon the Mormon church and its doctrines.

Exhibitors in Ogden, Salt Lake, and other cities where the Mormon church has thousands of members, have turned down the film upon learning the nature of it.

Trouble  Looms  Up  for  Minneapolis  Exhibitors

The  Minneapolis  exhibitor  is  just  now  between  the  horns  of  labor  troubles  and  a  new  censorship.

The  Supreme  Court  in  a  recent  decision  decided  that  peacable  picketing,  such  as  carrying  banners  and  urging  patrons  to  keep  out  of  a  theatre,  is  legal.

Mayor  Thomas  Van  Lear's  Citizens'  Advisory  Committee  has  formed  a  motion  picture  sub-committee.  While  this  commit-

"What Nielson Did"

The Moving Picture Weekly exploiting Bluebird pictures, tells an interesting story entitled "What Nielson Did." "What Nielson Did" is very much to the point. He took over the "Crystal," a losing nickel house in Wayne, Nebraska, and turned it into a successful 13-cent theatre. He did this principally in two ways. First, by securing the co-operation of the local schools and women's clubs, and secondly, by special co-operation of his local newspaper. He got acquainted with the former and advised them fully in advance of the character of his pictures. They were glad to co-operate. With respect to his local paper he induced the editor to run a column right along headed "Crystal News." He had his features reviewed in advance and also after the show. His theory on the matter was that people were not only interested in reading about what they had seen, but it made other people feel disappointed if they had not seen them. He compiled a mailing list and used it for all it was worth.

Nielson says: "The manager of a picture theatre in a small town, not far from Wayne, recently told me ... wouldn't book features and advertise them as they should be advertised. The best proof of what I have just said," he continued, "is the fact that where I started out with a losing game, I am now compelled to run matinees."

Street Car Advertising Draws to Theatre Not Downtown

Street car advertising is getting the business for the Calhoun theatre, Minneapolis. About a month ago the theatre decided to have a card in all the cars crossing Lake street. The theatre is at Lake street and Hennepin avenue, and transfers are free to all cars crossing that thoroughfare. The plan has been successful. The cards are changed on Saturday and announced the program for the week ahead. Films with well-known stars are booked, and there are no regrets for the patron once he gets to the theatre. Lake street is an outgoing business street.

Theatre Name on Umbrella Tops Marks New Orleans Patrons

What do you know about this? The New Carrolton theatre, a Sobel-Shear-Richards house, New Orleans, La., has a "prop" room chock full of umbrellas for its patrons on rainy nights.

Fancy they are, too, each conspicuously decorated on top with the theatre name. The borrower's name is registered, and the theatre promises to return the umbrella by a return messenger or by mail. The borrower returns the umbrella to the theatre in a special return box at the entry. He is given a receipt for it, and the theatre promises to return it to him.

Incentive for Sanitary Theatres

The Southern Paramount Pictures Company which handles Paramount Pictures throughout the South, is offering a prize to the different theatre managers throughout their district who have the cleanest and most sanitary and most attractive theatres. This has become an incentive to a large number of managers to have their houses painted and overhauled inside and out.

The movement is in conjunction with the "Clean your town" movement, which is forwarded by the Southern States, in an endeavor to bring about a high standard of municipal cleanliness and to attract the traveler to these communities, by reason of the manner and ways in which the streets, parks and public places are kept clean.
Window Cards Out-of-Ordinary Part of Vitagraph “Service”?

One of the most attractive features of the Vitagraph “service” is the different sort of posters and window cards coming from this company. As much pains seem to be taken with each individual release, in this respect, as if this company were only releasing big-time specials.

With our present star system to have posters and other material suggest the star at a glance is of inestimable importance. Vitagraph posters never fail to register an instantly recognizable likeness of the star featured, and the individual pains taken, as above noted, results in the posters not looking “all alike” so that the change of bill really attracts attention.

One of the best examples recently of this getting away from sameness is the window card produced for Peggy Hyland in “Babette.” This particular “poster” has a two-tone design in sepia brown on soft lemon card, with a sepia-tone seven by nine reproduction of Miss Hyland. Bluebirds Off for New Flight Bluebird began its second advertising contest for exhibitors April 2, showmen exhibiting Bluebirds on that date, and during April, being entitled to compete for prizes. The competitions will be forwarded along the same lines as applied to the February contest, first of its kind, ever promoted by a producing firm. Lobby display forms a separate part of the exhibits, while the general advertising embraces lobby, billboard, newspaper and special methods used during April to create public interest in Bluebirds. The contest ends with April and the awards will be announced by May 15.

Staging Your Lobby—Newest Ideas of M. Kashin

M. KASHIN, of the Midway theatre, Montreal, sends us pictures of some recent lobby displays which attracted the usual crowds to this busy theatre. As usual, Charlie Chaplin heads the list, for there is always a chance to get motion into a Chaplin display, and that is sure to attract the crowd. In “Easy Street” Charlie is shown clubbing the big bully, who it will be remembered has a skull thicker than the armor plate on a battleship cruiser. The arm and club in the cut-out is attached to a motor so as to rise and fall rapidly in a very good imitation of the scene from this picture.

Valeska Suratt, in “The Victim,” offered a striking opportunity for sensational pictorial work, as seen by the cut hereewith. A woman in such startling distress would naturally draw a sympathetic crowd, and the well-chosen headlines on the panels to right and left of the figure catch the interest and attention of passers-by effectively.

“The Men She Married,” depicted in three circles, showing the “three viewpoints on marriage,” is a very good illustration of what genius can do with a simple theme to set people thinking deeply along a certain line, and get them in sympathy so that they will want to see more—viz., the picture itself—to satisfy a curiosity as to its teaching. On the left the “cynic says marriage is a lottery”; the “pessimist says marriage is a dangerous venture”; the “optimist (top right) says marriage is best for man.”

“Voice on Wire” Stunts Being Pushed in Omaha

Universal Omaha exhibitors are being urged by Jake Mitchell to take full advantage of several stunts suggested by an elaborate book on “Voice on the Wire,” and Jake has specially pointed out that local telephone companies will be glad to furnish telephone “dummy” instruments for lobby display, and otherwise assist in boosting the idea of using the phones. A number of telephones, and an arrangement of bells so that several phones located at different places in the lobby will ring in a mysterious way, cannot fail to attract attention.

Local exhibitors can devise ways of their own to attract attention with such conspicuous and “noisy” material.

Globe Up-to-Minute in New Orleans

The Globe theatre in New Orleans has adopted all the latest wrinkles, including flashlights for the ushers designating the seats vacant. Loge seats are very much in demand at the Globe also, and a telephone system between the usher on the floor and the box-office assures instant filling of every seat vacant, with no confusion.

Mary Pickford “Clarion” Born in Arctaft Offices Last Week

Vol. 1, No. 1, of “The Mary Pickford Clarion” was born last week. John C. Flinn and Pete J. Schmidt father this new publicity aid for Arctaft exhibitors.

Four full-size newspaper pages, of six columns, tell the praise given “A Poor Little Rich Girl,” by the well-known critics country wide, with half a page of exhibitor endorsements. By the time the theatre patron finishes reading these praises, he will conclude there can be no doubt about the merit of this production.

“The Mary Pickford Clarion” is designed for distribution by the theatres as a special herald. That it will be the greatest boost imaginable in the smaller city, where complete house to house distribution can be accomplished, goes without saying.

State Militia Attends “War Brides” in Baltimore

With the opening of Herbert Brenon’s “War Brides” in Baltimore at Ford’s theatre the week of April 2, owing to the timeliness of the picture, the state militia were invited to view the film. Superior officers were present on Monday, the opening night, and at each performance thereafter various companies were in attendance.
Day Nursery Helps Matinee Attendance of Mothers
Manager A. K. MacMartin of the Empress theatre, Kamloops, British Columbia, has recently opened a day nursery in charge of a well-known local nurse, who takes all the responsibility of looking after the kiddies while the mothers attend the performances in the afternoon.

Naturally the women folk who are left at home during the day have a problem deciding what to do with the children, in case they happen to think of going to the show.

To solve this problem Manager MacMartin has acted upon the idea of Manager MacMartin's has made a decidedly favorable impression on the mothers, many of whom have been heard to say, "The service is splendid and the children are happy while in the nursery." Many of the mothers have expressed their gratitude to Manager MacMartin for the valuable assistance rendered them.

The nursery has been well received and the mothers have been greatly relieved of the tension of keeping their minds on the kiddies every minute of the day.

Rational Publicity Output Pathe's Aim
The Pathe press department has put into operation a publicity plan in sending to photoplay editors of papers a card asking for suggestions as to the output of press matter by the corporation.

The idea started with a contest in the Chicago Herald, whose live wire activities have before been noted in these columns, in which Harry C. Moir, Jr., was selected by popular vote as the star of a two-reel photoplay from the pen of Luella C. Parsons, the noted photoplay writer of the Herald.

The Alcazar theatre started the ball rolling by featuring the production and the local star on its big banner, and several downtown theatres booked it first run the week of release, and the box-office possibilities from the stunt will be readily appreciated when the facts are stated.

As the entire hundred and twenty-five were "contestants," and had a big backing of friends working for them, it can be imagined how the exhibitors profited by the publicity given through the Herald and the combined boosting of the local exhibitors themselves.

Out of many such contests conducted before, we doubt whether any has resulted in such a big way in following up the advantages of keenest anticipation with "get the money" results for so many local exhibitors.

The Chicago Herald, "father of the thought," got a tremendous stimulus to circulation through the contest, and the consequent connection with the theatre patronage afterward.

Double Length Shows and Extra Quality Gets Higher Price
The Powell-Croak Amusement Company of Oklahoma City, operating the Empire theatre, have hit on the scheme of an occasional price raising with two pictures of extra quality instead of one. Obviously this enables them to do twice as much advertising at the same proportionate cost, and Manager T. H. Bichard thinks the scheme is a success. We have some doubts. The answer is to be found, of course, in the effect on his regular days, and we have not been advised about that.

In the same way that a big department store can make a drive on a certain day, and with its several departments support a heavy advertising expense, so there is a real legitimate idea behind this plan. But on the face of it, it looks like building on dangerous ground, like cultivating a taste for long shows and extra quality, with no actual gain in the long run, because such material as he used is not available for every day.

The pictures paired off for these big drives were, Marguerite Clark in "Snow White" and Douglas Fairbanks in "American Aristocracy"; William S. Hart in "Truthful Tulliver," and Fairbanks in "The Lamb"; Dorothy Dalton in "Behind the Man," and Fairbanks in "The American.""

Think what a drive could have been made on all of these pictures separately, at the minimum ten cent price. We believe in the price that gets the most from the largest patronage, and LONGER RUNS.

Bluebird Completes Program for May

Last Friday there arrived from Universal City the Bluebird scheduled for May 28. Lynn F. Reynolds made the production. Its temporary title is "Three Guardians," but this caption will be changed before the regular advertising for the feature is prepared. Myrtle Gonzalez and George Hermandez, regular leaders of the Reynolds company, will be the featured ones.

"Three Guardians," like all the Reynolds pictures, is a "nature study" production, its scenes being very largely taken out-of-doors. The locale is Kentucky, and the plot carries on the criminal or crime. Jean Hershold, Jack Curtis, George Marah, Elwoos Bredell, Maxfield Stanley, Fred Church and Charles H. Mailles will be supporting members of the company.

Thus the May program for Bluebirds is completed: Violet Mersereau in "Little Miss Nobody," May 7; Allen Holubar, Joseph Girard and Lois Wilson in "Treason," May 14; Dorothy Phillips in "The Flashlight," May 21, and Myrtle Gonzalez and George Hermandez in "Three Guardians," May 28. The title of the May 21 Bluebird has been changed from "The Flashlight Girl" to conform with the original title of the story, published in a popular magazine, "The Flashlight.

"Birth" Opens at Eltinge

The Eugenic Film Company will present "Birth," a feature dealing with the life and care of the child, at the Eltinge theatre, April 8. Performances will be for women only.

Birth is illustrative of the methods practiced in one of the prominent institutions for children in New York. Only women will be connected with its public presentation. There will be women ushers and a woman ticket taker.

Chaplin Heads Mutual Array Week of April 16

Mary Miles Minter Seen in "Environment" and Crane Wilbur in "The Single Code"; Three Comedies, Topicals and Serials

CHARLIE CHAPLIN, he of the cane and feet, is to furnish more merriment in "The Cure," the tenth Mutual-Chaplin special, which will be ready for the public on April 16. In this picture Chaplin chooses a health resort as the background for his antics, going there with a firm purpose to rid himself of the drink habit.

April 16 also brings Mary Miles Minter in "Environment," a story laid in a New England village. Miss Minter is another star whose name will bring the crowds. This picture will hold a special attraction for high school pupils as it deals with the graduation exercises and the life of the young people of the village.

"The Single Code," schedule for April 16 is the second of the Crane Wilbur series and treats, as the title suggests, with the question of whether there should be a single code of morals for both men and women.

"Shorty Lays a Jungle Ghost," the fourteenth story of the "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton" series will be ready April 16. The scenes of this picture are laid in the Philippine Islands, and show some fights in a Filipino uprising.

The fifth of the "Jimmie Dale, Alias the Grey Seal," series, entitled "The Fight for Honor," will be released on April 20.

The second Strand Comedy "When Mary Took the Count" goes to the screen on April 18. Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco are the featured players, and a big wedding is one of the important scenes of the picture.

On April 19 comes the Cub Comedy, featuring George Ovev and entitled "Somewhere in the Mountains." The Vogue Company released April 21, "Masked Mirth," features Ben Turpin.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," released April 17 shows views of Russian Caucasus, Copenhagen, Denmark, and Salzburg, Austria.

Triangle's Program Innovation

An innovation in the Triangle program for the week of May 20 will be the release of two five-reel subjects simultaneously. Dorothy Dalton will be presented as a star in a social study, "Unfaithful," written by Lambert Hillyer. The other half of the program, and of equal importance, is William Desmond, starring in an adaptation of W. Carey Woolsey's "One Week," a comedy entitled "The Marriage Bubble." This is in the nature of an experiment to test the attitude of the public.

Fairbanks Play April 30

The initial Douglas Fairbanks production, "In Again—Out Again," to be released by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, has been completed. The film is now being cut and assembled and, it is expected, will be entirely complete in the course of a few days.

"In Again—Out Again," it is announced by Walter E. Green, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, presents the April offering from this organization and will be released on the 30th of this month.
Big Universal Program

Five-Part Oriental Drama, Number of Comedies Among

LEADING the program of releases for the week of April 16 of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company is the five-act Red Feather feature production, "The Flower of Doom," a heart interest drama in which the Oriental customs are intertwined with present-day life in the West. The story was written and directed by Rex Ingram and gets its name from the sign and emblem of the Hop Sing tong, one of the most powerful of all Chinese organizations whose death warrant was the Flower of Doom.

Gypsy Hart and Wedgwood Nowell head the cast which includes Nichols Dunae, M. K. Wilson, Yvette Mitchell, Tommy Morrissey, Frank Tokmaga, Gordo Keeno and Evelyn Selfie. April 16 is the release date.

On the same day will appear the Nestor one-act comedy, "Follow the Tracks," featuring that popular trio of screen comedians, Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.

The feature for Tuesday, April 17, is the Laemmle one-act drama, "For Lack of Evidence," which will be released Wednesday, April 18. The leading role is by Blair Hall and the scenario by John C. Brownell. The picture was produced under the direction of Edwin Stevens. Tina Marshall has the leading role, supported by George Marlo, Ted Burton and Adella Barker. "It Happened in Room 7," a Victor one-act comedy written and produced by Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke, is the other offering of this date.

An L-Ko two-part comedy, "Love and Blazes," featuring Phil Dunham, will be released Wednesday, April 18. The leading role is by Blair Hall and the scenario by John C. Brownell. The picture was produced under the direction of Edwin Stevens. Tina Marshall has the leading role, supported by George Marlo, Ted Burton and Adella Barker. "It Happened in Room 7," a Victor one-act comedy written and produced by Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke, is the other offering of this date.

A "Century Girl" New Leading Lady for Fairbanks

For "A Regular Guy," his next production to be released by Artcraft following "In Again—Out Again," Douglas Fairbanks has engaged Eileen Percy, who for the past year has attracted particular attention on New York's rialto in the Orange Grove and at present in "The Century Girl" show. Eileen, now appearing in "The Century Girl," recommended Miss Percy to Mr. Fairbanks, who, after an interview and photographic test, immediately engaged her to appear opposite him in his second picture for Artcraft. Miss Percy will leave with the Fairbanks organization for California in the near future.

Many Stars Crowd Pathé's April 22 Schedule

WITH William Courtenay, Marguerite Snow, Mollie King, Mrs. Castle and Max Linder on Program of Week's Releases

Mabel Taliaferro in New Metro Feature

"A Magdalene of the Hills," with Mabel Taliaferro as the star, is the feature released April 16. This, a story of a mountain girl's love, is presented by B. A. Rolfe and was produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc. Harry Chandler wrote the story, which was put on the screen by June Mathis. John W. Noble directed the production.

William Garwood, William B. Davidson and Frank Montgomery are chief players in the supporting cast.

First Comedy from Walt Mason's Works Finished

The first comedy taken from Walt Mason's writings, which the Filmcraft Corporation, a new concern, has acquired producing rights to, has been made under direction of Addison J. Rothermel. The picture is titled "The Dipper," and, like all following subjects, is a single-reel production.

Royale V. Rothermel, general manager of Filmcraft, having reviewed the present market, is said to contemplate releasing these comedies through independent exchanges. Definite announcement will be made shortly.

Blazing Secret," featuring King Baggott and Leah Baird.

The Powers comedy cartoon, "The Good Story About a Bad Egg," and the Big U two-act animal drama, "Her Great Mistake," with Marie Walcamp in the leading role, are the offerings for Sunday, April 22.

During the week the sixth episode of the popular Universal serial, "The Voice on the Wire" entitled "The Death Warrant," will be released.

Mabel King in "Mystery of the Double Cross," No. 6, is another feature on the Pathé bill. This episode is called "The Dead Come Back." The production is by Astra under the direction of William Parke.

The fifteenth episode of "Patria," in which Mrs. Vernon Castle brings to a triumphant close the serial-romance of preparedness and society, is entitled "For the Flag." It is claimed for this chapter that it is the greatest serial episode that has ever been made.

Max Linder appears in a one-reel comedy, entitled "Max the Lady-Killer." The story tells how Max's little cousin pins a note, reading "Kiss me, I love you," on his back. The housekeeper, the janitress, and every other lady in town do their best to obey the command, and Max is forced to seek protection at the home of his fiancée.

The twenty-eighth release of the Florence Rose Fashion Films is called "The Season's Novelties," and it shows beautiful girls in beautiful garments of an unusual nature.

On the same reel with the fashion release is a Pathé-colored picture, called "Chiffa Gorée," which is part of "Picturesque Algiers." The Katsenjammer Kids are represented in the International Cartoon, "Robbers and Thieves," on the same reel with which is an interesting International Industrial called "Tree Stars."
Rialto Plays Weber Feature
The latest Lois Weber feature, "Even as You and I," was played at the Rialto theatre last week to good audiences, in spite of the fact that Holy Week is notably poor for theatres and has been for the past ten years. Mr. Rothapel is said to have selected "Even as You and I" from a score of feature offerings. The cast, headed by Ben Wilson and Mignon Anderson, includes Bertram Grassby, Priscilla Dean, Harry Carter, Maude George and Hayward Mack.

Lois Weber, herself, has declared that "Even as You and I," is the greatest accomplishment of her career as a director. Miss Weber has produced such successes as "Where Are My Children?", "Jewel," "Sandbar," "Hypocrites," "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "The Mysterious Mrs. M." and a score of others.

Louise Huff Makes Her Debut as Pallas Star
Co-stars with House Peters in "Lonesome Chap" on Paramount
April 16 Program—Pauline Frederick in "Different" Role

A FAMOUS PLAYERS production, "Sleeping Fires," the story of a self-sacrificing mother, with Pauline Frederick in the leading role, and a Pallas presentation, "The Lonesome Chap," in which Louise Huff and House Peters co-star, are the two features on the Paramount program for the week of April 16.

Miss Frederick in "Sleeping Fires," to be released April 16, is seen as a woman of high mentality whose life is wrapped up in her young son. Her husband, attracted by a woman of entirely different stamp, is doing all in his power to force her to divorce him. The boy is used in the scheme as a pawn, and the star is given opportunity to display her emotional powers as the frantic mother determined to keep the child in her possession.

Hugh Ford directed the production, which was written by George Middleton. In the supporting cast are Thomas Meighan, John Sainpolis, Helen Dahl and Joseph Smiley.

In "The Lonesome Chap" Louise Huff makes her first appearance as a Pallas star, co-starring with House Peters. She plays the role of a little schoolgirl who captivates her guardian, a man somewhat older than she is, only to be convinced that he does not care for her. For his own part, the man is doing his best to conceal his feelings, believing that he is doing so in justice to his ward. A happy solution is brought about. In the cast are John Burton, Eugene Pallette, J. Parks Jones, Senor Buzzi and Betty Johnson.

The week's issue of Paramount Pictures contains four subjects, chief of which is "Curiosities of New York." A visualization of the methods of conducting the ballet school of the Metropolitan Opera House, New York; some of the secrets of Dame Nature's creation, and a comedy element supplied by "Miss Nanny Goat at the Circus" are other portions of this subject.

The Black Diamond comedy "Wishbone," re-introducing the two tramps who have been so well received in former comedies of this brand, is also released during the week.

College Life and Bandit Stories on Triangle Program

WILFRED LUCAS and Charles Ray are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for April 29. Lucas will appear in a Fine Arts mystery story, entitled "Hands Up!" directed by Tod Browning. Charles Ray will be starred in a Kay Bee production of college life from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan, known as "The Pinch Hitter," directed by Victor L. Schertzinger under the personal supervision of Thomas H. Ince.

As the star of "Hands Up!" Wilfred Lucas takes the part of a reformed bandit who has paid the penalty of his wrongs to society and has become a successful businessman and president of a railroad. He believes that his past is safely buried, but while he is taking a journey with his young daughter, the private car in which they travel is held up by outlaws, and complications ensue which enmesh the railroad builder and his daughter in a series of stirring events.

Kalem Releases Combine Thrills and Comedy

"American Girl" and Helen Gibson Series Hold Thrills;
First Two-Real "Ham and Bud" Will Be Released Soon

KALEM'S current release, "The Vulture of Skull Mountain," a two-reel episode of "The American Girl" series, gives Marion Sais an opportunity to do a bit of detective work. She is at San Remo ranch when a horse drags in an injured man. Glenn standing over the injured man's ravings about "Skull Mountain," and associating it with a newspaper clipping which she had, giving an account of bandits in these mountains, starts off to solve the mystery. Her adventures in the mountain and subsequent rescue of a girl captive and her father who has been robbed and confined in a treacherous mountain lair, are said to be sure thrills. Director James W. Horne is now working on the twelfth episode of this series.

"Hard Times and Hardscrapple," the current "Ham" comedy in one-reel; and "Ham" and "Bud" in some exceptional comedy. They buy a restaurant with a few worthless gold nuggets they pick up by the roadside, and the fun starts. The "bad man" enters and abruptly disturbs their prosperous lunch business, and hard trials again comes knocking at the door.

The latter part of April, Kalem will release the first of the two-reel comedies, featuring "Ham" and "Bud."

Helen Gibson does more thrilling stunts in "The Munitions Plot," a forthcoming Kalem release of "A Daughter of Daring" series. Among other things she drops from a car and arrangement running on a cable stretched between two telephone poles, one on either side of the railroad tracks. The train approaches, she shoots across the cable, hanging to the car all arrangement, and as the train rushes by, drops to the top of one of the cars. The next instant she is seen jumping from the top of a passenger to the top of a freight car, and there are other such thrills.

Two New Lasky Stars Make Their Screen Debut During May

THE month of May will mark the advent of two new and distinguished stars upon the Lasky Company's roster of players, and will see the release by Paramount of six Lasky pictures within the month with a total stellar representation of eight players. Madame Petrova will make her first appearance in a Lasky-Paramount picture, and Margaret Illington, the distinguished stage star, will make her motion picture debut. Other stars represented in the six productions for the month will be Fannie Ward, Mae Murray, Blanche Sweet, Thomas Meighan, Wallace Reid and Anita King.

The first Lasky picture scheduled for release in May is "Sacrifice," written especially for Margaret Illington by C. Kenyon. The second Lasky picture for May is "The Primrose Ring," starring Mae Murray. Its release date is May 7.

Madame Petrova's first Lasky picture will be "The Undying Flame," to be released May 10. It is a story of ancient Egypt and of the present day, directed by Maurice Tourneur.

The fourth Lasky picture in the month is "The Silent Partner," starring Blanche Sweet and Thomas Meighan, which is scheduled for release by Paramount on May 24.

On May 26 Wallace Reid and Anita

Art Dramas Sold in Canada

Harry R. Kaver, president of the Art Dramas, Incorporated, closed a deal last week, whereby the Art Dramas Program has been sold to the Independent Film & Theatre Supply Company, for Canada.

George F. Perkins and A. H. Sawyer, representing the Independent Company, spent last week in New York, and after screening the first fourteen Art Drama releases, closed the deal and bought the franchise for the new program.

Mr. Perkins is well-known to the trade in Canada as the head of the Perkins Electric Company.

Warren Tells Experiences in "Warfare of the Flesh"

Edward Warren, who has just completed "The Warfare of the Flesh," talked the other day of some of his experiences, while the modern and allegorical scenes of his play were in the making.

"Like all feature plays it went through many stages of development," said Mr. Warren, "from the scenario mill the script had to go through a process of expurgation, annotation and then placed in the 'oven of hope.'

"In the early stages when the casting was being done, I saw nothing but a great kaleidoscope of types. There were types for Adam, Eve, Satan and Sin, the Good Samaritan, angels, the loving, gentle wife, the adoring and hard working husband. Thousands of aspiring hopefuls were interviewed and many wanted to be angels. There were hundreds of Eves and Adams, of all shapes and sizes and nationalities.

"Then there was the work of finding locations for both the modern and allegorical settings. The entire country was fine-combed for places that looked like Heaven and Hell, the Garden of Eden and a primitive settlement."

Costly Comedies Announced

Two comedies, each of which is said to have cost more to produce than the average five-reeler, are offered by Kleine through K-E-S-E service.

"The Fixer" and "The Politicians" are the titles. The first will be released April 15, and the second on May 13. Harry Watson, Jr., is featured in both subjects.
World Wide Distribution for "The Great Secret"
Contracts have been signed by which "The Great Secret," Metro's serial in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars, has been released to the exhibitors of Japan, Mexico, Dutch East Indies, India and the Philippines and Straits Settlements.
Flattering offers are also said to have been received from exchanges covering all of South America, Cuba, Australia,
Spain and other European countries.
"The Great Secret" is in demand in Canada and will have its first release in Montreal on April 16 and at Toronto on April 23, after which it will be generally distributed.

Loew Takes Universal Serial
The new Universal serial "The Voice on the Wire" was booked into the Marcus Loew chain of theatres last week. The first showings will be at twenty-five Loew theatres in the metropolitan district, following which it will be featured at Loew houses throughout the country.

Fast Work on Vita Feature
A hurried ten-day trip through the section adjacent to Chicago netted A. H. Mc-Laughlin, of the Chicago branch of V-L-
S-E, substantial bookings on "The Girl
Philippa" in eight towns.

"The Price of Her Soul" Is Well Received
A lively reception, by buyers, was accorded the announcement of the Variety Films, that their production "The Price of Her Soul" is being sold on territorial basis.
From display and circulation, over sixty replies were received and from the tenor of the various letters and inquiries, Mr. Rosenbluh, head of Variety Films, concludes that the independent market is in a healthier state now than at any time during the past three years.
"Disregarding 'sucker' money," said
Mr. Rosenbluh, "for it is hard to tell who is the sucker until months after a film is sold, the tone of the inquiries received by us demonstrates the highly satisfactory condition of the independent market. From many of the biggest exchange men in the country we received wires and letters asking for quotations and from smaller dealers, inquiries making appointments for viewing the film and making general inquiries as to the class of picture, its length, its importance on this, and that style of program then sending their representatives to see the picture with a view to buying it.
I am so convinced of the stability of the state rights field that I am going to follow
'The Price of Her Soul' with another picture equally as big.

"Skinner" Breaking Records
Essanay's "Skinner's Dress Suit" has broken every record in the Philadelphia office of K. E. S. E. Manager A. G. Buck has no open dates until late in May and exhibitors are clamoring for repeat dates at the same price as the first run, an unusual condition in these regions.
The new method of contract booking in vogue April 16, by which exhibitors will get all special releases at the same price as ordinary ones by taking the whole program, is arousing much interest in Philadelphia, especially as there is the choice of booking each feature separately if desired. In the latter case the exhibitor will pay according to the value placed on each film.

Pathe Serial Gets Long Runs Fewer single day bookings on "Mystery of the Double Cross" are reported by Pathe than on any previous serial. Some of the important first-run houses are showing each episode from three days to a full week. Widespread demand for the subject indicates that the first episodes have established it in popular favor with the public, and there is every indication that the demand will continue.

Change in Academy Bill
"The Crisis" will be shown at the Academy of Music, New York, the first half of the week of April 8 instead of "Her Tem-peration" exhibition of which has been postponed until the latter part of the week.

Beatriz Michelena in Ultra Picture Draws Well
Beatriz Michelena proved a strong drawing card last week at the Triangle theatre in Brooklyn, where the latest release of the Ultra "The Woman Who Dared" played.
Although Holy Week is one of the worst weeks in the entire year for moving pictures or theatrical productions, the theatre has been doing an excellent business.

Many Requests for Re-Bookings of "Broadway Jones"
The success of George M. Cohan in his initial Artcraft picture, "Broadway Jones," has resulted in many re-bookings of the production throughout the country.
At the Rowland & Clarke, Liberty theatre, Pittsburgh, "Broadway Jones," registered a success that a re-booking of the picture was immediately arranged for.
Many other requests for re-bookings have been received.

Los Angeles House Runs Only
Pathe Product
Los Angeles now has a theatre carrying an exclusive Pathé program, exchange manager B. E. Logan having contracted for the showing of Pathé Gold Rooster subjects, the "Mystery of the Double Cross" serial and the Pathé News Weekly at the Palace theatre, a downtown house on Seventh street, just off of Broadway.
Lockwood to Appear in Master Productions

Popular Star Has Signed New Contract with Balshofer—Many Large Attractions Planned for Metro Program

FOLLOWING the return of Fred J. Balshofer from the East and the announcement that Harold Lockwood would be featured in several big Yorke-Metro productions in the near future, comes the news that Lockwood this week signed a new contract with Mr. Balshofer, president and general manager of the Yorke Film Corporation, the contract to run for two years, during which Harold Lockwood will be starred in a number of Master-Features, which will be bigger than any pictures in which the Yorke-Metro star has yet appeared.

During the past year and a half which Harold Lockwood has been associated with Mr. Balshofer, quite a number of promising Yorke-Metro successes have been filmed. Some of these were: "Pidgin Island," "Big Tremaine," "The River of Romance," "The Masked Rider," "Mister 44" and "The Promise." "The Hidden Children," has just been released through the Metro organization, and "The Hidden Garden" has just been completed at the Hollywood Studios.

That all of these pictures are successes is evidenced in the anxiety of Mr. Balshofer to re-sign the popular star for another term under the Metro banner. Mr. Balshofer’s recent hurried trip home to Los Angeles may have been occasioned by the expiration of his contract with the star, and his desire to affix Mr. Lockwood’s signature to a new document which would keep him at Mr. Balshofer’s plant in Hollywood.

In speaking of his renewed alignment with the Yorke-Metro, Mr. Lockwood declared that since his relations with Mr. Balshofer had been so happy during the last year and a half, there was no reason why he should give serious consideration to the offers which have come to him from other organizations of motion picture men, and further that he was only too glad to continue the association with Mr. Balshofer and the Yorke-Metro.

Mr. Lockwood is beginning work at once on the picturization of "The Haunted Pajamas," the popular novel by Francis Perry Elliott, a comedy-drama which will give him a popular role, but one which is different from anything hitherto attempted. Immediately following the production of this picture, work will be started on "Under Handicap," the novel by Jackson Gregory, and "Paradise Garden" by George Gibbs. Mr. Balshofer has already begun to whip into shape his picturization of "The Yellow Dove," the novel by George Gibbs, dealing with the war in Europe. It will be a Master-Feature in about seven reels.

In making the Lockwood Master-Features, Mr. Balshofer will pursue the policy of adapting novels which are rated in the class of the best sellers. For evidence that the production of novels on the screen is successful, the Yorke-Metro producer points to the pictures which have been made during the last year, in which Harold Lockwood has been featured in several picturizations of popular novel successes.

"Alma, Where Do You Live?" to Be Filmed

Ruth McTammany, at the head of her own producing company, is preparing as her next offering a film version of the operetta, "Alma, Where Do You Live." The subject will be in six parts, and the script is being made by Hal Clarendon, Miss McTammany’s stage director.

Mutual’s "Navy Week" Schedule

Hawk Company Starts Well

The initial release of the Hawk Film Company, "The Monster of Fate," is, according to General Manager Joseph Lamy, being marketed with wide success. Work is now under way on a second production of pretentious character.

Gaumont Presents Interesting "Reel Life" Issue

"Our Patriotic Maidens" is the title of an important section of Gaumont’s "Reel Life," released through Mutual May 3. Inspired by the call for national service, women are enrolling in automobile service. The pictures show them at work in the service shops with swords and sharp sticks, eating cactus plants and swallowing nails while in a religious frenzy.

Dick Travers with Sunshine Co.

Dick Travers, formerly of the Essanay forces, has signed up with the Sunshine Motion Picture Company of Chicago. He will be featured in a six-reel production to be made shortly. It was reported erroneously recently that he had signed with the American Standard Motion Picture Company.

Warners Pay Record Price for Wilcox Poems

After several months of negotiation, the Warner Brothers have closed a contract for the Ella Wheeler Wilcox poems for which they are said to have paid $215,500. In the terms of the contract the Warners hold the rights to the world for the films of these famous poems.

Full details of the deal have not yet been given out.

Hearst's Newspapers, the Cosmopolitan, McClure's Magazine, Good Housekeeping, and other widely distributed journals circulate the writings of Ella Wheeler Wilcox. Her works have enjoyed popularity for twenty-five years in England and Europe in addition to acknowledgment of the power of her pen given by the United States.

Warner Oland with Astra

Warner Oland, who played the role of Baron Huroki in the International serial, "Patria," has been engaged by Astra and is now at work in a new Pathé serial which is being directed by George B. Seitz. Pearl White is the featured player in this production and her leading man is Earle Fox. Ruby Hoffman is another member of the cast.
Hodkinson Outlines Purpose of Conquest Brand

W. W. Hodkinson, in an interview, outlined the purposes for which Forum Films, exploiting the Conquest Brand pictures, was formed. Mr. Hodkinson said:

"Better films for the family have long been demanded by the public. It has here-tofore been a problem to get them. The head of a family may be entertained by a certain type of screen story. He is mature enough to separate the tares from the wheat. Should he chance to witness a sex play, he will doubtless take the 'instructive' part light-ly, if indeed not carelessly. He is old enough to know that the exhibitors who specialize on this sort of thing are not going into the schoolmaster business."

"Edison Conquest pictures are clean pictures. They are red-blooded stories transplanted from library shelves to the screen. The heroes of many of the stories are boys, but it does not follow that the films will interest boys only. "Kidnapped," by Robert Louis Stevenson, is one of the early releases. As a book the boy hero of 'Kidnapped' was a great favorite of grown-ups. He will not prove less of a favorite on the screen. Men will ever be interested in boys, for men are grown-up boys. For that matter the hero of another early Conquest feature is a horse. The title of the feature is 'Your Obedient Servant', adapted from 'Black Beauty', by Anna Sewell."

Edison to Film "The Little Chevalier"

The motion picture rights to M. H. E. Davis's, "The Little Chevalier," a tale of Louisiana, laid in the days when that territory was a French colony, have been secured by Thomas A. Edison, Inc., for production of the picture. Shirley Mason will play the title rôle. While the story warrants a five-reel production, it will be made either in three or four reels in order to have it conform to the requirements of the new program.

Credit to Robert Burns

Through an inadvertency, recent trade paper stories created the impression that the comedy role of Pokes in the "Pokes and Jabs" series to a George Burns instead of to Robert P. Burns, who originated the character, and who still plays that part in the comedies, which are to be released on the open market by the Jason Film Corporation.

Cecil De Mille Stages Next Pickford Offering

"A Romance of the Redwoods" Title of Newest Vehicle—Now Being Completed and Will Be Released May 14

CLOSELY following the announcement which involves its affiliation with D. W. Griffith, the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, through its president, Walter E. Greene, offers another surprise for the trade as well as the general public, which leads the art of Mary Pickford and Cecil B. De Mille.

For some time past Miss Pickford, following the completion of "A Poor Little Rich Girl," has been appearing before the camera in California under the personal direction of Cecil B. De Mille.

The new Pickford vehicle will be released under the title of "A Romance of the Redwoods," and is now rapidly nearing completion. It will be released May 14. A Western subject of dramatic action, it presents "Little Mary" in a rôle that is entirely different from anything in which she has ever appeared on the screen. The story was written by Mr. De Mille in collaboration with Jerome Macpherson. The settings are of the days of '49, during the time of the big gold rush. Mary Pickford as Jenny Lawrence, a little New England miss, journeys to the West in search of her only relative, an uncle. Before she is aware of it, she falls in love, and as a result becomes emmeshed in serious complications.

The new Lasky studios at Hollywood are being used for the production of the picture, and as a result of the novel technical installments of this model plant, under the direct supervision of Director-General De Mille, whose "Joan the Wom-an" is creating a sensation throughout the country, an artistic triumph is anticipated in the next Pickford-Artcraft offering.

Thrills in First Chapter of "Railroad Raiders"

"Circumstantial Evidence," the first chapter of the Mutual-Signal photodrama, "The Railroad Raiders," released April 9, gives a promising start to the serial. Helen Holmes is once more surrounded by railroad trains and the atmosphere of the yards. Miss Holmes appears as the daughter of the station agent of Deer's Head, and his assistant. Because of her popularity on the division she is known as "The Daughter of the Road." Helen's world is bounded entirely by the little desert town and station where she spends her time buried with railroad duties.

Appearing with Miss Holmes in this chapter are Thomas G. Lingham, Leo D. Maloney, Paul C. Hurst, William Buehler, William Brunton, Will Chapman, G. H. Wischusen, Florence Holmes and F. L. Hemphill.

House Peters Leaves Morosco

House Peters has just completed his contract term at the Morosco Photoplay Company's Los Angeles studios, and is considering offers from several large Western producers, although it is rumoured that he may finally decide to build his own studio, produce his own plays, and release them under the state rights plan.

Pre-Release Advertising of Goldwyn Successful

Publicity Campaign Carefully Planned—Response to the "Exhibitor Appeal" Reported to Be Country Wide and Warm

An advertising and promotion campaign has attracted much attention in the film industry, that is of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

Inaugurating a campaign ten months before its company planned to market a picture, this office has, in no instance, attempted to sell a product as yet unmanufactured. In sequence it has revealed to exhibitors the name values of the Goldwyn owners, their stability, their record of sound business ethics in their previous ventures and business, and the successes these men have achieved in related fields of business. This phase of the campaign covered six or seven weeks, and is reiterated about once in each three weeks.

Following this came a sequence of advertisements designed solely to reintroduce and further popularize the names of the Goldwyn stars, with the hint of other stars to be announced in addition to Gold- wyn's first five—Mae Marsh, Mary Garden, Maxine Elliott, Jane Cowl and Madge Kennedy. In between these two phases of the campaign there has been introduced a constant element of "exhibitor appeal." In other words, exhibitors have been invited regularly to assist the Goldwyn executives in outlining the methods of organization to be employed by the company. The response to these appeals has been big.

MORE than ordinary interest attaches to the announcement of the forthcoming Balboa serial, "The Twisted Thread," through the initial screen appearance of Kathleen Clifford, the latest celebrity to come from the stage.

The story of the serial as conceived by H. M. Horkheimer is said to be unlike anything previously offered in a serial, and an excellent cast has been provided.

For the production of "The Twisted Thread," a $30,000 specially constructed stage at the Balboa studio was provided, and on it some very artistic sets were arranged. Officials say no limit was placed on the expenditure for this subject.

Said President Horkheimer in discussing this photoplay:

"Because of its past success as a producer of continued screen stories, Balboa has become popularly known to the trade. For the production of "The Twisted Thread," a $30,000 specially constructed stage at the Balboa studio was provided, and on it some very artistic sets were arranged. Officials say no limit was placed on the expenditure for this subject."

"The story was written by George B. Seitz, famous as the author of "The Iron Claw," and many other successes. George Fitzmaurice is the director."

"The story centers around a bold attempt to steal a valuable necklace. The heroine falls in love with a man and helps him escape. The action develops to a thrilling climax."

LOIS WEBER'S Newest Production
"EVEN AS YOU AND I"
A DRAMA OF SOULS AT BAY

is another one of those huge dramatic accomplishments that offers financial possibilities equal to LOIS WEBER'S past successes which include: "Where Are My Children," "Idle Wives," "Shave," "Hypocrites," "Scandal," and others.

Chosen without even having been seen by S. T. Rothafel of the Rialto, New York, and having played to capacity houses for one solid week at that Theatre, this huge production in seven reels must compel the immediate attention of State Rights Men who are aware of the returns from such former LOIS WEBER Productions as enumerated. The best possible description and the strongest is: "IT'S A LOIS WEBER PRODUCTION!"

Wonderfully conceived, wonderfully invested, wonderfully produced. State Rights now selling. Communications for territory given attention in order of their receipt.

Uncle Sam Using Slides to Stimulate Recruiting

That Secretary of the Navy Daniels appreciates the far-reaching publicity value of the film in the campaign of the Government to recruit the Navy up to the war strength is proved by his quick acceptance to a telegram sent by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, suggesting that slides, trailers and other motion picture devices be utilized in the patriotic work of requesting the youth of America to enlist.

Later, Mr. Laemmle conferred with Commander Bennett, who supplied a number of texts to be used on slides, trailers and other means of the moving picture theatre owners and exhibitors throughout the United States, beginning at once. Some of the more striking texts to be shown are: "The Navy Needs You Now. Don't Wait for a Second Call." "We've Got the Ships, We've Got the Guns, but We Need You! Join the Navy." "If You Want to Get Anywhere You Have to Start. Join the Navy Now."

High Play" Said to Embody Absorbing Story Elements

The Mutual production, "High Play," in which William Russell, Francia Billington and Lucille Young appear, is described as a "hundred per cent production" through the co-operative efforts of star, director and author. The feature tells a story of society, finance, love and mystery. A murder, a financial crisis in a great bank, and a conflict between rival sweethearts of the hero, are among the threads upon which the action is strung.

First Jefferson Film Ready

The first production of the Jefferson Film Corporation, Louisville, Ky., has been completed. This is a one-reel comedy, "A Bad Girl and Little Girl," written and directed by Jack Breime and starring Carolyn Hutchins.

Hammons Reports That Educational's Are Striding in West

E. W. HAMMONS, vice president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation of America has just returned from the coast and reports a very successful trip from his visit to several of the exchanges handling the Educational Films Corporation of America's releases.

"This company's releases," said Mr. Hammons, "seem to have taken like wildfire through the country, and theatres which a few years ago turned their noses up at an educational and scenic picture are now bidding against each other in an effort to get the first run for their particular houses." Mr. Hammons reports that J. A. Quinn, one of the old time exhibitors in the film game, and one of the best known on the coast, is opening a beautiful new theatre in Los Angeles, which will be known as the Rialto theatre.

Astra Has Two More Productions Completed for Pathé

With the completion of two more features for release on Pathé's Gold Rooster program, in the near future, George Fitzmaurice and William Parke, directors of the Astra Film Corporation, have started work on new subjects. It is reported that a famous motion picture star has been engaged by Pathé for Mr. Fitzmaurice's future productions. According to the reports the contract has already been signed, but no definite announcement has been made.

Mr. Fitzmaurice's latest picture is entitled "Fifth Avenue." Mollie King is the featured player. The cast includes Donald Hall, Adaire Dalmores, Ernest Lawford, one of the best actors on the American stage, who made a big hit as a featured member of Grace George's Repertory Company at the Playhouse, New York, last season, and Paul Everton. The cast of Mr. Parke's picture has not been announced.

Mr. Fitzmaurice's next picture will be a Secret Service story. A society drama has been selected by Mr. Parke.

Get-Rich-Quick Schemes Shown

The so-called get rich quick corporations and the fake building and loan associations which fleece the poor are exposed in the latest Edison feature, "Builders of Castles," released through K.-E.-S.-E.

Mare McDermott and Miriam Neshbit are featured in the subject, which is announced for release April 16.

Miss Clark in Child Role

Marguerite Clark will be seen in another elish character in her new Famous Players-Paramount picture, "The Valentine Girl," playing a child part. J. Searle Dawley directed the production.
Independent Producer to Put Out American War News Weekly

THE interest of the American public in their army and navy has been productive of an independent American War News Weekly, which is to be issued in one-reel releases by a new concern the Cinema War News Syndicate. State-right distribution will be employed.

Application to the Secretary of State for a charter has been made, and registration papers have been filed for the transaction of general business in New York city.

In charge of the new concern are Frederick W. Brooker, president; Robert R. Reynolds, field and editing director; C. Edgar Burton, general sales manager, and J. F. Natteford, director of publicity. Besides, it is understood that a corps of able motion picture men have been added to handle the various departments incident to such an organization and that every effort will be put forth to release for rapid distribution the latest American war news in pictures.

Mr. Brooker, the president, is a New York manufacturer, and he enters this new field aiming to inject business policies and economical principles into the cinema world. To quote Mr. Brooker, "We are entering the field to supply a demand—the public demands only high-class and truthful war news pictures showing their own soldiers and sailors in action."

In Captain Robert R. Reynolds (retired) the Cinema Syndicate has found an amalgamation of soldier, author, journalist, and outdoor sportsman who is familiar with the producing end of the motion picture industry.

Marital Problems and Lessons Basis of New Pathe Serial

PATHE announces the title of its next serial as "The Neglected Wife." The release date has not been definitely set. The pictures are based on stories of Mabel Herbert Urner.

Ruth Roland, heroine of "Who Pays?" and "The Red Circle," is the featured player. She is supported by Roland Bor- tomley. The serial was produced in California by Balboa from the scenarios of Wilh. M. Ritchey, the author of the two original stories on which Miss Roland's previous serial successes were based.

The two stories on which the serial is based, "The Journal of a Neglected Wife" and "The Woman Alone," were syndicated to a score of the largest newspapers in the country and have been widely read.

The theme is of a neglected wife, wedded to Horace Kennedy, an attorney. Heart interest and thrills are furnished by the entrance of the "other woman." Trials in business of the husband and love of the wife complicate the marital existence. The fight of the two women to win the love of a man makes for intense drama, and strong situations predominate. "Stunts" in every reel are promised by Pathé. The humanness of the story is counted on as its best advertisement. Without preaching, it is said to carry a lesson to every married man and to point out the dangers that may lie in the path of a young girl who carries on an "affair" with a married man.

Rath Scenario Editor for Art Dramas

Fred Rath, well-known as a motion picture writer and journalist, has just been appointed scenario editor of Apollo Pictures, Incorporated, releasing on Art Dramas program, according to announcement made by Harry Raver, president of the company.

Mr. Rath has just completed the adaptation of "The Mystic Hour," written by Agnes Fletcher Bain, which is to be released in May.

New Play for House Peters

Kathlyn Williams and House Peters make their first appearance as co-stars upon the screen in the Morosco-WesternPictures, to be released for the week of April 23 to exhibitors and to the public on the regular William Fox program.

Initial Bernstein Film Nearly Ready

The first Bernstein "production for the clean minded," is practically finished all the scenes having been taken and some film editing being necessary before it is shipped to the purchasers.

The last scenes to be made was that of the embassy ball at Washington, in which more than 600 people took part. With this, the initial subject from the producing organization completed, General Manager Bernstein is giving all his attention to the filming of his series of seven subjects to be known as the "Seven Cardinal Virtues." The making of these will be taken up during the coming week by Director Pratt.

MacQuarrie who is considered one of the best character actors and make-up artists of the American screen, remembered for his remarkable characterization of Richelieu, has been engaged by Manager Bernstein, and will be given character parts in the coming productions from this studio. Mr. Bernstein feels he has added one of the greatest possible assets to his producing organization by MacQuarrie, who was formerly associated with Mr. Bernstein when the latter was manager of the Universal West Coast studios.

Vita Comedy with Lillian Walker Soon

A Blue Ribbon feature from Greater Vitagraph that will soon be released is "Sally-in-a-Hurry," a comedy drama from the pen of A. Van Buren Powell with Lillian Walker starred. This picture is noted for the appearance of Miss Walker in a slightly role such as she had in her success "Green Stockings" and in "Kitty Mackay," her latest current release.

The story, directed by Wilfrid North, has a Cinderella-like atmosphere, dealing with the dreams of a beany wedding about her fairy prince which come true after she incidentally manages to save him from the machinations of a gang of crooks.

Work on New McClure Series to Begin

The return of President Collins of McClure Pictures from the Pacific Coast this week will be the signal for work to begin on the new McClure series to follow "Seven Deadly Sins," to consist of nine plays in three groups of three each.

Mr. Collins while on the Pacific Coast signed a number of contracts with directors and actors and made special arrangements, which he will announce upon his return, for producing some of the new McClure Pictures in Los Angeles.

Valeska Suratt in Film Version of Novel "She"

Rider Haggard's novel, "She," a weird, fantastic story laid in the Africa of two thousand years ago, is announced by Fox Film Corporation as the next release starring Valeska Suratt.

The picture, which was many weeks in the making, will be released for the week of April 23 to exhibitors and to the public on the regular William Fox program.
Margaret Illington's First Play
"Sacrifice"

Contrary to a former announcement, the first photoplay in which the celebrated stage star, Margaret Illington, will appear upon the screen will be "Sacrifice," which was written especially for her by Charles Kenyon and adapted for the screen by Beatrice De Mille and Leighton Osnun. It is now in the course of production at the Lasky studio under the direction of Frank Reicher and will be released by Paramount in May. It is an interesting coincidence that it was Margaret Illington who appeared in the first play which Charles Kenyon had produced upon the stage, and it will be remembered that she scored a success in his great drama "Kindling." Mr. Kenyon has been engaged by the Lasky company to write photoplays for Miss Illington, and "Sacrifice" represents his first direct contribution to the photoplay.

Goldwyn Takes Possession of Fort Lee Studios

Losing no time after announcing its lease of the Universal's big Fort Lee studio and related plant, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation installed some of its producing units there on Monday morning, April 2. Acquisition of this plant will greatly aid Goldwyn in speeding its operations. Aubrey M. Kennedy, known throughout the industry, has been installed as studio manager at the new Goldwyn plant. For three years he was general manager for the Essanay, for two years general manager of the American and general manager of production for the Universal for three years.

English Actress in Screen Debut

Olive Tell, renowned beauty of the English stage, will make her film debut in "The Silent Master," in which she plays the leading role opposite Robert Warwick. "The Silent Master" is taken from E. Phillips Oppenheim's book, "The Court of St. Simon," and also marks the American debut of Director Leonce Perret.

H. B. Warner with Selig; Working on First Film

"Sacrifice"

The acquisition of H. B. Warner was announced last week by Selig. The first photoplay in which he will be seen is now being completed at the Chicago studios. In addition, Violet Heming and W. Lawson-Butt have become members of the Selig stock company.

"The Danger Trail" will be the first starring vehicle for Mr. Warner. Miss Heming and Mr. Butt will support in this feature, which will be the next Selig release of K-E-S-E.

Snow scenes have been filmed for the picture in northern New York during the past few weeks. Frederick Thomson is the director in charge of the production.

Mr. Warner is one of the most popular stage and screen stars, and William N. Selig feels in getting his signature to a contract that he has a decidedly strong asset.

Determined to outdo, if possible, the famous fight in "The Spookers," Warner and Butt engage in a struggle during the action of "The Danger Trail" which is reported as realistic and spectacular. It was Warner's expressed ambition to outdo "The Spookers" battle if possible, and those who have seen the nearly completed drama say the fight is sensational as could be expected when engaged in by two athletes.

Miss Violet Heming, the leading lady for Mr. Warner, is a widely known star of the spoken drama. She created the role of Rebecca in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," and has been a leading lady since she was sixteen years of age. She played for two years with George Arliss, was a prominent member of the New York production of "The Lie," appeared in "Under Cover," and supported William Courteney in "Under Fire.

"The Danger Trail" is her second experience in motion pictures, but critics say she has scored as great a triumph in the silent drama as she has in stageland.

W. Lawson-Butt, the English actor, came to the United States to enact the role of Boris in the original production of "The Garden of Allah." He also supported Robert Mantell.

Vivian Martin and Jack Pickford Co-Star

The first production in which Jack Pickford will appear since his transfer from the Famous Players Studio in New York to the Lasky Studio in Hollywood will be "The Girl at Home," in which he will co-star with Vivian Martin. This, by the way, marks Miss Martin's first appearance under the Lasky management. The story was written by George Middleton, the playwright, and adapted for the screen by Ethel Marie Dix. It was staged under the direction of Marshall Neilan.

Mae Murray Signs Again with Lasky

Just before departing for California to visit his studio at Hollywood, Jesse L. Lasky announced the signing of a new contract with Mae Murray, by the terms of which she will appear in Lasky-Paramount pictures for the next two years. Miss Murray has just completed "The Primrose Ring," an adaptation of Ruth Sawyer's delightful story, for the eastern scenes of which she had made the transcontinental journey.

Hawaiian Stories to Be Filmed by Paramount

After the success scored by Lehua Waipahu, the Hawaiian actress who is seen in support of Sassa Hayakawa in the Lasky-Paramount adaptation of Robert Louis Stevenson's "The Bottle Imp," the Lasky Company engaged Miss Waipahu to prepare for them a series of photodramatic scenarios founded on the wonderful legends and folk stories of the Hawaiian Islands.
Bray-Pictograph. No. 63, Has Many Human Interest Subjects

The subjects composing the sixty-third release of Paramount-Bray Pictographs, to appear April 15, include "Mallonee Pearl Fishing," which makes up the first subject. It was necessary to construct a platform on a reef more than a hundred feet out in the Pacific Ocean, as the oysters from which these iridescent bulbs make their home cling to the rocks when the heavy surf pounds continuously. The picture is one of rare beauty and the conditions under which the divers work make it extremely interesting.

The second subject, "An Old-Fashioned Coon Hunt," was taken in the forests of North Carolina, where an occasional four-footed "coon" is hunted down by sportsmen of the two-footed variety, called by the same name.

The third installment of Sam Loyd's amusing Picto-Puzzles follows. The interest which was created by the first two issues will be materially increased by the present group. Mr. Loyd has furnished some clever ideas which the Bray studios have animated.

Once more Bobby Bumps comes forward with his pup to furnish the laughter in this release. This time the story centers around Daddy Bumps' efforts to get rid of the dog and Bobby's determination to keep him at any cost.

Big Patriotic Spectacle Completed by Rob Goldstein

In "The Spirit of '76," the massive patriotic spectacle, Director Robert Goldstein has imbedded a great many original ideas.

This visualization in twelve reels of the true cause and effects of the American Revolution was written and personally directed by Mr. Goldstein. A strong theme underlying the cause of America's struggle for independence and every phase of the revolution is portrayed.

"The Spirit of '76" is said to contain scores of stupendous scenes, remarkable for magnitude and correctness of detail.

Norma Talmadge Enacts Society Role

In "The Law of Compensation," the next Selznick-Pictures feature, in which Norma Talmadge will appear, this young star will be seen in the role of a young society woman who fails to understand the difference between love and infatuation. In "Panthera," her previous offering, she played the part of a young Russian pianist, who suffered persecutions at the hands of the police, and made a tremendous sacrifice for the man she loved.

These are but two samples of the great range of characters, which have been enacted by Miss Talmadge. In the six years she has been playing before the moving picture camera she has been seen in almost every conceivable sort of role, from comedy which verged upon burlesque, to high tragedy.

Warwick on New Picture

Marion Swayne in First Film for Erbograph

"Little Miss Fortune" is the title selected for Marion Swayne's first feature with the Erbograph Company, releasing on Art Dramas program. The story was written by Clarence J. Harris, the prominent scenario writer, especially for the star.

In support of Miss Swayne are Hugh Thompson, Bradley Barker, Lucile Dorrington, Anna Day Perry and Charles Macdonald. Joseph Levering is directing the production, which is rapidly nearing completion.

Miss Swayne plays the part of a poor house girl of unknown parentage, who is known as "Sis," for want of a better name. In the small town where she lives she is smudged by all the other girls, and life is made generally miserable for her. It is her ambition to be a famous actress, and when an opportunity for escape comes, she takes it and goes to the city.

Extensive Advertising Campaign on "The Trufflers"

Because of a desire to give exhibitors full benefit of a nation-wide advertising campaign, K. E. S. E. announce that "The Trufflers," originally scheduled for release April 9, will not be presented until later in the month.

This means that full page display ads and full page illustrated feature stories will be printed in all the Hearst daily papers from coast to coast during several weeks preceding release date. Besides many smaller "ads" and shorter stories there will also be a campaign of exploitation in behalf of "The Trufflers" through the International News Service, an agency controlled by William Randolph Hearst.

Sunshine Co. Completes Comedy

The Sunshine Film Company has finished its first of a series of one-reel comedies they are making at the Bioscope studios. It is entitled "Some Baby" and was released Saturday, April 7. The next is to be entitled "A Forceful Romance."
Hypnotism Theme of "Her Temptation," Fox Subject

Gladys Brockwell is the star of "Her Temptation," a William Fox production which will be released for the week of April 16. Howard K. Hawks is in charge of the direction. The script was written by Norris Shannon.

Chief among the supporting company are Bertram Grassby, Ralph Lewis, Beatrice Burnham, James Cruze and Carrie C. Ward.

Miss Brockwell plays the role of Shirley Mordand, a young girl, who, for lack of a fortune, is forced into marrying a man she does not love.

Shirley carries on a flirtation with Gerald Halsted, who in want of money hypnotizes her and causes her to poison her husband. Paralysis is assigned as the cause of death, but his estate is found to be willed to Shirley's younger sister Helen. Eventually Shirley, deserted, finally tells the truth of her husband's death. Halsted, forced to confess, is accidentally killed, and Shirley finally finds happiness with the secret that had burdened her, removed, and in the love of another man.

Ivan Gets Director Humphrey

William Humphrey has been added to the producing staff of Ivan Film Productions, and some big things are promised.

Commenting on Ivan Film Productions' acquisition of Mr. Humphrey, Mr. Chadwick said: "We have engaged Mr. Humphrey because of the artistry he brings to the screen, which will mutually benefit the exhibitor, exchangethens and ourselves. Mr. Humphrey is an expert who has studied and mastered his profession as few in the business have. Having been an actor of renown before the Motion Picture era, and for seven consecutive years Director of the best productions of one of the largest companies in the country, I believe we did wisely to have contracted for his services."

Peckham to Distribute Facts Film Productions

Under an agreement entered into last week by the Facts Film Company, Cincinnati, and Ralph E. Peckham, the latter becomes sole distributor for the United States and Canada for the products produced by the Facts Corporation.

"Big Question," initial production of the concern, has already been released. "How About You?" is the title of the second picture to be introduced next. Two pictures will be produced and released each month.

Topical Problem in Comedy

A subject at present prominent in the public mind is treated in "Shorty Reduces the High Cost of Living," thirteenth of Mutual's "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton."

The picture shows food riots in which mobs of women raid the carts in the market. Mothers appeal to the mayor for food, crying that their children are starving.

Shorty decides as potatoes are about the most valuable product on the market, he will experiment with them, and he does all kinds of things with spuds.

Brady Explains Purchase of "Mothers of France"

Declares Real Program Features Are as Good as Specials—More French Pictures Coming—Interchange of Stars Planned

OUR purchase of "Mothers of France," said William A. Brady, director-general of World-Pictures Brady-made, last week, "had an object very considerably beyond money-making. In the first place, it enabled us to do something of very unusual value for exhibitors using the World program, and in the second, it placed us in the position to prove our contention that specials are no better than real program features—only sometimes longer."

"In his letter to our corporation, Mr. S. L. Rothspigel, managing director of the Rialto theatre, New York, said "Mothers of France" was the most valuable attraction that had ever played in his theatre, because it brought people in who had never been there before. This is precisely what we are going to do for theatres taking World service.

"We are convinced that World-Pictures Brady-made are, in fact, a program of specials. In case there may be persons who think we are overenthusiastic about our own product, let us refer them to the Sarah Bernhardt picture play, which we did not make, but which we place upon our program, first, to give our exhibitors the best that the market affords, and, second, to indicate that we do not fear comparisons.

"If we are willing to sandwich a feature like 'Mothers of France' in between two of our regular releases, we are certainly submitting our own pictures to as severe a test as could possibly be brought to bear.

"What is more, the test is not to end with this particular instance. At the time of making the arrangement for the Miss Bernhardt play, Mr. Brady, who made it, concluded a deal under which we are to have the rights for certain other great French pictures made by the same company and under the same director, Louis Mercanton.

"Certain stars under engagement to the foreign organization will come to America in due course to play in our dramas, while several of our own stars will go to Europe for productions under Mr. Mercanton's direction. The French players will sail as soon as they have finished the picture upon which they are working at present, but our American stars will not leave this country until the finish of the war, which naturally enough makes our pictures parallel the manufacture of picture plays in the countries involved.

"I think this interchange arrangement will not alone give us a wider range of material than we could hope to get in any other way, but will be of value to our players as well as those sent to us from the other side of the ocean."

"Womanhood" Novelty Advertised by Philadelphia Exhibitors

PHILADELPHIA, March 31 — (Philadelphia) — "Womanhood," Vitagraph's spectacular war and preparedness picture, showed their patriotism on Saturday, March 31, by using the picture to increase enlistments and incidentally told more than half a million people all about the big picture in every manner known to the circus showman.

March 31 was Philadelphia's big preparedness day, when more than one hundred thousand able-bodied men paraded the streets through lanes of people estimated at half a million persons. The parade terminated at Independence Square, where another hundred thousand persons listened to patriotic oratory.

To further advertise preparedness and the picture the exhibitors procured a float upon which they installed a tremendous reading: "Womanhood," is the wonderful preparedness picture suggested by Colonel Roosevelt, endorsed by Secretaries Baker and Daniels—See it now."

CHICAGO NEWS AND COMMENT

Senate Committee Hears Guernsey Bill Argument

The fight on the Guernsey bill, which proposes statewide censorship for Illinois, shifted from the capital at Springfield last week to the La Salle Hotel at Chicago. Here for two days, beginning Saturday, March 31 and continuing on Monday following, the advocates of the Guernsey measure, those against it and who favor no censorship of motion pictures at all, put their arguments before a sub-committee of the Senate on license and miscellany. The bill, it was said, ready to be reported out at Springfield on Wednesday, March 28, when a committee of exhibitors and officers of the motion picture industry made their appearance at Springfield. It was then turned over for action to the sub-committee, meeting in Chicago.

The Senate committee consisted of: Thomas Curran, chairman; Thomas Boyer, Roger Marcy, Robert Muley, Lawrence O'Brien and Thomas P. Devereux. At the first day's hearing the side sponsoring Senator Guernsey and his bill was heard. The exhibitors and the non-censor advocates presented their side on Monday of last week.

The faction that spoke in favor of the Guernsey bill was made up almost entirely of women, members of the various welfare and uplift clubs of Chicago and State federations of women's clubs. They endorsed censorship in the gist of their remarks and in general they contended that the proposed bill to place censorship in Illinois in the hands of a State board was the best means.

They scored the police censorship of Chicago as inefficient and bringing no results to the rest of the State.

The "pink permit," originated by Major Funkhauser and his censor board in Chicago was soundly rapped by the women and by the exhibitors and those against the Guernsey bill. The argument for the Guernsey bill was opened by Mrs. Guy Blanchard, secretary of the Chicago Political Equality League. She marshaled the rest of the women speakers, among whom were: Mrs. Harriet Stokes Thompson, president of the Political Equality League; Mrs. C. N. Rowley, of the Civic League; Mrs. Francis D. Everett; Mrs. W. W. Whitmore and others.

When the motion picture men printed their guns on Monday they not only declared against the Guernsey bill but against all censorship of any kind. However, there seemed to be an inference that if they had to put up with censorship for the present, the police plan as in effect in Chicago, was more suitable to them than the proposed State board.

Dr. Sam Atkinson, who was among those who gave the knockout blow to censorship in Southern California, took the initiative for the opponents of the Guernsey bill. He declared against censorship in any form as un-American and unconstitutional. "State censorship or any form of censorship," Dr. Atkinson said, "can (Continued on page 2506)

Leaks in the Loop

British war pictures are to be shown at the Auditorium theatre, April 11, by a committee of Chicago society women. The proceeds are to go to the American Ambulance Field Service.

The O. Henry pictures were shown to a large delegation of Chicago exhibitors at the Selig projection room last week. Approval for the picturization of the famous stories was heard on all sides.

The Ascher Bros. new Metropolitan theatre is receiving commendation from the patrons for its rich and comfortable appointments.

Henry Waldbill and Mary Charleson of the Essanay tiara, were present at the opening of "Joan the Woman."

Louis Selznick dropped off at his Chicago offices last week on his way to Kansas City. He stopped long enough to say that Clara Kimball Young's next picture is the best she ever did.

Manager Bush of the Beach theatre, announces that every Wednesday after April 14, will be Paramount Day at his theatre.

The Argomore is boasting of a new novelty orchestra.

The girl ushers and ticket sellers at the La Salle, where "The Black Stork" is being shown are all garbed as hospital nurses.

At the Colonial, where "Joan the Woman" is running, the male attendants are garbed in blue uniforms decorated with buttons bearing the fluer-de-lis.

The Selig News Weekly announces that they are faithfully and patriotically going to follow the Government's admonition not to disclose in film weeklies any military locations or preparations.

John Fiske, a 24 carat publicity and promotion man, has joined the Mutual publicity forces. Seems to fit like the proverbial round peg in a round hole.

George K. Spoor was granted an honorary membership to the Reel Fellows Club at their last meeting on March 30. They are also planning a banquet in his honor. A special committee was appointed to apprise him of his election as an honorary member. They are: Jack Haig, Theodore S. Mead and H. C. Miller.

Wid Gunning of New York, Harry Sherman of Sheriott Company and E. W. Hammons of the Educational Films Company of New York were visitors at the Rothacker plant last week. Like others, of course, they marveled.

Watterson Rothacker is becoming quite a wanted feature with his illustrated lecture on "How Motion Pictures Are Produced and Made." His next engagement is before the Rotary Club at Battle Creek, Mich.

This month marks the seventh anniversary of the building of the Rothacker plant and studio.

New Canadian Concern to Handle General's Product

A new company which will distribute in Canada the same product handled by the General Film Company in the United States has been organized and will be known as the General Film Company of Canada, Limited. Its headquarters will be in Montreal and it will have branches throughout the Dominion. The business of the company will be conducted from the main office in Montreal. The officers of the company are: President, T. A. Hubley; Vice-President, Harold Bolster; Secretary and Treasurer, T. Coppelman.

Amalgamated Program in St. Louis

The releases of the Amalgamated Film Distributors Corporation, recently organized in New York, will be handled in the St. Louis territory by Sam Werner, manager of the Unicorn Exchange, 3138 Olive street. Mr. Werner will have twenty-one reels a week on the new program, he says, all short subjects, and all new and up to date.

Canadian Exchange Shifts

William J. Reid, formerly manager of the Toronto office of the Regal Film Company, has been appointed manager of the new exchange just opened at St. John, New Brunswick. There are now nine exchanges in St. John supplying more than a hundred theatres in the maritime provinces.

The new Philadelphia quarters into which Famous Players Exchange has moved, at 1219-21 Vine street, are of the most up-to-date character. In construction, furnishings, and decorations the exchange is said to present an imposing and dignified appearance. Other exchanges are shortly expected to move into the Vine street building.

Monmouth Officers Tour in Interests of "Gray Seal" Series

W. E. Kesting, for many years connected with the motion picture industry, leaves New York this week on an extended tour in the interest of the Monmouth Film Corporation. He will visit the various exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation in Texas, touching St. Louis, Indianapolis, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh in the interests of the "Jimmy Dale" picture series.

His trip will be followed up by Mr. Marcus, vice-president and general manager of the Monmouth Film Corporation, who will extend his trip to the coast, touching the various exchanges throughout the Far West.

Philadelphia Concerns Combine

The A. G. Fontana Productions, of which Marcus and Newman were the Pennsylvania representatives for "Civilization," have amalgamated with the Peerless Feature Film Attractions and moved their offices to the home of the latter, at 1339 Vine street, Philadelphia.

Mr. Marcus remains with "Civilization" in Philadelphia, while Mr. Newman has charge of the Pittsburgh office.

The Peerless has acquired the southern New Jersey and Pennsylvania rights to "The Deemster," with Derwent Caine. The California Motion Picture Company's "Woman Who Dared," with Beatrice Michelena, is another special release just bought by Peerless for Pennsylvania.

This picture will have its Philadelphia premier at the Arcadia on April 9 and run for a week.

Return Expressage to Be Paid by Canada Exhibitors

As a result of the rapid increase in the cost of maintaining service, exchanges through Ontario have notified exhibitors that on and after May 1 all return express charges will have to be paid by the theatre men. The Exhibitors' Association is expected to take action in protest.

General Cuts Out Branch

The Harrisburg branch of the General Film Service has been discontinued, and the territory will hereafter be served by the Philadelphia and Wilkes-Barre offices. J. T. Healey, manager, will work from the Philadelphia buying exchange in the future.

Fox Men Transferred

M. O. Turner, formerly manager of the Fox San Francisco offices, has been transferred to the Milwaukee office. Charles Phillips, who was in the Milwaukee office, goes to the Indianapolis branch.
JUST FOR FUN

In vague manner Charlie Moyer attempts to prove that one may save thirty-five cents by going home instead of waiting. Such fragments of news, however small, are invaluable to the industry at large. Won't some one enlighten us as to how to spend the thirty-five cents and so complete an unfinished story?

"The great man, Mr. J. Will Showen, was seated in the midst of a mass of flummery when the reporter approached and drew his stenographer's note book from his pocket. Mr. Showen has just inaugurated the Super-Supreme Photoplay Motion Picture Corporation, Inc., capitalized in the state of New Jersey for at least seven million dollars if not more.

"And what are your plans for your company, Mr. Showen?" asked the reporter.

The great man almost blushed before replying: "I am firmly convinced that there is a deplorable lack of sound business methods in the business today," he said, clearing his throat to denote that the end of the sentence had been reached. "The class of pictures which I will produce will be an entirely original departure from the regular program feature. Clean, wholesome pictures that the whole family will enjoy. Nothing offensive. The name of the first subject now in preparation is 'Lost in the Cesspool of New York.' This is something altogether different, teaching a striking lesson—a picture that every young girl should see.

"I am also on the lookout for better stories. The screen must have better stories to keep pace with the times. I have some of the best names on my pay roll now,—er, let me see, er—well I can't remember them offhand.

"Of course my pictures will be distributed after an improved fashion. There is too much waste motion in the business just now. It's all wrong and I mean to set it right.

"But, er—would you like my picture, I have several poses here.

A week later the Super-Supreme Photoplay Corporation Corporation, Inc., filed a petition of bankruptcy when the U. S. Printing Company sends in its bill for $12.98 worth of letterheads. The Longacre Lampoon
All the News That Fits, We Print
Longacre Square, N. Y., April 21, 1917

EDITORIAL
Every director has his own way of producing a picture. The handling of details as well as spectacular stuff is very often left to his sole direction and through such channels has he an advance to display what originality and artistic sense he possesses. We hesitate in casting a withering glance upon one which has not yet arrived. We hesitate on the production methods of a certain set of directors, but there is nothing else to protest against this week. These fellows have adopted the process of dissolving all scenes taking place in the same setting into one another. From the full set they fade into a closeup and there is just an instant when the spectator sees a double screen. It is useless to say that this practice is bound to be confusing particularly when there is utilized for so many other tricks of picturization. We sat in the midst of a crowded house one day last week and watched such a produced picture unfold itself on the screen to such audible accompaniments from the audience as: "What the devil is this with the matter with the projection?" "This is one of the slowest pictures I've ever seen," and, last but not least, "Where do you get this stuff?" The second criticism was to us most to the point. A story is much more likely to make when the dissolve is employed in this fashion. The excess footage resulting from it must total in big figures. And the question, "Where do they get that stuff?" conveys a whole lot in itself.

Picture Men of Philadelphia

WITH more than 150 of the representatives of the film industry in Philadelphia pledging their support to Mayor Thomas B. Smith in the present national crisis, all of the motion picture houses will be utilized to stir patriotism, aid in home defense and stimulate recruiting.

Every branch of the industry was included in those who met the mayor at City Hall. They asked him to appoint a committee of seven, of which the chairman could be a member of the executive body of the home defense organization.

Both the Philadelphia Exhibitors League and the Stanley Exhibitors Association through their respective presidents, John O'Donnell and Joseph McCready, placed the 104 theatres of the former and 102 of the latter at the disposal of the city.

Many Big Productions Play Baltimore

The big productions are beginning to fall toward Baltimore with the opening of spring. All this week Ford's Opera House, the biggest theatre in Baltimore, has booked Nazimova in War Brides" and Sidney B. Lust, the Selznick man of Washington, has reported that it is going big.

On April 23 Geraldine Farrar will come to the Auditorium in "Joan the Woman," and on May 1 Annette Kellermann in "A Daughter of the Gods." will be shown at the Academy of Music. These will probably be followed by "The Honor System" and "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Co-operate in Patriotic Way

It is proposed to flash patriotic slogans on screens, show films with patriotic plots, have orchestras play patriotic airs, and allow prominent speakers to make patriotic addresses between films from the stages of picture houses.

It is estimated that more than 200,000 daily picture patrons will be reached in this manner throughout Philadelphia alone, and by such methods many more may be reached.

The following committee was appointed:

Chairman, John O'Donnell of Exhibitors League; Secretary, Manager Abe L. Einstein, of Stanley Company; J. D. Clark and Harry Schwalbe for the exchanges; C. H. Goodwin, Exhibitors League; Joseph McCready and Frank W. Balder, of Stanley Division; and Walter G. Murray for the Operators.

Women May Be Called to Canada Censor Boards

At a meeting of the executive of the National Council of Women held last week in Ottawa, a movement was set on foot to have a woman member added to every provincial board of censorship throughout the Dominion. The executive unanimously approved the project, and it has now been referred to the various councils in the different provinces before being urged upon the various provincial governing bodies, which control the appointment of censors.

It has been announced that the Maritime Provinces Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will not oppose the bill recently introduced in the Nova Scotia House of Assembly, providing for the taxation of theatre owners, on a basis of 20 per cent increase. The bill will not be opposed for patriotic reasons.

Former Empress, San Francisco, Now Picture House

The Strand theatre, San Francisco, made its debut as a high class motion picture house with Mary Pickford in her newest Artcraft Picture, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," as the feature attraction, playing to seven thousand people on the opening night.

The Strand was formerly known as the Empress, playing vaudeville and musical comedy productions, and has been overhauled, and newly equipped and so rendered absolutely available for pictures.

Boston Society Sees "Viceroy"

An enthusiastic reception of "The Viceroy of Wakefield" by a gathering of society folks at a special Boston showing has led to arrangements for a run of indefinite length of the Thanhouser feature at the Tremont Temple, that city.

The showing was held under the auspices of the Boston Branch of the Photoplay League.
IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

"The Honor System" to be Sold Territorially

In response to many inquiries, The Fox Film Corporation desires to announce that "The Honor System" will be disposed of on the State rights plan.

A special booking office, in charge of Carey Williams, has been established on the fourth floor of 130 West Forty-sixth street. Only the bookings for New York and New Jersey will be made direct to exhibitors. All others will be sold territorially. Two of these territories have already been sold.

According to William A. Fox, the telegraphic inquiries have been enormous. "There is hardly one of the better class exhibitors in the metropolitan district who is not represented by a telegraphic or mail offer for 'The Honor System,'" said Mr. Fox. "These exhibitors, who by reason of their close proximity to New York are best able to watch the market, have been quick to realize the box office possibilities of the production. They have not only had their own judgment to rely upon, but they have been able to watch the effect of 'The Honor System' upon the 240,000 people who have seen it during its three months' run at the Lyric theatre, Broadway and Forty-second street, New York city."

"The State rights proposals will be handled by Winfield Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, who already has received propositions aggregating $400,000, from some of the best known men in filmdom.

"'The Honor System' received from the New York newspaper and trade press the greatest praise ever accorded a picture. Some of the enthusiastic critics have declared that 'The Honor System' eclipsed 'The Birth of a Nation.' All of them were unsparing in their commendations."

"Birth Control" to Have Early Broadway Showing

"Birth Control" is the title finally decided on for the six reel photoplay which will introduce Mrs. Margaret Sanger, the pioneer birth control crusader, as the principal character in a propaganda subject founded on the theme of her agitation. "Birth Control" was passed by the National Board of Reviews at its headquarters, at 80 Fifth avenue, last week, and the delicate subject was handled in such a way that the censors passed the picture without eliminating a scene.

Under the direction of the Message Photoplay Company, Inc., a B. S. Moss unit, negotiations are now open for exploiting this picture in a Broadway theatre with April 12 set as the opening date. The propaganda also calls for Mrs. Sanger appearing in person, along with the picture, in a lecture on the substance of her convictions and those of the Birth Control Society of which she is a charter member. After the Broadway engagement, Mrs. Sanger and "Birth Control" will make a tour of the country. Arrangements have been made for the co-operation of the Birth Control Leagues of the different states.

Hearing on Guernsey Bill

not be accomplished successfully. There is too much diversity of opinion as to what is good and what is bad. How can any selected members of this proposed State board determine what will hurt the people of Chicago and the whole State. It is an insult to the intelligence of the citizens of the cities and the State."

The others who spoke against the Guernsey bill were: Arthur J. Pegler, representing the Mutual Producing Corporation; Alfred Hamburger, owner of seventeen theatres in Chicago; George L. Reker, an attorney; Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago Motion Picture Exhibitor's League; Maurice Choyinski; Rev. F. G. Dineen and William Heney. Rev. Dineen, while opposed to the State censorship plan advocated the police censorship employed at present.

The hearing was adjourned until Friday, April 6, when the last of the speakers against the Guernsey bill will be heard. Senator Guy Guernsey, the father of the bill, was present both days of the hearing. Whatever will be the decision of the sub-committee, it was palpably shown that they were keenly interested in what the sponsors of the bill had to say, while when it came turn for the opponents of the bill to present their side they were absolutely disinterested and many times discourteous.

Peerless Moves to Larger Quarters

General Manager E. H. Emmick of the Peerless Film Service, with exchanges in Los Angeles and San Francisco, has found the need of larger quarters and has moved the Los Angeles exchange to 802 South Olive street (film row). At this place the Peerless will have four times the space as at their former exchange. A film vault of large capacity and fireproof examining and cleaning rooms are a part of the equipment at the new location. The exchange is very handsomely furnished with attractive private offices for the managers of the several departments. The Peerless has become known as the "House of Comedies," they having a weekly release of Christie, Mutt and Jeff cartoons, E and R Jungle, Katzenjammer Kids and Tweedledum comedies. The new location is a duplication of the furnishings and equipment of the Los Angeles exchange of the Peerless Service, Inc.
McAvoy Buys "Who Knows"
What is believed to be an innovation in film circles was consummated this week when Isadore Bernstein sold rights for his first production of the month for the "Sin Woman" sold abroad to the States of New York and New Jersey for "Who Knows," featuring Betty Brice, before the subject was nearly completed. Negotiations were carried on by wire entirely, and the price asked was paid and transmitted by telegraph, reaching the studio two weeks before the last scene was made. The purchaser is James McAvoy, of 353 East 125th street. He has also taken an option on the coming seven Bernstein productions, the Seven Cardinal Virtues.

"Deemster" Opens in Atlanta
The Arrow Film Corporation's photodrama, "The Deemster," by Hall Caine, opens at the Rialto theatre, Atlanta, Ga., on April 2, at prices ranging from 25 cents to $1.

"Trooper 44" Strongly Endorsed
"Trooper 44," the five-reel feature photodrama, just released by the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation, and for which Jos. R. Miles, No. 220 West Forty-second street, is exclusive sales representative on a state rights basis, has been warmly endorsed by the country's most prominent men, including ex-President Theodore Roosevelt.

The force which Katherine Mayo describes so interestingly, "from the standpoint of sound American citizenship, is so interesting and so valuable, that it should be in every public library and every school library in the land."

"God's Man" Given Professional Showing in New York
More than three thousand invited members of the motion picture and theatrical profession visited the Rialto theatre, New York, Wednesday morning last, to witness the premiere showing of the Frohman Amusement Corporation's production, "God's Man," in which H. B. Warner is starred.

The Frohman Amusement Corporation has received many compliments and gratulations since the showing.

Foremost among these letters and telegrams is the letter received from GeorgeBronson Howard, the author, which reads in part: "I want to get right on record both as author of the book and a director myself by saying that you have set a fast pace for anyone to follow... it was the first time I ever saw subtitles applauded... you have faithfully and generously and ingeniously made my novel live on the screen... the picture has everything which made the critics call the novel 'worthy to stand beside David Copperfield, Vanity Fair... a really great novel (Chicago Post), and the greatest novel ever written by an American (Pittsburg Dispatch)... it should duplicate the novel's success, for, as you know, for many months, 'God's Man' has been the best selling book in New York. I congratulate your corporation and the director, Mr. Irving, and Mr. Kelly, who wrote the scenarios."

Graphic Offers "Woman and Beast"—Clean, Though Strong
A FIVE-PART Graphic Film production, "The Woman and the Beast," characterized by the producers as sensational, though clean and with a same plot, was announced for state right consumption by Graphic Features last week. Marie Shotwell, a star of "Enlighten Thy Daughter," heads the cast, which includes Alphonse Ethier, Fred Eric, J. H. Gilmour and Kathryn Adams. Ernest C. Warde is the producer.

The story, by Emmet Mixx, deals with a timid man—a first-rate pacifist—who took himself a spirited wife. He believed that meekness was more attractive than aggressiveness, she in not turning the other cheek. Their opinions clashed continually. She came to lose respect for him.

One day their little daughter wanders into the woods and is lost; the same day a lion breaks loose from a visiting circus and wanders into the woods.

Here the pacifist himself "breaks loose" and the real story begins. The moral of the play becomes evident: Is a pacifist necessarily a coward?

Showings of the picture are being given to state right buyers daily at the office of Graphic Features, Room 401, 729 Seventh avenue, New York.

A-Kay Cartoon Sells Rapidly

The A-Kay Company, 720 Seventh avenue, New York, reports a lively sale on its initial production, "Twenty Thousand Feet Under the Sea." The picture is being sold on the State rights plan. Its New York run commenced two weeks ago at the Broadway theatre. The title of the second A-Kay comedy will be travesty on a well known screen success and will be announced shortly.

Herman Jans Owns N. J. Rights to "Twenty Thousand Leagues" in New Jersey
It was erroneously stated in course of an article appearing in the April 14 issue of the News that Frank G. Hall held the New Jersey rights to "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." In reality Herman F. Jans of the Modern Film Company purchased and controls the rights to that picture in New Jersey.

"Unwritten Law" at Liberty, Detroit
"The Unwritten Law," controlled in Michigan by J. B. Hunter, is booked for an early attraction at the Liberty theatre, Detroit.
THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THESE are busy days at the Triangle studios in Yonkers, where Allan Alice Brady in widow's weeds will be seen in an approaching World-Picture Brady-Made. This photoplay at 2508 Robert War\Mck ;unl ;i  company Elda Furry, who will be featured of an outdoor stage. The new restaurant is an attractive feature of the plant. Situated in the basement ... ^laff an out-of-door dining room, which commands a, beautiful view of the Hudson and surrounding country.

THAT Roland Bottomley, actor and screen star, is also a dramatist of no mean abilit)' is not known t(» the majority of his admirers, He is the author of two working on "The Great White Trail," which will be the first of the Wharton Super-Feature releases. The company is headed by Doris Kenyon, who is supported by Thomas Holding, Paul Gordon, Hans

Robert, Edgar L. Davenport and Mrs. Charles Willard. The interior scenes are being taken at the studios at Ithaca, and Director Leo D. Wharton expects to finish the studio work within the next four weeks.

A two-reel comedy entitled "Below Zero" has just been completed at the studios and will be released at the same time as the first feature.

ART is going to be uplifted by the screen. Brooklyn, which is the butt of many uncomplimentary remarks, is proud. For Clarence F. Underwood, illustrator, announced he has found the perfect model in the person of Shirley Mason.

Mr. Underwood first saw Miss Mason in a picture. It merely took him a little time to meet her in person, and as a consequence a number of magazine covers will later have likenesses of the photoplay star.

THEDA BARA, leading light of the Fox constellation, returned last week from St. Augustine, Fla., after a two months stay. Special Pullmans brought the entire company of forty to New York City. Director J. Gordon Edwards screened two super de luxe pictures, starring Miss Bara while in the Southland.

FOR more than a week, in fact since the local Naval Militia were called out on active duty, the "Gladys Leslie Coffee Station" has been running at the Long Island entrance to Queensboro Bridge, New York.

It was Miss Leslie's own idea, and represents her "duty" as she feels it, in as much as she is not able, like her brother, to answer the call.

Miss Leslie would like to see the wives and mothers of the boys organize coffee stations for them on a systematic basis, that is, a stand wherever a detachment is on duty. She is assembling some of the others' wives for this purpose, and hopes to make the organization a fact within a short time.

LEAH BAIRD has come out with a few kind words in which Ivan Abramson, her director is described as "The Abraham Lincoln of Directors." He says that Mr. Abramson is at all times so careful of the feelings of others, so thoroughly human, democratic and kind that from the first day of his acquaintance with him she has been impressed with the above thought.

Mr. Abramson first became attracted to Miss Baird, through being struck by the remarkable beauty shown in a photograph which mentioned no names and which gave him no inkling that it was the famous motion picture star, due to an unfamiliar pose and draping, in addition to a peculiar lighting effect. He insisted that his agent not rest until he had found the original of the art picture, having no idea she would be found.

LIBERAL recruiting from stage ranks was done to fill "Fatty" Arbuckle's company. Among those who deserted the speaking stage for the silent drama are Lou Anger, erstwhile vaudeville monologist and German comedian, Herbert Warren, leading man in many productions, and William Jefferson, son of Joseph Jefferson of "Rip Van Winkle" fame.

GRANDMOTHER and grandson will be seen in the support of the little Metro star, Viola Dana, in her next two pictures. In God's Law and Man's," a picture version of Paul Trent's novel, "A Wife by Purchase," will appear Mrs. Adele Clarke, and in "Lady Barnacle," a picturization of Edgar Bronson's story of the same name, will be her grandson, Fred C. Jones, who has already appeared in a number of Metro productions.

Mrs. Clarke is 73 years old, and has spent a lifetime on the stage. She is the mother of the well known actor, Harry Close Clarke, who with his wife, Margaret Dale Owen, is at present playing abroad.

Fred Jones, Mrs. Clarke's grandson, has been seen in "A Wife by Proxy," "Threads of Fate," and "The Flower of No Man's Land."
WITH the change of the Triangle West Coast productions to the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, several of the players who have been with the Fine Arts will in the future appear in Ince-Kay-Bee Pictures. Already Besie Love, Alma Rubens, Mildred Harris, Kenneth Harlan and little George Stone are at work at the Ince-Culver City studios. Paul Powell is to be added to the directorial staff of the Ince Studios as soon as he completes his present picture.

With the announcement of the change of the players to the Culver City Studio comes the statement from Mr. Ince himself, that on the week of May 20, the Triangle will introduce an innovation releasing two Ince subjects that week. Dorothy Dalton will be starred in the Lambert Hillyer story, "Unfaithful," and William Desmond is the featured player of "The Marriage Bubble," adapted from the W. Carey Wonderly comedy, "One Week." Proctor Ince looks upon this innovation as an experiment which will show the manufacturers the attitude of the public and exhibitors toward his productions. He states definitely that the plans contemplated the double release of his pictures for the one week only, at least at the present.

With the William S. Hart contract consummated and the well-known Western actor to continue under the Ince banner for two years, Mr. Ince has made an important purchase of stories suitable for Mr. Hart. These are from the pen of the well-known writer, Buck Comnors, which are founded upon incidents in his life of adventure when he was a Texas ranger in which capacity he served for a number of years. In all, ten of Mr. Comnors' stories were bought by Ince, and the first of these is now being prepared for production. In each instance the principal character is of a type that will suit Mr. Hart, and it is believed will add to his popularity in the future.

THE first story has been prepared for Olive Thomas, who recently was added to the Ince list of stars. R. Cecil Smith is the author of this which is described by Mr. Ince as being a good humored satire carrying throughout a spirit of carefree youth. Miss Thomas is spoken of by Harrison Fisher as the most beautifiil girl in America, and Mr. Ince anticipates she will leap into instant popularity. And now that the winter or rainy season is over, the Ince scenario department has assigned Director Charles Miller to the filming of an Alaskan story with an atmosphere of the early days. Dorothy Dalton is to be starred in this, which was written by Monte M. Katterjohn. Melbourne McDowell has been selected as leading man, and another member of the cast will be Josephine Hedley.

Charles Ray and Victor Schertzinger this week took up the third Ray subject to be put in production since the first of the year. Marjorie Wilson is to play opposite Ray, and Howard Hickman and Frank Fanning are included in the cast.

The new enclosed stage at Ince Culver City studios was completed this week, and is now in use. The new one is larger than the ones built formerly, this being 50 x 200 feet in size.

KENNETH A. OHARA has left the Ince Studio, where for three years he has served as manager of the publicity department. Mr. O'Hara has established a record for retaining a publicity position on the West Coast, his length of service with Mr. Ince being longer than the record of any other publicity manager. He created the publicity department, prepared all the publicity matter from the studio for Kay-Bee-Triangle and previous releases, as well as writing practically all of "Civilization." His recent accomplishment was the thirty-thousand word life of Thomas H. Ince written for Motion Picture Magazine. His expert work for the Ince Studio won for him words of praise from all film publications in the country, and he is now considering several offers which will prove a marked advancement from his former position. Harold P. Keeler, who for six months has been Mr. O'Hara's assistant, has been promoted to the position made vacant by O'Hara's leaving. The new manager has had a wide newspaper and press-agentry experience.

WILLIAM DUNCAN and a company of Vitagraph players including Carol Halloway, leading woman, are home from Kernville, where a number of scenes were made for a serial now in production. The company found excellent location near the Kern River, and secured scenes of the many rapids in that vicinity.

Upon the completion of the present William Wellman Vitagraph subject which has Mary Anderson and Antonio Moreno as leads, Mr. Moreno is to be transferred to the Eastern studio. He will be succeeded at the Hollywood plant by Harry Morey, who is to come West in April. Director Wellcut is now filming "The Lady Sheriff." A baseball picture is being made by the Big V Comedy Company, under the direction of Lawrence Semon. Those playing the leading parts are: James Aubrey, Dorothy Armstrong and Edward Dunn. Earl Montgomery, member of the comedy troupe, is suffering from three fractured ribs as the result of an automobile accident recently.

Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company, who was taken ill recently while en route to Los Angeles, has sufficiently recovered to resume his trip, and arrived in the motion picture filming center the latter part of this week.

FIRE caused by cross-power wires completely destroyed the studio of the Nevada Film Company, Saturday, March 24, causing a loss estimated at $25,000 by General Manager Harry Drum. While the destroyed buildings were still blazing, the management received an invitation from Isadore Bernstein to complete the picture now in production, "The Planter," at his new studio, and the invitation was accepted. Mr. Bernstein offered them all the facilities of his convenient plant, with the result that by the following morning, sets were up ready for the company to continue work. In two days' time a large three-room interior, needed for the New England ballroom scenes was ready. With these were being prepared, General Manager Drum secured duplication of costumes, and the company will not be delayed for any material length of time because of the disastrous fire.

J. P. MCgowan has the seventh chapter of the Railroad Raiders, "Mistaken Identity," completed, and is now at work on the eighth release which will require the most hazardous stunt Helen Holmes has accomplished to this time. She will ride an automobile off a pier, leap a gap of twenty feet, and alight on the deck of an outgoing ship. There will be no rehearsal of this scene. In the episode just finished, a number of night light effects will add materially to the photographic beauty of the subject. Many of the scenes are laid about a brightly lighted lawn fete in the center of which is a fountain lighted by a great quantity of electric bulbs. At the Signal Studio this is regarded as the most beautiful scene coming from this plant. The company is to leave shortly for Nevada, where the final episodes of the serial will be filmed.

Fire in the stables of the Signal Studio this week caused a small damage to the building and the lives of two horses. Fortunately it was discovered by Tom Lingiam and Leo Maloney, and extinguished before material damage was done.

Al. E. Christie this week engaged Margaret Gibson, former leading woman for Ince, Biograph, Horrory, Universal, and Fox, to play leads in coming releases, and she is now being featured in "The Milky Way," her first Christie comedy. Supporting in this are: Neal Burns, Ethel Lynn, Harry Rattenberry and Stella Adams.

Another film in which Miss Gibson is to be featured is titled "With the Mummy's Help." This will have the atmosphere of the Nile, with Eddie Barry as the principal support.

An out-of-the-ordinary set occupies a prominent position on one of the Lasky stages this week. It is being used by George Melville in a scenario in which Sue Hayakawa and Carmen Phillips were to go out to sea, pull a plug from the bottom of the boat and drown.

The Lasky Company was this week forced to buy an ocean-going launch as they could find no Los Angeles dealer who would lease them a boat. The particular scene was needed for a subject being made by Director Robert Thorsby, in which Sue Hayakawa and Carmen Phillips were to go out to sea, pull a plug from the bottom of the boat and drown.

The new building for the Lasky scenario department is nearing completion, and will be ready for occupancy within the next few days. To assure better service and prevent interference of the muse, the building will have sound-proof walls throughout and every writer will have his separate compartment.

Wallace Reid and Myrtle Stedman are to be co-starring at the Morosco Studio under the direction of William D. Taylor, and Kathlyn Williams is this week working at the Lasky Studios.

The first subject of the Arizona Film Company, which has its offices in Chicago and has produced at the old Biograph Studio in Los Angeles for the past two months, has been completed. The story has not been named up to this time, but is spoken of as being based on information given by the Illinois Senate Vice Committee reports. The film was made under the direction of George Seigmann, and the supervision of former Lieutenant Governor Barrett O'Hara, of Illinois, for the Society for Preservation of American Homes, of which Mr. O'Hara is president. The film has a cast composed of well-known players of the Los Angeles colony, including Gene Gening, Lula McGregor, Billie West, Alice Wilson, Ruth King, Norbert Myles, James Harrison, Webster Dill, Andrew Arbuckle, and others. The scenario for this subject was written by Roy Somerville. Harry Rice will be in charge of distribution of the picture, which is first to be shown in New York City, if the present plans of the organization are carried out. The Arizona Company has offices at 6 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

Roy Somerville, who has been on the Coast associated with the Fine Arts scenario writers, left this week for New York, where he will become a member with the Eastern Fox scenario department. On the Coast, it is reported, the Fox organization has recently added a number of new people, including Frederick Arnold Kummer, George Bronson Howard, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, in addition to Roy Somerville and Hettie Grey Baker, who has been in charge of subtitle writing.

Don Meaney, who has been in the East for the past three weeks, arrived in Los Angeles this week after a trip across the continent. While in New York, Mr. Meaney made arrangements with Chamberlain Brown, and in the future the New York and Los Angeles publicity agencies will be affiliated. Mr. Meaney will also act as representative for the Illinois Lithograph Company of Chicago.

The Bad Little Good Boy" is an L-Ko comedy nearing completion this week, under the direction of Vim Moore. Phil Dunham is the featured comedian of this slapstick, which has a number of railroad thrills, one being the destruction of a Santa Fe condemned station by a train running through it.

Alice Howell, Director General Jack Blystone and a company of L-Ko players, are working in the making of a circus picture.

Bob McKenzie, who was formerly affiliated with the Essanay at Niles, has been added to the L-Ko directorial staff, and will make comedies in which he takes the featured comedian part.

A number of minor accidents are reported from this comedy foundry. Bob McKenzie drove a Ford through a frame house and seriously injured Bessie Brewster, member of the cast, who was watching the action.

W. E. Keefe, who has served as publicity writer at Fine Arts Studio in connection with serving as personal representative and business manager for D. W. Griffith, this week tendered his resignation to the Majestic Company, and is leaving shortly for the East, where he will continue his work for Mr. Griffith, for the present in working with exhibitors and exchange men against undesirable legislation. Keefe has had a wide experience in fighting censorship in San Francisco, Utah, Arizona, Colorado, and other states, in connection with the making of "The Birth of a Nation" and since that time. During Mr. Griffith's absence in Europe he will handle matters pertaining to "Intolerance." Keefe first joined Mr. Griffith when the Majestic Studio was opened here, and has served continuously since that time. He was the first publicity writer at any of the Coast studios, and for the past nine months has been in charge of Fine Arts Studio in addition to his work for Mr. Griffith.

W. E. Fox has made a long-term contract with Tom Mix for making of Western comedies, and this week Mr. Mix organized his company to start work at a specially constructed Western town, which will serve as a studio. The players selected for the Mix company are: Victor Potel, Pat...

As a result of the stirrup strap breaking while the actress rode down a steep incline. Miss Hart was rushed to the hospital, where she regained consciousness, and two hours later insisted on finishing the scenes in which she took part, because she feared she would not be able to work for several days after reaction from the fall.

Director McRae is now completing the fourth subject, "In African Wilds." A majority of the scenes for this being taken at the Universal Studios, Hollywood, all week and an 18-months-old baby play the most important parts in this picture.

Lynn Reynolds and his company, including Myrtle Gonzales, Geo. Hernandez and Jean Lea, have gone to Santa Cruz Island, where they will spend a week on an out-of-door picture now being made.

"God's Man"

(Frohman Amusement—Nine Paris)
REVIEWS BY PETER MILNE

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation's picturization of George Bronson Howard's long and powerful novel of New York's darker side stands as the most intense and dramatic picture of extra evils of both recent and distant date. To Mr. Howard New York was indeed a city of blasted ambitions, unfilled hopes and broken hearts. Arnold L'Hommedieu and his two companions who set out in life with rosy ideals and a spirit of optimism find the smallest of their lofty conceptions unattainable. In one episode after another they are crushed under the heel of either politics or vice. Mr. Howard may be ultra pessimistic at times, but analyzed, his novel runs along logically and so convinces.

The author has dealt intimately with the underworld of the city—with the drug traffic, the private lives of the apparently superficial denizens of Broadway cafes, with the hypocrisy of supposedly respectable leaders of society—and has spared nobody's feelings. And the detail with which he has embellished various incidents of his work sheds something of an irresistible glamour over the whole. One becomes absorbed in the struggle of the three boys, and despairs at their failures as if he were an invisible member of the trio. To balance the dramatic details, to ultimately save them from becoming depressing, there are two comedy characters that punctuate the action with many a laugh. It is real human comedy relief that never fails to strike a responsive chord.

Anthony P. Kelly, who adapted Mr. Howard's book for the screen, did excellently. A smooth running, well-balanced piece of continuity he produced from a novel which was nice in characterization and rich in stirring incident, but which was discontinuous and episodic to the point of being meandering. One almost marvels at the manner in which Mr. Kelly has introduced his characters—there are so many of them and he has avoided confusion so deftly.

George Irving, in directing, has given of his usual sterling work. The production never lacks reality, and in many scenes where others might have offended by excess boldness he has merely though clearly, suggested by his art. His was a happy thought also, in making the character of Hugo Waldemar comical in the opening scenes of the picture. Such intelligent casting deserves special praise. In the detail of his work Mr. Irving has excelled. Of note is his work with all his groups. The rain scenes are realistic. The varied tints of the film in the cabaret scene bespeak of a close attention to detail.

H. B. Warner in the stellar role is excellent. His ability to portray the suffering of a man groping for the solution of just why the city treated him unjustly is remarkable. His performance is full of appeal—he has caught the true spirit of the part. Edward Earle as Archie, and Walter Hiers as Hugo, were happy choices also. The former is natural to a degree, and plays his several big scenes with feeling, while the latter, his excess weight standing him in good stead as usual, is responsible for plenty of comedy. Barbara Castleton, Barbara Gilroy, Betty Bellairs, Jean Stuart, William Frederics and Jack Sterrill are well cast and contribute work which merits individual praise.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Arnold L'Hommedieu (H. B. Warner), together with his chum, Archie (Edward Earle), and Hugo (Walter Hiers) is expelled from college on a false accusation of gambling, brought on by his defense of another student who was cheated by a bookmaker. The boys go to the city to work. Arnold becomes a reporter, but loses his position when he refuses to turn in a story exposing the character of Hugo's father, Waldemar (William Frederics), a dealer in opium. Thus another good deed has worked him harm. He sinks lower in life, and becomes familiar with various underworld characters before he finally decides to banish his conscience and work for mammon alone. But Archie, gone deeply in debt through the extravagances of his fiancee; and Hugo, penniless because the show for which he was engaged goes broke, come to him for financial assistance. He conceives the idea of contracting to import a shipment of opium in time for its arrival. The day for its arrival is at hand. Archie in a nervous state from use of the drug is frantic. Detectives have been warned of the affair, and with Waldemar they approach the cabin in which the others are waiting. Fearful to the point of insanity Archie shoots and kills Waldemar. Hugo is shot in attempting to escape. Arnold successfully evades the detectives, and takes refuge in the cabin of an old philosopher. He tells him to face the law and serve his term, and that then he will be more worthy the name L'Hommedieu, which means God's Man, than any one of his more virtuous ancestors.

"Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation"

(Greater Vitagraph—Seven Reels)
REVIEWS BY PETER MILNE

We don't believe that J. Stuart Blackton meant "Womanhood" to be a regular form of dramatic entertainment. It is distinctly propaganda—a call to arms, a stimulus for preparation that will in no wise go amiss. In his picture here he shows New York City out of America's hands and in the grip of the invaders; a spectacle which, however possible, refuses to convince perhaps because we have become saturated with a more or less substantial idea of our country's invulnerability. But after words when the producer preaches preparedness to make such a probability utterly impossible, the audience is with him first and last. In other words Mr. Blackton's picture has a better effect than it has cause.

In a review of the picture it would be an injustice to overlook its timeliness. It was first shown on Sunday, April 1, and even now it made a great hit. Today and tomorrow it is even better, and its value will increase with time. And so commercially it appears to be a picture that will soon rank among the super-productive features.

We said that "Womanhood" was not a regular form of dramatic entertainment with some hesitation. Anything that deals with the American flag, patriotism, and Theodore Roosevelt is bound to be more or less emotionally inspiring, even thrilling. Anything that shows a woman being shot down in the street by the...

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

firing squad of the invaders is bound to make men, women and children rise up and demand a 42 centimeter on every corner. But Mr. Blackton’s preachments in behalf of preparedness have quite eclipsed his story and he had the nucleus of a fine drama. There is a certain continuity, and there are hints of extreme pathos such as the meeting of the sweetshearts after the boy’s face has been disfigured and after the boy has lost his eyesight and there are immense panoramas of fighting men, with mine explosions, and the hurling of gas bombs as indicative that no expense was spared in bringing them up-to-date. But the story runs amuck. Characters are picked up and dropped at will, and the sight of the American leader bearding the invading general in his headquarters in the Woolworth Building is more amusing than thrilling. Of course, Mr. Blackton puts his picture out for a purpose, and, inasmuch as he accomplishes it, one can forgive the sub-ordination of technique to patriotic fervor.

The cast headed by Alice Joyce and Harry Morey does good work throughout. The mobs which appear don’t create as realistic an impression as the trained soldiers. The silhouettes of the ships accomplishing by trickery is so perfect in illusion that it might have been actually done.

Mr. Blackton was assisted in the story by Cyrus Townsend Brady, and in the direction by William P. S. Earle. Albert J. Olsen edited the picture. The military advisor was Captain George W. Johnston, C. A. C. N. Y.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Traveling in Europe Mary Ward (Alice Joyce) meets Count Dario (Walter McGrail), of Ruritania, who falls in love with her. She promises to give him an answer later. Returning to America by way of the Philippines, Mary meets Strong (Harry Morey), United States representative there. Here she learns that her mother and younger sister have been killed in an air raid over the United States. She and Strong return together. Mary’s brother Philip (James Morrison) has been in the service, and has been blinded. His fiancee (Peggy Hyland) acting as a nurse has been scaring about the face. The invading army is headed by Marshal Prince Dario (Joseph Kilgour) and his son the Count. Mary gains their confidence, and enters their ranks as an American spy. Strong is made master of energies of the country, and tours it, arousing that portion of the states not under the head of the invader to action. His sister (Naomi Childers) dressed as Joan of Arc and carrying the flag is brought out to inspire the public. She does such a tremendous good that Prince Dario captures her and has her shot in public. But finally. Strong’s enticing efforts bear fruit. An army is raised, and after battles on land and sea the Ruritanians are driven out.

Mary Maurice, Templar Saxe, Edward Elkas, Bobby Connelly, Bernard Siegel and John Costello have parts of importance.

“The Manx-Man” (Cosmofotofilm—Running Time Two Hours) REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

In “The Manx-Man,” the producing company clearly demonstrates its ability to rank with the best. The story is adapted from Hair Caine’s novel of the same name, and the Isle of Man is a veritable garden of plots. Its Deemsters and its Tynwald Hill and the Isle itself, with its various local traditions, are prominent in “The Manx-Man” as they are in “The Deemster”. There is, however, no comparison between the two pictures other than their location. Caine’s story contains one of the most sympathetic characters in the person of Pete as played by Fred Groves, that ever the screen has reflected. Mr. Groves’ Pete can be likened to Mitchell Lewis’ Poleon Doret in “The Barrier.” Mr. Groves is a fine type for the part and has played it wonderfully well. He brings out the best in the character. Mr. Groves has an admirable foil in many of his scenes in the person of the best behaving baby that the writer has ever seen. The baby never cries when he is supposed to laugh, and the same cannot be said of the majority of infants who brave the glare of the studio lights.

Elisabeth Risdon as Kate gives a brilliant performance, too. Here is another difficult role taxing her versatility to an unusual degree, but the actress rises to every occasion delightfully. Henry Ainley as Philip completes the stellar trio with a performance characterized by a weakness that never detracts from his character’s significance. The principal supporting roles are adequately played.

George Loane Tucker in the production of “The Manx-Man” has achieved a distinct triumph. The exteriors taken on the Isle of Man itself are rich in atmosphere. The few spectacular scenes which are introduced when the action shifts to the court at Tynwald Hill are handled realistically and with due regard to their dramatic value. The double exposure work is without a doubt the best ever done. It is employed to introduce a vision of Philip’s and is truly visionary to the last degree. In fact, G. L. T., as he calls himself on the leader, has rightly earned Mr. Caine’s praise which the latter has duly given him.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Both Philip (Henry Ainley), grandson of the Deemster, and Pete (Fred Groves), his illegitimate cousin, are in love with Kate (Elisabeth Risdon), daughter of the keeper of the public house. Philip keeps his love a secret out of consideration for his cousin. When Pete goes to Africa and is reported killed, Philip asserts his love for Kate and discovers that his advances are more than equitably returned. He betrays Kate and promises to marry her. But then his ambition to become Deemster and later governor of the Isle intervenes. Pete’s unexpected return is welcomed by Philip, as then, under the guise of selflessness, he leaves Kate to him. Kate marries Pete, still loving Philip.

A child is born and it is the joy of the husband’s heart. After a time Kate deserts him, and for a time lives with Philip. But she, in her high position of Deemster of the isle, is unable to bear the strain, and later, when the governorship is offered him, he confesses his guilt. The blow breaks Pete’s heart, but still loving Kate, he divorces her and goes away that she and Philip may be happy together.

Christie Comedies

(“Hubby’s Night Out”—One Reel. “His Flirting Ways”—One Reel. “Kidding Sister”—One Reel) REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

The latest shipment of Christie comedies discloses two one-reelers of a quality somewhat above the average and a fairly diverting number, “His Flirting Ways,” as the remaining member of the trio.

“Hubby’s Night Out,” a comedy by C. A. Frambers, is based on the familiar story of a stay-at-home husband being reformed by his pretty wife. The complications introduced are in some respects amusingly original and afford the players many opportunities for comedy work. Betty Comson appears at her prettiest and best as the wife, while Neal Burns is a sufficiently comical husband. Eddie Harey gets in some good character work, while Stella Adams and Joe Jansenke are also in the cast. "His Flirting Ways," the fair number of the lot, was written by Walter Graham and shows the husband cured of flirting through the efforts of his wife's friend. Some of the opportunities have not been seized upon in the best comedy style, although the reel offers a number of laughs and not a few smiles. Billie Rhodes, Neal Burns and Ethel Lynne are the principals.

"Kidding Sister" gives Billie Rhodes a chance to dress up as a little girl, in which role she does some very clever work. Short dresses and hair ribbons are inflicted on her by an older sister, who wants to marry a certain young man. But it doesn't take him long to penetrate the deception, and the kidded sister turns out to be the kidder in the end. This is decidedly the best of the trio and is certain to amuse. Harry Ham, Ethel Lynne and Stella Adams are in Miss Rhodes' support. Walter Graham is the author.

"The School for Husbands"
(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

This picturization of Stanislav Stanege's play, adapted by Harvey Thew, is sure to appeal to Fanny Ward's large following and especially to the women folk. The idea of the "school" for husbands is carried through the whole plot, and a number of clever touches are given the story in its adaptation to pictures. It is not made as clear and plain as it should be that the husband's fascination for better dressed women than his wife does not amount to serious impractical relations, until the story is nearly half over, but the subject is by no means an easy one to handle without resorting to some expository explanations.

The admixture of comedy and serious plot makes it difficult to draw a division between them, without the help of spoken lines. Miss Ward's exaggerated homeliness before, and fascinating beauty after she has received the "hunch" to dress up, could not be in greater contrast. And the wonderful raiment procured for the beautifying process should be the talk of the ladies in the audience for weeks after.

Frank Elliott as Sir Harry Lovell is the hit of the piece among the character artists. The whole support was excellent.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS
Betty Manners (Fanny Ward) is the exact opposite of her husband, who cannot appreciate her willingness to economize, but thinks she should dress up and look pretty. Mrs. Airlie (Mabel Van Buren), and other women of their society set.

When the crash comes, and he loses all but his fine California estate in stocks, he does not know that in the mean time his wife has inherited over a million dollars. Sir Harry Lovell (Frank Elliott) brings her the glad news and suggests that she teach her husband a lesson by beating the rival Mrs. Airlie at her own game. She does so, in the mean time purchasing the family estate and presenting it to her husband after he has had a very thorough and practical lesson in financial conservation.

"An Old Fashioned Young Man"
(Triangle—Fine Arts—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

We liked this story, and we think most audiences will find it good entertainment, although Frank E. Woods has expected us to overlook some great improbabilities in the story, which, as most stories do, on chance to bring everything out just right at the psychological moment.

That a telegram should be returned to the sender as undeliverable, when a personal visit to the address secures instantly the new address of the party is one instance. And considering the actual book itself (a record in a doctor's diary) as the only possible proof of simple facts that were known to be true, and making no attempt to make the proof in any other way when the villain has stolen the book is inexcusably crude. But average audiences are not bothered by improbability nowadays, or we would not have the picture fans we do, and so we credit this as a very good production.

Thomas Jefferson as the father, Robert Harron as the boy, Loyola O'Connor as the mother, and Colleen Moore as the adopted daughter are the principal characters, and they do their work well. The boy, ready to fight for the weaker sex at the drop of the hat, because he has been brought up in the "old-fashioned" conception of respect for the feminine, the pleasing chivalry of good manners in the "past," is a unique conception. The contrast of the modern office boy, with his feet on the mahogany desk in the reception room of the senator, is not so far-fetched, as we all know.

This play is acceptable as furnishing lively action and good dramatic finish. It measures above average, but hardly reaches the heights of exceptional production.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS
Reared by his father in the "old school," of chivalry and handi-ness with his fists, Frank Trent (Robert Harron), through a chain of circumstances finds himself the champion of Mrs. James Burke (Loyola O'Connor), woman candidate for mayor of Los Angeles. Also, he is much in love with her adopted daughter, Margaret (Colleen Moore).

An old friend of his father, Senator Briggs (Wilbur Higby), gets him his first job with the rival faction against Mrs. Burke, which is led by Harold King (Sam De Grasse). King steals a letter written years before to Mrs. Burke by Mr. Burke (Thomas Jefferson), denouncing her as the mother of a child she in reality had only adopted.

Frank seeks the doctor who can prove the adoption to be legitimate. He also writes his father of his mission. When he returns without proof he finds his father with Mrs. Burke. Frank's father is in reality Mr. Burke, who still believes his wife to be unfaithful, and the girl Frank loves to be Frank's half-sister. Frank, in desperation, accidentally runs across the man who stole the evidence, and all is made right.

"The Hunting of the Hawk"
(Astra-Pathe—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

That type of crook-detective story which in play form is at present finding vast popularity on Broadway is presented in picture form.

"The Hunting of the Hawk." In sheer entertainment value it is one of the best features the writer has seen this year. From every angle it far eclipses the ordinary program feature, and some of the so-called "specials" are dwarfed beside it. George B. Seitz is the author, and all the tricks of producing a maximum amount of suspense at a minimum of waste action which he has accumulated through serial writing he has incorporated in the picture.

The production tendered it by George Fitzmaurice is of the highest grade. Here is a director who never fails, it seems. His ability to inject realism into his productions is perhaps his outstanding one. The atmosphere of his pictures is perfect, whether high or low. William Courtenay is featured in a role to which he is no stranger, that of a detective who is thought by the other characters and audience alike to be a crook. He carries the part excellently. Marguerite Snow makes an appealing heroine, and Robert Clurston does fine work as the heavy. "The Hunting of the Hawk" is indeed a feature that has no faults perceptible even to the eye of the reviewer.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Desselway (William Courtenay), a gentleman of leisure, falls in love with Diana Curran (Marguerite Snow) on their return trip from Europe. Diana's past, however, robs her of present happiness. It is revealed that she is the wife of a notorious criminal, Wrenshaw (Robert Clurston), whom she married in the belief that he was honest; and she also is under the delusion that she has killed a man. Arrived in America, Desselway is invited to a house party given by a family to whom Diana serves as social secretary. Here comes Wrenshaw in the guise of an Indian prince and carries her to the palace to save her from who capture the palace. "Her Greatest Love" is a screen star of first magnitude. We must confess, however, that this is the first play with this star that we have seen which made us feel the vampire roles were not necessary to bring out her fullest powers. It is one thing to be versatile and to creditably enact almost any role; it is far more to make the part of the most innocent girl seem absolutely real after accustomed one's clientele to expect and look for just the opposite. We felt sure the innocent child was to learn the wicked ways of the world and demonstrate once more the other side of herself, and she comes out of the demonstration with one hundred per cent credit.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

A sweet, innocent girl, Vere Herbert (Theda Bara), falls in love with Lucien Correze (Harry Hilliard), an opera singer, who very much dislikes the fast social set among which he finds his patronesses. Vere has been sent to her mother, who is openly living with Lord Jura (Glen White), and finds herself very much out of place in the fast company. Lady Dolly (Marie Doro), lies to Vere, who marries the degenerate Prince Zouroff (Walter Law), as she supposes, to save her father's honor. After the ceremony Vere leads a wretched life, finally culminating in her discovery of the mother's lie, and she and her nurse (Alice Gale) choose exile in Siberia to the indignity of living under the same roof with the prince and his consort, Jeanne De Soisson (Caille Torrez).
In Siberia Lucien and Lord Jura discover her, and a tense scene ensues, with a duel between the prince and Jura, in which both are killed, leaving Lucien and Vere free to begin life anew.

"Forget-Me-Not"
(World Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

KITTY GORDON is featured in "Forget-Me-Not" and Montagu Love is prominent in her support. We think Mr. Love might have been featured. He plays three parts and dies twice, which creates something of an epoch. "Forget-Me-Not" is too full of incident to be always dramatic. There is quite a bit of confusion resulting from the many parallel plots introduced. Sufficient stress is never laid on any single one of them to bring out its full value.

The Wedding Feast

Miss Gordon's part is that sort generally referred to as "vampire." The character itself is somewhat artificial, due partly to the author's definition of it perhaps, and partly because Miss Gordon's expressions never reveal any deep emotions. Her love, her revenge and her supreme cattishness never penetrate below the surface. Mr. Love contributes three very good performances. But casting him in three roles was unfortunate. His first part might easily have been taken by another actor. As it is, the idea of three men looking alike is unconvincing.

Part of the action is supposedly on the Isle of Corsica. The atmosphere procured for these scenes is very fine; indeed. In fact the photography is not always up to standard.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS
Stefanie Paoli (Kitty Gordon) jilts her sweetheart, Gabriel (Montagu Love) to marry Marquis de Mohrivart (Alex Francis). Despondent Gabriel takes his life. The Marquis runs a gambling house in Paris and years later Stefanie is its mistress. Her son studies in England. Benedetto (Montagu Love), Gabriel's brother seeks out Stefanie for revenge. In an attempt to kill her he stabs the Marquis and is sent to jail. Meanwhile for some reason or other Stefanie has refused to recognize the marriage of her son to Rose Verney (Norma Phillips). He dies from the shock of her stand. Later Stefanie thrusts herself on the Verney family in order to obtain a foothold in society. Sir Horace Welby (George MacQuarrie), an old admirer of Stefanie's now engaged to Alice Verney (Lillian Herbert) gets rid of her by finding a man of marked resemblance to Benedetto and prey on her fear of the man, who is in reality dead.

"Builders of Castles"
(Edison-K-E-S-E—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE F. WORTS

REPRESSION and lots of it is the particular reason why "Builders of Castles" leaves the impression that it is a different type of film. This applies not only to the characters but to the story. It moves along with suspense which is at times imperceptible. The most notable achievement of the piece is the casting, which is excellent. But the parts are so subdued that none stands out more vividly than another, with the possible exception of Marc McDermott, whose sardonic grin, as the villain, still lingers unpleasantly.

"Builders of Castles" was filmed several years ago, in the days when repression was thought to be the best thing, and it will appeal to many audiences. Nowadays, plots move more quickly.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS
Gittens (Marc McDermott) hatches a realty swindle which ensnares many unwary persons who believe that his company will make their dreams of self-owned homes come true. When the concern blows up Morton (William Wadsworth), his business partner, is suspected of decamping with the funds. One of the victims is Marie (Miriam Nesbitt) who is the fiancee of a minister (Edward Longman). Marie becomes Gittens' mistress, from press of circumstances, but exposes his double dealings to the police, and is restored to the arms of the minister. A leading figure of the play is "The Servant," a Christ-like character (Robert Brower).

"The Cost of Hatred"
(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

This play is both artistic and dramatic from start to finish. Seldom has a finer touch been given a play or picture than the terse retort of the woman whose mother he had married, than the retort of the daughter, which is the final punch in the play.

"Perhaps she saw in you what I have now seen," said the girl, and left the startled and beaten villain to finish his life of hate alone.

Theodore Roberts in this play returns to the villainous sort of roles which have made him famous. Kathryn Williams appears as both the mother and daughter, and her portrayal of these roles is perfect in our judgment.

Tom Forman, as the son of the man who was held responsible by Justus Graves for the loss of his wife's affections, had a most difficult part. Humbled and lashed by the cruel Justus, he scarcely had the appearance or character of a hero, and we can believe that sympathy stimulated the love of the girl, and the unkempt growth of beard, which appeared not to be "make-up," would indicate that he had lived the part seriously for many weeks. for Robert Amory (J. W. Johnston). Justus shoots at Amory and thinks he has killed him. Amory, a widower, marries Elsie after Justus has fled the country with the little daughter, Sarita (also later Kathlyn Williams).

On the road, Amory's son, Ned, in Mexico gets into trouble with the authorities, and falls into the power of a crook. Recognizing the son of the man he most hates in the world, Justus's schemes are so abhorrent that Sarita cannot bear to live with her father, but freeing Ned from the room in which he is locked they leave together and are married. Pursuing them Justus demands her return home, when she says no, the cruelly that drove her mother away has driven her too. Sin is the cost of hatred.

THE MYSERY OF THE DOUBLE CROS

(Pathe—Sixth Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

The identity of the Masked Stranger continues to baffle even the closest observer in this, the sixth, episode, "The Dead Come Back." The mystery surrounding this character of the story is without doubt the outstanding feature of the serial. Peter Hale again attempts to learn his identity, but to no avail.

STORY AND PLAYERS

Phillips (Mollie King) tells Peter Hale (Leon Bary) that she loves him, and calls upon him to help her reform certain papers pertaining to the mystery surrounding her birth that Beatley (Ralph Stuart) has stolen. Beatley desires further papers belonging to Phillips's father, and opening his safe, is about to make away with the case when the Masked Stranger intervenes. Brewer comes in and Beatley informatively tells him that he has discovered the Stranger at the safe. A policeman is called and takes the mysterious person away. A distance from the house the policeman removes his disguise and reveals himself as Peter Hale. He asks the Masked Stranger's identity, but receives no satisfaction.

"High Play"

(The American—Mutual—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

"HIGH PLAY" well merits its name, for the high spots in the game are aimed at by a backhand. The former three loses, while the last mentioned quiffs the game a winner.

The play throughout carries remarkable punch, its interest is well sustained, and the several tense dramatic situations are thrilling to a degree, and the climax is worked up to gradually, though so wonderfully as to leave not a weak spot in the whole structure.

The photography of the interiors of the bank, the gambling house and the fashionable club are all natural reproductions of the real; there are few exteriors, but those that are, are good, too. Exhibitors whose patrons relish the thrilling and the strenuous will make no mistake in booking "High Play." The cast is competent and do the utmost with the parts assigned them.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

John Servier (William Russell), vice-president of the Commercial National Bank, is enamored of Elaine (Lucille Young), daughter of Gerald Morier (Clarence Burton), the gambler, and the latter is using his daughter to enmesh the banker. The proposition and uses the fact of Servier's presence in Elaine's room as a cudgel to silence the matter.

The latter declines unless the confession is forthcoming by eight o'clock that night. He then announces the facts to save an innocent man in spite of the consequences, and at eight o'clock a policeman arrives at the club. He wants Brooks only on a charge of auto speeding, but Servier turns this to good advantage and arranges Brooks to write the confession. An interruption here calls Servier away for a moment, when Brooks shoots himself and the incriminating paper is found crumpled in his hand.

"The Inevitable"

(Department Art Drama—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

There is every reason to believe that this picture will satisfy any casual audience. The story is interesting; the characters are well suited to their parts; the direction is careful. The production has nothing mammoth about it, nothing to distinguish it from scores and hundreds of other film dramas; it falls into the well-defined middle class of pictures which are good, if not exceptional.

Anna Q. Nilsson is given a rare opportunity to show the real colors of her versatility, and she puts the breath of life into every character phase. Chester Barnett behaves in the film very much as one would expect a millionaire's son to behave in real life. William Bayley is something new in villain. He is not the black, waxed-moustached sort of screen villain; he is just the kind of man who would walk into your office, persuade you to invert his bad check and walk out without arousing suspicion.

Clear photography, in this day of expert cameramen, is supposed to be taken for granted. Yet the lighting and photography of "The Inevitable" deserves honorable mention.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Donald Grey (Albert Favernier) dies when accused of robbing his business partner, Decatur Burnham (Wilson Reynolds). Florence Grey (Anna Nilsson) vows to avenge her father's death. Alan Burnham (Chester Barnett) returns from college and finds his father, who is said to be an office clerk, Frank Lyons (William Bayley), who is convicted and sent to prison. Florence Grey plans to strike at her father's business partner through his son. The son becomes infatuated. He pays her bills with his father's money and, when the father finally objects, knocks him down. The jailbird escapes and enters the girl's apartment as she is confronting Alan. The two men fight, while the girl calls for the police, and the jailbird is rearrested. Then she realizes that her love for the man exceeds her desire for revenge.

"The Power of Decision"

(Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

Frances Nelson registers some very fine emotional acting in this story by George W. Gunn, adapted by June Mathis and directed by John W. Noble for Rolfe Photoplays, Inc.

The theme, of the woman who must choose the right or the wrong direction, according to her strength of will, is forcefully interwoven with the idea that circumstances may overpower and conquer the strongest will.

Everything seems to be against this girl, and it is not a cheerful role that Miss Nelson is called on to play. It is a powerful portrayal, and much to the credit of this talented star. The two scenes with the Davidsons, Richard Tucker and Sally Crute, fill their parts, too, with credit.

We consider this one of the finest productions Metro has released in many weeks. There is a lesson and an absorbing interest in the plot. In only a minor detail is the direction and handling to be criticized. The heavy storm seen through the window on the tragic night was omitted in the exteriors instantly following.

This sort of story always can be told with variations when well acted, and makes pleasing entertainment for theatre audiences.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Margaret (Frances Nelson), about to jump off the dock and end all, is persuaded to stay with a poor old artist (Fuller Mellish), whose work is the butt of some of the other artists, who attend a sale of his effects after his death. Margaret, at this auction, impresses her personality on Jean Duhanel by her im passionate defense of her benefactor, and breaks down with grief at her loss. Duhanel comforts her and takes her home with him. Love grows apace, and although already married to a woman who refuses to consent to a divorce (Sally Crute), he places a wedding ring on Margaret's finger.

Mrs. Duhanel returns and Margaret learns of her terrible predicament. She leaves Duhanel, and later meets and marries Austen Bland (Richard Tucker), an eminent author. Bland knows her secret, but not who the man is. He engages Duhanel to draw the illustrations for his new book, "The Power of Decision." Margaret, persuaded to pose for these as her husband's idea, endures the torture of days and months in the studio. Later she proves her loyalty, after her husband has learned, as he supposes, of her infidelity. Tempted and found not wanting, they are reunited and she attains full happiness in the right decision.

"Patria"

(International-Pathe—Thirteenth Episode) Reviewed by William J. McGrath

There is more Western stuff in this number entitled "The Wings of Death," and several big thrills fall in the two reels. One is staged when two cowboys jump from their galloping mounts into an automobile and tackle one of the conspirators. Another comes when the automobile is blown to pieces by a hidden mine, and still a third which sends shrapnel down and down the spine arrives when Patria stuns her passenger in an aeroplane and sends him spinning through the air to the earth.

"The Railroad Raiders"

(Signal-Helen Holmes—First Chapter) Reviewed by William J. McGrath

The much-heralded "Railroad Raiders" has been well primped for a successful getaway with its opening chapter, entitled "Circumstantial Evidence." Of course, it is Helen-Holmes-By-Powers-Béchard. It is a logical, convincing story of a possible railroad railroad robbery. There has been described as a railroad railroad novel. That is what it promises to be, and one of the most exciting and adventurous of all Helen Holmes productions. The ground covered is the first chapter, and covered capably, too, gets the story away for a good start. Usually, with serials, and as was the case with several Helen Holmes productions before this, there is a burden of prefacing material. But in the "Railroad Raiders" this is absent.

While this first chapter furnishes little or no opportunity for Miss Holmes to get in some of her death and hospital fighting leeks of leaping and racing, there is an encouraging hint that there will be plenty of such feats that make Miss Holmes famous, in the chapters to follow. Not that it is without thrills, however. There are speeding trains, hurtling bodies, intrigue, flight and other hostie action in the first chapter, but Miss Holmes just don't happen to figure in it as yet. It will probably be the best serial story that Director John P. McGowan has handled, judging from the opening chapter and the care being given to it.

"The Sin Woman"

(George Backer Film Corporation—Seven Parts) Reviewed by Peter Milne

George Backer's first production made under the supervision of George W. Lederer offers Irene Fenwick in a story frankly suggestive. A good many of its scenes were molded for a direct appeal to baser sensibilities. There may be something dramatic in missing Miss Fenwick start to disrobe before taking her morning bath, but we fail to see it. The effect such a scene has on an audience is rather funny. Some grab their hats in anticipation of making a hasty exit, while others sit with eyes riveted on the screen. Ruth tries all her wiles on John, but to no avail. In the end they part and feather Ruth and leave her lying in the snow.

Miss Fenwick is more or less delightful and acts well. Clifford Bruce is a manly John, and Renee Davies is his wife. She has little to do and does that little fairly well. The production is excellent. The snow stuff is fine and the photography remarkable. There are several allegorical bits preceding the story proper, including an Adam and Eve scene of the usual variety. Its appeal will always be limited. The theatre that shows it is no place for family reunion.

"Even As You and I"

(Universal Special—Seven Parts) Reviewed by Peter Milne

Lois Weber offers another allegorical preachment in "Even As You and I," a fitting picture to rank with "Hypocrites" and "Sacred." It formed the piece de resistance of the Rialto's bill the week of April 1, and although none of those present at an afternoon performance were inclined to be more amused than edified at the various efforts of the Devil to wreck a happy couple, it will undoubtedly find approval in other houses. A Rialto audience, it seems, is more fond of amusement than it is of a sermon.

Miss Weber has worked her story out in a logical, convincing manner. The assortment of characters which her Satanic Majesty sends up to earth to work his will are the embodiments of vices, and proceed on their duties after the correct fashion. The continuity runs evenly and there is nothing false presented.

The direction of the author is characteristic of the subject. Several times is one startled by flashes of the Infernal Regions which bespeak of care in the production. In passing, it was these scenes that the audience with which the reviewer sat fused to take seriously. Hell is a hard thing to make convincing on the screen. Perhaps if Billy Sunday had started his New York campaign earlier there would have been more serious faces when the glowing red flashes illuminated the house.

"Over the Campaign"

Even earlier in the campaign earlier there would have been more serious faces when the glowing red flashes illuminated the house.

Peacocke this comedy is the latter half of "Mr. McKinley Non." Violet Lind and Evie Wicks prepared the situations while William Mong and Violet Schramm are the leads. E. Magnus Jegion wrote the story.

"The Desert Ghost." (Big U. Thurs., April 12.)—An episode of the "Desert Ghost." John Cavendish is the hero. There is a suspense to the 16th degree is offered in this one-reeler, written and directed by Vaden Young. It tells of a hold-up man who makes friends with a foreign spy not knowing his identity. When at last he discovers his true nature, he is in too deep and tries to escape but is caught.

"The Adventure of the Signet Ring." (Imp. Two reels. Sixth Episode of the "Secret Service Series." Fri., April 13.)—A mystery story, pictured cleverly in that it is all a mystery through the narrative. George Bessenger Howard is the author and he has done much to familiarize the public with the history of America and other nations. The girl's approach is a fantastic means of introducing supposedly valuable documents which she asks for. The story is well told and the mystery is so cleverly done. Also the author's conception of how the one approached should be handled. The hero has no evidence on him with which to contest the authenticity of the documents or asking the lady's identity. The same girl then complex of other pockets until she is satisfied. Kingsley Benedict and Jay Belasco are in the cast in their usual roles.

"The Voice on the Wire." (Universal Special No. 5. Two reels. Week of April 9.)—Written and produced by Captain Leslie T. Peacocke this comedy is the latter half of "Mr. McKinley Non." Violet Lind and Evie Wicks prepared the situations while William Mong and Violet Schramm are the leads. E. "Maquillage." (Metro. Two Reels. Wed., April 18.)—The conventional rivalry of the Police and Fire chiefs for the hand of the Mayor's daughter is brought to the fore in these two reels of snicker and trickery. The gags are always amusing, but there seems to be too much emphasis on the love story which adds much to the comedy value of the picture. Lucille Kellogg, Merta Sterling and Charles Indris are others.

"The Topsy Turvy Twins." (Victor. Two reels. Thurs., April 19.)—Carter De Haven appears in the last of the "Topsy Turvy Twins." The zest of the two twins one of whom is a woebegoneelixir and the other a raudier bear is very well taken care of by Raymond Wells. The result is a well-prepared emulsion which offers complications of genuine entertainment value. Walter McGrath, Margaret Whistler, Jane Bernoudy, Mrs. Em- ma Goertzen, Vola Smith and Lucille Young do credit- able work.

"The Face That Kills." Big U. Thurs., April 19.)—Though mismatched this little epic of the desert brings the life of two men for one woman is well produced and absurd in suspense. Raymond Wells wrote and directed while Claude McDowell, Jay Belasco and Malcolm Bevins play the only parts.

"The International Spy." (Imp. Two reels. Fourth Episode of the "Spy." Thurs., April 26.)—In which the two detectives continue their search for the traitor and the international spy. The matter in which Norroy turns the trick is cleverly handled. The whole production is well done and engaging while while the romantic interest is well handled for a good lot of suspense. In addition to Kingsley Benedict and Jay Belasco there are Merta Sterling, Violet Schramm, Harry Mann and Seymour Hastings in the cast.

"The Tell-Tale Clue." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., April 21.)—A story of the amorous escapades of the woodpilots by George Cochrane when his company, including Morgan, Jack Nelson, Tom Lonon and Henry Gavin was at its best. The scenery are very pretty, the production good and the comedy material is plentiful throughout. Clyde Johnstone did the same story of a heist by Alex Jonas.
UNUSUAL POLICY

NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS, NOTICE!

"THE (DE LUXE) SPOILERS"

By Rex Beach

Will be on the market for Six Months, beginning April 15th, and then COMPLETELY WITHDRAWN FOR 2 YEARS.

By the maintenance of a complete withdrawal policy following each issuance for booking, "THE (DE LUXE) SPOILERS" can continue as the best box office attraction in film history barring "Birth of a Nation." To the complete withdrawal policy, therefore, we will strictly adhere and New York State exhibitors will kindly take notice that (in their future interest and our own) "THE SPOILERS" will only be available for booking in 1917 for six months beginning April 15 and then will not be available until October 15, 1919.

Your Next Projector Will Be the Motiograph

BECAUSE IT HAS ALL THE IMPORTANT PARTS THAT AN UP-TO-THE-MINUTE PROJECTOR REQUIRES TO GIVE PERFECT PROJECTION

Compare it part for part with other projectors and you will easily see why its users are satisfied!

LAMPHOUSE. — Large, well made and well ventilated.

ARC LAMP. — To take 8" lower and 12" upper carbons. Has 8 different adjustments.

CONDENSER MOUNT. — So arranged that either condenser can be removed separately when desired; one of the latest improvements on the MOTIOGRAPH.

MECHANISM. — Runs quiet, requires very little attention from operator, projects rock-steady pictures; due to accuracy in manufacturing.

STAR AND CAM. — Accurately ground and run in oil bath.

NEW PATENTED SLIDING DISC CONNECTION — which has been used in the MOTIOGRAPH for over fifteen months is becoming more popular every day with the users due to its “no wear” qualities and rigidity produced in the framing device. (Bell arbor used in former models has been discontinued.)

TWO BALANCE WHEELS. — To insure perfect action and steadiness of picture.

FEDESTAL. — Heavy, designed so as to eliminate vibration.

MAGAZINES. — Made of heavy material, will hold 2,000 feet of film.

MOTOR. — 1/2 H.P., entirely enclosed. Machine can be purchased with or without motor.

RHEOSTAT. — Adjustable, 25 to 55 amperes.

REGULAR MOTIOGRAPH LENS with each equipment.

OUTSIDE SHUTTER. — Now used on the MOTIOGRAPH instead of inside shutter as on former models.

THE question as to what is fair and what is unfair depends upon the point of view and who is pinched by the regulation under discussion. The advance deposit system is an example of this. This question has been discussed from coast to coast without much avail, though some manufacturers have come out in the open for its abolition—others still say it is necessary. Those exhibitors who are ready at any time to discount their service and have money in the bank to pay for their film are not vitally affected one way or the other— it is the little man who is honest and whose credit is good, but who needs a little time, upon whom the rule falls with a heavy hand.

We find the same thing in the police regulations of any city. The laws which they enforce were not made by the law-makers just for the sake of passing legislation. They were made because some one individual or group of individuals made fools of themselves and as a result forced restrictions which put a stop to acts of a similar nature. Thus we find oppressive regulations which hurt the many because of the indiscretions of the few.

This morning we received the following letter from one of the leading supply houses in the country:

"Motion Picture News,
729 Seventh Ave.,
New York City.

Gentlemen:

"We call your attention to one Mr. ——— of ———, N. C., who ordered some goods from us, and assuming that he was responsible, we made shipment C. O. D., at his suggestion, without demanding a deposit. One of the shipments was ordered by wire, and we had to come down to the office on Sunday morning in order that he might have the goods promptly.

"This fellow not alone refused to accept the goods after they arrived, but has ignored all correspondence, and we were compelled to pay the amount of Fifteen Dollars and Sixty-four Cents for express charges, in order to have our merchandise returned.

"A fellow like this should be advertised from coast to coast as a crook."

We do not assume that this practice is common or that it occurs more than at scattering intervals, yet, if it is practised at all, it may be the cause of the supply dealers demanding cash with order on all their deliveries. Here again we find the few bringing down trouble on the heads of the many, although the many may be perfectly honest and with good credit. It is right to consider that every man or group of men are honest till they have proven themselves otherwise, yet when those serving this group find members of it dishonest it is only human nature to take it out on all of them and justly so.

Organization of this kind can limit its membership, taking in only those upon whom they can depend, thus making the protection they offer to the dealers and exchanges a reality. They will also be able to advise with the various interests in the trade and in this way render no little added service to the industry. Any statement that a group is dishonest because some one of its constituents has done something wrong is not only unfair but it is untrue, yet punishment must be borne by all unless the group is in a position to cleanse itself. "No chain is stronger than its weakest link."

E. K. GILLETT.
Film Renovator

The matter of film renovating has been a subject that has caused many exhibitors to become prematurely gray, as has also the matter of first-run films, which being green, cause the machines to pound and in a number of instances work great injury upon both film and projection machine. There is no reason to doubt that the poor condition of some of the present-day productions is due largely to the fact that exchanges neglect the all important necessity for proper renovation of the film after it has been returned by the exhibitor. It is this fact perhaps more than any other that has driven so many of the smaller exhibitors out of business, and it is all unnecessary if the men who are selling the goods would only take proper care of their stock. The device shown here is a film renovator that has many advantages; it is not only for old film, but also for the protection of new film. Many films are weakened during the first week’s use by the undue strain put upon the sprocket holes on account of the tension springs and aperture plate tracks becoming gummed up with the deposit of emulsion that is always found where new film is being used.

It has been remarked that the first day’s run will break the film in and prevent this trouble, but that is a mistaken idea; some films will still be green even after several days of use. The added tension exerted on the film where the tension springs and aperture plate has collected much of this emulsion is approximately 50 per cent. greater, and it is here that so many films have their life shortened. Operators when running new films try to avoid this trouble by squirting oil on the tension springs; this sometimes prevents the noise of the projector, but meanwhile it is causing the film to be damaged in other ways; this oil gets on the film, which causes it to become cloudy, blotchy and out of focus. It is impossible to remove oil from film, unless the film is buffed severely; this heats the film and causes it to shrink. When film shrinks and hardens it loses its transparency, until the film will not run in the sprocket, and naturally becomes worthless in a very short time. Film corrodes the same as metal, such as nickel, brass, copper and even glass. If you neglect to wash your windows for a week or two it is not only dirty, but scummy and foggy. It has lost its transparency. The same is true of motion picture film. The one drawback of these film renovating processes has been that too much has been expected of them; exchange managers have expected to think that “renovating” means making new. They expect when a film is all shot to pieces, such as scratches, weak and torn sprocket holes and full of poor patches, that a film renovator should be capable of removing all defects. That is impossible. No machine will ever be built that will accomplish the above, but it is the belief of the writer that 50 per cent. of the film troubles can be overcome if not eliminated altogether by a judicious use of one of these machines. If it is essential to keep the condensing and projection lenses free from dust and oil, and we know that it is, why is it not equally essential that the film should be so kept? It is. The operator is the fall guy, as usual, for no matter how good an operator he may be, he cannot make a new film out of an old one, and we know that if none of our exchange managers should attempt to fill this position they would make an awful mess of it, but still, if the exhibitor makes a complaint regarding the film that has been sent him the reply is “Your operator is to blame.” We have seen features of five reels where three out of the five have been in an abominable condition, the other two in first-class shape, but the answer is the same: The operator. Now this is not true, for if it were the operator who was at fault ALL REELS WOULD BE DAMAGED. The manufacturer of films or feature pictures are today spending thousands of dollars to deliver the prints to the exchange in first-class condition, but after the exchanges receive it, they seem to care nothing for its future condition. But with proper agitation on the part of the exhibitor this state of affairs could be remedied, and it is up to those exhibitors who are paying the price to see that they get what they are paying for. The Rex Film Renovator, as illustrated, is a device that has received hundreds of testimonials from users in all parts of the country and the cost of same is within reach of every exchange, and they should investigate carefully into its merits.

The claim of the manufacturer is that after a film has been treated with the Rex Film Renovating Fluid, it is entirely free from any coating which has been applied, and has a velvet finish which allows it to pass through the projection machine 50 per cent. smoother and easier, keeping the tension springs free from any accumulation of emulsion and relieving the operator of any responsibility of damaging first-run film. Those exchanges who have adopted this method claim it not only relieves them of many of their troubles, but also claim that the film lasts much longer.

Oil troubles are a thing of the past where this device is used, as they have a new patent method of removing oil from film without its passing through the renovator, which is furnished with their outfit; in this way the oil can be removed from the film in about twenty minutes, whereas it now takes at least a couple of hours where this is done by hand, and then the oil is not thoroughly removed, as is the case where the Rex is used. When a film has been cured by this process it is possible to chase it through the projection machine in six minutes without any damage to the film. This is not advisable, though, for the projector is not supposed to be run at that speed. The Rex Film Renovator Manufacturing Company are located at 272 North Third street, Columbus, Ohio. R. D. Hanish is the general manager, and I would again call the attention of the exchange managers to the claims made by the manufacturer and users.

Notice

Managers and operators are invited to write this department asking any information of a technical nature or otherwise, where it concerns the projection; suggestions are also welcome. These inquiries or suggestions may be sent, anonymously or otherwise. In either case the strictest confidence will be observed and replies made through the columns of this department only. I am forced to make this announcement from the fact that a number of my correspondents desire personal letters, and as there is no charge made for this service, that is impractical.
Schwarz's Carbon Adapter and Economizer

E. M. SCHWARZ, of San Francisco, Cal., an operator who does things, is the inventor of a carbon adapter and economizer for those who use the small Silvertip negative carbons. As mentioned in the issue of March 10, the brother has been quite successful in placing these carbon adapters on the market and wherever they have been tried it is the consensus of opinion that they are the goods. As you will see by the photographs it is possible to burn the Silvertips down to less than an inch without in any way injuring the adapter.

The maker claims that with the use of this device he has saved from eight to ten carbons a week while burning a 52 ampere arc. This is of importance to exhibitors who find difficulty in getting carbons and the saving is worth considering alone.

The sample sent me was used on 60 amperes, burning the carbon clear down to the holder, and while it "fused" or melted the top of the holder a trifle it did not prevent its further use.

Of course, it is not advised to burn the carbon entirely away; the utilizing of all but a trifle less than an inch is saving enough when we consider that so many operators throw away carbons of from two to three inches in length. There should be a good future for "Schwarz's Carbon Adapter and Economizer," and the price is not exorbitant—one dollar each.

Screen Needs to Be Done Over

C. E. C, Murray, Ohio, writes: "Please tell me the best way to paint a screen. The screen is a muslin one that has been painted white, but needs to be gone over again. What kind of white paint is best and what percentage of blue is needed for best results?"

Answer: I refuse to be bothered. I do not know the "best" paint, but I think there is one on the market, a screen preparation called the D & D Screen Paint, that will answer your purpose quite well, and you will try and get in touch with them and have them write you.

The above correspondent comes across with a P. S. as follows: This "P. S." will be lengthy and you may omit it, but comment on it please by saying the equipment at the Rialto is (whatever it is). I am not an operator, but help same at the theatre here. Enjoy reading the News each week. Always read your department. Am a subscriber to the News and get much pleasure from the description of beautiful picture theatres. Wish our town could boast of one. When the Rialto in your city opened it had a Minuta Screen, later reported to have a better one, the Atmospheric, and now it has a Radium Gold Fibre. I think the machines were changed a couple of times, but possibly only once. After all of that I wonder if — is satisfied? I have read and enjoyed the letters of Charles A. Norton, the small town operator, and hope his "boss" gets him a 1917 Type S Simplex (or any other kind for that matter). Regarding better projection I think there is a market for a good objective lens for $50 or $60, if one can be made that will be worth it. Have never seen the price of the Marlux quoted; it may be a fine one. Have read of a Sabo lens that is good (according to Richardson). I thank you in advance for your answer to this letter.

Don't Rewind Films

In obedience to a request that was made of me by an exhibitor a few days ago I am writing this to try and set forth the reason why an operator should not rewind the film before it is returned to the exchange. We know that the film should be inspected before being run, and where the film is rewound and reaches the exchange in that condition, in a number of instances this film never gets examined and is sent out to the next exhibitor minus examination. Where there are exchanges who desire to treat their customers fairly, the work of the inspectors is facilitated by receiving the films as they leave the machine, not rewound. Even where an occasional reel might slip through the exchange without inspection, it will in this way become inspected by the operator who is to use it, for he will have to rewind it before it can be shown, and in the process of rewinding he is enabled to see that the film is in such a condition that it can be run without any breaks or delays.

Where 2,000 feet of film are carried on one reel it is just as easy to separate them, putting tail pieces and leaders on just before the last show is to be given, and in this way the operator will only have to remove the film from the take-up magazine and put the proper band upon it and throw it in the shipping case; in this way the reel must be examined somewhere before a film is put in the exchange. The operator's work is made lighter and he is relieved from much worry attending the uncertainty of film which he has not examined during its travel through the projection machine." No matter how good an operator you are, or how conscientious, make it a rule not to rewind film at the end of the day's run, and be sure to put the proper band on EVERY REEL BEFORE YOU PUT IT IN ITS CASE. This will help you, as well as helping your brother operator, and much of the "religious" conversation in the operating room will be avoided.

Can Operate on Any Current

W. H. TYLER, Texas, sends in a wiring diagram, and writes as follows: "In March 10 number of the Motion Picture News I see diagram sent in from Hoboken, N. J., which is good, and I will send you a diagram of my arc connections. Also, Ravena, N. Y., wants to know about operating two machines on one rectifier. Diagram will show how same is done. I use rectifier all the time, but in case of an emergency can have any current I desire. Hoping this will benefit some one, I am yours truly."

In reply:
In your last reply you, in the vernacular of the street, "said a mouthful." If the vast number of operators throughout this great country of ours could only be brought to a realization that in helping others they were also helping themselves, we could feel, but by our calling the diagram you sent in was, unfortunately, one that could not be reproduced; then, too, there were several small mistakes which you in your haste no doubt overlooked, such as reversed polarity on the rectifier, and also the rheostat. Brother Ullers of Hoboken, who is, by the way, something of an artist as well as draughtsman, followed the (Continued on page 2533)
SLIDES

PROMPTLY after the declaration of war between United States and Germany, Joseph F. Coufal, the head of the Novelty Slide Company, wired the Secretary of Navy Daniels, Secretary of War Baker and Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, offering the facilities of their manufacturing plant, for the production of any and all necessary Government slides.

This patriotic offer was promptly acknowledged by Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department, and the matter is now under consideration.

It is evident that motion picture theatres will play a very important part in the present crisis, and the Federal Department heads have realized the power and the value of the motion picture screen.

If the Government decides to place into service the plan under consideration, every motion picture theatre in the United States will be supplied with a regular service of slides, encouraging enlistment and presenting such valuable information to the American public as the Government desires to have promulgated.

Exhibitors everywhere are showing the proper desire to assist the officials and we urge every motion picture theatre owner to put his whole heart and soul into patriotic cooperation, in the service for his flag and country.

OWING to the general interest prevailing throughout the country on patriotic topics, the Excelsior Illustrating Co., 219 Sixth Avenue, New York, has prepared a set of slides on this timely subject. It has been said that a great many inquiries have been received at the offices of the company from exhibitors requesting slides that will help to promote patriotism. In order to meet the demand which is constantly increasing, the Excelsior Co. has started a special department devoted to this work.

THE Greater New York Slide Co., 154 West Forty-fifth street, New York, are releasing patriotic songs on their unbreakable Mica slides. These slides are made up in two colors, portraying the American eagle in red and the song in black.

Motor Generator—Transformer Connection

THE accompanying illustration shows the manner in which a motor generator set may be connected to furnish current to two arcs, having a transformer or economizer in circuit for emergency. By a proper manipulation of switches either machine may operate from the transformer while the other is being furnished with current from the motor generator.

Operators who have unique wiring diagrams are requested to send them in for the benefit of our department readers, for it is only through the helpful suggestions of operators that the craft will ever become fully recognized as an art instead of merely a job. Let us see that you are willing to cooperate with us in the desire to raise the profession to the high position to which it is entitled.

Be sure to mention "MOTION PICTURE NEWS" when writing to advertisers.
suggestions outlined by you, and I think the accompanying illustration will better explain what you wished to convey. The explanation of the diagram is as follows: To operate arcs 1 and 2 on rectifier, close switch A. Engage points 1 and 2 on switch F and points 5 and 6 on switch E. To operate arcs 1 and 2 on adjustable rheostat, close switches B and C, leaving switch D neutral; engage points 3 and 4 on switch F and points 7 and 8 on switch E. To operate arc on 220 D.C. rheostat, engage switches D and C, points 3 and 4 on switch F and points 7 and 8 on switch E. By a proper manipulation of switches both arcs may be burned simultaneously. For example: To operate arc No. 1 on D.C. rheostat, engage switch D with points 7 and 8 on switch E. To operate arc No. 2 on adjustable rheostat engage switch B, leaving switch C neutral, and engaging points 3 and 4 on switch F.

This diagram should enable an operator to so operate his machines that there need never be any trouble so far as the current supply is concerned. I would be glad to receive any further suggestions from the brother from Texas.

Wants Lenses for Power's Machine

J. P. H., Henderson, N. C., asks: "Will you please let me know the different grades of lenses that I can get, and from whom, for Power's 6A machine, 9 by 12 screen, throw 80 feet?"

Answer: For the size picture you desire it will be necessary to use a lens of 6/4 inch focus, and these lenses may be purchased from the manufacturer of the machine or from the lens makers themselves. Would suggest that you write to either of the following optical companies, all of whom are located in the City of Rochester, N.Y.: The Crown Optical Company, Bausch and Lomb Optical Company and the Gundlach-Manhattan Optical Company. All of the above-mentioned concerns manufacture high-grade projection lenses, and I am sure they will be able to fulfil your requirements.

Real Service Given

Every exhibitor of moving pictures is constantly on the lookout for new methods of publicity for his house. Anything that is a little different or a little better than the ordinary publicity mediums now in use is always welcome.

The Cahill-Iggo Company of Chicago is doing a great deal to help the busy exhibitor with his advertising problems. They furnish a complete service to all their subscribers, which consists of a series of twelve different designs of programs and the advertising write-up for each picture shown. The write-up service is furnished free.

Another item of interest to Paramount exhibitors is the "Filmette," which is produced by this same company. The "Filmette" is a new style of folder designed to take the place of the customary heralds furnished by the producers. It is absolutely original in design, and contains, besides pictures from the play itself, a curiosityrousing write-up of the picture. These Filmettes are furnished on Paramount releases only.

Mr. Theatre Manager

You are always on the watch for special features that will draw larger crowds to your theatre.

Are you overlooking details that may be handicapping your efforts? Is your equipment of the highest quality possible? What about your projector—does it have a lens, or are you "getting along" with something inferior?

Remember that the quality of every picture you show is dependent upon the projection lens, and that you cannot afford to use any lens but the finest obtainable.

Ask your Dealer to explain the advantages of the Marlux, or write direct to Do You Use a Radium Gold Fibre Screen?

There Are a Score of Good Reasons Why You Should and Not a Single One Why You Shouldn't Radium Gold Fibre Screens are scientifically made to meet the most exacting demands of Motion Picture Exhibitors. The secret process of their manufacture was worked out after years of experimenting to correct faults which previously manufactured screens were constantly showing.

They are made to keep pace with the upward trend of the photoplay—to properly transmit to the audience the finer details of light and shade for which careful directors are always striving.

They are made to liberate a long suffering public from the bondage of eye-strain—to make it possible ... in a theatre where pictures "dance upon the screen and "ghosts" and distortions are ever present.

They are made to use electrical current—not to eat it. They are made to give the exhibitor better service for even less money than he has been paying for inferior service.

Why not write us to-day for further details and price; we'll surprise you with the ease of our plan of installation.

Brooklyn Projection Association

One of the most enjoyable affairs ever given by an association of motion picture theatre employees, embracing operators, managers, musicians, and employees in general, was the banquet given by the Brooklyn Projection Association held at Reiser's Cafe, Rockaway and Pitkin avenues, East New York, in what is known as the Brownsville section of Brooklyn. The meeting of the audience was called for twelve o'clock, but on account of the gathering did not get seated until nearly 1 A. M., and from that time on there was something doing every minute until the wee sma hours of the morning, and at 5 A. M. the happy but tired revelers began to wend their weary way homeward. The dinner was one of which the B. P. A. may well be proud; opening with Caratula la Brooklyn Projection Association (at one time it was some cocktail) we ran the gamut and finished with the usual demi-tasse. Good music and an excellent cabaret performance kept the diners in good humor, and when Al Mackler, president of the association and toastmaster of the evening, was introduced by Benjamin Greenwald, chairman of the arrangement committee, the scene was ready for anything. Among the invited guests were George E. Edwards, president of the Moving Picture Machine Operators of Greater New York, Local 306, I. A. T. S. E., who spoke briefly to the members and their wives, as did Will C. Smith, of the Nicholas Power Company; I. G. Sherman of the Motion Picture News, and others. All expressed great pleasure in being able things and to partake of the good things the hospitality of the association. Harry Mackler, business representative of Local 306, was called upon to say a few words, and in doing so he made it plain that the Brooklyn Projection Association was not a union organization, though a number of its members were also members of the union, but there was this difference between the two—the organization (Local 306) was merely a business one, while the association (the B. P. A.) was a fraternal and social one, and its function was to help its members in sickness or distress, as well as looking after those dependent upon them. This is done by the payment of benefits which are raised through monthly dues, assessments, etc., and in this way the association alleviates the suffering and hardships attending those members of the craft who have no bank account may become ill and in need of financial assistance. I, in common with many others had heard many things said against this association, and was indeed glad to be their guest and see for myself that the association was not as black as it had been painted, and I want to say right here that associations such as this, having for their purpose such lofty aims should be encouraged. It is a necessity. And the encouragement should take such concrete form that it will be made possible for the treasury to withstand any call made upon it. All who are eligible for membership and who reside in the borough of Brooklyn should make application for membership, and let your motto be "All for one and one for all." I do not mean to apply the spirit of fraternalism. Simon Terr made one of his characteristic speeches wherein he tried to square it with the wives and sweethearts of the members for the members' absence on meeting nights, when the meetings last until 2 A.M. There is some doubt in my mind as to whether he was altogether successful in his explanation. Mrs. Al Mackler remarked that she would excuse her husband hereafter upon hearing the explanation that had just been given, but the way she said it caused me to doubt her sincerity. Mr. A. Stern, inspector from the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity, spoke in complimentary terms upon the manner in which the majority of operators were co-operating with his department and pointed out the changes that had been made in the last few years, and said that it was a pleasure to visit an operating room as a friend and not an enemy, as so many seemed to think the inspectors were. After the speechmakers had all taken the floor, motion pictures were shown of the Grand March of the Ball given by the association on New Year's eve. These pictures were taken by Brother M. Berkowitz, on one of the most unique cameras I have ever seen, and while I shall make no attempt at describing it, I will say that the pictures were taken, printed and projected with this one box.

The officers of the Brooklyn Projection Association are as follows: Al Mackler, president; Joe Bernstein, vice-president; Benjamin Greenwald, financial secretary-treasurer; George Hirsch, recording secretary; Jack Kaplan, sergeant-at-arms; Sam Heller, hospitaliter (one who looks after those who are ill and in need), and a board of trustees consisting of Max Silberman, Nat Heffelf and Charles Lipman. The arrangement committee—Benjamin Greenwald, chairman; Max Fein and Louis Barbash—did their work well and left nothing to be desired on the part of the guests. Souvenirs were distributed, those for the men being Blu-Birds, for happiness, while the ladies received handsome Japanese powder boxes. If a really and truly good time counts for anything, March twenty-fourth will go down as a red letter day in the history of the Brooklyn Projection Association—for it was some time.

Freddy's Condenser Mount

Brother Walter Freddy, San Francisco, Cal., sends in one of his celebrated condenser mounts that are guaranteed to eliminate one of the most annoying troubles with which an operator has to contend, especially when using a great amount of current: The breakage of condensers. This little device is a simple, effective and cheap means of doing away with this annoyance, and operators who have used them are loud in singing their praise. Of course, we all know that cracked condensers are expensive and detrimental to good projection, and this is doubly true when slides are to be shown, for then a cracked condenser will show up quite plainly upon the screen. The Freddy mount corrects this trouble by making it almost impossible to break a condenser, and there is no longer any need for exhibitors purchasing cheap condensers owing to the cost of the large number that have become broken, for this mount will pay for itself if it only saves four condensers; and then, too, better condensers may be used, which will in turn produce better results upon the screen. The device consists of two parts, the mount and the clamp ring, and may be installed in a moment by simply screwing it to the lamp house by the screws furnished. It is designed for rear condensers only; that is, those next the arc, for it is seldom that the front condenser breaks, and no matter what make machine, or model, the Freddy mount can be adapted to it. It is all metal, nothing to break, and weighs about three pounds, sells for $3.50, and is guaranteed to do as claimed, otherwise it may be returned, charges prepaid, and your money will be refunded, within two weeks after purchase. Nothing could be fairer than this, and exhibitors should lose no time in having their projectors equipped with this device.

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

Tampa Local No. 321

A well attended meeting of Local 321, I. A. T. S. E., Tampa, Fla., the following officers were elected to serve for one year:

- A. Crespo, president
- W. Paleveda, vice-president
- Manuel Nosti, secretary-treasurer
- E. G. Kemp, business agent
- E. G. Kemp, H. Wegman and S. Williams, trustees
- M. Nosti, W. Paleveda and A. Crespi, examining board
- W. Sullivan, guide
- Ben Lance, guardian, and Manuel Nosti, press reporter

Brother Nosti reports that the boys are all doing fine and that many of them get the News every week. If there is support by the members there is no reason why this should not be so.

Keystone Press Moves

The Keystone Press, which was formally located at 105 West Twenty-third street, New York, has removed its entire printing plant to 727 Seventh avenue, New York, next door to the Godfrey Building. Their new quarters places them in the heart of the film district and convenient to the busy exhibitor.
Achromatism, and the Use of Apochromatic Lenses in Color Cinematography

It is appreciated by most workers upon color cinematography that perfection in the screen results can only be attained by the elimination of all possible mechanical errors, and considerable speculation has been rife as to whether any noticeable improvement, as regards definition, would accrue from the use of achromatic lenses in modern picture color photography. This question appears worthy of consideration so we shall endeavor, in that which follows, to outline the qualifications for color corrected lenses (for cinematographic use) and to draw some conclusions regarding their ability to improve the photographic results.

Photographers are, as a rule, inclined to neglect the serious study of lens optics on account of the severe mathematical nature of the subject, but it is possible to learn something of the chromatic aberrations of lenses, and their correction, without recourse to mathematical formulæ, and we will start with the case of a simple lens and review the steps which have led up to the apochromat which is to-day such a factor in the successful practice of color photography.

A lens in its simplest form (double convex for instance) may be likened to a pair of prisms joined at their bases, and a ray of light incident upon this lens will be refracted just as is the case with prisms. Moreover the refracted ray will also be dispersed into its component colors and, since light of different colors differs in refrangibility, we find that in the case of a simple lens objects of different colors are brought to a focus at different distances from the lens.

Objects of red color will be brought to a focus appreciably farther from an uncorrected lens than will objects of blue color, since the blue rays are refracted (bent) more than the red rays. This difference between the visual focus (red and yellow rays) and the so-called "chemical focus" (blue rays) may be roughly estimated as amounting to 1/50 of the focal length in the case of a single uncorrected lens.

Since this particular subject is treated in all of the works on photographic optics it would be idle to elaborate upon it here, but in considering the requirements of lenses for color photography (and cinematography) we must not lose sight of the fact that different colors are brought to a focus in different planes, the size of the images photographed through color filters of various hues will vary to such an extent as to prove prejudicial to good definition, or correct registration, when the resultant color records are superimposed.

The removal of these chromatic defects of the simple lens is called achromatisation, and since we are here dealing with colors and spectroscopic determinations the subject of achromatism presents the same scientific interest as does the subject of color photography.

A double convex lens of crown glass was combined with a negative (concave) lens of flint glass the color dispersion was much decreased, while the combined objective still had the power of refracting the incident rays, or in other words, converging them to a focus. A lens or prism which has been corrected in such manner for chromatic aberration is said to be achromatic, and since Dollond's time the achromatising of lenses has claimed the attention of many noted opticians.

Frauenhofer in 1817 investigated all grades of optical glass then obtainable, and with the data thus secured he constructed achromatic telescope objectives which were for years the best achromats in existence. Leases corrected for color according to Frauenhofer's methods are known as "old achromats" and were constructed, roughly speaking, by combining a positive lens of low dispersion and low reactivity with a negative lens of somewhat higher dispersion and higher reactivity. There always remains a considerable degree of residual chromatism in achromats so constructed, but the Frauenhofer objectives were as perfect as could possibly be made with the extremely limited variety of optical glass obtainable in that period. A characteristic of all glasses of the Frauenhofer era was, that the color dispersion increased hand in hand with increase of refractive index.

The limitations of the old glasses were appreciated by Frauenhofer and others, and some attempts were made to prepare optical glass possessed of different characteristics, but nothing was accomplished along this line until 1882, when, at the instigation of Professor Ernst Abbe, the Schott glass works was established in Jena.

As a result of Abbe's researches and Schott's experiments a new series of optical glasses were issued which possessed the characteristic of high refractivity with low dispersion and by utilizing these new glasses in suitable combination, or in conjunction with glasses of the older type, it became possible to construct lenses in which the chromatic dispersion was more completely abolished than in the best of the "old achromats".

These lenses constructed since the Abbe epoch from the improved glasses produced by Schott are termed "new achromats," and in various forms are utilized in the construction of all modern compound lens systems, such, for instance, as the present day photographic objectives. A "new achromat" differs from the "old achromats" (previously described) in that it is produced by combining a positive lens of high refractivity and low dispersion with a negative lens of lower refractivity but higher dispersion. This results in a considerable reduction of the residual color aberration, and it was not until the Jena glasses were introduced that improvements over the Frauenhofer achromatisation could be effected.

The earliest Jena glasses which proved useful in achromatising lenses were the Phosphate Crowns and Borate Flints, but these were subsequently withdrawn by Messrs. Schott because it was found that they deteriorated upon exposure to light.

Others of improved quality took their place, and in 1902 the Schott works issued a pair of glasses with which an extremely high order of achromatisation may be secured. These modern glasses are known as "Telescope Crown" and "Telescope Flint" and by combining them with suitably chosen curvatures the "secondary spectrum" may be almost completely eliminated. They are seldom used in combination, however, for up to the present it has not been possible to manufacture "Telescope Crown" entirely free from bubbles and veins. Dr. P. Rudolph, of the Zeiss Works, utilized "Telescope Flint" glass in the negative elements of the apochromatic "Planar" which objective was issued by the Zeiss firm in 1902, and was one of the first photographic lenses with a diminished "secondary spectrum.

In course of our article we have referred several times to the "secondary spectrum" and as this is an utterly ambiguous term to the average photographer it will be well to explain its meaning, reference being had to Fig. 1. In Fig. 1, is shown the focal curve of a lens corrected for photographic use. We must digress for a moment here and explain just what is meant by "achromatic," or photographic, correction. As is well known the photographic emulsion is ultra-sensitive to the blue and violet rays, while the maximum region of visual luminosity is in the yellow of the spectrum. If we took a camera equipped with an uncorrected lens and focused the image, and then exposed a plate, our finished result would be quite out of focus, because focusing was accomplished by the aid of the yellow rays (visual rays) while the plate is chiefly acted upon by the blue rays.

In order to produce lenses which are suitable for photographic purposes it is necessary, therefore, to achromatise them so that the yellow rays and the blue rays are brought to a focus in the same plane. This condition is illustrated in Fig. 1, in which the ordinate is a wave-length scale, while the abscissa shows the variation from actinic correction of the uncorrected rays. As the diagram shows, photographic correction is obtained by uniting the yellow at W. L. 589 (Sodium D line) with the blue at W. L. 434 (Hydrogen G line). When the focal length for rays of these wave-lengths has been rendered equal (as shown in Fig. 1) the lens is photographically corrected, and these are the lines for which most of the best photographic lenses are corrected. It should be noted here that in order to produce "stable achromatism" the size of the yellow and blue images should also be identical and this requirement must be fulfilled along with the others by the selection of suitable grades of glass and the choice of suitable curvatures for the lens surfaces.

By further reference to Fig. 1, it will be seen that no other region of the spectrum are brought to a focus at the same plane as the D and G lines and the rays of other colors, coming to a focus in other planes constitute a residual color dispersion which is termed by lens makers the "secondary spectrum." This residual chromatism is in reality, very slight, and its presence is never noticed in ordinary photography, but a study of Fig. 1, will make it apparent that if all were corrected for all colors, e.g., truly apochromatic, the focal curve would be a straight line extending straight down from O at the top of the diagram.

Such a condition is really never attained, but by correcting for still another color the curve is materially straightened (focal lengths and size of images made equal for three colors) and the secondary spectrum is replaced by one of considerable lens extent called a "tertiary spectrum." This apochromatic correction is generally accomplished by uniting the focus of the red rays of W.L. 656 (C line) and the blue of W.L. 486 (F line) and the other colors are brought to a focus in almost the same plane by the use of suitable glasses in constructing the lens.

A little thought upon the subject will make it apparent that we can get an idea of the most suitable wave-lengths to correct for by examining the transmissions of the taking-filters used in any given color process. Obviously the lens should bring rays corresponding in color to the maxima of the taking filters to focus in the same plane.

In the two-color methods of color cinematography an apochromatic lens (corrected for 3 colors) is of course not necessary, but on the other hand if we wish to use a color corrected lens an objective must be secured which is somewhat differently achromatized than the usual photographic correction (Wavelengths 589 and 434). Assuming the best available selection of two-color taking filters are to be used, it appears, therefore, that the best correction for two-color cinematography would be that which unites the focus of rays of W.L. 656 (C line) and the rays of W.L. 520 (vicinity of little b).

While we have not been furnished the exact data with regard to the region corrected for, we are advised by the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company that their 48 m.m I.C. Tessar (F 4.5) is so corrected chromatically as to be particularly adapted to two-color cinematography. This 48 m.m lens is not to be mistaken for the regulation 50 m.m B. & L. Cine Tessar for, in addition to being of slightly shorter focal length, it also works at the diminished intensity of F 4.5, as against the F 3.5 aperture of the 50 m.m. Tessar. This diminution in speed is an item for consideration in the case of some of the color processes now being experimented upon.

While the foregoing considerations have been largely theoretical in nature, there is a practical phase of the inquiry into the utility of color corrected lenses for cinematography. The difference in size between the images formed by light of different colors is so slight—even in the case of a lens corrected for ordinary photography—as to be imperceptible, while the film in passing through the camera bulges before the exposure window to an extent far greater than any focal variations (for different colors) of the lens. It is apparent that under such circumstances the use of a color corrected lens would not produce any apparent improvement in the photographic results unless means were employed to press the film flat at the aperture during the time of exposure.

This could be accomplished by the use of a pressure plate actuated by cams in such manner as to hold the film under pressure at the exposure window during exposure, and release it during the action of the intermittent. Such pressure devices are to be found on all modern positive printers and have also been successfully employed in some historic cine cameras, but the almost negligible improvement in definition is considered it appears to be hardly worth while to equip cameras for color cinematography with special tension devices or, for that matter, with specially corrected objectives either.

Further Inquiries About Bitzer's "Cannon"

J. J., Chicago, Illinois, writes: "I thank you for replying to my letter as soon as you did, but I want more information on the deep, dark secret.

"Did Mr. Bitzer use a focusing tube on his Pathé? What is the advice of the Camera Department on the use of one? I..."
There are two ways of identifying Eastman film—one by the clearness of the pictures, the other by the stencil mark.

have read the article in the Photoplay Magazine, and all it says is about the lamp and "Mr. Bitzer’s original diaphragm fade-out directly attached to the lens." Will you explain what they mean by that?

"When are you going to give us that stuff on studio lighting?"

In reply: We thought it was made clear in our former reply that we knew very little about Mr. Bitzer’s camera, inasmuch as we have never seen the instrument in question. We do not know whether he has a focusing tube built in or not, but if the correspondent has ever examined a Pathe Studio Professional Camera he will recall that a magnifying glass is fitted to the door on the back. This glass is, of course, utilized in focusing the image.

We strongly advocate the installation of a focusing tube or magnum of some kind in motion picture cameras. While some cameras require a "built-in" tube to hold the ocular, the latter be mounted on the regular focusing arrangement with others.
The power of the magnifier is of some importance; a glass giving moderate magnification (not exceeding 7x) seems best, because with higher powers the grain of the ground-glass or celluloid focusing screen becomes so apparent as to detract from the visual resolution of fine details in the image cast by the camera objective.

There are people who advocate focusing direct, through the emulsion of the negative stock, threaded in the camera gate, and again there are some who recommend the use of a clear glass focusing screen, which gives an aerial image. This latter method of focusing is extremely unreliable, since it depends upon the accommodating power of the eye, and, as a matter of fact, the advocates of both of these methods of focusing have yet to demonstrate that they can produce as good a focus (all things being equal) by such means as can be secured by the use of a suitably selected piece of ground-glass or matte celluloid. The most suitable type of glass for a focusing magnifier is a Coddingtontou ocular or a Triple Aplanat of the power previously specified.
These may be secured from Bausch and Lomb.

Concerning Mr. Bitzer’s "diaphragm fade-out directly attached to the lens," we advise the correspondent that the article in question was obviously not written by one versed in camera procedure.
The round vignetter is attached to the sunshade of the camera, as the picture in Photoplay Magazine plainly shows, and as stated in our former reply.

As might be suspicioned, the Camera Department is in possession of some valuable data on "studio lighting," but this must await its proper time for publication., We are like the man from Virginia—"You can’t rush us."

Fifty-fourth Street Studio Is “Up-to-the-Minute”

Among the many studios in Greater New York there are none more fully equipped for efficient work in filming pictures than the Fifty-fourth Street studio, 517 West Fifty-fourth street, New York City. It is "up-to-the-minute" in every detail and affords the producer the utmost in lighting, equipment and convenience in handling the most pretentious scene.

The lighting equipment consists of nine overhead and five side bank Cooper Hewitt lights, two broadside Wohl lights, five double Kleigel lights, two Wohl duplex overheads and six Bogers. The stages are spacious and suitable for accommodating any size scene. A carpenter shop, fully equipped, is adjoining, and props or other necessities may be turned out expediently.
The dressing rooms are well fitted and have hot and cold running water. There are also shower-baths.

Among the well-known companies which have used this studio are the Famous Players, the Frohman Amusement Company, Fox and Brennon-Selznick. The studio is now being used by the Douglas Fairbanks Motion Picture Company. McLaughlin and Stern, 15 William street, New York, have the rental of this studio.

Religious Music in the Motion Picture

We are apt to think of religious music and organ music as being much the same thing. And not without reason, for the organ is first of all a church instrument. Motion picture houses equipped with pipe organs—and the modern pipe organ places a great variety of tone color and an almost orchestral effect at the service of one performer—are especially fitted for giving musical realism to church scenes, wedding and funeral scenes, not only because of the character of the organ music in itself, but also because of the "chime effects."

In the following list the moving picture organist will find a rich and varied repertory of works useful in his general and specific work:

- "Hosanna!" "alleluia!" by William Faulkes. Two robust and spirited numbers—full of life and energy—excellent for church scenes, processions, etc.
- "Voix Celeste," by Edouard Baiste. A reflective and quiet number, sure to appeal.
- "Easter Melody," by Homer N. Bartlett. A rich and attractive melody, serious in nature, full of the Easter spirit.
- "Festive March," by James H. Rogers; "Festival March," by Bruno Huhn. Two brilliant marches of only moderate difficulty.
- "Triumphal March," by Dudley Buck. A glorious military march—full of life and vigor and captivating melody, will show the resources of the organ.
- "Marche aux Flambeaux," by J. Barton. A new march, which is achieving great popularity. Has a free rhythm and swing that is most effective.
- "Festival Hymn," by Homer N. Bartlett. A beautiful religious number—serious and weighty, but big and powerful.
- "Hosanna," by Paul Wachs. One of the world's most popular Easter numbers—and excellent for use in connection with that season.
- "Marche Pontificale," by F. de la Tombelle. A march of great dignity. As fine a serious march as could well be imagined. A splendid overture or postlude.

Mutual Film Corporation, Chicago, Engages Musical Director

Recognizing the fact that a good musical accompaniment to moving pictures is an extremely important part of the business of exhibiting pictures, the Mutual Film Corporation has engaged Joseph O'Sullivan to arrange musical suggestions Cue Sheets for all their film productions. Mr. O'Sullivan has had much experience in this particular field, and his musical suggestions should be used by every musician playing for "Mutual Pictures."

Purchases of Seeburg Organs

SEE Burg organ has been installed in the recently rebuilt Dreamland theatre at Kewanee, Illinois. The Globe Amusement Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, also have purchased a Seeburg organ of the "Style R" type.

Special Organ Attachment Announced by Bartola Company

The Bartola Musical Instrument Company, of Oshkosh, Wis., has just placed on the market Bartola Organ Attachments to be combined with a straight-or church pipe organ in motion picture theatres. This allows the theatre which has an organ already installed to add to it the various orchestral traps without in any way changing their present organ equipment. In other words, it is a means of bringing the equipment up to date.

The Bartola Organ Attachments for pipe organs will transform any straight-or church pipe organ into an orchestral organ by adding the orchestral stops. This takes away the solemnity of the organ. The manual stops are played from an auxiliary manual which is mounted on a patented standard and attached so as to swing over the right-hand end of the lower manual, thus enabling the organist to play the solo on the harp, orchestral bells, xylophone, orchestral chimes and any possible combination with the right hand while playing the accompaniment on the organ manuals and pedals.

The pedal stops consist of bass drum, snare drum, tomtom, crash, Klaxon auto horn, storm effect and birds, and are played from pedals which are fastened to the organ console above the organ pedals in a convenient position for the operator of the player.

The bass drum, snare drum, crash, Klaxon auto horn, storm effect, xylophone and harp will be furnished in a case, mahogany finished, lattice work front, size 3 feet 4 inches wide, 2 feet 8½ inches deep and 4 feet 9½ inches high. The orchestral bells and bird chest are designed to be placed inside of the organ chamber. The bird chest is 12 inches square. The orchestral bells are 36 inches long, 21 inches deep and 12 inches high, and are arranged to be placed in the organ proper, owing to the very beautiful effect that is obtained by placing them at a distance.

All the above stops are operated by a Holter-Cabot generator set installed entirely separate from the pipe organ blower. The entire outfit is installed and operated entirely independent of the pipe organ.

The bass drum and snare drum played with the organ add to the orchestral effect which transforms the solemn tones of the church organ into that of the orchestra. The tom-tom is an embellishment to be used with the Western and Indian numbers. The crash is to give explosiveness and the ride cymbal expression. The glockenspiel adds to the musical result in fitting the music to the picture, but it is invaluable in climaxes in the music. The Klaaxon auto horn is useful as an effect as well as adding a touch of comedy when improvised in the music.

The bird stop is one of which the Bartola Company is particularly proud. It adds a touch of novelty to the music. The bird chest used is of special design and will operate successfully on a wind pressure of from 3 to 10 inches.

The harp, a most effective solo instrument, is so closely imitated in the Bartola that when played in arpeggio it is impossible to tell from the real. The tone is most melodious as a solo, and when played with the pipe organ accompaniment it is one of the most wonderful of all orchestral instruments.

The xylophone is bright and snappy in tone and adds a brilliancy to the music and to the organ. It enables the organist to faithfully reproduce a xylophone solo in either simple tents or rolls.

The orchestral bells are played with single taps, are bright and brilliant in tone, and in contrast to the somber tones of the organ add a most pleasing variety. All the instruments are equipped with patented Bartola direct electric action, which gives a most delicate touch.

Any one with ability to play an organ will most readily adapt themselves to it. The drums are played similarly to the organ pedals, and the stops on the manual are for solo effects and played exactly the same as the organ.

Large Theatre Pays in Small Town

THE Starland theatre owned and operated by the Meridian Amusement Company is located in the business district of Anderson, Indiana. The theatre was completed in 1914 and has probably done a bigger business for a theatre of its size than any other house in that section of the country.

Plans for the theatre were drawn up by E. Watkins, an architect who is well known in that part of the State. The house measures 50 feet in width by 124 feet in depth and is constructed of brick and concrete re-enforced with steel rods.

The lobby which is 15 feet by 27 feet wide has a dome shaped semi-circular roof. Several display frames taking two and three sheet posters, small photo-frames and two one-sheet frames for the coming attractions adorning the lobby. The box-office is equipped with an Automatic Ticket Seller. Recently a permanent storm front was installed; the doors on this can be removed during the summer months.

The interior of the theatre is finished in old rose with ivory and gold trimmings. This makes a very neat and attractive appearance and lends a home-like atmosphere to the interior.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 547; there is no balcony but the management contemplates installing one which will accommodate at least 250 people. The chairs that are already in the house were furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago.

Steam furnished by the city is used to heat the house and a 4-foot exhaust fan is used to draw the foul air out of the theatre, vents above the doors allowing fresh air to get into the house. The indirect lighting system is used. The projection room is well equipped with two Powers 6 A motor driven projectors and a Fort Wayne generator. The length of throw is 96 feet onto a Gold Fibre screen. The Starland claims some of the finest projection in the city and this all due to the unfailing efforts of Sam Fraz and Lester Young who have charge of this.

The music for the picture is furnished by a $5,000 Kimball Organ, a Star Grand piano, drums, traps and all other effects for the picture.

Triangle, Paramount, Metro, Fox and Pathe and any other big features which can be obtained are shown at the Starland. City Officials more than a year ago. The house enjoys a great Sunday patronage and does not seem to interfere with the churches. There is no special children’s day, but when a picture which is suitable for children is obtained the management works hand in hand with the mothers and Kindergarten clubs throughout the city and finds that it brings good results.

The manager of the Starland, Frank G. Heller has a novel way of keeping the theatre in the eye of the public at very little expense. He has issued passes to all the newsboys and the agents of the News Union and this courtesy the boys insert a herald in all Sunday papers. This almost guarantees getting a herald in every home.

The Meridian Amusement Company which operates the Starland is a corporation comprised of business men of Fort Wayne, Indiana and was incorporated in 1913. It also owns the Meridian theatre in Anderson, Indiana, and the Fischer theatre in Danville, Illinois. The Meridian seats 467 and the Fischer 1041.

New Company Head

Edgar Hopp, son of Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago Exhibitors' League, has been placed in charge of the Chicago office of the American Standard Motion Picture Machine Company. His headquarters are on the fifth floor of the Masonic Building.

Strand Theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, a Model House

THE Strand Theatre Company, which owns and operates the Strand theatre at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, may well be proud of this house, which is far above the usual standard of theatres found in this section of the country.

Plans for the structure were drawn up by W. J. Brown of Cedar Rapids, and the theatre was completed during the year of 1915.

The building, which is constructed of steel and concrete, measures 63 feet by 140 feet. The front of the theatre is faced glazed polychrome terra cotta topped by a tile cornice. The entrance to the theatre is sheltered by a large and elaborate marquee which extends to the curb and is a great convenience to auto patrons in bad weather. A uniformed footman is always in attendance. Above the marquee is a changeable electric sign upon which the name of the feature picture showing at the house is posted. Just back of this sign is a large semi-circular stained glass window, which adds greatly to the attractiveness of the exterior.

The ground floor of the structure is occupied by the auditorium and two medium-sized stores. The entrance is in the centre. The lobby, which measures 30 feet by 35 feet, is noted for its beauty. It is finished in marble and terra cotta with tile flooring. Facilities
New Moss Theatre Will House 3012

Plans were filed yesterday for the new Moss theatre at 81st street and Broadway. Excavating and leveling is now in progress and construction of the building proper will be under way in six or eight weeks. The theatre will be opened about Thanksgiving Day, 1917, and will be named after a United States President, as in the case of Moss' Jefferson theatre. The name has not yet been determined upon, but conjecture favors the Wilson theatre.

The new playhouse will be two stories high, taking in 150 feet on Broadway, 200 feet on 81st street, 170 feet on Bennett avenue, and 201 feet on 34th street, an area of thirteen city lots. Two large and spacious entrances, with Italian marble, will open on Broadway and another on 81st street. The capacity will be 3,012.

The interior of the theatre will be in French Renaissance, with the coloring in old rose, French gray, ivory and gold. Furnishings of suppressed and tasteful splendor will be in evidence throughout, and every modern device of comfort will be designed to suit the taste of modern elegance.

The exterior will be white, completely decorated in old rose, and the main auditorium will be the most satisfactory house in the city.

Theatre will be opened by Michel in a large show. Mourning, the giraffe, and the swan for the first nights will be furnished. The building will be fireproof, meeting all requirements of the state building laws.

Theatre will be equipped with a large symphony orchestra, one of the best known musical directors in the country. A P'Pe organ will be installed. William H. McElpatrick is the architect.

The interior of the theatre is artistically decorated in ivory and old rose with trimmings of gold. Upon the sounding board just above the proscenium arch is a beautiful oil painting. Curtain and hangings are of old rose.

The house has a seating capacity of 1,500, 800 being seats on the main floor and 700 on the balcony. The Scenic door is open and the seats are separated from the balcony by three-inch brass railing. All chairs were furnished by the American Seating Company. A ladies' retiring room, with a maid in attendance at all times, is also situated on the mezzanine floor, and is one of the many features that makes the theatre popular.

A ventilating system consisting of several exhaust fans and a Sturtevant air heating and cooling system. The air is forced through vents in the floor and the walls. This system can be used both in the summer and winter. The lighting fixtures are in original design and are very unique.

The projection room, which is in charge of Will Bhealen, assisted by Robert Christ, is equipped with two Power's projectors. The length of throw is 125 feet.

The music for the picture is furnished by a four-piece orchestra. An American Photoplayer has also been installed and also a pipe organ of large dimensions. Organ pipe are used as a decorative purpose and may be seen on either side of the proscenium opening about the brass frames of the two proscenium boxes on the main floor. There are over 1,400 pipes to this organ, which was especially constructed for the theatre.

Arthur G. Stotle, former manager of the Palace theatre in Vinton, Iowa, is now manager at this theatre. It is Mr. Stotle's policy to give his patrons the best. He books all his pictures "open market".

The house has seven or eight performances daily consisting of seven reels each. Admission prices are 10 and 15 cents.

California

Frederick Miller, owner of the Allambra theatres in Los Angeles, has leased real estate, and plans are now being drawn for a $15,000,000 theatre which will have a seating capacity of between 3,000 and 4,000. Work of constructing the new theatre begins next month. The theatre will be of a single house. It will be located on Eighth street, a short distance from Mr. Miller's first Los Angeles theatre, Miller's theatre, which he has conducted for the past four years.

Delaware

Five Wilmington men, whose names have not been disclosed, recently bought land at Penn-Del-City, the new suburban town site near Worth Bridge. They are planning on Clarksdale on which they will build a motion picture theatre. The building of the theatre will be finished within the next six weeks. It will be located on Eighth street, a short distance from Mr. Miller's first Los Angeles theatre, Miller's theatre, which he has conducted for the past four years.

Illinois

Charlestown is making another desperate effort to acquire a motion picture theatre. The latest reports are to the effect that over $3,000 worth of seats have been sold to date.

Indiana

Instead of a modern theatre, the city of Bloomington, all-district movie house will be erected on the site of the destroyed Orpheum, First and Locust streets, Bloomington. This final move on the building committee was made yesterday at a meeting of the owners of the property, the leasees, Building Inspector Redth and Architect Arthur J. Capelle.

Tentative plans call the making of the theatre by a local company to afford the name seating capacity of the former theatre. However, instead of a stage of that size, Mr. Stottle, to meet the legitimate productions of the city, the stage will be made suitable only for vaudeville acts and moving pictures.

It will be made absolutely fire-proof, meeting all requirements of the state building laws. Architect Capelle has planned to make the exterior construction as modern as the interior, so that the building will be left being in keeping with the other buildings of that part of the city. The building will be finished at once.

Iowa

James Scolaro, owner of the Olympic South side theatre, Cedar Rapids, has announced the letting of the building for the new improvement to be made on his theatre. Hohn Klepack was the successful bidder and obtained the contract for the new improvement to be made on his theatre.

For sometime in the past the city of Iowa City has been trying to acquire a new movie house, but the city's clearing up of a lot in the city is the first stage to be removed.

A modern lighting system will be installed. One of the most up-to-date systems is to have a new motion picture house, which, if plans are carried out, will be one of the finest in the country. C. F. Allardt, manager of the Olympic theatre, announced that as soon as a site could be bought the new building would be erected.

Kentucky

The Cosy theatre at Mountaineer opened two weeks ago with "The Test" to a capacity house.

Louisiana

Landry and Jacobs, who own and operate the Prytania theatre, Prytania and Bellcastle streets, in the heart of New Orleans' best residential section, have announced that they will undertake the erection of another new house which will be known as the Prytania II. The new house will be opened on Easter Sunday.

The new house will be under the management of Mr. Jacobs, and its site has been selected near the heart of the city. It will be opened on Easter Sunday.

The new house will be the most modern in the Prytania series. The building will be erected according to the latest up-to-date fire-proof regulations. It will be opened on Easter Sunday.

The new house will be situated on a corner site and will be erected according to the latest up-to-date fire-proof regulations. It will be opened on Easter Sunday.

MICHIGAN

H. T. Liebert has been commissioned by the Ongie Brothers to draw up plans and specifications for a new motion picture theatre to be erected on the present site of the Quince street theatre. The theatre is to be named the Thomas Coughlin. It is expected that the excavators will commence work this week.

MONTANA

East Helena now has a new and up-to-date motion picture theatre. C. A. Drummond and J. B. Depue have taken over the old East Helena theatre, thoroughly renovated and re-equipped. It is to be known as “The Columbia,” with a fire-proof feature, “The Mainspring,” on the screen. A special orchestra was engaged for the occasion. It is the intention of Messrs. Drummond and Depue to operate the Columbia as a strictly up-to-date show house with all the latest hits.

NEW YORK

Application was made last week for a permit to erect a moving picture theatre in the Twenty-third ward, at Lake avenue and Latta road, Rochester. The building will house the theater, three stores and several apartments. It is to have a frontage of 71 feet and a depth of 112 feet and will be two stories in height. It will be constructed of brick and will cost approximately $35,000.

OHIO

Another downtown motion picture house in Cleveland is known as the Gaiety will be built on East Ninth street, between Euclid and Superior avenues. The theatre is to be named the Gaiety, and the name will be a real photograph. PHOTOGRAPHS, size 8 x 10. All the prominent players, 500 different names, 20c each.

OKLAHOMA

Thompson & Kizziar are building a $10,000 modern motion picture theatre at Hobart, Okla., to replace the theatre burned recently. The theatre will have one ornamental brick front, floor seats set back at an angle, with two settees on the street level. A fully equipped stage, gallery indirect lighting system and booth equipped for two machines. The theatre will be opened about May 1.

Foundation work will start on the new theatre at Miami, Okla., April 1, to cost $50,000. T. F. Humphrey, formerly manager of the Electric at Claremore will be the manager.

PENNSYLVANIA

Ground has been broken at 12-14-16 North Eighth street, near Hamilton, Allentown, for the building of the theatre that has yet been planned for Allentown. The new theatre to be called “The Strand” will be a fine improvement for the city and will stand as a monument to the enterprise of the public-spirited builders, Ketter & Smith, and architects, Rube & Lange.

The owners of the theatre are Dr. B. H. Stuckert and O. H. Gernert, an experienced theatrical man, and they will no doubt furnish the amusement public with productions of the highest standard, and the names of the patrons will be well cared for, especially along the lines of safety and convenience. There will be no danger from fire owing to the fire-proof construction of the theatre and plenty of exits. Ventilation is one of the most important factors, the air inside will be constantly changed, and the theatre will be kept at the most comfortable temperature for the street level.

It is to have a seating capacity of 500 and every chair will be of the latest model pattern. The lighting will be most detailed, and the most artistic equipment and decorations will be used. There will be a ladies’ room, dressing room, sanitary drinking fountains, a large and spacious tiled lobby and foyer, and every convenience that can be suggested to make the house popular. The new theatre, to be completed and ready for opening in the near future, will cost $25,000, and the patrons will be a sentiment of $110,000 and will be the most centrally located house in Allentown.

WASHINGTON

Wilbur Robinson of the Bijou theatre, Tacoma, has purchased a site in Nisqually town which he intends to erect a modern motion picture theatre. The structure will be of two stories, the upper one to contain a dance hall.

WISCONSIN

The new theatre at 551 Greenfield avenue, West Allis, Milwaukee, was opened recently. This is the third motion picture theatre to be built in this city. Bebeacker’s orchestra has been given the contract for the furnishing of the music for this theatre, which was built by George Leebi.

The Palace theatre, Superior, was opened two weeks ago to a capacity house, and like conditions have been maintained ever since. It is one of the finest theatres in the North for its size. It has a seating capacity of 1,200.

"Within the Law" One of the Biggest Money Makers in the History of the Stage

Reynold Wad of the New York Morning Telegraph, one of the most widely known theatrical critics in the country, in discussing "Within the Law," following the conclusion of its 500th performance at the Elgin Theatre, New York, wrote:

"At this writing, nine companies, eight in the United States, and one in London, are earning gross profits of approximately $5,000 weekly.

"The play is unusual, because the return engagements are more profitable than the first visit to new territory. The touring companies visit the same cities two and three times during a season."

Vitagraph's production of "Within the Law," produced under the personal supervision of J. Stuart Blackton, directed by William P. N. Earle, is as strongly guaranteed as a money maker as any film production that has ever been offered.

READY FOR RELEASE.

The more YOU read these advertisements the more useful to YOU we can make the "NEWS."
Goldwyn's Decision Is: "Open Bookings"

The reasons behind Goldwyn's adoption of this policy are:

1. Thousands of the nation's exhibitors have advised it.

2. Each Goldwyn production will be strong enough to stand on its own merits, without leaning on the picture behind or the picture ahead.

3. Exhibitors should have the right to rent the group of pictures they want without being forced to take other pictures they do not want.

And—

Goldwyn considers it wisest to let exhibitors use their own brains in deciding what pictures are best for their theatres and their communities.
Twenty-Six Productions
the First Year

GOLDWYN guarantees a minimum production of twenty-six pictures a year from the date of its first release in September.

If you are a first-class exhibitor, operating a theatre in whose standards of service you take pride—

If you have been unable to obtain the high type of productions demanded by your patrons—

Write at once to Goldwyn.

Thousands of exhibitors already have written to inquire about bookings because they believe Goldwyn Pictures will solve their most troublesome problem—the problem of quality. Are you on the Goldwyn mailing list to receive our announcements?

MUTUAL RELEASE "THE WILDCAT," FEATURES JACKIE SAUNDERS

JACKIE SAUNDERS makes her second appearance in Mutual Pictures the week of April 23. The second of the Jackie Saunders series of features is entitled "The Wildcat." It was produced by E. D. Horkheimer. It is in five acts.

The Taming of a Hoyden.

The story of "The Wildcat" is from the pen of Daniel Whitcomb. It depicts the reformation of a typical hoyden, a reckless, bad-tempered sort of girl who delights in having her own way upon every occasion. Before the story ends she has developed into a beautiful, charming and wholly lovable young lady. The taming of the hoyden is accomplished by a young man who resorts to kidnapping before he succeeds in his purpose. At a lonely cabin, far up in the mountains—miles from civilization—the spoiled, ill-tempered child is transformed and returns to the city later on as the wife of the man who tames her.

Splendidly Produced.

"The Wildcat" has been splendidly produced by Director MacDonald. Its scenes were chosen with care and the work of the actors is excellent. The leading characters are played by Doris Kenyon, Sylva Koscina, and William Post as Dicky, "The Devil's Assistant." The story is popular and the pictures are sure to be a success for both "The Wildcat" and "Sunny Jane," which was the first of the Jackie Saunders series.

Fred Jackson Story for Mary Miles Minter

As the next offering in the Mary Miles Minter series of Mutual Pictures, a most unusual story has been selected. President Hutchinson of the American Film Company, Inc., has chosen Fred Jackson's famous story—"Annie-For-Spite." Director James Kirkwood believes this will give Miss Minter one of the most delightful parts in which she has ever appeared. Jackson's stories are famous everywhere and thousands will be attracted by the author's name alone. Bookings on "Annie-For-Spite" can be made now at any Mutual Exchange. Its release date will be announced shortly.

Mutual Film Corporation announces a series of three Mutual Featurettes starring Marie Cahill. The first is released on Monday, April 30. It is entitled "Gladys' Day Dream." The other two will follow at bi-weekly intervals. "When Betty Jets" is the title of the second. It is released May 14. "Patty's Partner," the third Cahill Featurette, will be released on May 28. Miss Cahill is one of America's best known comedians. She has been a "top line" vaudeville star for years. She has been the featured star of several musical comedies. She is known and admired everywhere. Now, in Mutual Featurettes, she will be seen by an even greater audience. Exhibitors are thus given an opportunity of offering a big star—a star of national note—in subjects of shorter length than five or six reel features. This serves to illustrate the Mutual Film Corporation's recent announcement that the "Big Stars Only" policy applies equally to short and long subjects. Bookings on the Marie Cahill Featurettes can be made now at any Mutual Exchange.

Exhibitors Offered Wide Variety of Film Subjects

Variety of the widest sort is offered exhibitors in the Featurettes now available at all Mutual Exchanges. Comedies of widely different character will be found in Vogue Featurettes and Strand Featurettes. Cub Featurettes are of still a different sort. Romance and adventure run riot in the Jimmie Dale Featurettes and the Shorty Hamilton Featurettes. Topical and educational subjects include Reel Life Featurettes and Mutual Weekly.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU IN "THE DEBT" SCORES DRAMATIC TRIUMPH

"The Debt" is the third of the Marjorie Rambeau series of Mutual Pictures. It is released the week of April 23. Frank Powell directed it. The story was adapted from a famous European stage success. Miss Rambeau scores a real dramatic triumph in the role of the Countess, A Heart Interest Story. Heart interest predominates throughout the story. The scenes are laid abroad and in New York City. Ann, the Countess, is the daughter of a nobleman who invests all his capital in a mining proposition. She is loved by Baron Moreno, who hopes to profit by her wealth, and by John Slater, a man of the people, who loves her for herself alone. When the fortune in the mines is lost, the villagers who invested their savings, proves worthless, Anne's father commits suicide, the Baron breaks off his engagement, and John Slater and Ann voluntarily agree to assume the debt incurred by the failure of the mine. After Ann's marriage to Slater the two go to America, accompanied by Slater's mother, a woman who resents her daughter's love. Through years of humble toil the Slaters accumulate a fund which to repay the debt. Just as this fund is completed Moreno appears on the scene and at a duel. They become friends. Ann in such a way that Slater casts her off. Months later when Ann's little daughter is dying, Slater revenges himself upon Moreno and, dying, bids his wife return to her child, and complete the payment of the debt. Upon her return to Europe Ann carries out the plan agreed upon, makes good the losses of the peasants and eventually marries the minister who has long loved her.

Released Week April 23.

"The Debt" is released the week of April 23. It is unquestionably one of the most dramatic and powerful of the Rambeau subjects. Bookings on this, "The Greater Woman" and "Motherhood" can be made now at any Mutual Exchange.

"Railroad Raiders" An Instant Success

Monday, April 9, was a red-letter day for every theatre that began showing the new Helen Holmes success—"The Railroad Raiders." The public instantly voted it a success. It was followed by such previous successes as "The Girl and the Game" and "A Loss of the Lumberlands." Exhibitors who have not already arranged to show "The Railroad Raiders" can secure bookings at their nearest Mutual Exchange.

FEATURING BEN TURPIN

PECULIARLY timely is this Vogue Comedy. Right now while everyone is thinking of war, comes this two reel comedy whose plot is based on an invention to revolutionize warfare. A torpedo-bomb, which, upon exploding in the camp of the enemy, causes the soldiers to laugh till they drop from fatigue, is the very heart and centre of the plot. Foreign spies try to secure the bomb. Wild and weird are the complications which develop. "Masked Mirth" was directed by Robin Williamson. It may be booked at any Mutual Exchange.

"THE LAW OF THE NORTH"

is a high-class attraction for all classes of exhibitors.

Without a dissenting opinion, the best critics in America have given their unqualified praise to another of the five-reel productions of the Edison Studios.

Motion Picture News

"Here is a picture that pleases the eye and twangs the nerves that thrill. It is chock full of good acting, plenty of action and, above all, has the very best of photography to augment this. Its plenty of detail as faithfully reproduced as Robert Service or Jack London ever succeeded in doing with printed description."

Exhibitors' Herald

"With a well handled and well directed story, a splendid cast of players and beautiful snow scenes, "The Law of the North," should prove a very successful offering and one that will be enjoyed by any audience. Entire production seems to be the work of a master producer."

Motography

"This is an offering which should thoroughly entertain any audience. They will leave the theatre satisfied that they have been well entertained and are likely to send their friends to see the play, some commenting on the story, others on the star and not a few on the beauty of the picture itself."

Mr. Exhibitor, are you working for yourself? If not, would you like to be shown a way to get all the benefit you are entitled to from your own enterprise? Are you making the profit you should make from your theatre? If you are, do you want to increase your earnings? If you are making a loss, have you dug down straight to the very bottom cause and found out why? Or, are you just floating along on hope that something may soon turn up to land you right? If you are making a loss there is a way you can turn it to a profit. If you are making a profit you can increase it. Get the idea?

Three years ago a certain moving picture theatre showed a net profit of $21,000 on the year. In 1916 it recorded a net profit of but $6,000. Why? The proprietor replies when asked—“Oh, conditions.” Then he becomes pessimistic and says that everybody is having the same experience—everybody who is on the profit side is now making but a little; and almost everybody is losing. There’s a reason. What is it? It does not lie in generalities but in specific facts—in definable causes. Is one of them too high rentals on one-day runs, resulting in continual big non-productive expense? Is it waste that is bleeding the average moving picture theatre to death? What do you think?

to EXHIBITORS

It means Freedom from All Burdensome Conditions

EVERY new business, especially one that has rushed to phenomenal success as the moving picture industry has done, always develops features which prove oppressive. In many new industries it is the retail distributor who finds himself the victim of marked adverse conditions, of which Avarice, with its quick eye to opportunity for unfair gain, takes full advantage. Are oppressive conditions and avarice, with the tremendous cost of waste from bottom to top of production and distribution loaded on to the exhibitor, the cause of all his work resulting in but small profit, or loss and failure? This ought to interest you?

THE remedy for any industrial evil is born of its hardships and impositions. Some one man begins to think. He takes others into council and a method to meet undesirable influences is formulated. It was in this way that the Paralta Plan was formed. It was proved sound by eight months practical investigation. Then followed the incorporation of Paralta Plays, Inc., with Carl Anderson as president; Robert T. Kane as vice-president; Herman Fichtenberg as chairman of the board of directors; Herman Katz as treasurer, and Nat. I. Brown as secretary and general manager. The Paralta Plan means greater liberty. Does it appeal to you?

Crackers are made to be eaten—not to grow stale on the grocer's shelf.

Shoes are made to grace the foot of "milady" or the "mawster"—not to shrivel and rot in the boot shop window.

Locomotives are made to be run over the rails and not to rust themselves to the turn-tables in the roundhouse.

Motion pictures are made to be seen and not to dry out in the cans on the dust covered shelf of an exchange.

Rather an odious comparison admittedly, and yet such commercial catastrophes as those enumerated above are inevitably due to the utter disregard of the value of co-operation 'tween the manufacturer and the distributor.

The dealer in antiques or wines is the permitted exception, who, if honest, profits from the age of his wares.

But

Motion pictures are not like unto wines or antiques and their all too often "preservation" on the exchange shelves is urgently in need of remedy.

In the past motion picture manufacturers have either been blind to the teachings which have resulted from the business failures in other walks of commerce,

Or

In the mad rush for "the millions" they have deliberately and admittedly played for the "quick money," with no intent or desire to build their business for a permanency.

But

It is April, 1917, and the motion picture has undergone some radical changes since those days of "fool proof" prosperity.

The swaddling clothes have been discarded for the "frocks of the hour" and

The motion picture industry is marching in the front ranks of history making businesses.

Putting ten thousand dollars into the making of a "movie"—adding two thousand more for a bundle of wild eyed advertising accessories—and then spending just enough money in advertising the product to land a "live one" is the all wrong method of procedure.

_The Frohman Amusement Corporation has resolved:_

That it assuredly does not want the fool money of the butcher or the baker in return for territorial rights to its productions.

That its productions are of a standard which merit the attention of established exchangemen with showman abilities.

That it intends, therefore, to refuse absolutely to permit its productions to be handled by the incompetents who seek to invade the industry and persuade the average manufacturer to sell his product because he may in his ignorance offer a thousand or two more than the territory is worth.

That it has adopted a definite plan of advertising its product for a period after the sale of such product, that its buyers may derive some of the benefits.

That it will augment its advertising and publicity force sufficiently to insure a careful and immediate attention to all suggestions and requests from exchange buyers.

That ideas of exploitation will at all times be supplied in aid to exchanges that full value of a Frohman production may at every instance be given.

That no matter is too small or too large to gain an immediate attention and receive prompt action.

That co-operation is the backbone of the frame of Frohman Co-operation.

 THAT BEGINNING WITH THE CURRENT FROHMAN PRODUCTION, "GOD'S MAN" IN WHICH H. B. WARNER IS STARRED, THIS PLAN OF CO-OPERATION IS PUT INTO PRACTICAL OPERATION

EBONY COMEDIES

The New Comedy Creations That Make Them Laugh, Make Them Talk and Make You Money

Talk—mouth to mouth advertising—is the best yet. Get the people talking about you and their curiosity will be aroused to such an extent, that they are going to drop in on you just to see what you are doing.

If you want to reap the full benefit of mouth to mouth advertising—the kind that pays better than any other kind—book Ebony Productions. They create talk; excite curiosity. They will get the fellow and his family who seldom, if ever, attend your theatre, when nothing else can. Then when they see one Ebony they are going to come to see the next and the next.

Ebony Comedies are opportune. Their novelty makes them big attractions. All you have to do is to announce the exhibition of an Ebony and, right at this time, it will create more curiosity than the announcement of any photoplay you can run. And attract—they will flock to see it. Exhibitors everywhere are being convinced this is a fact. So will you. Try an Ebony. If you haven’t booked one begin with this release.

“DAT BLACKHAND WAITAH MAN”

It’s running over—brim full of the funniest situations you ever saw. Every one of the cast brings a laugh. Actors are colored. That’s why.

Just imagine—picture in your mind what would take place in a colored folks hotel, when all of the guests are having the kind of a good time no other but these people can have, and are anxiously awaiting a feast of fried spring chicken and hot biscuits being prepared by the big fat black cook, the boss of the kitchen, when a blackhand letter is received from a discharged waiter threatening to blow up the place, and it is finally blown up. Imagine this if you can, as it is then, and only then, that anyone can begin to realize the unheard of humor and naturally funny situations there are in this snappy one-reel Ebony Comedy. And it is followed by one that is better yet—

WILLIAMSON

EXPEDITION

MOTION PICTURES

All the Marvelous Underwater Scenes in

20,000 Leagues Under the Sea
WHEN the Williamson Brothers produced their first underwater film known as the WILLIAMSON EXPEDITION SUBMARINE MOTION PICTURES, it was for a particular reason; namely

TO BRING BEFORE THE EYES OF THE WORLD THE MARVELS OF NATURE, HIDDEN FOR COUNTLESS AEONS OF TIME AT THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA

THEIRS was a labor of love: a mission to be fulfilled; a duty to be discharged.

Nevertheless, the seven reels of Submarine views that they obtained in the crystal-clear waters of the West Indies earned for its producers the everlasting good will of motion picture exhibitors by virtue of its inherent money-making qualities. To date, conservative estimates place the profits of this production at a half-million dollars.

LIKEWISE, when the Williamson Brothers staged the underwater scenes for “20,000 Leagues Under the Sea,” they did so with the consciousness that they were contributing, by means of their appliances, one of the most important additions to the literature of the screen ever conceived and executed.

COMING down to the present, there is a very specific reason for the existence of the Williamson Brothers’ third great success now ready—

THE SUBMARINE EYE

This beautiful production justifies all the hopes and dreams of its producers, and the prophecies of the big men of the industry, freely made at the time the first production was given to the world, have come true. As a demonstration of the wonders and virtual miracles performed in the World War by means of the inverted or underwater periscope, “THE SUBMARINE EYE” not only reveals the reason for its existence, but actually makes it imperative for the showmen of the country to exhibit this super drama to their thousands of patrons or fall behind.

“PICTURES WITH A REASON.” This is not a clever catch phrase, but a slogan that really means something. It deserves its place in the trend of Motion Pictures toward better and higher things, and the Williamson Brothers want you to know that they intend to live up to it at all times.

EDWARD WARREN PRODUCTIONS

1482 Broadway, N. Y. City.

If you like the "News," write our advertisers; if not, tell us.
We have closed and concluded practically all preliminary contracts and arrangements, and the actual work upon our productions will be started during the next few weeks.

To co-operators with us, in every known motion picture territory we have a solid, substantial and equitable sharing arrangement. Our plan is diametrically opposed to that used in conjunction or by any other of the big producing companies. Our plan places the burden of proof, the question of monetary returns and the problem of cash investment exactly where it should be—upon the shoulders of the producing company.

As the sword of Alexander cleft the Gordian knot, our equitable and co-operative sharing plan solves the countlessly argued question of the proper relationship between the producer and the distributor.

Only the most reputable and high class distributing organizations in the world will be considered. To such we are prepared to finance all the arrangements necessary to give them this regularly assured number of super-productions per year, for a period of ten years from date of first issue. These productions will be made under the supervision and direction of three of the best known motion picture directors in America.

The distributing agencies controlling our franchises must qualify in all requirements necessary and have proven ability to handle a thoroughly artistic and high-class permanent motion picture franchise. Their organization must include a personnel capable of co-operating with the best publicity mediums existing in their respective territories.

The Hearst newspapers and other leading newspaper syndicates, The Cosmopolitan, McClure's Magazine, Good Housekeeping and similar leading publications have heretofore been the exclusive purveyors to the public of the works of Ella Wheeler Wilcox, for a period of twenty-five years. Our agencies must be able, in all respects, to co-operate with us in a manner that will insure to Mrs. Wilcox that our agencies, disseminating her wondrous thoughts through the medium of the screen, are of sufficient calibre to keep pace with such as the above mentioned mediums of print.

Our only question to solve is whether our distributing agency in each territory is the best possible medium for our particular proposition. Our co-operative plan of working cannot meet with the disapproval of any fair-minded, experienced motion picture distributor.

The Truth About THE BARRIER

BY

Edgar Lewis

Mr. Stephen Bush in an article in The Moving Picture World of October 9, 1915, said:

"Edgar Lewis . . . a man who laughs at criticism where he thinks it is unjust and who profits by it whenever it is just."

I have tried to live up to this estimate, but so many untruths have been published about the picturization of "The Barrier," and my position in the making of this production has been so misrepresented—that it is no longer a laughing matter. Although I believe that I possess an average amount of patience, that admirable quality, in this instance, has ceased to be a virtue. I have been deluged with requests, telegrams and letters asking me to make a public denial of these misleading statements, so I am publishing the following affidavit in answer thereto.

STATE OF NEW YORK COUNTY OF NEW YORK

I, EDGAR LEWIS, being duly sworn, do depose and say:

1. That "The Barrier" was pictured by me for the Lubin Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia.
2. That I only met Mr. Beach once before starting work on "The Barrier," and the main topic of conversation at that meeting was the discussion of a scenario of his made by Adrian Gill Spear, which I had read and found impossible—and that I spent considerable time telling this gentleman how to re-write it.
3. That Mr. Gill Spear afterward submitted another scenario, which—while the prose was acceptable—the adaptation proper was so crude and impracticable that my secretary, Miss Louise Kellar (now Mrs. Lewis) and I found it necessary to re-write the entire adaptation.
4. That on the screen I gave Mr. Gill Spear and Miss Kellar joint credit for the work, but at the public showing and in all advertising matter Miss Kellar's name was eliminated.
5. That every location and every background was personally passed over by me only.
6. That every piece of construction, every studio set, every bit of detail, costuming, properties, etc., etc., was planned and supervised by me.
7. That I personally selected every actor in the cast without consulting Mr. Beach or anyone else. That I submitted no photographs, names or data, and that Mr. Beach never even saw one of them until the picture was completed.
8. That Mr. Beach was never on one of the locations, and never saw a single scene taken. That he had absolutely nothing to do with the direction or supervision of the picture. That the entire production was wholly and solely in my charge, and after that first meeting I never saw Mr. Beach again until the production was completed.
9. That, if necessary, I am in a position to prove the truth of the above affidavit and furnish all data pertaining thereto.

In Witness Whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 9th day of April, 1917.

EDGAR LEWIS.

Sworn to before me this 9th day of April, 1917. RAY C. WEBB, Commissioner of Deeds, City of New York.

The above affidavit is in answer to articles and advertisements that either directly or by inference give the impression that Mr. Beach was the main instrument in the making of this picture.

Trap-Nesting the Picture Fan

ARE longer runs possible in small towns? A number of exhibitors write us a positive “No!”

We invite attention to a test made recently for us by F. B. Potter, an exhibitor of Chelan, Washington.

Mr. Potter tallied his attendance for two weeks, conditions being normal.

Following are the figures for six shows, each show being run two days with the best acquainted and most efficient observers in the box-office to keep tally.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Number of patrons recognized</th>
<th>Total number tallied (names noted)</th>
<th>Total number admissions 6 changes</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>291</td>
<td>671</td>
<td>1,274</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Of whom, attended only once in the two weeks</td>
<td>144</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Of whom, attended only twice in the two weeks</td>
<td>80</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Of whom, attended only three times in the two weeks</td>
<td>56</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Balance attended over three times in the two weeks</td>
<td>42</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Number attending every change (6 pictures in two weeks)</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>1.5 time</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Average attendance of 291 patrons, PER WEEK</td>
<td>42</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

From the above it would appear that less than 42 people would attend every change if changed ONLY TWICE A WEEK!

The average attendance for each individual points more strongly to ONE picture a week than to TWO, say nothing of THREE!

ACCORDING to the above, this theatre would be justified in adopting week runs.

Mr. Potter, at least, finds the result of his remarkable test overwhelmingly in favor of still fewer changes than three times a week.

He writes: “I am thoroughly convinced that this conclusion will apply to any small town in which a house depends on steady patronage for the greater part of its business.”

And he adds: “A thorough application of this test will surprise many an exhibitor who thought he knew all about his patronage.

“The number of patrons who seemingly never miss a change will shrink to a very small number when actually counted.”

THIS is trap-nesting the picture fan with a vengeance. It shows the fan up for just what he is worth, and we recommend that every small town exhibitor put him to this same scathing test.

Mr. Potter’s remarkable and valuable tally points a big moral to the small-town exhibitor, that very important individual who is generally characterized now as constituting the back-bone of the business.

It is this: just make your tally, and find where you are at. Then estimate your possible theatre-goers, not forgetting the country trade which the automobile brings in; and then consider how many of these people you can bring to your theatre by advertising to them longer runs.

Advertising to them—don’t forget that.

You have got to reach all your possible patrons, in and around your town, through your local newspaper columns, through a mailing list, through every cheap advertising method your ingenuity can possibly and constantly suggest.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.
The War and the Film Industry

NOW that the European war has been extended to the shores of the United States, the effect that it may exert upon the film industry becomes a question of vital importance.

Careful investigation of the conditions affecting the present unhealthy state of the industry in France, England and Canada leads us to believe that a similar state will not be felt by the industry here, unless the United States' participation in the war extends over a five or ten year period.

Reports from our correspondents in various parts of the country indicate that producers, distributors and exhibitors have not altered their plans for the future. The only conceivable change in our industrial policy will be a severe retrenchment, a tightening up on expenditure all around.

It is probable—that the film industry will carry a heavy share of the national tax burden. It is probable that a war tax will have a beneficial effect upon all concerned. The film industry, we regret to admit, typifies the wanton recklessness of the American people more thoroughly than any other industrial branch. We refer directly to production waste, stars' salaries and the ruinous daily programme change.

An army of one million men will not make the serious inroad upon our population as have the armies of England and Canada upon those countries.

America is, literally, a land of youth. While England, with her population of 50,000,000 has sent 4,000,000 men, or one-twelfth to the front, and while Canada with her nine million has sent 450,000 men abroad, America, with her one hundred million presents a radically different situation.

The President wants one million men—to start with—recruited from the ranks of the population represented by men from the ages of 19 to 35.

Census reports show that the United States has a greater percentage of younger men than England. Immigration is the reason. The United States census of 1910 shows that there are in this country more than 14,000,000 men between the ages of 19 and 35.

These interesting figures, which we believe have not been published elsewhere, are divided as follows:

Don't Take Yourselves Too Seriously

WE suggest to the Authors' League and to all authors the cultivation of a sense of humor. We believe that this will diminish egoism; and with diminished ego will come the realization that the art of the motion picture is really worth studying, like the technique of the stage for instance. And with this study the average author, even the most famous, will be able to produce material which the screen wants and is willing to pay well for.

Have You Done Your Bit?

IF you are a New York exhibitor and have allowed a week to slip by without voicing to your legislative representative your opposition to the Wheeler tax bill, you have made a valiant effort to increase your film rentals.

If you are in the producing or distributing ranks and cannot give a day to the industry's cause by journeying to Albany for Thursday's public hearing on the tax bill you are justifying the estimate of film men that must have prompted any bill so outrageous as the original draft of the Wheeler Committee.

What will you do? Lay down under the lash of a leader so forceful as William A. Brady or bestir yourself to-day—now—and do something to kill in infancy a move that is certain to flood the industry with a wave of taxation that will cover the nation.

"Dream Stuff"

QUIETE interesting discoveries have been made in our investigation of the various distributing companies, whose service methods are being described from week to week in the news section of this magazine.

One of the most telling of these findings is that an exhibitor in Kansas, or Florida, cannot successfully apply the ingenious and happy suggestions of a man who sits behind a mahogany desk in the Times Square region, and whose dreams are aided andabetted by a clear Havana cigar.

So far we have considered the service methods of Paramount, Bluebird, and V. L. S. E. None of these concerns rely on "dream stuff." Every "stunt" suggestion that goes to exhibitors has withstood the hard knocks of real experience.

We consider the forum plan, as conceived by Paramount, excellent. Everybody contributes real suggestions. The exhibitor is enabled to pick out the ideas that best suit his locality.

"Dream stuff," as one exhibitor puts it, is "lots of fun to read."

And that is the full extent of its value.

Triangle Steps Out Bravely

THE Triangle Distributing Corporation deserves—and will receive—a full share of praise for its action in abandoning the advance deposit system.

Few evils of the industry have proven so irksome to the exhibitor as this same advance deposit if we are to judge from the exhibitors' letters that come to our desk. Censorship, express charges, poor film—all bear their share of condemnation, but the mention of any one would fail to produce the wrath and red-fire that the whispered words "advance deposit" bring.

But still more than the words of congratulation for what it has abolished, Triangle deserves a word for its success in bringing a national bonding organization to work in the film field.

It is perhaps fitting that W. W. Hodkinson, a pioneer in the evolution of the deposit system, should take the lead in the sort of move that may soon bring us to recognition as a "legitimate business."
Tax Bill Modified as Industry Rallies to Wage Battle

Outsault Initiated by Motion Picture News Causes Wholesale Cut in Tax Fee—Still Discriminatory, Say Picture Men at Mass Meeting in Preparation for Public Hearing in Albany Thursday

MOVED by the spontaneous outburst of vigorous opposition initiated by Motion Picture News last week, the Wheeler Committee slashed its tax fees in a wholesale manner before introducing the bill creating a State Motion Picture Bureau in the Legislature on Thursday. The bill as now modified calls for a positive print tax that has been variously estimated to result in from a half million to a million-dollar assessment on the industry annually.

Film men seeing in the proposed New York statute a guide for all the States of the Union resulting ultimately in confiscation, are ralling forces to wage a bitter battle against the bill. An enthusiastic mass meeting, held at the Playhouse theatre, on Monday afternoon, set the ball rolling, while the climax will be reached on Thursday at a public hearing on the bill before the Senate Judiciary Committee in Albany. Prominent men of the industry are volunteering speedily to join the delegation which will present the screen’s case before the legislators.

Opposition to the bill got under way with full steam on the return to the city late last week of William A. Brady, president of the National Association. In calling Monday’s meeting Mr. Brady declared: “If this bill is passed every state in the Union will follow suit. We need action and need it quick.”

The fate of the Wheeler Bill now rests in the hands of these two committees. Get busy—now—write, wire, let them know that to you New York exhibitors the Wheeler Bill means overwhelming burdens—to many, closed doors and bankruptcy.

Chicago Courts for Second Time Overrule Censor “Czar”

The second victory through recourse to the law over the Chicago Censorship Board was won by the Fox Film Company last week in Chicago. A fortnight ago Major Funkhauser and part of his board, in giving one of the latest Fox-Theda Bara productions, “The Tiger Woman,” a review, decided that Theda did so much “vamping” in this particular picture that it would have to go out with a “pink permit.” This meant that only adults could see it.

In the face of the fact that the majority of the board was against the Czar-like Major and his ruling, J. E. O’Toole, manager of the Chicago offices, petitioned with a mandamus proceeding to the court, contending that the picture should have a “white permit.” The case was fought stubbornly by both sides for two days last week before Judge Cooper, who at the finish of the presentation of testimony, instructed the jury to bring in a verdict in favor of the petitioners. They did as instructed, and the picture will now be shown with a “white permit.”

By the same sort of proceedings several weeks ago, the Epoch Producing Company obtained a “white permit” for “The Birth of a Nation.”

Bryant Producing Company Is Formed at $200,000

Among the new corporations of the week reported to Motion Picture News by the Corporation Trust Company, of New Jersey, is the Bryant Producing Company, which was organized in Delaware for $200,000 by Herbert E. Latter, C. L. Rimlinger, of Wilmington, and Clement N. Engagement, of Allentown, Md.

Other new corporations of note are: Weber’s Studios, Inc., formed in New York for $50,000, by Helen White, Meyer Klein and Alexander Werner, of New York; and K and R Producing Corporation, which was formed at $20,000 in New York by Thos. E. Murray, Charles Diringer and Grace Wilkinson, of New York.
Breitinger Slated as Amusement Commissioner

That J. Louis Breitinger, whom Governor Brumbaugh deposed as head of the State Board of Censors in the recent factional row in the Republican party in Pennsylvania, is slated for the post of Commissioner of Amusements, a position it is proposed to create under the terms of the pending Snyder bill, which would substitute "regulation" for censorship of motion picture films, is the story that is gaining circulation in legislative circles on Capitol Hill today.

Mr. Breitinger, it is said, is looked upon with far more favor by the motion picture interests than was the case when, as chief censor, his attitude was regarded as hostile toward the trade, and it is said that some of the biggest picture interests of the state are ready to endorse him if the proposed "regulation" law, abolishing censorship is enacted.

Mr. Breitinger is reported to have changed his attitude with regard to censorship to a considerable degree, and to have come to recognize that he would be far less likely to antagonize the men who have invested big money in the picture business now he realizes these facts.

The bill of Senator C. A. Snyder, substituting "regulation" for censorship, not only has been reported out of the Judiciary General Committee of the Senate, with a favorable recommendation, but has been passed on second and third readings in the upper branch, and is now on the postponed third reading calendar awaiting to be called out for final passage by the Senate.

It is understood that Senator Snyder, who let two opportunities pass for calling the bill out for third reading, is waiting for the most advantageous opportunity to have the measure passed. He is the Auditor-General-elect of the state, and has the backing of the Penrose faction which controls the Legislature, and there seems to be little doubt that he can get the measure through.

The act provides a "system of examination, approval and regulation of motion picture films and stereopticon views, and of the banners, posters and other like advertising matter used in connection therewith, in creating in the Auditor-General's department a commissioner of amusements" to supersede the present censorship board. The measure is said to represent the wishes of some of the largest producers of New York and Pennsylvania.

The same bill, introduced at the last session of the general Assembly, is now on the postponed third reading calendar waiting to be called out for final passage by the Senate.

Backers of the Guernsey Censorship bill, still pending in the House, are now said to be wondering whether or not the passage of the Jackson act will have any effect on their own pet measure to hamper the "movies." At the last session of the general Assembly this bill was passed by both houses. Before Governor Dunne signed it, he was waited upon by a delegation of fifty exhibitors, who convinced him that the measure was un-American and unfair.

Governor Lowden has steadfastly refused to legalize motion picture shows on Sunday, advices were received from Iowa that the State Senate had passed, by vote of 27 to 17, a bill permitting motion picture shows on Sunday in that State.

The act provides a "system of examination, approval and regulation of motion picture films and stereopticon views, and of the banners, posters and other like advertising matter used in connection therewith, in creating a commissioner of amusements" to supersede the present censorship board. The measure is said to represent the wishes of some of the largest producers of New York and Pennsylvania.

"Racial" Censor Bill Passes Illinois Senate

Every citizen of Illinois will be a censor after July 1, if Gov. Frank O. Lowden signs the Jackson bill, which is intended to prohibit the exhibition of pictures depicting race hatred. The bill, which passed the House of Representatives a month ago, was adopted by the Senate, Wednesday.

Motion picture exhibitors from all over the state plan to go before the Governor before May 1, when the Governor expects to consider the measure. They will ask a hearing on the bill before final action is taken.

Representative Robert R. Jackson, colored, of Chicago, is the father of the measure, which provides for a fine of from $200 to $1,000 for exhibitors "representing by lithograph, drawing, picture, play, drama or sketch of the hanging, lynching or burning of a human being."

It was only after a two-hour fight on the floor of the Senate that the bill passed the upper house by a vote of 33 to 7. "The Birth of a Nation," figured extensively in the oratorical pyrotechnics.

Censorship board is provided for in the measure, action against theatre owners being left to either authorities of a municipality or private citizens who oppose the production of objectionable exhibitions.

The same bill, introduced at the last session of the Legislature, passed the House but failed, by the margin of a single vote, to be ratified by the Senate.

Backers of the Guernsey Censorship bill, still pending in the House, are now said to be wondering whether or not the Sunday Opening Bill Passes in Iowa

While reports were being received yesterday at the offices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Times Building, regarding the favorable action taken by the Senate Codes Committee in reporting the Walker bill designed to legalize motion picture shows on Sunday, advices were received from Iowa that the State Senate had passed, by vote of 27 to 17, a bill permitting motion picture shows on Sunday in that State.

The favorable action on the Sunday bills was not making money. This is Omaha's first community theatre, and its career is being watched with interest.

The dinner was one of the most successful that the association has ever held. J. Searle Dawley of the Famous Players had built for the occasion an elaborate Egyptian set. The dinner table was built in step formation, so arranged that four guests sat on each level. On the top level sat Mr. Zukor and Alan Dwan the toastmaster.

Important Topics Up at Penn. Industrial Board Hearing

Representatives of motion picture exhibitors and operators from all parts of Pennsylvania, came to Harrisburg, April 11, and attended a hearing on important pending motion picture legislation, held by the Industrial Board of the Department of Labor and Industry, in the club of the Engineers' Society of Pennsylvania this afternoon.

Strong opposition was expressed generally against the bill, that would bar children under sixteen years old from theatres unless attended by adults. With regard to the measure which would limit the age of motion picture machine operators, to no younger than eighteen years, several speakers suggested that it would be well to wait until it was decided in Washington, what the attitude of the government will be in the matter of drafting young men for military service.

Community Theatre in Omaha

Nearly 150 residents of Dundee, an exclusive residence suburb of Omaha, Neb., have formed an organization and taken over the Dundee theatre, about to be closed by Exhibitor A. C. Hartman, because it is not making money. This is Omaha's first community theatre, and its career is being watched with interest.
NATION'S FOREMOST EXHIBITORS MERGE TO BUY AND SELL FILMS

The first national organization of exhibitors to be formed for the purpose of buying outright the best films to be had in the market and, in turn, renting them to the smaller exhibitors in their respective territories, as exclusively announced in the News several weeks ago, has been quietly forming in the last two months, and will begin active operations on April 23 or thereabouts.

The name of the new organization is the First National Exhibitors Circuit. It comprises approximately thirty members, representing a total capitalization of $20,000,000.

The active organizers are three men, all well known in the industry; J. D. Williams, who recently completed the formation of a similar movement in Australia, and who is well known for his American film activities; T. L. Tally, who organized the Tally Circuit at Los Angeles, and who is said to be the first man to operate a picture theatre in this country; and E. B. Johnston, secretary and director of the Turner and Dahnken Circuit, San Francisco.

Mr. Williams called on Mr. Tally last January, and outlined a plan to him of forming an exhibitor body, comprising the foremost exhibitors in the country. Mr. Tally had been pondering a similar project at the same time. They compared notes, and set out at once for San Francisco. A few minutes' talk secured the enthusiastic approval and support of Turner and Dahnken, and Mr. E. B. Johnston immediately enlisted as an active member of the crusade. Since January these three organizers have made a rapid tour of the country, winding up in New York City within the last week, ready to outline their plans which are now complete. Every man they approached fell in with their plans instantly.

It would be difficult to select a more representative list of prominent film men than those that have joined—the colors of Messrs. Williams, Tally and Johnston. The members signed up are:

- T. L. Tally, Los Angeles; Jensen and Von Herberg, Portland, Ore.; Turner and Dahnken Circuit, San Francisco; Silver Bow Amusement Company, Butte, Mont.; Mr. Saz, of Sax Brothers, Minneapolis; Jones, Lenneick and Ascher Brothers, Chicago; William Sievers, St. Louis; A. H. Blank, Des Moines, Iowa; E. A. Hulsey, Dallas, Texas; Eugene Pierce, New Orleans; Jake Wells, Atlantas, Ga.; Tom Moor, Washington, D. C.; Col. Fred Levy, Louisville; Robert Lieber, Indianapolis; Mantlebaum, Cleveland; John Kunsky, Detroit; Clark and Rowland, Pittsburgh; N. H. Gordon, Boston; S. L. Rothapfel, New York, and Stanley Mastaub, Philadelphia.

The three organizers of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit believe that the above-named men are the foremost exhibitors in their respective territories.

Messrs. Tally, Williams and Johnston, in an interview with Motion Picture News, outlined a policy quite as enterprising as the members of their associations are themselves.

Mr. Williams, who acted as spokesman, said:

"We will hold a meeting on April 23, at which seven directors will be selected. The duty of these directors will be to select the films which will be used on the circuit. They will be elected as follows: Two from the Pacific Coast; two from the Atlantic Coast, and three from the territory in between. The three central territory directors will be selected from north, south and central; so that all territories, or zones, in the United States, broadly speaking, will have fair representation." Concerning the money involved in the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Mr. Tally said:

"The amount of money spent weekly by our members for first-run pictures amounts to at least $40,000. By our plan of buying outright, we will have the pictures for all time. We will show them as long as justifed; then we will rent them at equitable prices to the other exhibitors in our territory.

"Practically every member has been an exchange man of long experience," said Mr. Johnston. "The saving in salaries operating our own exchanges—for that is what it amounts to—will exceed $300,000 a year."

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit does not intend to corner the picture market. They do not intend to monopolize in any sense. They consider themselves as an organization, founded purely on logic and common sense, which has been formed to secure the highest grade of pictures.

In one sense, the organization is the result of a need for self-protection. Herefore, whenever an exceptionally good feature was produced, it has been shown, very often, in legitimate theatres.

"We believe that pictures should go into picture houses," said Mr. Tally. "We know positively that the big features are put out on Broadway way after time, and lose money. The same thing occurs in every large city in the country. It so happens that each of our members has a reputation in his community which is relied upon by thousands of people seeking entertainment. When they go behind a picture, the public knows it is good. That is the reason why the pictures that lose money in legitimate houses would make handsome profits if they played, instead, in reliable picture houses.

"You can readily understand that our aim is to give the producer a living chance. We will pay good money—and we will pay it in cash—to the producers who give us what we want. We do not intend to haggle over prices, because we realize fully that if producers are not given an opportunity to make fair profits, we certainly cannot depend upon them to give us like quality we must have."

Asked further regarding the monopolistic tendency which the new exhibitor body might seem to indicate, Mr. Johnston said:

"We have canvassed the territory thoroughly, and we know for a certainty that there is room for two or three more circuits equally as large as ours."

Texas State Convention is Called for June

A delegates' conference, consisting of representatives from San Antonio, Fort Worth, El Paso, Waco, Houston, Galveston, Denison, Sherman local organizations was held in Dallas, April 3. Those making up the conference were: W. J. Lyle, San Antonio; J. P. Everett, Waco; Paul Berresco, Houston; Will G. Wyll, Sherman; E. H. Hunter, Galveston; W. E. Weatherford, Dallas; Karl Hohletzelle, Dallas; W. F. Sonnemon, Waco; Jas. Wilson, Sherman; L. M. Ridout, Denison; Albert Walker, Dallas, and Ben B. Lewis, El Paso.

The result of the conference was that a state convention was called to be held in Galveston, June 12 and 13. A special committee in charge of the matter was appointed and other matters of special interest to the Texas Amusement Managers was discussed.

Connecticut Sunday Bill Has Unhappy Fate

Marcus H. Holcomb, Governor of Connecticut, has ended temporarily the hopes that Sunday moving pictures will be legalized in his state. His vote of the Martin bill, which passed both houses of the State Legislature, came this week. And now the legislators believe there is but a forlorn hope for passing the bill over the Governor's veto.

Connecticut's State Senate has passed, despite vigorous protests of moving picture house owners, a bill prohibiting the owners from selling beyond seating capacity except that they may sell standing room to a capacity estimated by the state police, providing the owner posts a notice stating plainly such standing-room capacity. A penalty of $25 is provided for each violation.

Coulter Buys Interest in Motoy Films

C. R. Coulter, formerly of Coulter's Attractions, Seattle, Wash., has secured an interest in the Peter Pan Film Corporation. This company has bought the United States rights to the new Motoy comedies made by the Toyland Films, Inc, of Chicago.

Coulter intends to continue the Motoy productions, but it is probable that no more sales will be made until May, when the company will have about sixteen releases ready, with a full and complete line of advertising matter.
New York Exhibitors Will Fight Music Tax

Manhattan Local Holds Exciting Carryage of Music Publishers’ Plans to Levy Exhibitor Royalty Meeting and Vows to Prevent "unrestricted" music for exhibitors' benefit. J. Roberts Rubin, attorney for the New York Local, gave an interesting legal summary of the situation, making clear that, as Mr. Berg had stated, it was a complicated thing, addicted to running about in circles.

Bronx Exhibitors to Fight Music Tax

At a well-attended meeting of the Cinema Club of the Bronx last Thursday evening, exhibitors laid plans for vigorous opposition to the royalty tax which the Society of Composers and Publishers is seeking to collect from all theatre owners playing compositions controlled by its members. A unanimous vote of thanks was given to S. M. Berg for his efforts in aiding the exhibitors' fight.

Shirley Mason in Screen Version of Kyne Story

Peter B. Kyne's story "Light in Darkness," recently completed at the Edison studios, will have Shirley Mason as its leading player. The plot of the story is based on the injustice that may result from the law that prohibits paroled convicts from marrying within two years after they leave a penitentiary. Actual scenes from the Branch penitentiary on Hart's Island, N. Y., are presented. Frank Morgan plays opposite Miss Mason.

Bach Joining Hoffman

W. A. Bach, who has been in charge of the publicity service department of the Canadian Universal Film Company for the past two years, is leaving on April 18 to join M. H. Hoffman, former general manager of the Universal Film Company, in a new film enterprise.

No Censor Danger in Michigan

As the Michigan State Legislature adjourns April 20, and as it is now too late for any action on bills still in the hands of committees, it looks very much as if State Censorship is "dead" for two years.

Increase Size of Quarters

The Standard and Metro exchanges at Escanaba, Mich., who look after northern peninsula bookings, have moved to a new building, which they leased, at Escanaba and Georgia avenues.

Healthy Conditions in South Despite War

The war situation is having a beneficial effect on moving pictures in New Orleans if it is having any effect. The men who are planning and building are going ahead with their plans with confidence. In fact, several new houses which have not yet been announced will be built during the summer. There was west of the city during the week, playing moving pictures. The Lyric, which has been a burlesque house, has gone over to pictures, "Intolerance" is playing at the Tulane, and "A Daughter of the Gods" at the Crescent, while the Orpheum, the vaudeville house, is showing "Patria." In addition to the big features named "Civilization" and "The Fall of a Nation" are also playing here.

Butte Mutual Office Moved

The Butte office of the Mutual Film Corporation has been moved to larger quarters at 124 West Granite street. The new location is in the Independent Telephone Building, a modern fireproof structure.

"Wake Up America" Day Is Plan of Duty Committee

For the next week the efforts of the National Duty Committee of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will be directed toward one specific object. This object is the preparation of New York City for the Wake Up America Day, which has been designated by the Mayor's Defense Committee as April 19.

For this purpose the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers will combine its forces with those of the Mayor's Committee, and temporary offices for this purpose will be taken in the room now occupied by that committee on 30 East Forty-second street, on the second floor.

At the regular meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers at Keene's Chop House on Thursday, Mr. John Harvey, of the Mayor's Committee, was a guest of the A. M. P. A., and outlined the work which the Mayor's Committee has already done, and the opportunity for cooperation which existed with the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers. Particularly was it hinted that the Mayor's Committee was about to enlarge itself into a national force, and in that connection, that motion pictures would be one of the main channels through which they felt that effective work could be accomplished.

Bach is appointed to meet with the representatives of the Mayor's Defense Committee immediately after the adjourning of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers' meeting.
Triangle to Abolish Deposits; Will Bond Exhibitors

THE Triangle Distributing Corporation will abolish the deposit system and institute in its place a new plan of bonding exhibitors on April 30. The money that exhibitors have on deposit will be applied to renting current releases.

R. W. France, general manager of Triangle, when asked regarding the new bonding plan, said:

"This step is one of the first that Triangle is taking to assist the exhibitor, giving him greater freedom to devote to the exhibiting problems which constitute his legitimate work in the industry. It is also Triangle's way of keeping the pledge made to the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America on December 6, 1916."

At the time, Triangle made the following statement to the Indiana exhibitors:

"The principal need of a deposit is to provide against sudden and unfair discontinuances by theatres at such times or in such manner as to cause film to idle. Doubtless the trade took this to be one of those glib promises that are easier to make than to keep," went on Mr. France. "But Triangle officials have been busily engaged in arranging this reform ever since."

"Beginning April 30, and extending to all accounts as fast as the actual labor of re-writing the old contracts will permit, exhibitors may apply their deposits against current service; and in lieu of deposit to secure this corporation against abuse of contracts, we have perfected arrangements with the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, whereby for a nominal sum, it will underwrite the contract made by the exhibitor and become, in security for the correct performance of all his obligations under the contract. Under these circumstances the only remaining advantage of the deposit system would be the free financing of our proposition by the exhibitors, a service this corporation has never needed, and does not want."

"The premiums which the exhibitor will have to pay per year will only average one per cent, of one month's deposit under the present system."

"I am not a little elated over this successful termination of a long, uphill fight and my satisfaction is due, in a great measure, to the fact that it establishes the soundness of our proposition, and that we have agreed to provide bonds for such exhibitors as may elect to substitute a bond in place of their cash deposit."

"It is the intention of the Universal officials to present only the highest type of photodrama, under the new Butterfly trade mark. The stories for these productions will be by noted authors and scenario writers entirely. The casts for the pictures will be selected from the roster of actors which they interpret, and the pictures will be directed by leaders in this branch of the film profession."

\[WE AGREE WITH YOU\]

"Your continual pounding away at the daily change evil is having its effect on a number of thinking exhibitors. * * * I have made a number of inquiries for prices on the two-day basis and I am talking along the lines of your endeavor to every exhibitor I meet. The only objection I hear is that the present day quality of features does not permit a two-day showing; but none of the exhibitors who raise this point ever tried keeping a film over one day!"

Alfred Tanzer, Milwaukee.

\[Universal Announces "Butterfly" Brand of Pictures\]

A new brand of feature photoplays is to be offered for release through the Universal exchanges, under the brand name of Butterfly Pictures. These releases will be five reels in length, and will be produced by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at their studios in California.

It is the intention of the Universal officials to present only the highest type of photo-drama, under the new Butterfly trade mark. Stories for these productions will be by noted authors and scenario writers entirely. Theetcas for the pictures will be selected with unusual care for the fitness of the actors assigned to portray the roles which they interpret, and the pictures will be directed by leaders in this branch of the film profession.
Paralta Ideal to Prevent Waste and Expense

New Concern Outlines Plan of Action Intended to Establish More Economical and Equitable Relations with Exhibitors

THE Paralta Pictures Corporation, the plans of which were announced exclusively in Motion Picture News several weeks ago, has issued a statement in which the policy of the concern, as regards cutting down of waste and of equity to the individual exhibitor is elaborated upon. Excerpts from the statement follow:

Paralta Plays, Inc., is the distributing part of an enterprise designed especially to counteract the expense and waste which seem to have permeated the film industry.

Herman Flechttenber, the chairman of the board of directors of the new corporation, is one of the pioneer exhibitors of the country and established the largest chain of moving picture theatres in America.

Two years ago he began to seek a way to bring about more equitable conditions and called into council Carl Anderson, formerly connected with the Lasky-Paramount interests; Nat. I. Brown, of St. Louis, and Robert T. Kane, of San Francisco.

Mr. Flechttenberg's theatres in the South and some western theatres were utilized in making a test. The result was the same in each section and experience showed that there had been evolved, as a result of these two years of study and investigation, a plan in producing and distributing which is equitable in every feature.

Mr. Brown has worked into the plan many features, designed especially to establish unshakable equity in the division of financial results.

Through co-operation, waste in distribution is expected to be reduced to a minimum. This saving will be turned to the advantage of the exhibitor.

The production end of the Paralta plan has already been established in Los Angeles under the supervising direction of Mr. Kane and work has begun on two big feature pictures. Paralta will present five to seven-reel feature productions but they will be stories told in pictures and not in words.

Several states rights men of prominence, who have inquired into the new Paralta distribution plan, and who have talked with General Manager Nat. Brown, express their satisfaction with its details.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Answers Criticism of Her Poems

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, America's greatest woman poet, has been criticised for dealing, in her verses, with the passions of women, especially in regard to their adaptation for the screen.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox, in a recent letter, wrote:

"I have been criticized for my poems of passion, but I have written of life as I see it and I have written only truths. I have fought the battle of the weak and urged strongly for the single standard of morals, and through all of my work I have had a purpose. I do not write to amuse myself, but because I have a lesson to teach."

American Bioscope Institutes "Screenews Magazine"

A single-reel subject, which will be known as the "Screenews Magazine," containing diversified subjects, will be presented in the next two weeks at the American Bioscope Company, Chicago.

According to J. E. Willis, president and general manager of the concern, this feature will carry departments covering scientific, fashion, musical, travelogic, comic and patriotic subjects. Each issue will present concisely new variety topics. An organization of cartoonists and artists will be employed.

Warwick in Virginia

Robert Warwick has gone to Richmond, Va., with his entire company, now working on his new film feature, "A Modern Othello," to take several scenes in that part of the South. Miss Elaine Hammerstein is playing the leading role opposite Mr. Warwick in "A Modern Othello," which will probably be the next release of the Robert Warwick Film Corporation.

Patents Company Loses Suit to Film Manufacturers

By a decree handed down in the United States Supreme Court, affirming the decision of the Federal Court in New York, the United States Patents Company cannot restrict the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and other defendants, from using certain makes and varieties of film with the machines upon which they control patents.

The controversy hinged on the "Latham Loop," a device important to the successful operation of projection machines. The United States Patents Company control patents on the Latham Loop.

The Patents Company brought suit against the Universal Company about two years ago, claiming patent infringement. Universal claimed that their use of the loop involved only a means of protecting it, and that the patents company did not hold rightful jurisdiction over the brand of films projected.

"Birth Control" to Be Shown in Cleveland

According to an announcement made yesterday by the Message Photoplay Corporation, Inc., a B. S. Moss unit, the first presentation of the "Birth Control" film will take place in Ohio, probably in the city of Cleveland. The film was shown in conjunction with the personal appearance of Mrs. Margaret Sanger, around whom the message is woven.

Seventy percent of the population is said to have been reached with the film, which was presented at the Woman's Club in New York.
Benjamin Hampton Resigns Presidency of General Film

Confirming Rumors, Hampton Gives Reason for Severing Connections as Overwork—Needs More Time to Devote to "The Barrier" and "The Auction Block"—Bolster Made Vice-President of General

IN confirmation of his statement made through the columns of Motion Picture News last week, Benjamin Hampton has given out the following statement relative to his resignation from the presidency of the General Film Company:

Confirming Rumors, Hampton Gives Reason for Severing Connections as Overwork—Needs More Time to Devote to "The Barrier" and "The Auction Block"—Bolster Made Vice-President of General

I have resigned the presidency of General Film service is steadily going ahead and under Mr. Bolster's management marked progress may be expected.

I have resigned the presidency of General Film Company so that I can spend my time on the Rex Beach Pictures Company, of which Mr. Beach and I are the owners. I am distributing 'The Barrier,' which is a highly important piece of work in itself. Mr. Beach and I are making a ten-reel drama of 'The Auction Block,' and are planning to start production at once on another large picture from another of his books. It was impossible for me to do justice to these valuable interests and continue to hold such an important matter as the presidency of General Film.

Some weeks ago I requested the board to appoint as assistant to the president of the General Film, Harold Bolster, who was then business manager of the Vitagraph Company. Mr. Bolster has been here for some weeks getting the reins of the General Film into his hands and the directors at their meeting on Monday elected him vice-president and general manager of the company.

Mr. Bolster has already made good for himself in the picture business in his excellent work at the Vitagraph Company and he is taking hold of his General Film duties in such a manner as to convince all his associates that he will be splendidly successful in his new position.

General Film service is steadily going ahead and under Mr. Bolster's management marked progress may be expected. Some of the trade journals have been kind enough to state that during the very short time I have been with General Film important progress has been made. Unfortunately but the important changes that have taken place in General Film must be credited to the manufacturers who are also the common stockholders of the company. Like many old, successful institutions General Film has become conservative, but the manufacturers are very progressive and were very quick to accept suggestions to modernize and improve the business. General Film is today in position to move to a most prominent position in picture distributing.

The improvement in the quality of General Film pictures since January 1 is undoubtedly one of the big events of the year in the industry. I think I am safe in saying that today exhibitors can secure from General Film the finest short films ever produced.

Kalem's product, which is known favorably by exhibitors, is even better than in the past. Kalem's high quality is due to the literary and artistic genius of Frank J. Marion, one of the most intelligent men in the industry, and to the highly developed organization which Mr. Marion and his chief lieutenant, William Wright, have created. Mr. Marion invented the series system of pictures, which is now used by many producers, and which is preferred by many exhibitors to the serial. 'The American Girl,' 'A Daughter of Daring,' and 'Ham and Bud' are among the principal subjects now offered by Kalem.

George K. K. Spoor, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and William N. Selig are recognized the world over as leading producers of long pictures. Each of these famous producers is using his personal talent in supervising the new short subjects for General Film.

Commodore Blackton's 'O. Henry' pictures, in two reels, are gems. The newspaper critics are reviewing them just as they review the five-reel features.

Mr. Spoor is contributing several excellent series to General Film—among them some splendid two-reel Black Cat stories and a very popular series, 'Is Marriage Sacred?'

Mr. Selig, by special request, is making a new series of the wild animal comedies that gave him international fame. Also he is producing in two-reel form the old Hoyt farces that made us laugh a decade ago.

Collins Says War Will Not Affect Films

Observations in Coast-to-Coast Tour Convinces McClure Pictures President, That War Will Not Harm Industry

A lmerica's entrance into the war will in no way harm the motion picture industry and indications are that the business actually will be benefited by present conditions, according to Frederick L. Collins, president of McClure Pictures, who has just returned from a trip West.

Manufacturers on the Coast are not planning to let up in the slightest degree because of the war, Mr. Collins said. I find, upon my return to New York, that the same condition exists here. We are all proceeding just as if there had been no declaration of war.

Motion picture producers will not expect to pay as large dividends as before, for, of course, we all must contribute a war tax and as long as this tax is a reasonable one, and the motion picture industry is not singled out to bear unfair burdens, business conditions will remain prosperous.

"I do think that the war will stop the rise of fly-by-night producers and a number of the unindustrial outfits will be eliminated for the simple reason that investors will be more cautious and will not be so ready to lend money to companies of no standing. The more of these that drop out, the better conditions will be.

"In Europe the conflict has increased the percentage of motion picture fans among those at home. The business in England, for instance, has been affected only because there are now no facilities for production, for so many of the workers in the industry are at the front.

"There is a greater demand than ever for American films in England but we over here are hampered in making deliveries because of the difficulty in transporting films to England and in making collections.

"In the United States, I believe, money will be more plentiful than ever. Most of the war expenditures will be made here. We will not send troops out of the country in any considerable number for many months, and we do the percentage of the decrease in our population will not be anything like that in England.

New Triangle Booking Policy Favored by Exhibitors

One tangible evidence of the soundness of the new Triangle booking policy has been shown in the statement by R. W. France, general manager of the Triangle Distributing Corporation, to the effect that Eugene H. Roth, proprietor of the Portola theatre, of San Francisco, and executive manager of the new California theatre now being constructed in that city at a cost of $1,750,000, has decided, after a careful survey of the entire market, to book the Triangle program for both houses.

E. V. Richards, general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company and the Pleasure Gardens Enterprises of New Orleans, which operate more than thirty-five motion picture houses, has also made known the fact that he and his associates will rely entirely upon the Triangle program and "special" features to fill their new quarter million dollar Strand theatre, to be opened in the Southern metropolis.

The New Orleans Times-Picayune of Sunday, April 1, contained a special article on Mr. Hodkinson's plan.
Ogden Pictures Corporation Begins April 23

Lillian Walker's Company Leaves New York for Utah Studio—Will Produce Seven Reels for Open Market—Prominent Distributor Selected

EIGHTEEN members of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, of which Lillian Walker is the star, left the Grand Central terminal, New York, last Saturday in a special train on the Lake Shore Limited, for Ogden, Utah. They will begin production activities on the first seven-reel drama April 23. The picture will be ready for distribution six weeks later.

Lester Parks, vice-president of the company, in a conversation with a Motion Picture News representative, mentioned the name of one of the most prominent distributors in New York, who will dispose of the Lillian Walker films. This name is at present withheld from publication.

In the party besides Miss Walker and her supporting cast are the technical staff, Harry Revere, the director, and Aaron Hoffman, scenario writer. Mr. Hoffman leaves Broadway to collaborate in production details with Mr. Revere. He will remain in Ogden indefinitely.

"In the past," said Mr. Parks, "much stress has been laid on Miss Walker's dimples. We are going to show the public that Miss Walker has something more to offer the screen than dimples.

"Like all undeveloped and experimental things, the modern motion picture has done a great deal of borrowing. In the early days, we borrowed from the theatre. As the art improved, the difference between the two mediums became greater, until now the photoplay has almost cast off all allegiance to the older art, and stands as an individual form of entertainment.

"One of the evils which it borrowed from the theatre, and which it has not yet wholly cast away, is the 'star system.' This system, however, has now nearly disappeared from the stage. Audiences go to theatres, not to see a famous actor, but to see a good play. An actor becomes popular only when he interprets some part to perfection.

"So the photoplay is the only art now which still maintains this worn-out idea. The average man loves a good story. He likes to see it well told, with dramatic interest maintained and suspense kept up to the end. And he wants to see it acted by the most competent cast possible. But to pay to see the picture, not the posters that decorate the theatre's exterior.

Star System Is All Wrong, Says Harry Raver

Harry Raver, President of Art Dramas, Inc., Believes That Stars Must Go—"Photoplay Is Casting Off Old Allegiance to Stage"

Harry Raver, president of Art Dramas, Inc., takes an attitude towards all stars of thumbs down. Speaking of the efforts that are being made to divorce the screen from the stage, Mr. Raver pointed out in an interview that the star is the one evil which has not yet been cast out.

"The average man loves a good story. He likes to see it well told, with dramatic interest maintained and suspense kept up to the end. And he wants to see it acted by the most competent cast possible. But to pay to see the picture, not the posters that decorate the theatre's exterior.

Lewis Swears to Directorship of "The Barrier"

On the eve of the Broadway showing of his latest production, "The Bar Sinister," Edgar Lewis has issued a statement in affidavit form, answering questions which have been raised as to the extent of his responsibility for the picture version of "The Barrier."

"In the past," said Mr. Parks, "much stress has been laid on Miss Walker's dimples. We are going to show the public that Miss Walker has something more to offer the screen than dimples.

"Like all undeveloped and experimental things, the modern motion picture has done a great deal of borrowing. In the early days, we borrowed from the theatre. Under-Sea Speedster First of Bray Scientific Drawings

The Bray studios have installed a separate department under the supervision of J. F. Leventhal, who, in conjunction with Waldemar Kaempfert of Popular Science Monthly, will make a series of animated technical drawings of new American inventions for war.

First of these will be the "submarine hound," a type of submersible capable of doing sixty miles an hour, the invention of Simon Lake. This will be shown in an early release of Paramount Bray photographs.

Hoffman Buys "Sin Woman"

M. H. Hoffman, who resigned recently as manager of exchanges of the Universal Manufacturing Company, has bought the world rights for the George Backer Film Corporation's film, "The Sin Woman."

"An actor should be judged, not by the amount of 'personality' he has, but by his ability and fitness for the role in which he finds himself. An actor who relies on his personality isn't acting. He is simply being himself, and however interesting he himself is, his popularity cannot last, because he is the same in every picture.

"The actor on the contrary, who throws himself into his part, whether the part be an extra in a mob or the hero of the play, is the actor who deserves credit. And it is with actors like this that good pictures are made.

"With the improvement in public taste which is rapidly being brought about to-day, the average man will begin to realize that the function of the actor is to play his part to the best of his ability. This necessitates that the part be a good one and hence that the story be worth while.

"If any pictures were producing now, last 300 years, they wouldn't be the star pictures. They will be the pictures with good stories and good actors."

Real Service That Distributors Are Anxious To Give

The third of a series of articles—The Paramount Plan

Back of every successful film distributing organization that endeavors to give patron-getting service to the exhibitor, is a definite, fundamental policy. In each case, it is the backbone out of which grows every plan of the distributor. Without this backbone, a distributor might shout Service! at the top of his lungs, and accomplish nothing. His ideas might be good, but they would be scattered and ineffective. In other words, service to the exhibitor means more than sending him electro for advertisements, and lobby display photographs.

In the two previous articles, the notion of what service really stands for was pointed out to be fundamentally different with each company. This week, the word is given another meaning entirely.

It is one of the purposes of this series to give you the rock bottom meaning of the various distributors' service campaigns, in order that you may have a better understanding of what each of them is driving at.

PARAMOUNT believes that twelve thousand heads are better than one. Paramount's notion of the best way to bring the public into your theatre is to allow other exhibitors, with wisdom gained through experience, to tell you how they accomplished it.

It is one of the purposes of this series to give you the rock bottom meaning of the various distributors' service campaigns, in order that you may have a better understanding of what each of them is driving at.

PARAMOUNT believes that twelve thousand heads are better than one. Paramount's notion of the best way to bring the public into your theatre is to allow other exhibitors, with wisdom gained through experience, to tell you how they accomplished it.

Paramount wants to have its service department considered as a forum. This theory resolves itself into a well conducted magazine in which the opinions and experiences of those qualified to speak are presented in a sprightly way. Paramount Progress is a twelve page magazine, and is issued weekly.

Its contents are composed of contributions from exhibitors, illustrations from the Paramount plays of the week and other matter of direct interest to the Paramount exhibitor. The magazine usually opens with a feature article, containing practical advice and suggestions.

At present, these articles are the result of a prize contest in which the exhibitors have been invited to tell their experiences in making a little money go a long way as a weekly advertising appropriation. In the current number, for example, J. G. Bodine, manager of the American theatre, Washington, D. C., wins the prize (1,000 copies of Picture Progress, a Paramount "fan" publication) with his article on "How to Spend an Advertising Appropriation of $12 a Week."

The previous prize article, equally to the point, came from the pen of E. E. Blair, manager of the Fayette theatre, Celina, Ohio, a town of 4,850.

According to the service manager, this contest typifies precisely the Paramount notion of service. The men who write the articles are not citing "dream stuff"; they are recounting actual fighting line experience. Other exhibitors in other sections are at liberty to read these articles and to use them for what they are worth in their individual cases.

Ingenious exhibitor aids are printed in Paramount Progress from time to time. These may take the form of clever lobby displays, or of "stunt" suggestions. At present, the use of illustrated postals in a spring drive on the mailing list is being urged.

Paramount Progress contains a department not unlike the "With the Exhibitor" department of Motion Picture News. The following item is a specimen:

"B. Yessner, manager of the Arcade theatre, is issuing a very attractive four page folder. Mr. Yessner believes in the use of white space, which makes his program very attractive."

An instance of the service ideas suggested to Paramount Progress, and put at the command of other exhibitors is the list of suggestions for theatre letterheads. Those suggested are all distinctive, carrying out the Paramount theory that a successful theatre must be distinctive. For mailing list use, the importance of a dignified but striking letterheads cannot be exaggerated. In case your local printer cannot meet the requirements, Paramount offers to have the letterheads printed for you.

For the two pictures which Paramount releases each week, musical cue records are printed; also, a synopsis of the plays, and a list of available advertising accessories, such as stills, slides, newspaper cuts, lobby photographs, paper, etc. Some of these accessories are free, others loaned and some sold to the exhibitor.

Our one objection to Paramount Progress is that some of its space is taken up by advertisements intended to sell pictures to exhibitors—not to the public, for Paramount Progress does not reach the public. They inject a note of insincerity into what is otherwise an exceptionally sincere service publication.

A booklet has been published, "Paramount Advertising Aids," a copy of which is supposed to be in the hands of every Paramount exhibitor. This contains a list, with catalog numbers, of all available cut-outs in the two pictures which Paramount releases each week. It also contains a list, with catalog numbers, of all available content for a full page newspaper cut-out. The exhibitor orders these, by number, from his exchange.

Goldwyn Will Sell All Pictures on Open Market

Samuel Goldfish Decides on Territorial Sales Plan, Following Advice of Exhibitors—Each Film an "Independent Unit"

THE Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has announced its intentions of entering the state rights field. All productions will be considered as "independent units," and will be sold accordingly.

Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, in a statement said:

"For a second time in a fortnight the exhibitors have dictated a Goldwyn policy. Our first adherence to exhibitor advice was in deciding to own and operate Goldwyn's own branches throughout the country. In the same spirit we have now decided that for the sake of maintaining the few popular stars in a group that they can play at a profit."

"Our first steps in the formation of the Goldwyn organization brought to us five stars of a great popularity and individual drawing power. We are certain that each one of these stars can stand alone and have enormous exhibitor appeal."

"Being firmly determined to produce only quality pictures of sustained excellence we intend to treat our productions as independent units and so offer them to exhibitors."

"We now announce for the first time that we will release a minimum of twenty-six pictures a year. The value to exhibitors of our policy is obvious. "Until now the problem confronting all exhibitors desiring to book their theatres for fifty-two weeks independent of any contract service has been the volume of supply of high-grade productions."

"Goldwyn pictures are many excellent pictures being made by other producers operating in the open market, but the trouble has been that there were not enough of them to keep first-class theatres provided with an all-the-year-round supply."

Mr. Goldfish added that exhibitors will be given an opportunity to see Goldwyn productions in plenty of time to decide whether or not they are worth while.

Exhibitor Must Satisfy Public, Says Greene

Arclraft President Points Out That Popular Stars Should Be Supplied to the Public as a Grocer Supplies Commodities in Demand

WALTER E. GREENE, president of the Arclraft Pictures Corporation, is of the belief that the exhibitor and the grocer have one important thing in common—they must be able to supply the demands of their customers.

"When the grocer orders his stock for the coming week, said Mr. Greene, "his first care is to obtain articles that are in the greatest demand by his customers, commodities that are most popular among the patrons of his store. Everyone appreciates the fact that he would be foolish to stock up a supply of goods that are unknown and endeavor to create a demand for them when he could easily sell articles that are already established in the minds of his patrons."

"And so with the exhibitor. In planning his stock of entertainment, why should he not order a picture for which he will have to create a market, when he can get a picture that is in great demand by his patrons before he even announces it? The exhibitor who books a picture on a day when he could show a D. W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks or George M. Cohan subject is much the same as the grocer who does not have on his shelves articles that are in demand."

"Free rights' policy that is released through the Arclraft Pictures Corporation is an established article; a commodity of entertainment that the people really want. This is due to the fact that Arclraft has cornered the market of motion picture popularity as controlled by the greatest favorites in the industry, making it possible for each of its releases to present an individual that stands far above any in his or her respective field."

"As a result of its affiliations with the biggest names in the industry, Arclraft is in a position to offer the exhibitor a picture for which it is unnecessary to create a demand. The exhibitor does not have to say who, for instance, D. W. Griffith is. Everyone knows that he is the greatest genius the motion picture has ever known. Nor does he have to go into details as regards Douglas Fairbanks. Never has a male star taken such a hold upon the public as the inimitable "Dogg," who, although widely impersonated, is daily adding to his wonderful popularity among the vast army of motion picture patrons, regardless of race, age, creed or belief. The same applies to "America's Sweetheart," and as for George M. Cohan, there never has been one before him and there never will be one after him. George M. Cohan on the screen is as unique a figure as he is on the stage, and his instantaneous success as a motion picture actor is recognized by everyone in a wide radius of the industry. He has seen his work before the camera. Collectively these names represent the greatest coalition of individuals of supreme popularity, that something which brings the skedels to the box-office window."

MacQuarrie to Again Appear in Bernstein Productions

Once again Murdock MacQuarrie, who has recently been directing, will do the make-up and appear on the screen.

Isadore Bernstein of the Bernstein Film Productions has managed to lure him back before the camera and will co-star him with Betty Brice, his charming new lead.

MacQuarrie was the first man to realize that the character part is as important in its relation to the plot as the lead, and his work as Rabbi Mendel, in Bernstein's play, "The Daughters of Israel," which was released under the Universal management, will be long remembered.

Sub-Sea Spectacle "Submarine Eye" is Completed

Williamson Brothers' first independent release, "The Submarine Eye," which has been a year in the making, is announced as ready for release.

In theme, treatment and photographic results, "The Submarine Eye" is heralded as the foremost picture of its kind yet produced. A number of new and startling innovations are said to have been invented. Yet, interesting as are the underwater effects, Williamson Brothers impress that they have not been allowed to overshadow the continuity of the romantic love story that leads up to the climax staged at the bottom of the sea.

The cast includes Barbara Tennant, Chester Barnett, Lillian Cook and Eric Mayne. The feature was taken under personal supervision of J. Ernest Williamson, and the direction was in the hands of Wintfarop Kelcy.

The inverted underwater periscope from which the story gets its name, points the way to effectual preparedness against skulking submarines and deadly mines, and shows how easily it could be adapted to Uncle Sam's defensive warfare.

All of the underwater scenes in "The Submarine Eye" were taken in previously chartered locations among the islands of the West Indies. A special musical score has been prepared. It is adapted to any number of instruments from piano to an augmented orchestra of sixty pieces. The score provides two themes, one accentuating the love story and the other the deep-sea tragedy. These were specially composed by M. L. Lake.

As to marketing plans nothing definite has been given out, but it is understood "The Submarine Eye" will be exploited in the leading capitals of the world simultaneously with its establishment in the principle cities of the United States. Assurance of absolute protection to every individual and firm that contracts for future exploitation of the attraction is given by the producers by reason of their policy of releasing subsequent pictures at least six months apart, which will give the exhibitor ample chance to reimburse himself.

The Day of the Dub is Going, Says Wilk

According to Jacob Wilk, a partner in the Heller and Wilk enterprises, the day of the "dub," the thoughtless or brainless creature of the industry is nearly over, and the state rights picture, with the principle of competition on which it is founded, can be given the entire credit.

"Exhibitors, distributors and producers have all fallen in the easy rut of the program," said Mr. Wilk to a News representative. "They accept what they are given. Now, they are beginning to wake up. They have seen the money that can be made in the open market, and you cannot mention a single program company that has not gone behind an open booking proposition of some kind—just to try it out. Look at the avalanche of program companies toward open booking now!"

"I want to take issue with the editorial by Mr. Johnston on skyrocketting the state pictures," said Mr. Wilk. "I don't believe any one knows the potential public drawing possibilities of any film for any certain territory. That is simply and squarely up to the man who makes it his business to sell that territory."

"I know of one picture that has been sold to a New York buyer for more than $65,000. Some people might consider that to be a skyrocketed price. But what are you going to say if the man who paid $65,000 gets that price back and a good, fat profit besides?"

"We are just climbing out of a rut. Producers fell asleep in the program rut. Now, they're waking up. And so are the distributors and the exhibitors. Big prices are sure to mean competition, and we all know that the picture business is dying in many sections for lack of competition."

"By that I mean that one exhibitor in a town controls every available program. A new man cannot enter, because the one exhibitor already has all pictures contracted for. Open marketing is curing that condition."

Blackton Asked to Speak at Many "Womanhood" Openings

So many invitations have poured in on J. Stuart Blackton, director-general of Vitagraph, who was responsible for the war preparedness picture "Womanhood, the Glory of a Nation," to make addresses at the opening performances of the feature, that it has been impossible to fill even a small portion of them.

Already Commodore Blackton has made opening speeches at the initial performances of "Womanhood" at the Broadway theatre, New York; Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia; the New theatre, Baltimore, and the Strand theatre, Washington. He is in hopes of being able to arrange his engagements to deliver addresses at the scheduled openings at Chicago and Boston.

As to booking it is reported by V-L-SE that the demand exceeds a hundred per cent the requests for advance bookings of "The Battle Cry of Peace," which at the time was acknowledged as one of the biggest money makers.

Baggot Ending Tour; Well Received Everywhere

After playing Indianapolis, Evansville and Terre Haute on a guarantee, King Baggot will end his personal appearance tour through Michigan, Ohio and Indiana, and return to New York to organize his own company.

Charles H. Greene, who has been directing the tour of King Baggot, has just returned to the city in advance to attend to the preliminary work. Mr. Greene says the tour of his star has been one ovation after another in all the towns visited, being received by the different mayors and public officials and banquetted by clubs and societies, making it one grand triumphal tour everywhere.
On the Firing Line

"I run Paramount, World, Bluebird and serials," says F. A. Sutton of the New Wallace theatre, Bradenton, Florida. "I find I can't get by with short-length subjects. Marguerite Clark is the favorite here. I object to the return express charge as unfair to exhibitors on the tail end of the circuit. Will put up no more nine years in business," is the encouraging report from Harry Titus, president of the Crystal Amusement Company, Daytona, Florida. Mr. Titus operates the Lyric, New Daytona and Crystal theatres.

"Marguerite Fischer in 'Jackie of the Navy,' is the most popular subject we have shown recently," says W. R. Walker & Son of the Isis theatre, Anderson, Indiana.

"We run Mutual, some General, and Pathé and Universal series and serials. We object to the deposit system because we have $3000 in solid real estate behind us and have been exhibitors eleven years."

H. A. Meder of the Valhalla, Gardnerville, Nevada, finds business very good. He shows two days a week, using the Paramount program.

Ludwig Geiling of the Majestic theatre, Baldwin, Louisiana, comes to bat with remarks on a subject which has been the theme of many recent News editorials.

"This town has a large negro population," he declares, "and I find it very difficult to get good pictures because the companies will not make allowances for this population."

Alleged Incendiary Remarks at Show Bring Action

On account of remarks alleged to have been made by Judge J. F. Rutherford of New York at a motion picture show given by the International Bible Students at the lodging houses in Chicago, the industry here. One will be composed of theatre managers and owners.

Newton Levy, acting manager of the Los Angeles Mutual Exchange served as chairman of a meeting at which he suggested that a permanent organization be effected, and there was talk along this line by practically every one present who favored the movement.

The first of a series of Saturday noon luncheons for theatre managers and owners will be held next week. J. A. Quinn, who is shortly to open the new Rialto theatre, is the cause of plans being made by the exhibitors. A weekly luncheon will be held at the same cafe each week, and it is the hope of the exhibitors that an organization will be perfected which will be beneficial to every one concerned. It is planned to have a business session at luncheon, and matters of interest to the exhibitors will be discussed.
Numerous exhibitors throughout the country have requested a fuller explanation of the Advance Deposit Plan formulated by David G. Rodgers, of Minneapolis, and recently officially adopted by the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the Northwest.

While exhibitors were voicing complaints and exhibitors' organizations were adopting resolutions of condemnation against the advance deposit system, David Rodgers took the bull by the horns in his characteristic manner and evolved a working plan for its adoption.

Dave Rodgers, by the way, was the first president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of Minnesota, which is now known as the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest. He has been a director of the exhibitors' corporation here since, and is chairman of the convention committee for the northwest gathering scheduled for Minneapolis, May 1, 2 and 3. Mid-West men, who believe a man from that section should be the next national league president, are backing Rodgers strongly for the post.

The advance deposit plan of David Rodriguez's was unanimously adopted by the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the Northwest in meeting assembled, and is as follows:

THE ROGERS'S PLAN ON DEPOSITS.

This agreement made by and between the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest, party of the first part, and NUMEROUS exhibitors throughout the country have requested a fuller explanation of the advance deposit plan in effect in Minneapolis, and recently officially adopted by the Motion Picture Exhibitors of the Northwest.

It is further agreed that if any member of the party of the first part contracts for or rents a certain film or picture for the purpose of exhibition, then such advance deposit shall be considered as a payment on account of said film or picture, for the time contracted to run the same.

Party of the second part further agrees to return to all members of the party of the first part all money now held by party of the second part, its agents, branches, or exchanges, as deposits herefore received from members of the party of the first part, by party of the second part, and the party of the second part agrees that it will at all times assist the party of the second part in enforcing its contracts made with members of the party of the first part, provided the same are in accordance with the co-operate with party of the second part in any manner whatsoever, for the mutual benefit of both exhibitor and producer.

In Witness Whereof, we have hereunto set our hand and seal this 28th day of February, A.D. 1917.

DAVID G. RODGERS.

Chairman of Committee.

In the presence of,

Lee A. Ochs, who admitted he was president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, visited Omaha last week to urge the exhibitors to form a state branch of the national organization. Just why he was so anxious to see a state league in Nebraska Mr. Ochs did not say.

Eight exhibitors and a number of exchange men attended a luncheon the second day after Mr. Ochs arrived. He talked for an hour explaining what a league could do. The exhibitors then took an hour with the exchange men to talk it over and convince a reluctant committee condemning the shaky film. Mr. Ochs left Saturday for Kansas City.

The exhibitors at the meeting said the matter would likely be talked over some after he left, but actual organization was not formed. It was suggested that some of the largest theatres in the state, said the exhibitors, still a meeting attended by only eight, one from out of the state, could not be expected to spread over the entire state.

"The Omaha exhibitors and exchange men," declared one exhibitor, "sometime in the near future will invite the exhibitors of the State to be our guests for a 'Movie Week.' A big ball, some talks, exhibitions and other entertainment will be features. This can be accomplished, as it has in the past, more successfully than if we had an exhibitors' organization only. We are all hoping to see the day of less battling between the exhibitors and the exchange men. We believe state leagues of exhibitors only tend to increase antagonism between the two."

"We in Nebraska recently fought and worked for various legislation—exhibitors and exchange men alike—and we were successful with the Motion Picture exhibitors' organization was needed here."
Taking Politics Out of the League

Fred J. Herrington, national organizer of the Exhibitors League of America, is out touring the country in the interests of national exhibitor organization.

He is not promoting himself for the presidency of the League. He wants the office to choose the man, the best man, any man able and willing to lead the League in its own best interests. He is organizing for organization's sake.

For this reason he is asking that uninstructed delegates be sent to Chicago, at the National League Convention, July 14th-22d. Let the delegates go to Chicago as free men, there to see, and select independent and able leaders.

He is not building political fences. He asks, on the contrary, that all politics be eliminated from the Chicago Convention—and, if possible, from the League hereafter.

He isn't working for himself or his own enterprise, under the guise of league organization. He is an exhibitor only, and only interested in organization for the exhibitor's good. He knows the need of organization and its value; he knows how to go about it. His experience and fine reputation as a league worker are the only vouchers he needs as to his sincerity and ability.

Do you want him in your State?
If so, write us and we will write him.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS is a firm believer in exhibitor organization. We have always earnestly supported organization. We are going to continue this support. We believe in the National League not for what it has been, but for what it is going to be.

The present situation is a confused one. To clear the atmosphere we have prepared the following coupon. Please fill it out—fully. Say your say. We will forward to Mr. Herrington such information as he needs.

Your voice, moreover, will help indicate just how a strong national organization can be built up, and how the Chicago Convention can be made a gathering worth going to.

Fill out the coupon, and mail to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Ave., New York.

Appreciates Fine Service from Atlanta

Alabama Exhibitor Responds to Our Request for Appreciation from Exhibitors of Pains Taken by Exchanges

We have the evidence that there is a brighter side to the continual complaints of exhibitors about carelessness of exchanges. We are particularly glad to publish the following letter, because we know that the exchanges named therein as deserving of appreciation for taking special pains are deserving of that praise.

Brother Bowser is not the exception in getting courteous and consistently good treatment from Vitagraph V-L-S-E, and from Paramount in Atlanta.

We published in these columns some time ago the little postcard which goes out on Southern Paramount letters to exhibitors, for which Frank Freeman, manager of the exchange, is personally responsible. Our exhibitors must be satisfied, for we cannot afford to have one dissatisfied customer reads this message from the exchange to its patrons. And we would like to attest to what I term special service from the Atlanta office of Greater Vitagraph. Mr. Sawin, the manager, in a letter advised me to book The Dollar and the Law, and advised how to get the assistance of local banks in presenting same.

I booked it and played same to 700 people invited and paid for by the two banks here. (My average daily attendance is far below that figure.) The banks were highly pleased.

Further, all Vitagraph releases secured from Atlanta arrive in first-class condition.

Would also like to say that we get fine treatment from Atlanta branch of Paramount, and timely hints and special service from their production department. Would like to attest to the admirable management of Grace Wynd-Vail.

Our account with the different exchanges is small, and we therefore appreciate good treatment more on that account. I also want to endorse your article about the conditions in which our town is rated at over 3,000, while we only have 1,800 whites.

Wishing the News continued success and prosperity, I remain yours, etc.,

J. W. Bowser.

Edward S. Holmes.

Why Not Improve the Breed?

Acclaimed a Good Slogan

Some weeks ago we published a letter from an exhibitor, suggesting that exhibitors themselves do something about cleaning up the profession, and he concluded his letter with the words, "Why Not Improve the Breed?"

We have the evidence that there is a brighter side to the continual complaints of exhibitors about carelessness of exchanges. We are particularly glad to publish the following letter, because we know that the exchanges named therein as deserving of appreciation for taking special pains are deserving of that praise.

Gentlemen—I notice you ask in your "With the Exhibitor" department for instances of good treatment. I have several instances of good treatment, and would like to make any radical changes in the management, but will continue with Paramount productions.

Small Town Live-Wire, Overlooks No Bets

From Alton, N. H., a town of 1,200, comes a handbill in two colors—red and black—dedicating April 14 as "Patriotic Night" at the Alton Opera House, Fred C. Summers, manager. "Make the Opera House rock with patriotism" screams this live manager, offering the first episode of "Liberty" (printed in red), patriotic songs, and a wrestling match as a topper to the enthusiasm we can bet was aroused by this feast of entertainment.

We have said in these columns a good many times—"Wake 'em up!" If you think the town is too sleepy, show the folks the manager of the town amusement emporium is not dead on his feet. And the smaller the town, the easier it is to make a noise that will be heard all over town. Don't get discouraged, small-town exhibitors, give your people the kind of pictures they want—try all the different kinds till you find out what they do want, for no town is alike, and then "Wake 'em up!" Organize a local fife and drum corps and play war tunes in front of the theatre if you can't get a crowd any other way.

Boston Theatre Man Installs Print Shop

A model printing shop which not only turns out all hand bills and display cards of four theatres, but cuts the printing bill more than 40 per cent, is the latest addition to the Modern theatre equipment in Boston. The idea was original with Manager Samuel Pinanski who being a good business man with a thorough knowledge of the printing trade, decided to give it a tryout. His verdict, after more than four weeks' trial, is that it is the best thing he ever started, and he intends to push it still further.

One Way of Assuring Attention. Nebraska Live Wire Sends This to His Exchange When His Posters Don't Come Through on Time

Joan of Arc Helps Get Recruits in Chicago

Combining recruiting activities in Chicago with the showing of "Joan the Woman," at the Colonial, enabled the Jones, Linick and Schaefler publicity man to work a stunt last week that attracted comment throughout the entire city. In co-operation with Captain F. R. Kunnee, chief recruiting officer for the United States Army, four girls were dressed in Joan of Arc costume and armor. Thus attired they toured the Loop section in automobiles, accompanied by army officers, and stopping on every corner aided in the enlistment activities.

Postmaster Loans Recruiting Posters to Tenn. Live Wire

Here is a letter we want every exhibitor to read. It tells all about a live stunt many exhibitors can use following every suggestion to the letter. Criticism? Not from us. Brother McCuan left nothing to chance here. We shall watch for new ones from him from now on. We've got his number.

THE KOZY, L. W. McCUAN, MANAGER;
NOT MERRY A THEATRE—A DRESDEN INSTITUTION, DRESDEN, TENN.

April 4th, 1917. MOTION PICTURE NEWS, New York,

GENTLEMEN—Am back again, for your criticism. This time I put over "Pearl of the Army," which landed at a very appropriate time.

Used the advance teaser campaign on this serial, lots of paper, mailed out the enclosed portrait of the star, with Herald, one week in advance, ran up a big American flag on top the theatre, lobby, windowed with flags and hunting, etc. Dozens of red, white, and blue bulbs (incandescent), stage setting with appropriate military atmosphere, a full page extra (enclosed), was expecting war to be declared, but as it was, took the village by storm, souvenir American flag given every patron, result capacity business.

With every good wish to the News, which gives us 'News that is news,' I am,

Very truly,

L. W. McCUAN.

P. S.—The biggest flash I had in the lobby, was four large recruiting posters loaned me by the Postmaster.

"How Patent Medicines Are Made," Got Druggists' Aid

The latest in stunts was pulled by L. A. Sheridan, Palhe Des Moines Exchange recently. He had a single red picture which showed that not all patent medicines were fakes. Two large medicine manufacturers were induced to do the rustling, and they lined up nearly every druggist in the town to boost this picture at the Palace theatre, on a certain date. Packed houses resulted.

Bluebird Furnishes "Special Ideas" for Every Picture

The Bluebird publicity service includes, besides suggestions for newspaper and lobby advertising in the regular way, a special sheet of "just ideas" that live exhibitors can carry out as "stunts" on any picture that particularly appeals to them. General Manager of Exchanges Goldstein intends to add a specialist in "publicity for exhibitors" to the staff of every Bluebird branch which does not already have such a man.
Generosity to Lodges and Societies Pays

Exhibitor Heller Finds Solution to What Some Exhibitors Find Difficult Problem—Common Sense Plan Helps Both

THERE are as many different ways, doubtless, of meeting the calls for "charity" made upon exhibitors, as there are theatres. But it seems to us Exhibitor Heller of the Meridian Amusement Company, Fort Wayne, Ind., has blazed a trail worth following.

So far as we know his idea is unique, as explained below.

When the representative of a lodge, club, school society, or other organization calls upon Mr. Heller he outlines a business plan that at once appeals to him as so fair, there is no possible argument.

If the people of this society are so interested in the theatre, that the theatre would feel disposed to contribute to their charity or maintenance, they are given opportunity to demonstrate.

A clean entertainment suitable for their members and friends will be given at an early date and their patronage will be appreciated. The theatre does not ask them to become its agents, but requests a percentage on the tickets as a medium for them to collect for something that has a real value. And the theatre will collect six cents ONLY on tickets actually presented at the theatre.

This meets all argument. It is not unusual for a club to make as much as fifty dollars on a single "benefit performance." They keep all the money they collect, less only what the theatre can show actual tickets for. They feel that the theatre has given them the fairest possible deal. But the best of it is the theatre has collected a fair amount for all tickets actually used. This is much better all around than the usual "fifty-fifty" which seems like a selling out of the show at "half price."

Screaming Woman, "Double Crossed"

Manager Diebold, of the Palace theatre, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, recently staged a party which ended in the housing of a screaming woman into a taxi-cab, in the main square, with numerous reporters and others curious looking on. The lady was "marked" of course—this time by a "double cross."

Kid Shows Not Successful Without Enthusiasm

Kansas City women are having a hard time getting exhibitors to cater to children. The large majority of exhibitors say that their trade is with older boys and girls, and with adults. They feel sure that they can't get children anyway—and prefer the 10-cent adult to the 5-cent kid.

The Collegiate Alumnae has been consor- ting pictures for a group of exhibitors, giving the implied promise that they would attend the shows in large numbers when the approved programs were shown. But on the nights of the approved programs the attendance is smaller than usual. Some of the exhibitors, however, are continuing the arrangement, running the programs approved on the designated nights, because the women are paying for display advertising exploiting the theatres which make up their programs according to the suggestions.

Terrill Joins Linder's Staff

Maverick Terrill, who was for some time associated with Charlie Chaplin, in the capacity of scenario editor, has joined Max Linder's staff in Chicago.
Works Personality Stunt with Local Editor

This is one of the real live stunts you have to take off your hat to the man discovering. We have heard of personal appearance of stars, and there has been some question whether such an intimate view of the screen "ideal" was always a safe proposition.

But there proved to be no doubt of the wisdom of Manager Harmon W. Peery, of the Ogden theatre, Ogden, Utah, when he persuaded "Doug" Fairbanks and D. W. Griffith to stop off at his town on route between Los Angeles and New York.

We don't know what kind of a pull he exerted on these men whose time is worth more in dollars according to salary than that of the president of the United States. Certainly we are not surprised that Editor Ernest T. Spencer, of the leading Ogden paper, was willing to put his time against theirs and an unlimited space in his newspaper to tell his readers the views of these great men on "movie" topics.

Naturally the editor appreciated, as of genuine news value the visit to a small city like Ogden of such celebrities, and the advantage of connecting his paper directly with their visit. He threw his columns wide open to Peery, and the Ogden theatre's box-office receipts are claimed to have doubled and trebled in the week following the visit of Mr. Fairbanks and Mr. Griffith to Ogden. Receipts have been on the rise ever since.

Ogden people now have a personal interest, not only in the theatre, which commanded the respect of these gentlemen on their way to New York, but sufficiently to get them to honor the local folk with a visit, but in Fairbanks and Griffith personally as a result of having seen them in the flesh.

The showing of a "Doug" Fairbanks picture, or one directed by Griffith, inevitably results now in packing the Ogden theatre to the doors.

Stanley's Palace Theatre Uses Patriotic Colors Effectively

The lobby of the Palace theatre, 1214 Market street, Philadelphia, always one of the show-places along this busy thoroughfare presents an even more handsome appearance now than ever before by reason of the new electric sign and artistic decorations which have been placed in position. These consist of the American flag and the city flag and emblems of the Army and Navy—not one but many which have been arranged in striking vivids and made more prominent by numbers of colored electric lights blue, red and blue colors. These colors are the same as the scheme of the new mentioned sign which has been placed over the entire central lobby, and the word "Palace" is spelled out in letters that are an artistic reminder of the flags. The unusual lobby display can be seen by all of the many thousands of people who hourly pass the theatre and at night the colors stand out as a beacon light of patriotism as far as the eye can reach. It is a display that is worth while, and managers have observed it is emotionally in their expressions of admiration the colors incite. This is another illustration of the progressiveness of the Stanley Co.

Oklahoma Live Wires Beat Newspaper Trust

WITH the first issue circulation of thirty thousand, the Weekly Theatre Bulletin has appeared in Oklahoma City and the local papers are deprived of the rich advertising and circulation building help of six local theatres.

These six Oklahoma City theatres, including five motion picture houses, have combined in the publication of the Weekly Theatre Bulletin, devoted to general theatrical and photoplay news, and the attractions at the various houses for the week. The Bulletin is issued every Saturday.

The theatres joining in the project are the Empress, Lyric, Liberty, Folly and Majestic, motion picture houses, and the Overholser, now playing stock. An increase in advertising rates recently announced by two of the local newspapers induced the theatrical managers to enter the publication business.

The Oklahoma Publishing Company, which issues both The Daily Oklahoman (morning) and Oklahoma City Times (evening), announced its increase March 1. The first step of the theatres was to abolish their individual advertising departments, establish a joint publicity bureau with one man instead of six handling their advertising, and cut newspaper advertising down to the minimum.

A few weeks later, to replace the publicity no longer obtained in the newspapers, the Bulletin was established with two pages devoted to the week's attractions at each house.

The first issue, given away at the theatres, contained no paid advertising from outside sources. It is understood that later on advertisements other than those of each house will be carried and the Bulletin may be distributed by carrier.

H. W. Smith, now manager of the publicity bureau of the theatre, is editor and C. E. Beard business manager of the new Bulletin. The first issue was usual program size, containing sixteen pages, and was a most creditable sheet.

Draws Crowd by Displaying Projecting Equipment

The new Star theatre, Bellingham, Wash., have installed two Mutoscopes of latest model. Prior to opening the theatre, J. Lewis Arnold, manager, displayed the new machines in the lobby front, a new and enterprising idea. The public was very curious about the machines and construction, few having ever seen full projecting equipment. The machines were made by the Enterprise Optical Company.

Stolte Leaves Vinton

Arthur G. Stolte, who has been manager of the Palace Theatre of Vinton, Iowa for the past ten months, has taken up the managership of the Strand theatre in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The new position offers wider opportunities and also carries a handsome advance in salary.
ADVANCE OFFERINGS OF THE PROGRAMS

Fatty Arbuckle Makes Bow on Paramount Program
Marguerite Clark in Another Child Role Features April 23 List—Jack Pickford and Vivian Martin Co-Star—Other Productions

WITH Marguerite Clark, Vivian Martin and Roscoe Arbuckle in new plays, Paramount announces a real feature program for week of April 23.

"The Valentine Girl," a Famous Players production is little Miss Clark's subject. J. Searle Dawley, who has been responsible for a number of successes of the little star's, directed the production.

The part of a little girl, a daughter of a professional gambler and society outcast, is taken by Miss Clark. The hungry appeal of this little girl for love and sympathy and companionship, which all her father's money cannot buy, renders the part one of the most appealing that the Famous Players star has had.

Frank Losee is leading man. Others in the cast are Edith Campbell Walker, Adolph Menjou, Maggie Halloway Fisher, Katharine Adams and Richard Barthelmess.

The other five-reel feature of the week is entitled "The Girl at Home." Jack Pickford co-stars with Vivian Martin in the production, which marks the feminine player's first appearance under Lasky management. The story is of the loving girl who waits at home for the boy whom she has secretly aided to a college education with her small income, while he becomes a cabaret frequenter and participant in the night life and forgets her.

Marshall Neilan staged the play and James Neil, Eddythe Chapman and Olga Gray have important roles in support of the stars.

In "The Butcher Boy," "Fatty" Arbuckle makes his premier appearance under the Paramount banner. He is supported by a rapid fire combination of talent which includes the acrobatic Al St. John, "Buster" Keaton and Josephine Stevens.

It is said 3,000 contracts have already been signed for the showing of this Arbuckle comedy which is released on the open market plan.

In the sixty-third edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs four subjects are treated; "Abalone Pearl Fishing," "How Minges Are Laid to Destroy Submarines," "The Visualizing of Ye Old-time Coon Hunt" and another Sam Loyd Picto-Puzzle.

Burton Holmes in his Traveleogue takes audiences from the Ganges to the Himalayas in "Among the Holy Hindus." Victor Moore in a comedy entitled "Ballads and Bologna" completed the program of the week.

Vitagraph Version of "Within the Law" at the Broadway

AN eight part screen adaptation of "Within the Law," one of the great legitimate stage successes, is announced by Vitagraph for a premier performance at the Broadway theatre, New York, on April 29. A two-week run will be given. The date for general release has not yet been decided on.

Every effort has been made to follow as closely as possible Bayard Veiller's story in the screen version. The same care, was exercised in the selection of a cast. Harry Morey and Alice Joyce are the co-stars, and are supported by Adele De Garde, Anders Randolf, Walter McGrail, Eugene O'Hara, Robert Gilmour, Billie Billings, Miss Buncy, Joe Donohue, Bernard Randall and Bernard Seigel.

When Vitagraph first considered the screening of "Within the Law," a percentage canvas was made in the cities where the legitimate stage production had been presented, with the result that thousands of persons who had witnessed that production expressed a desire to see the screen version of the popular drama. Many persons who for some reason had been unable to attend the speaking production also expressed a desire to see the play picturized.

Before making the picture Vitagraph made an effort to gather together some of the old regular cast with the result that the services of Eugene O'Rourke, who plays the part of Inspector Burke, and of Bernard Randall who plays the part of English Eddie, were obtained.

Lionel Barrymore Picture Announced for Month End
A new Lionel Barrymore picture will be released on the Metro Program April 30. This will be "The Millionaire's Double," written by June Mathis and directed by Harry Davenport. It is a different sort of story from this popular star's most recent success, "His Father's Son," written by Channing Pollock and Remiold Wolf, but at the same time has much of the humor and action noted in that picture. B. A. Rolfe presents "The Millionaire's Double," which has been produced by Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., for Metro Pictures Corporation.

Wilbur Finishes "Single Code"
The Mutual release of April 16, "The Single Code," with Crane Wilbur, is an attack on the double standard of morality. The film was made in the Horsley studios, and is frankly intended to whip the social rouncher into an appreciation of his moral responsibility. Florence Printy is in the chief supporting role.

Pearl White Does Her Share
With 5,000 people in the streets below, Pearl White, Pathe's daring star, "did her bit" last Wednesday by riding a steel beam to the twentieth story of a skyscraper in New York and, unfurling the American flag to the breeze, scattered scores of tiny flags to the crowd.

On descending again to the street Miss White made a short speech urging young men to enlist in the Navy.

"When Baby Forgot" First Lasalda Picture
The first picture to be produced by Lasalda Films, Inc., which has taken space at the David Horsley Studios, is to be called "When Baby Forgot." Baby Marie Osborne, the youngest star of the screen, is featured in it. The picture is being made from the story by Harrish Ingraham, and is being directed by Eugene Moore, with the assistance of Leo Wirth.

Wilbur Working on "The Eye of Envy"
Crane Wilbur and his company of players are engaged in picturizing Mr. Wilbur's latest story, "The Eye of Envy," which will be released by David Horsley through the Mutual as one of the pictures comprising the series of six Crane Wilbur features. Harrish Ingraham is directing the picture with Mr. Wilbur.

Zenith Travel Subjects Ready
The Zenith Motion Picture Company, Chicago, have ready a travel series of pictures made by Otto A. Brinner, a wealthy Chicago man. The series will be released weekly through the American Standard.
Jack Mulhall Stars in First Long Universal

Leads Universal April 23 Program in “Hero of the Hour,”

Five-Part Production—Several Dramas and Array of Comedies

A DRAMA of Western life, “The Hero of the Hour,” which leads the Universal program for the week of April 23, marks the first five-part production in which Jack Mulhall, known as a leading juvenile, has starred. The subject is described as a comedy drama written by Eugene B. Lewis and produced by Raymond Wells. In the supporting cast are Fritzie Ridgway, Grace MacLean, Noble Johnson, Fred Burns, M. K. Wilson and Eugene Owen. “The Hero of the Hour” will appear on Monday, April 23.

On the same day the Nestor comedy, “The Home Wreckers,” featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts, will be released.

On the same day the Nestor comedy, “The Leak,” with William Franey, and the Laemmle drama, “A Woman of Clay,” with Leah Baird in the leading role, will also appear on Saturday.

The Powers split reel, “Under the Big Top,” and “In the Heart of China,” a Dorsey Educational, and the Rex two-act drama, “David Creig’s Luck,” starring Matt Moore and Jane Gail are the releases of Sunday, April 29.

Next “Mary Sunshine” Picture

“Sunshine and Gold” is announced as the next Baby Marie Osborne subject. The release date is set for April 29. The production will be made by Balboa.

Corrections in Art Drama Casts

Art Dramas announces that Edward Ellis does not appear in “The Mystic Hour” as previously announced. The leading roles are taken by Alma Hanton, John Bainbridge and Charles Hutchinson.

Edward Earle is playing juvenile lead in “The Great Bradley Mystery,” and Edward Ellis the lead.

“She,” with Valeska Suratt, a Tale of Centuries

In “She,” the Fox production from Rider Haggard’s novel which will be released April 23, Valeska Suratt is said to have done her best work before the camera. The title role, Ayesha, a white queen of a savage tribe, who has attained immortality by bathing in the fires of “The Flame of Life,” is taken by the star. The story begins 3,000 years ago when Kalikrates, a young Egyptian priest is killed by Ayesha, when he refuses to abandon his young wife for her. His widow gives birth to a son, whom she charges to avenge his father’s death. This solemn duty is passed on from generation to generation ... and the incidents surrounding it give a tense ending to the story. Kenean Buel is the director.

“American Methods,” with Wm. Farnum, April 30

The third William Farnum special of the year is announced by Fox for release April 30. Titled “American Methods,” it is an adaptation of George Ohnet’s novel “The Ironmaster.” Jewel Carmen plays opposite the star. Frank Lloyd directed the production, and the supporting cast includes Bertram Grassby, Willard Lewis, Alan Forrest, Josef Swickard, Lillian West, Genevieve Blinn, Florence Vidor and Marc Robbins.

Release Dates of Vitagraph Subjects Changed

In “Sally-in-a-Hurry,” the dimpled star has the role of a hashray waitress, who in her humble station treasures a newspaper picture of an English lord. The picture is said to be a scream from start to finish.
Summer Bluebird Program Ready—Turn to Fall Production

WITH features ready for release sufficient to carry exhibitors through July, the Bluebird forces are thus early turning their attention to productions for the fall season. Although the release date for Bluebirds has not been set beyond the middle of June, productions are complete and ready for distribution.

Ida May Park, who has taken Lois Weber's place as Bluebird's woman director, makes her initial production with Dorothy Phillips, the star on May 21, "The Flashlight," was filmed from Albert M. Tourey's magazine story.

Lynn F. Reynolds contributed the May 28 release in his own story of Kentucky life, entitled "Southern Justice." Myrtle Gonzalez, George Hernandez, Jack Curtis, Fred Church, Elwood Bredell, Jean Hersholt, Maxfield Stanley and Charles H. Mailes are in the cast.

"The Twisted Thread" Not to Be Released by Pathé

It is announced by Pathé that the Pathé Exchange, Inc., will not release "The Twisted Thread," the serial which was made by Balboa. It is felt that such an announcement should be made, owing to the fact that Pathé has been mentioned as the releasing company.

Moore in Hypnotic Mix-up in Next Klever Komedy

Klever Komedies release another laughable subject with Victor Moore in the principle role on April 23. "Ballads and Bologna" is the title, from which it may be guessed Mr. Moore will learn hypnotism as a means to accomplish feats on the screen by Dorothy Phillips, the star on May 21, "The Flashlight," was filmed from Albert M. Tourey's magazine story.

Lynn F. Reynolds contributed the May 28 release in his own story of Kentucky life, entitled "Southern Justice." Myrtle Gonzalez, George Hernandez, Jack Curtis, Fred Church, Elwood Bredell, Jean Hersholt, Maxfield Stanley and Charles H. Mailes are in the cast.

"Patria" Shown to Lakewood Society

"Patria," the international serial, received an added boost when on April 7 Mrs. George J. Gould gave the first of a series of elaborate entertainments at her country home, Georgian Court, Lakewood, N. J. An episode of the serial was shown in a motion picture program given, at which the entire estate was thrown open to the public, and tickets sold for tea and entertainment.

Similar entertainments are being planned by other prominent New York society women.

Special Mutual War Subject

In answer to the demand for war pictures and to aid in arousing the patriotism of recruits, Mutual has issued a special picture, "A Daughter of War." The story is laid in the days of the Revolution. There are impersonations of noted figures in history, including Washington, Franklin, Sir John Burgoyne, Benedict Arnold and Major André. May Ward stars in the feature.

"Quo Vadis?" in New Form to Be Revived

George Kleine, who first showed "Quo Vadis?" in this country, is to revive the subject, which is credited with having blazed the way for the multiple reel feature on a pretentious scale.

Emphasis is laid on the fact that this is not to be regarded as an ordinary reissue, but may be accepted as a practically new "Quo Vadis?" The entire film story is to be strengthened in a manner which will enhance its value.

Founded on a great novel, with thousands of persons in some of its great scenes, "Quo Vadis?" will always be remembered as a notable contribution to film history. In common with its companion pictures, "Spartacus," "Julius Caesar," "Antony and Cleopatra," "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Othello," "The Lion of Venice," and "Vanity Fair," comprising George Kleine's cycle of film classics it became the talk of the period on its presentation, and established a standard for pictures.

The exact date of release is as yet indefinite.

Gaumont's "Reel Life" No. 54 Interesting

"Reel Life" No. 54, Gaumont's Mutual Magazine in Film, released May 10, has an interesting contribution to pictures already shown of a city's care of its dependents. "Protégés of a Big City" takes the spectator for a visit to the home for feeble-minded children maintained by New York. It is interesting to note how every opportunity for development is used.

"Sleeping Bags for Soldiers" is a section which is extremely timely. It has been adopted for army use. "Sleeping bags" are used in the form of a tent. It is also an excellent piece of baggage for the camper and automobile tourist.
Records Established by "The" Barrier Bookings

Bookings which in their scope bid fair to establish a record have been closed by General Film for "The Barrier," the first of the Rex Beach Picture Company's productions.

The entire Loew Circuit of 25 houses, the Keith and Proctor Circuit of 14 theatres, 12 Fox playhouses and the Poli chain of 9 theatres have signed up for showings of the feature.

The bookings cover 205 days in 60 theatres in the East, and break another record on the Poli Circuit, where it is the first picture to ever be booked over the entire chain of houses for a week's showing in each.

"The Barrier" is now being shown in all of the principal coast cities, including Los Angeles and San Francisco, and is still running at a dollar top admission in Detroit and Pittsburgh.

Child Star Complimented

With admission prices fifty cents and a dollar, and proceeds devoted to the Red Cross, the Rialto theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., has booked Baby Marie Osborne in "Told at Twilight" for two days. The house seats 1,800.

Country Life Series Goes Well

Each of the Paula Blackton Country Life series has been booked into the New Grand Central theatre, one of St. Louis' largest houses, for a week's run by William Sievers, manager of the house.

Strand to Forefront in Crisis

For the first time since the opening of the Strand theatre, New York, advertising matter will be shown on the screen in connection with the display of slides and other matter connected with the campaign for recruits for Uncle Sam's naval forces. This is in line with the offer of the theatre to put its program at the disposal of the Navy department, which offer was promptly accepted by Secretary Daniels.

"Poor Little Rich Girl" Going Big in Boston

Mary Pickford in "The Poor Little Rich Girl" is still running big in Boston. Three local theatres were booked with this film last week, and as many more have this production scheduled this week, including Tremont Temple, which has again opened to lovers of the screen.

Mastbaum Takes O. Henry Series

Many of the Mastbaum houses, Philadelphia and Atlantic City theatres, have followed the lead of the Strand theatre, New York, in booking the entire O. Henry series of pictures now being distributed by General Film.

Big Demand for "Skinner" Film

Hundreds of theatres have placed their order for "Skinner's Bubble," second of the Skinner features, according to announcement of Essanay. Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly are featured in the subject, which is released April 23.

"Civilization" Still Draws Well

As an evidence of the drawing power of "Civilization" it is recorded that the Ince feature drew approximately $1,200 on Easter Sunday in New Orleans, whereas other big pictures are taking down less than half that amount.

State Officers Praise "The War"

The Governor of Maine and his staff attended a private showing of the Official Motion Picture Records of "The War" last week at the Colonial theatre, Augusta, Me., and were unanimous in their praise of these pictures.
Yesterday the Supreme Court of the United States put the finishing touch on the most important law-suit in the history of the moving picture business when it decided in favor of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company and against the Motion Picture Patents Company in the famous “Latham loop” case.

This is the biggest and best thing that has ever happened to the exhibitors of the United States in ten years, and it is a matter of supreme pride for me to announce that THE UNIVERSAL ALONE fought the fight which insures freedom to the exhibitors of this country!

The Universal financed the fight year after year and through court after court without a dollar’s worth of help from any other producing company, any other exchange or any exhibitor on earth! At one time we issued a general appeal to all other producers to chip in and help stand the terrific expense, BUT NOT A DOLLAR WAS FORTHCOMING.

If the Universal had not defended the case with all the power at its command, if we had been caught off our guard at any time, if the Patents company had won, you and every other exhibitor in the country might now BE USING ONLY SUCH PICTURES AS THE PATENTS COMPANY PERMITTED YOU TO USE! You might be the body-and-soul slave of the tightest monopoly that ever monopoped in the land of the free and the home of the brave!

At one time during the long court fight it was suggested to us by a trickster that we purposely let the Patents company win the case if we could arrange with that company to let us in on their monopoly! While this never interested us for a minute, we might have made dishonest millions by doing it and we could now be telling you where to get off, what kind of pajamas to wear and how to part your hair! We would have NO COMPETITION WHATEVER and you would either take the films we offered you at the price we demanded or you’d have to quit the theatre business!

We had not a dollar to gain by spending our money in fighting the Patents company. All we had to gain was the glory of insuring freedom for the exhibitors and for ourselves.
If we had formed a legal combination with the Patents company, not a single producing company now doing business would be able to market a dollar's worth of film without paying tribute to us!

We had the choice of making millions of dollars in profit with dishonor, or paying thousands upon thousands out of our pockets in court and attorney's fees—with honor! We chose the latter course and now some of our film acquaintances grin at us and say “Now that you've won, what has it got you?”

It has got us just this:

First, it has got us the joy that comes from a clean fight, cleanly fought and cleanly won!

Second, it has got us the clear conscience which results from doing the right thing, THE AMERICAN THING, in the right way, REGARDLESS OF COST.

Third, it has not got us a dollar of profit but has got us into a great wad of expense—but, thank God, dollars are not the only thing that constitute the joy of living or the reward of work!

Fourth, it has got us the fun of telling you what regular humdingers we are; and it has given us this new opportunity to toot the very gizzard out of our own horn!

Do you remember that about two years ago you received notice from the Patents company telling you that you must not use any but licensed films in your projection machines? And do you remember that thousands of you came running to our exchanges in a panic and asking what to do? And do you remember that THE UNIVERSAL told you not to worry but to go home and go to sleep and forget it because WE WOULD PROTECT YOU? Well, we've done it—and you can go back to sleep again if you like.

Gentlemen, you are now free to run your own business as you please and if any attempt is made in the future to enslave you in one way or another, you can rest assured that THE UNIVERSAL will still be on the job to fight your fight and win it!

THE GREATER PROGRAM!

The Mighty Universal Weekly Service Alone Meets Every Exhibitor's Need

It is not necessary to say the greatest Program on earth, because the Universal Program is GREATER in quantity and quality than all competitive services combined. When you see listed the releases on the regular Universal Program you are seeing the cream of the film world, not all! (One-Short Subject) Louis Wilson carried interest, and in that scientific balance that keeps up the interest throughout the week, getting more repeat admissions than any other form of entertainment now available anywhere. For convenience in booking an “open” program the regular program is divided into “specials” and regular releases. Read below.

On the Universal Program for the Week of May 7, 1917

SPECIAL RELEASES

Butterfly Pictures—“Eternal Love” (Five-Reel Drama) Ruth Clifford, Douglas Gerrard.
Nestor—“The Lost Appetite” (One-Reel Comedy) Eddie Lyons, Louis Moran and Edith Roberts.
Gold Seal—“The Grip of Love” (Three-Reel Drama) Allen Holubar and Louise Lovely.
L-Ko—“Tom’s Tramping Troupe” (Two-Reel Comedy) Phil Dunham, Luella Hutton, Casm. Imbler and Melba Sterling.
Universal Animated Weekly—No. 71.
Universal Screen Magazine—Issue No. 18.

REGULAR RELEASES

On the Universal Program for the Week of May 7, 1917

Because these specials are the pick of the program, bunch of novelties they lend themselves readily to the needs of every Exhibitor who wants to bolster up a weak program, help out a weak feature performance, or strengthen his entertainment generally. And because they are such “specials” in the truest sense of the word they cost you a slight advance. They are worth it. With them you can get the crowds no matter what competition you have.

Victor—“Baseball Madness” (One-Reel Comedy) Billy Mason, Gloria Swanwick.
Victor—“Swearing Off” (One-Reel Comedy) Ellen Seligweck.
Expo—“Flames of Treachery” (One-Reel Drama) Louis Wilson and Lee Hill.
Emp—“The Girl in the Garret” (Two-Reel Drama) Jack Nelson and Molly Malone.
Bison—“One Wild Night” (Two-Reel Drama) Gypsy Hart and Kingsley Benedict.
Lammle—“The Doctor’s Deception” (One-Reel Drama).
Big C—“Captain Marjorie’s Adventure” (Two-Reel Indian Drama).

The two lists above comprise the complete weekly Universal Program. Constantly growing in popularity, the Universal Program is bringing success to thousands of Exhibitors throughout the world, many of whom has saved from failure. Wire or write your nearest Universal Exchange today for full particulars or address the home office of the Universal as above.

Never in the history of the United States have the people been so thoroughly of one mind, as since the publication of President Wilson's famous message. The newspapers use more than half their space for war news—not what is going on abroad—important as that is; but about WHAT IS GOING ON AT HOME. If you could gauge the public's taste and desires as closely as the big newspapers, you would be playing to capacity all the time. HERE IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY ALL READY MADE FOR YOU. "THE WAR WAIF"
Two-reel special produced by Allen Holubar, featuring Allen Holubar, Zoe Rae, and Claire McDowell. A crackin' fine war picture in two exciting reels.

"THE WHITE FEATHER VOLUNTEER"

"COURT MARTIALED"

"IF MY COUNTRY SHOULD CALL"
Dorothy Phillips gives a wonderful performance in "If My Country Should Call," and is supported by a brilliant company, including Lon Chaney, Vola Smith, Frank Whitson and Jack Nelson. This thrilling patriotic drama is from the story by Virginia Terhune VanDewater; is in five reels and was directed by Joseph De Grasse.

Book any or all of these SPECIAL PREPAREDNESS PICTURES THRU any of the 73 Universal Exchanges.

Here are presented four of the biggest Preparedness Productions and War Subjects ever released. They are so far beyond the average subject of this class that there positively is no comparison. They are timely, patriotic and American through and through. You can put them over big. They are among the most successful of the many tremendous box-office triumphs released under the BLUEBIRD Brand. Book these through your local BLUEBIRD Exchange, or BLUEBIRD Photoplays (Inc.), 1600 B'way, New York.

"THE EAGLE'S WINGS" The most unusual picture on the market today. It deals with present conditions, and with industrial preparedness. It is far beyond the jingo pictures with their faked and sham battles and studio atmosphere. It is a real picture for real Americans, and that is why it is playing to repeat bookings and capacity houses everywhere shown. "The Eagle's Wings" is a BLUEBIRD Special, in 5 reels, written by Rufus Steele, featuring Herbert Warvinson, supported by Vola Smith, Grace Carlisle and Charles Maier.

"THE BUGLER OF ALGIER" Produced by Rupert Julian from the famous novel "We Are French," by Perley Poore Sheehan and Robert H. Davis. Five-reel BLUEBIRD featuring Rupert Julian, Edith Hall, with Kingsley Benedict. An inspiring picture of patriotism that is particularly acceptable at this time. It does not preach; it simply grips and convinces. A picture you should book immediately.

"BEHIND THE LINES" Harry Carey in "Behind the Lines," written by Edith Johnson, directed by Henry McRae, constitutes a fascinating entertainment of war, political intrigue, romance and adventure. It is a thrilling portrayal of present day conditions, and has played to capacity houses wherever shown.

"TREASON" A notable picture is "Treason," written by Lee Weigert, five stirring reels, produced by Allen Holubar, featuring Allen Holubar, Lois Wilson, Jon Gilard and Dorothy Davenport. A big production with some tremendous war scenes and the most intense situations. A picture that will crowd your house for more than one showing.
Crystal Company Gets Seigmann as Producer

The newly incorporated Crystal Photo-plays Company of Chicago have started their work with high enthusiasm and a nucleus of quality that portends something worth while from them in the future. The executive staff of the new company has been somewhat changed around since the first announcement of their organization which appeared in the News several weeks ago. W. D. Burford, of Aurora, Ill., has been made v.p. and general manager.

He announces that already the sets are being built at their studio in Peoria for the first production. George Seigmann, former assistant to D. W. Griffith, and practically the entire former Griffith technical staff, has been placed under contract by the new company. Mr. Seigmann, who helped with "The Birth of a Nation", and who also played an important part in that production, arrived in Chicago for New York last week to select his company for the first Crystal picture. James O'Slica, Abe Scholz, the Griffith cameraman, and others of the technical staff are already at the Peoria studio.

"Within Law" Stars on Companion Piece

What is expected to prove a companion piece to "Within the Law," which they have finished, has been begun by Alice Joyce and Harry Morby at the Vitagraph Studio. It is from the pen of Lawrence McCloskey and takes a quite different angle of social complications from that dealt with in the Bayard Veiller drama.

This picture is being directed by Perry N. Vekrof. The cast includes a former Vitagraph favorite, Gladden James, besides Charles Kent, Edwards Davis, Amy Remley and others. This picture will be a five-reel Blue Ribbon release.

Paramount Boost Four

Louis W. Thompson of the Progressive Picture Company has left Los Angeles on an extended trip through Arizona and New Mexico in the interests of the Paramount Photographs, Putty Cartoons, Holmes Travelogue, Black Diamond comedies and Kleyer Comedies. He will also sell exhibitors about the Fatty Arbuckle comedies.

Complete Half-Hundred Comedies

The La Salle Film Company, of Chicago, have just finished the production of 52 short comedy subjects. They are to be known as La Salle Comedy Featurettes and will be released through Mutual. Marion De La Pareille directed the making of them.

Arbuckle Comedy Contracts Flood Paramount

More Than Two Thousand Already Signed for First Picture; One Hundred and Fifty First Runs Arranged; 200 Prints Needed

In every large city in the United States there will be from three to twenty-five first runs of the picture simultaneously beginning on April 23.

"Naturally we are pleased and elated with the confidence the exhibitors of the country have shown in the comedies," said Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation. "and we are absolutely sure that this confidence has not been misplaced when the exhibitors will see the vast volume of business these pictures will bring to their theatres. The confidence they have placed in Paramount before ever seeing the production will be backed with an over-measure of satisfaction, for these pictures will have every quality that will go to make real money for the exhibitor. Mr. Arbuckle and his company have done wonderful work in this production and the second will be better than this one. Each one he has assured me will be better than the one before, and that means something when 'Fatty' gives his world.'"

Fitting Roles in "Father Was Right," a Christie

"Father Was Right" will mark the second appearance in Christie comedies of Miss Hazel Alden. In this she will be surrounded by Neal Burns, Eddie Barry, Stella Adams, Ethel Lynne, George French, Harry Rattenberry. Incidentally, this is said to be Neil Burns' best story to date and gives Miss Alden charming opportunities as well as furnishing Eddie Barry with the tramp character in which he is so popular.

"Joan the Woman" for Detroit

B. Barnett, of the Barnett Film Attractions, announces that "Joan the Woman," which he controls for Michigan and Ohio, will play a long engagement at the Detroit Opera House, starting in either June or July. There will be two performances daily, and all seats will be reserved. It will probably be late in the summer or early fall before bookings will be taken from Michigan exhibitors on this feature, which is being widely advertised.

Pollard Engages Hungerford

J. Edward Hungerford has been engaged as scenario editor for the Pollard Picture Plays Company, and will hereafter write the photodramas in which Marguerite Fischer is starred.

"The Devil's Assistant," the last Mutual release in which Miss Fischer was featured, came from the pen of Mr. Hungerford.
Bluebird in Forefront on Preparedness Films

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC., has been taking stock since President Wilson's declaration of war, searching for attractions on its program of seventy-five features or subjects that will serve ex-hibitors with a patriotic appeal in aid of the Government at this critical time in history.

Proving that Bluebird has "prepared," it is pointed out that there are three regular Bluebirds and one special release that serve right now as an inspiration to patriotism. "The Eagle's Wings," released as a special last December, has been taken up with widespread enthusiasm by the Daughters of the American Revolution for exhibition in towns where chapters of this famous organization have been established, representing every State in the Union. The American Red Cross and numerous other patriotic societies also find this "industrial preparedness" feature a subject for consideration in forwarding the usefulness of pictures as an aid to patriotic enthusiasm.

Rufus Steele wrote and supervised the presentation of "The Eagle's Wings," going into Government arsenals, forts and military reservations for authentic pictures of maritieal activities, and photographing, in munition plants, the process of turning out munitions and filling European war orders. Right now it would be utterly impossible, for political "pull" or money, to get a camera inside of a single one of the many places where Mr. Steele found his way last fall.

"The Bugler of Algiers," released late in November past, features Rupert Julian, Ella Hall and Kingsley Benedict is claimed to be one of the most beautiful stories of patriotism ever screened—so pronounced by the reviewers and the general public from the day of its release.

"Behind the Lines" was released last September and found instant favor because of its realistic battle scenes and its patriotic inspiration in plot and production, and has had a tremendous following.

"Treason," the Bluebird to be released May 14, represents timeliness itself in construction and progress of the story. The picture is fittingly described in its title, and the fate of a traitor is revealed as a warning to secret opponents of the Government's stand on the war question.

Noted Author Head of Fox Scenario Dept.

GEORGE BRONSON-HOWARD, author and playwright has taken charge of the scenario department of the Fox Corporation and will henceforth be at the helm of the script activities of that company.

Already Mr. Bronson-Howard has distinguished himself as playwright, novelist, short-story writer, musical comedy librettist, dramatic critic, war correspondent, the Russo-Japanese war, Captain in the Chinese Army and Inspector in both the Chinese and Philippines Customs besides having been a reporter for a dozen papers from San Francisco to London and a member of the Editorial staff of half a dozen magazines.

Just a little over a year ago, Mr. Bronson-Howard succumbed to the lure of the silent drama and joined a motion picture producing organization in California. Shortly after his play "Snobs" was flashed upon the screen, becoming enthused with the art of making photodramas he was not content merely to adapt his novels and play for the screen. "Francois Villon" stories and the equally well-known "Pages from the Book of Broadway" stories and two novels, "An Enemy to Society" and "God's Man," his plays for the speaking stage were "The Only Law," first produced in 1909 at the Hackett (now the Harris theatre, New York, which Arnold Daly and Emmett Corrigan afterwards revived as "The Double Cross") in Chicago; "The Red Light of Mars" published in Mitchell Manerley's "Modern Drama Series" in book form; "The Passing Show of 1912" and Gertrude Hoffman's greatest success, "Broadway to Paris."

Mr. Bronson-Howard, however, returned from playwriting to write short stories and novels some years ago to his country home at Belle Terre where he wrote his Francois Villon" stories and the equally well-known "Pages from the Book of Broadway" stories and two novels, "An Enemy to Society" and "God's Man."

Egyptian Role Is Allotted to Madame Petrova

Madame Petrova will make her Lasky debut in "The Undying Flame," a story of ancient and modern Egypt, in which she plays the first daughter of Pharaoh, and then in the second part of the story the young daughter of an English army officer. Maurice Tourneur is at the helm of the production.

The interior settings of the picture were staged in the newly acquired Fort Lee studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, and the exteriors were taken in the sandy wastes of Florida, where Madame Petrova and her company spent several weeks under the personal management of Studio Manager Albert Kaufman.

The story of "The Undying Flame" hinges around a mystic scarab. Mahlon Hamilton plays the role of Paget in support of Madame Petrova.

Vita Gets Screen Rights to Fiction Prizes

Additional contracts for film rights to leading stories by popular authors have been signed by Vitagraph in line with the policy they worked out, and which resulted in production of "The Girl Philippa," "Arsene Lupin," "The Enemy" and other classics.

Chief of the new works secured is "The Judgment House," one of Sir Gilbert Parker's most widely read novels. Secondly, Vitagraph will screen the Western dramas of Alfred Henry Lewis—"The Wolfville" stories. Harry Morey is scheduled as star in these productions' work on which will begin in the Western studio on May 1.

A scenario from the pen of George Randojich and Lilian Chester is also announced for a vehicle for Anita Stewart.

Holmes Serial Embodies All Phases of Railroad Life

ALL the most exciting aspects of railroad construction as well as operation are pictured in the new fifteen chapter Mutual-Signal weekly "The Railroad Raiders," of which the first chapter "The Railroad Raiders" was released on April 9. Helen Holmes, "Daughter of the Rail" is visiting the camps as a spectator ostensibly, but actually, of course in her capacity as a secret service agent of one of the roads, and when she discovers that a stick of giant powder has been so placed as to destroy the hoisting machinery of the K. & W., and cuts the connecting electric wire, the spectator finds intimate interest in this phantasmagoria of steam shovels, straining mules, hard driven laborers and intriguing bosses.

Dexter Opposite Little Mary

Elliott Dexter is to appear opposite Mary Pickford in her latest picture, "A Romance of the Redwoods," to be released by Artcraft on May 14. He has a role in which he has so often appeared to advantage—that of a bad man of the West.
James Cruze Working Hard With Gold Medal

James Cruze, who plays one of the principal parts in "The Web of Life," the five-part drama now being distributed by the Gold Medal Photoplayers, through independent exchanges, is one of the most versatile of the younger screen actors now appearing in feature productions. Probably Mr. Cruze's best work before joining the Gold Medal forces was as the reporter in the serial "The Million Dollar Mystery." This production brought Mr. Cruze into prominence throughout the picture world and he has not lost the prestige thereby gained for conscientious performances in the roles assigned him.

At various times in his career Mr. Cruze has played in pictures for nearly all the best producing companies, among them Vitagraph, Thanouser and Fox. At the present time, besides his work in the features being produced by the Gold Medal Photoplayers, Mr. Cruze is a member of the Fox forces and is busily engaged in productions six days a week and Sundays, sometimes.

Clean Films Here to Stay, Says Hodkinson

That historians may yet give good films a niche corresponding with that already held by good books is the opinion of W. W. Hodkinson, president of Forum Films, Inc., distributors of the new Edison Conquest Pictures.

"Great men have seldom failed to tell of the influences that good books have exerted on their lives," said Mr. Hodkinson recently, "and not a few credit one book or set of books for the selection of professions in which they later distinguished themselves. But the formative periods of today's greatest men were passed before the birth of the motion picture."

"It is only reasonable to hope that good films may win the approval of historians of the future, even if they are not given to the same extent as are the pages of books. Historians have a firm grasp on the past, but the new art of the moving picture must wait on a generation to see its worth and value recognized."

Hearst-Pathe News Consolidation Profitable

The results of the backing of the Hearst newspapers in their territory is evidenced by the increase in business of 26 per cent. Since amalgamation Newspaper Backing and Publicity Factor—War's Results

Hearst-Pathe News itself frequently approximates with its speed in showing pictures of an event the publication of a new story in the papers. Exhibitors who have taken advantage of this fact by special advertising, report they have found in the news weekly a drawing power comparable to that of a first-class feature, as is evidenced by the ever-growing demand.

With the United States at war it is felt that Hearst-Pathe News as a box-office attraction will have a materially increased value, and thus the exhibitor's advertising on it will cease to be sporadic and become continuous.

The News Weekly is a hobby of Mr. Hearst, as he created the first American Weekly for Pathe over eight years ago. He has seen the recognition of the value of the idea through the competing weeklies which have sprung up and is strong in his faith as to the future of the Hearst-Pathe News.

Norma Talmadge Takes up Cudgels Against Picture Critic

In answer to an article by Walter Pritchard Eaton appearing in the April number of the Theatre Magazine, written in criticism and attempting to prove there is no art in the motion pictures, Miss Talmadge has prepared an article based on the idea that story-telling is a technical art, like painting or music.

Mr. P. E. Scott of the Moving Picture World, in the October 17th edition, says: "Miss Talmadge writes that she is led to believe from the quality of arguments advanced that Mr. Eaton's utterances are of a disappointed scenario writer rather than those of an inspired critic."

"The Haunted Pajamas" to Be Filmed

When Harold Lockwood this week begins work in the latest of the Yorke-Metro productions, "The Haunted Pajamas," he will undertake something entirely different from any in which he has previously appeared. The adaptation of the novel by Francis Perry Elliott, is a clever society comedy, in which Lockwood appears as a wealthy young American, a typical hero of late American fiction, yet at the same time a character different from any which has been portrayed in a screen play.
Escape Artist, Houdini, Signs with Williamson

Houdini, leader of the escape and handcuff artists, is to be featured in what is described as a drama of thrills in the air, on land and under water, by the Williamson Brothers. A popular author has been secured to prepare the story of this feature.

Speculation concerning the feats that Houdini performs in such puzzling manner has not been confined to any one part of the world, but is nation-wide. A well-known scientist, J. H. McKenzie, even devotes considerable space to the escape artist in his latest book, "Spirit Inter-course," and declares that he can dissolve his body into "psycho-plastic matter" by the simple process of "de-materialization." Whether or not there is merit in this treatise, it is nevertheless true that thousands live amazed and wonder-ining in the wake of Houdini on the stage.

HOUDINI, leader of the escape and handcuff artists, is to be featured in what is described as a drama of thrills in the air, on land and under water, by the Williamson Brothers. A popular author has been secured to prepare the story of this feature.

Escape Artist, Houdini, Signs with Williamson

In ratifying his contract which calls for a bi-yearly salary, Houdini had this to say:

"I realize perfectly well the hazardous nature of my exhibitions, and I never know until I have successfully completed one of my feats, such as being handcuffed, nailed into a wooden box without breaking the two-inch glass that forms the window of their steel chamber in which the camera operator sits. The escape artist states that he can turn the trick without permitting water to enter the chamber."

Elephants of Commerce Shown in Travelogue

The "Kandy" elephants of Ceylon, so-called because they are found in particularly large numbers in the town of Kandy, will occupy a large part of the Burton Holmes Travelogue released by Paramount on May 14. These intelligent mastodonts really make the commerce of Ceylon, and without them the natives would be badly handicapped.

Stage Favorite as Lead in Warwick's Next

Olive Tell, well knowing theatregoers, has been engaged by Harry Rapf as leading woman in support of Robert Warwick in his Selznick-Picture production, "The Silent Master."

Miss Tell has been seen on the stage in support of Julian Eltinge, Robert Edeson and Lois-Tellegen. She has had but one experience in pictures.

Chief Executive Sees "Patria"

Despite pressing affairs of state, President Wilson has been an attendant at showings of "Patria," the Pathé-International Serial, in Washington. Almost every week he has been at Keith's and witnessed the screening of the preparedness photoplay.

"Mothers of France" Highly Praised by Rothafel

S. L. Rothafel, manager of the Rialto theatre, has written a congratulatory letter to World-Pictures-Brady-Made concerning the engagement at his playhouse of the picture "Mothers of France."

"Never in my career have I heard such splendid comment; never have I seen so much enthusiasm as was displayed during every presentation of this engagement. The business was enormous. I congratulate you upon owning and having the distribution of this film.

Alice Brady, Excellent in "Darkest Russia"

"Darkest Russia," the current World Pictures, Brady-Made release, is the screen version of a stage drama which enjoyed a successful run in the United States and Canada. Written by H. Gratian Donnelly and Sydney R. Ellis, the play was widely regarded as a graphic and faithful reflection of the oppressive conditions prevalent in the Czar's domain.

Alice Brady in the leading role personifies a young Jewish girl, who is loved by the son of rich and powerful parents in Petrograd. Pursued by drunken soldiers she seeks haven with her father who is shot by one of the men. The impossibility of securing redress fills the orphaned Jewess with resentment. She is persecuted and publicly lashed with the knout on refusing to honor the Czar. Subsequent sufferings and conspiracies afford what is considered a true picture of former Russian conditions. Miss Brady is said to give a live characterization of the heroine. John Bowers appears as her principal assistant.

"Masterpictures" in Field

The Master Motion Picture Company has been incorporated in Texas with headquarters in Houston, and will shortly start operations with three and possibly four companies, specializing on two-reel comedies. One five-reel dramatic picture is also scheduled for making each month. All pictures will be by program distribution. The trade name "Masterpictures" is being featured.

Harold J. Binney is president and director-general of the new concern. He has previously been associated with Keystone and was producer of "Sunshine Comedies."

It is stated the company is completely financed, and a modern and complete studio is in course of erection. The players, directors and cameramen are now being assembled.

Linder to Remain in Sunny California

Word from California is to the effect that Max Linder is elated with that state as a producing ground and will film the remaining nine comedies for which he has contracted with Essanay on the South Pacific Coast.

"Max in a Taxi," the latest Linder subject, released April 23 after pre-release screenings in New York and Chicago, promises to go even better than the comedian's first two pictures.

"What Cheer" Company Going Right Ahead

Director Richard Aabel is taking a company to the State of Maine next Monday, April 16, to start taking the lumber scenes in the feature picture that the What Cheer Film Company are about to start on.

The company is now engrossed in the cast for another feature that will be started immediately. All the pictures produced will be under the direct supervision of Frank O. Lambert.
Inception Star in Dual Role in "The Snarl"

Bessie Barriscale will Shortly be Seen in a dual role for the first time in her career. She will be presented by Thomas H. Ince in "The Snarl," a drama released by Triangle-Kay-Bee, written by Leona Hutton and prepared by Lambert Hillyer. "The Snarl" is a story of the strange happenings which destiny held in store for twin sisters, alike in beauty but with no other similar characteristics. How they both play parts in the affairs of a young millionaire forms the basis of what is described as an absorbing plot. Alias Barriscale portrays both sisters.

In the supporting cast are Charles Gunn, Howard Hickman, Aggie Herring, Thomas S. Goise and J. Barney Sherry. The production was directed by Raymond B. West. The double exposure effects are said to be remarkable.

Chadwick Outlines Plans of Ivan Film Distribution

E. I. Chadwick, general manager of the Ivan Film Productions, has evolved a sales plan for his company's films, concerning which he says, in part:

"When it is considered that sky-rocketing is, alas, only a too common thing, and often the exchangelmen are taxed entirely beyond reason for exclusive rights, it will be admitted that a radical improvement is necessary. On the other hand, we find the producer, who honestly desires to make 'the real goods,' who actually does not spare expense, who fully supplies the demand which a given production requires, is entitled to a fair consideration for his investment.

What, then, is the solution? The answer is — Co-operation! — Co-operation in the fullest sense of the word. Under arrangements of such a nature, the distributor is in a position to market his film, knowing in advance that the producer depends upon him to make good. He, further, is aware of the fact that his voice in an advisory capacity has a chance to be heard and heeded,—and the film he is called upon to sell to the exhibitor will be the kind most likely to be rewarded with the financial success all parties are entitled to.

"The Danger Trail," with H. B. Warner, April 30

Henry B. Warner is to make his first appearance as a Selig star in the April 30 K-E-S-E release, "The Danger Trail.

In this feature Mr. Warner will be supported by Violet Heming and W. Lawson Butts. James Oliver Curwood wrote "The Danger Trail," which is described as an interesting love romance of the frozen North. A company was sent to Alaska to faithfully mirror the scenes.

"Woman Who Dared," in Kansas

The Wichita Film Supply Company, of Wichita, Kansas, have just completed a deal with Mr. A. J. Cob, president of the Ultra Pictures Corporation, for the territory's rights of "The Woman Who Dared" for Missouri and Kansas.

Patriotism Aroused at "Womanhood" Showings

Philadelphia, New York and Washington Runs Productive of Recruiting Results — Harry Morey in Campaign Aids Enlistment

As a recruiting stimulus and spark to patriotic tendencies of the public Vitaphone's preparedness spectacle, "Womanhood, the Glory of the Nation," is proving to be of far-reaching effect.

In conjunction with the presentation of the picture, Harry T. Morey, star of the subject, has been borrowed by the navy department for a short time to stimulate enlisting. Mr. Morey started his campaign tour last week, when, accompanied by a regular recruiting officer, he toured the congested New York streets making twenty-minute speeches. Enthusiasm was apparent in all sections, and particularly among the brokers on Broadway, many of whom gave their names and addresses and will be called upon by navy medical examiners.

The three weeks' Philadelphia run of "Womanhood" concluded as it had begun, with a capacity house, despite top price of one dollar admission, and a minimum of twenty-live cents. The manner in which Manager J. S. Hebrew, of the V. L. S. E., Philadelphia Exchange, advertised the $1,000 prize contest for the best essay to be written on "Preparedness," and the cooperation of the school authorities greatly aided in the remarkable showing made during the run.

The Vitaphone feature has also played to big houses at the Broadway theatre.

Gaumont Company Is Covering War in Its Single Reels

Recognizing that the nation is interested heart and soul in the prosecution of the war, the Gaumont Company is bending every effort to satisfy the country's legitimate demand for pictorial news of the conflict that is already upon us.

Events of immediate news interest are naturally being handled by Gaumont's Mutual Weekly. Every ship from abroad brings film of the fighting. Yet the greatest interest is, of course, displayed in American efforts to bring itself into a state of readiness. Despite the rigorous military and naval censorship now exercised over news cameramen, the Gaumont Company is able to present scenes which are typical of activities on land and sea. Soldiers and sailors are pictured as they march away under orders. Submarine chasers are shown in action. Recruitment is pictured in all its phases.

Another Gaumont reel which is of more than ordinary interest just at present is "Reel Life." This has many naval and military devices depicted which are not of immediate news interest. An instance of this is found in "Reel Life" No. 54, released May 10. It has pictured a sleeping bath for soldiers which will undoubtedly be the first introduction of a million young men to a garment which they are to become very familiar. On the same reel is a picture showing soldiers guarding oil tanks in California, tanks filled with fuel destined for our fleet of dreadnoughts.

Rothman Opens Players Office with Epstein

Joseph Rothman well known to the majority of motion picture actors and actresses on the East Coast has finally branched out and opened an office in the Putnam Building at 1493 Broadway with M. S. Epstein the well-known vaudeville man. Mr. Rothman has had wide experiences in dealing with the casting men of all the big producing companies in the East.
Mrs. Castle Signs Long Contract with Pathe

An unusual endorsement was recently given Paramount Pictures Corporation and its producing companies, Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas, when the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, looked upon as the most stringent board in the country, printed their list of pictures and subjects condemned, in which not a single Paramount picture was included. The report set forth that the board had condemned 446 reels of pictures and 163 slides.

Paramount considers this incident as a most complimentary endorsement of its policy, rigidly adhered to, of producing only pictures of high quality, and clean and wholesome throughout.

Boost for Paramount’s Clean Picture Code

The hard working and popular Ann Pennington is to again star upon the screen under the auspices of the Paramount Pictures Corporation and its producing companies. Publication Concerns Exploit O. Henry Pictures

The publishing concern of Doubleday Page and Company, and the Review of Reviews Company, are co-operating with the General Film in a nation wide advertising campaign for the O. Henry series of two-reel pictures.

Window displays of the volume of O. Henry stories from which the current pictures were taken, is in every book store, and this assures a wide variety of pictures.

The Review of Reviews plans even a more comprehensive campaign as they will circularize every city of 100,000 and less, where the pictures are shown with pamphlets containing scenes from the O. Henry pictures and, of course, advertising the volumes of the stories.

Ralph Dean to Direct Gertrude McCoy in “Madam Sherry”

Director Ralph Dean of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, who has been with that organization for the past two and one half years, has been engaged by the Authors Film Company to direct Miss Gertrude McCoy, the well-known Edison star, in a picturization of one of the famous stage successes, “Madam Sherry.”

Among Mr. Dean’s most noted pictures while with the Frohman Corporation are “The Rainbow,” “The Accomplice” and “A Song of Sixpence.” The latter picture will be released in the future and will be disposed of on the territorial rights basis by the Frohman Corporation, who consider it one of the best pictures of the year.

After completing “Madam Sherry” it is the intention of the Authors Film Company to produce several feature pictures a year for the state rights market.

Hard at Work on “The Auction Block”

A third of the scenes of “The Auction Block” the next production of the Rex Beach Picture Company to be released by General Film, have been completed. No expense is being spared on this subject, it is announced.

Ann Pennington Back to Screen

The hard working and popular Ann Pennington is to again star upon the screen under the auspices of the Famous Players in a patriotic picture “The Boy Scout” written especially for her. The star will be seen in an entirely different role from previous ones. No release date has as yet been announced.

War Films Will Fight Post-War Hate, Says Florence LaBadie

In the opinion of Florence LaBadie, Thanhouser star, post-war hate is a thousand times worse than a just war, and is an instrument to further warfare.

Miss LaBadie derived her impression from the showing of two battle films that she witnessed. She declares that after seeing the first she left the theatre with the thought that the soldiers and aviators she had seen were a fine lot, and those who would destroy them, a bad lot. Later she saw another picture in which the workings of the enemy army—the soldiers she had been prejudiced against in the former film, were shown. And then her feelings toward the “hated” ones melted, and she saw them as just a fine lot of men as the others.

The Thanhouser star then went on to tell of the lesson she drew from the two exhibitions:

“By showing in each of the warring countries, at the conclusion of peace, the battle pictures of the opposing country, we can change the attitude of the people who will witness the film. The so-called hated enemy will be found to act, move and fight like their own men and the impression will die with the film. Circulation of such films will educate the public to the truth that no country controls a monopoly in heroes—that we all of us have our brave, defiant warriors—and with the planting of such an impression you can look for post-war hate to quite completely disappear.”

Special Music for “Birth”

A special woman’s orchestra will play an appropriate score during the engagement of “Birth,” the cinematographic presentation of the life of a child at the Eltinge theatre.
Ince Working on Naval Training Film as Gift to U. S.

THOMAS H. INCE is to present the United States Government as a patriotic gift to assist in Navy recruiting, a big feature showing in complete detail just exactly what Uncle Sam does when he takes a young American in civilian clothes from his civilian environment, and turns him into an able seaman and first class fighting man.

A corps of Triangle directors and cameraman have been working at the United States Naval Training Station at Goat Island, San Francisco Bay, on the film.

Captain Durrell in command of the Training Station, and the sixteen hundred apprentice sailors in the three separate training camps that have been established on that island, together with Lieutenant-Commander Shoup, Lieutenant Gaddis and Chief Boson’s Mate Miller who is the Adjutant, acting under instructions from the Navy Department at Washington, suspended the regular program for the week to the necessities of the film, and provided apprentice seamen by sections and companies and battalions to illustrate the various phases of training.

It is not so generally known that the United States Navy offers not merely naval training, but it is the door to a trade as well. The apprentice seamen elect according to their capabilities and ambitions the line of their future work; men are trained as electricians, telegraphers and radio operators, machinists, marine engineers, trained nurses, pharmacists, stenographers and accountants, as well as those branches that have to do with gunnery, torpedoes and navigation.

This film will show every step taken in an original manner as a result of a scenario that has been developed by Ince himself, in consultation with the government officials who are assisting him in the preparation of the unique production.

Poison Doll Shown in Sixty-fourth Bray-Pictograph

ONE of the most important services rendered by Paramount-Bray-Pictographs, consists in bringing before the wide interest. As a result, Pictographs have held the forefront as a release of real educational value.

Other subjects in this release are: "Turkey Hunting in South Carolina," "Salvaging the Submarines' Prey" and an animated cartoon, "Soldiering for Fair," being the further adventures of the Quacky Doodles.

America—My Work—Chaplin—I Like All—Max Linder

"I like America and your American spirit. I like especially the dash and 'pep,' the way you Americans jump in and do things. And I like sunny California."

Thus Max Linder in an interview given Motion Picture News, through the courtesy of his manager and personal representative, Edmond de Jaive, expresses himself.

Having, as he says, taken the "American slant" of the film industry in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, the French comedian adds his word of praise for the American film system. Concluding, Mr. Linder handed a complimentary bouquet to Charlie Chaplin, and finally stated how anxious he was to learn any or all "new slants" of screen work.

"Primrose Ring," with Mae Murray, Heart Interest Tale

A mixture of the fantastic and prosaic is the description given "The Primrose Ring," an adaptation of Ruth Sawyer’s story in which Mae Murray is starred by Lasky on the Paramount Program.

The story is of a crippled girl who, cured of her affliction, devotes herself to the training of children with similar disease. A new and young physician, who scorns the fairy stories the nurse tells her charges to take their mind from illness, takes charge. The girl is forced to resign, but when the children continue clamoring for her fairy stories, the matter-of-fact doctor awakens to a realization of her work. Finally his most vulnerable appendage, the heart is touched, and the ending can be plainly foreseen. Robert Leonard was in charge of the direction.

Five Fox Pictures Completed in One Week

"Full speed ahead" is apparently the motto of the Fox Eastern and Western studios of late. One week marked the completion of five new photoplays, four on the Pacific Coast and one in Fort Lee.

Frank Lloyd finished up the William Farnum Feature he was working on, and Richard Stanton put the final touches into Dustin Farnum’s second Fox production. R. A. Walsh completed the picture starring Miriam Cooper that he was working on, and the crank also turned its last on Otis Turner’s forthcoming George Walsh vehicle. June Caprice also called a halt to "A Small Town Girl" in the New Jersey studios.

Stars of "Barrier" Sign with Edgar Lewis

Mabel Julienne Scott, who came into prominence as a motion picture actress, through her excellent portrayal of Nellia in "The Barrier," and Mitchell Lewis, who was "Poleon" in the Rex Beach picture, have signed with Edgar Lewis to appear in his new picture, on which work will begin in June in California.

Edgar Lewis directed "The Barrier," which is in demand by exhibitors all over the country.
Fox Men Band for Military Services

The fifteen thousand employees of the Fox Film Corporation are not backward in military activities. The studios and offices throughout the country are reported seething with martial movement.

William Fox, now in his Los Angeles studios, is major of four Home Guard companies formed there. He has asked permission to enroll the platoon. John Glavey, formerly of the Pennsylvania National Guard, and who holds a first lieutenant's commission in the United States Infantry, has been appointed captain of this force. One hundred and seventeen men enlisted the first day. Fifty per cent of the men have had military training.

A hospital corps, with Miriam Cooper and Gladys Brockwell as nurses, is also being organized at Los Angeles. The Farnum brothers have purchased a fifty-foot motor craft which they will enlist in the Mosquito Fleet guarding Los Angeles harbor.

In the East an infantry company has been organized at the Fort Lee Studios by Director William Nigh. One hundred men have enlisted.

"The Silent Master" Heralded as Exceptional Film

Private showings of Robert Warwick's "The Silent Master" lead the Selznick organization to believe it will create a furor among exhibitors. Because of numerous previous productions, Harry Rapf, president of the Warwick Film Corporation, staked heavily on the success of this picture, engaging Leonce Perret as director and a cast which included Olive Tell, Anna Little, Donald Galaher and Harry Vidor.

The scenes include the underworld of Paris, a palatial villa and luxurious mansions of New York. There are two love themes and the plot combines adventure among the criminals of Paris, the mystery of a secret court, and romance always associated with the French capital.

Mr. Warwick is already at work on his next subject, "The Modern Othello," in which Elaine Hammerstein will be his leading woman.

D. A. R. Boosting "The Eagle's Wings," a Bluebird

An interesting development arising from the exhibition of "The Eagle's Wings," the Bluebird industrial preparedness feature, is reported from Lynchburg, Va. As a part of the determination of the Daughters of the American Revolution to "do their bit" in the present national crisis, 1,500 chapters of that organization, scattered over every state in the Union, are interesting themselves in displays of "The Eagle's Wings" in local picture theatres for the purpose of arousing patriotism and stirring pride of country.

At the Academy of Music, Lynchburg, Va., booked through the Charlotte (N. C.) branch of Bluebird, by Manager E. F. Davids, played "The Eagle's Wings." two days in this 1,250 capacity house on percentage; the D. A. R. and the United Daughters of the Confederacy joining in the proceeds and undertaking to provide the audiences by selling the tickets.

Pathé, Under Berst, Breaking Records This Year

In every branch, the Pathé corporation, reflecting the increase of efficiency under administration of J. A. Berst, has established records never before equaled in the history of the company, according to a statement issued last week which told of distribution of the largest bonuses to employees ever made by the concern.

It is the Pathé's claim that their Box-Office Star system by which Pearl White, Mollie King, Mrs. Vernon Castle, Florence LaBadie, Gladys Hulette, Baby Marie Osborne, Creighton Hale, "Lonesome Luke," Harry Meyers, Rosemary Theby and Frederick Ward are presented to the public, enables the exhibitor to be certain of patronage and box-office results.

The serial program of Pathé so far this year brings to mind Pearl White in "Pearl of the Army," Mrs. Castle in "Patria" and Mollie King in "Mystery of the Double Cross." Each is reported by the producing organization to have broken records. Three new serials featuring Ruth Roland, Mollie King and Miss White are in course of preparation.

In addition other features which have set the Pathé standard are the Florence LaBadie Thanhouser subjects, and films in which Frederick Ward, Gladys Hulette, Baby Marie Osborne appeared, and the "Lonesome Luke" comedies.

Pathé attributes much of the credit to the various directors, George Fitzmaurice, William Parks, Theodore Marston, Ernest Warde, Emile Chantard and Van Dyke Brooke.

William Russell as Lawyer in Next Picture

"Shackles of Truth" is the title of the next vehicle chosen for William Russell, the Mutual-American star. The story was written by Julius Grinnell Puthmann, who is also the author of the last two Russell productions, "High-play" and "The Frame-up."

In this picture William Russell appears as a young lawyer who is willing to sacrifice his own career to save the honor of his father and shield the mother.

Francella Billington plays opposite Mr. Russell. Others in the cast include Alfred Vosburgh, Adda Gleason, George Aherne, Lucille Ward and Frederick Vroom.

Richard Tavers, Nell Craig and Sydney Ainsworth in a Scene From Exsana's Adaptation of Samuel Merwin's "The Troublers" (Released Through K-E-S-E).
Windy City Turns Out to Welcome Mary and Doug.

Miss Pickford and the Smiling Mr. Fairbanks Dined and Admired as They Drop Off for a Few Hours En Route to Pacific Coast

TWO of the most scintillating of planets in the film firmament shed their light on Chicago for a few hours at a time and within short intervals of each other last week. They were Mary Pickford, the demure, and Douglas Fairbanks, the debonair. Both stepped out of their orbit for the Coast long enough to be feasted a little and idolized a lot.

Miss Mary was the first to arrive. She came in from New York Saturday morning, April 7, accompanied by her mother and her manager. At the regular weekly luncheon of the Irish Fellowship Club of Chicago held at the Hotel Sherman she was the guest of honor and for a space of two hours, old men, young men, pop-eyed youngsters, dowagers and debauniers feasted their eyes on her as she sat at the main table flanked on each side by a Supreme Court judge. Fully 500 people attended the luncheon and during the post-prandial program Miss Pickford sent her reputation up another notch by delivering a speech that was as well received and discussed as Wilson's war message. She continued on her way to the Coast that evening.

On Monday morning Doug Fairbanks and smile alighted from the Limited. He was accompanied by his watchcharm representative and protege, little Benny Ziedman. Through the energy of Max Goldstine, the manager of the Chicago Arctraft offices, the members of the daily and trade press and a host of exhibitors and theatre owners had a chance to view Doug at close range at a luncheon given in his honor at the Illinois Athletic Club.

Doug kept his dollar-getting smile working overtime and like Miss Pickford managed to put over a speech. He talked about his latest finished picture, "In and Out Again"; discussed his work, told a few stories and when he and Representative Ziedman departed on an evening train they had ensconced themselves higher than ever in the favor of those they met. Douglas is scheduled to stop off in Arizona and Wyoming to fit in some local color on scenes for his next picture.

Universal, Chicago, Moves to New Quarters

The headquarters of the Universal Exchange in Chicago has been moved to within closer touch of the Loop in the next few weeks. They have leased the entire fifteenth floor of the Consumers Building on South State street, where they will consolidate with the Chicago Bluebird Company's offices in the occupation of the new quarters.

Leaks in the Loop

Triangle has opened a booking office in Milwaukee. It will be under the direction of R. C. Seery, of the Chicago office. Ralph Wetstein, of Milwaukee, has been appointed the sales representative there. The new office is destined to take care of all the Wisconsin business.

Jones Linick and Schaefer late last week purchased the Indiana and Illinois rights for "Enlighten Thy Daughter." The bargain was closed with G. S. Schlessinger, of New York. The production will be released through the Central Film Company.

Alfred Hamburger has added the Easterly theatre, Lincoln avenue and Diversey Boulevard, to his active list of motion picture houses. The newest house opened Saturday evening, April 7, with Nazimova in "War Brides." Joe Lyons has been placed as manager.

Simeon Griever's new exchange project is to be incorporated under the name of Griever & Herz. They have rented offices on the fourteenth floor of the Consumers Building. Short subjects will be the feature of their business.

The General Feature Film Company has purchased "America Is Ready," and have booked it for a week's run in the Loop.

Here is one of "P. A." Jacoby's stunts. A wedding on the stage of the Albany Park theatre, one of the Hamburger string of houses. "The Libertine," after finishing its engagement at the Playhouse, will immediately be hooked into the...
Josiah Pearce Signs to Handle Art Dramas in Louisiana

THROUGH a contract recently entered into with Southwestern Art Dramas, Inc., Josiah Pearce and Sons, of New Orleans, will become the exclusive distributors of the Art Dramas program for the State of Louisiana. It is felt this arrangement will enable the Southern exchanges to give much better service to all the theatres in New Orleans, as well as for the entire state.

Josiah Pearce is one of the best known exhibitors in the Southwest. He is the owner of many large theatres in New Orleans and other cities. He was formerly in the exchange business.

The contract is considered by Harry Raver, president of Art Dramas, to be another milestone of onward progress, as he believes the new alliance will benefit the program over the entire country.

Mr. Pearce and the others in his company made a thorough investigation of the program before contracting to handle it. The firm has a reputation for business sense and discrimination.

This is the third big deal which has been put through by Art Dramas in two weeks. A fortnight ago Sol Lesser contracted to handle the program for the Western States, and last week Sanford and McHenry, incorporating as Southwestern Art Dramas, became the southern distributors.

Philadelphia Film Salesmen Organize

A temporary organization among the film salesmen traveling out of Philadelphia was formed at a recent meeting of the Fox Film Corporation branch in that city. Mr. A. Berman of Pathe was president.

A committee was selected to formulate objects and by-laws and to extend an invitation to the remaining numbers of the trade to join the organization. The organization will be completed at a meeting on April 21 at the Pathe Philadelphia Exchange, 1235 Vine street.

General Consolidates Branches

The Des Moines branch of the General Film Company has been discontinued and consolidated with the Omaha offices.

Charles Stumbaugh, formerly branch manager, will remain in Des Moines as Iowa representative for the General people.

General's Buffalo Shift

E. J. Hayes has been appointed sales manager for the General Film Company in Buffalo, succeeding W. A. V. Mack, who recently resigned.

Etris with Ideal

Robert Etris, a well-known exchanger, is now with the Philadelphia Ideal Film Exchange.

“Joan” in Fifth Week at Boston

Monday marked the opening of the fifth capacity week at the Colonial theatre, Boston, of Jesse Lasky’s masterpiece, “Joan the Woman,” featuring Geraldine Farrar.

“God’s Man” Selling Fast

“God’s Man,” in which H. B. Warner is starred, is being accorded a remarkable reception by both territorial rights distributors and exhibitors alike.

Within a few hours after the trade showing of the production last week, the Frohman offices were practically besieged by offers for the outright purchase of the negative of this subject with rights for the entire world. Despite these offers, the Frohman Company has proved the sincerity of its intent to build a business for permanency and has declined to deviate from its original intention of marketing “God’s Man.”

During the past week and within less than four days after the beginning of the quotation of prices, Joe Farnham, manager, has disposed of twenty of the forty-nine states and has under consideration offers for practically every country in the world; requests and enquiries are coming in so fast that he claims to be at his wits’ ends to facilitate matters.

Pathe Expects Record Booking on Official War Pictures

Official War Pictures, Inc. of which W. K. Vanderbilt is president and H. P. Davison, of J. P. Morgan and Company, is Treasurer, will release through Pathe and not General Film.

This means that Pathe Exchanges will take over all bookings on the British War Films showing the American Ambulance, Aviation, and other corps already engaged in fighting for the Allies and that Pathe exhibitors will be given first preference in booking these attractions which have scored tremendously wherever shown.

An idea of the business actually done by these remarkable pictures can be seen in the box-office statement of the Boston Opera House. This shows the house entirely sold out to a total day’s receipt of $4066.50.

The Metropolitan Opera House of Philadelphia playing at a lower admission scale was entirely sold out to a total of $3367.

A seven thousand dollar advance sale is reported for the opening night in Chicago.

A two-red installment of these pictures was shown at the Strand theatre for one week at a rental of $1500.
DOUG FAIRBANKS is shown here galloping away to the West, taking with him that dinner held at Murray's on the day previous to his departure. We are sorry—very sorry—that Doug has forsaken the East, but we are equally glad that Harry Bresler drew him in the act of departing. Doug fills the space excellently, and excellent spots in a page such as this are a rarity.

ONE of the big laughs at the Farewell Fairbanks' Feed was caused by the following, received just after the oysters,

"EX-CAZ Nicholas."

BUT both Bennie Zeidman and Pete Schmid remained silent at this which "Doug" read aloud:

"THE following comes to hand from one of the leading players in 'Oh, Boy!' at the Princess theatre, has written a motion picture scenario. Those who have read the 'script, say it embodies a story of unusual appeal. The names of the producer and the player who will have the leading part in the production have not yet been announced." — News Item.

TWO and a half (2½) pages of type-writing come from Nellie Revell under the heading of "The Pic..." and from Jo Hammer, with the heading of "The Pic..." She is a regular about film news.

THE only news worthy the notice of this page from the Fox publicity department this week are the facts that Miss Clara Bow at the Caprice, nursing a hatred for publicity as is the way with all players, goes to see her pictures incog. And, on second thought, may be he is. Who can tell?

It seems to us that it is good business to create an atmosphere of mystery around work in the studio. Giving away secrets also causes the fan to doubt something that really happened. When a daredelic heroine leaps or descends from a balloon via the parachute route, the fan who has carefully read a piece exposing the tricks of the studio will sometimes insist that the daredelic heroine was doubled for in that particular scene. And even if she was, why tell the public about it?

JUST FOR FUN

By LONGACRE

Shake, Marion. We have, at least two dozen 'scripts concerning which no announcement has been made as to the names of the producers, or the players who will have the leading parts.

The height of sophistication was registered last week, when one reviewer described the scene between Adam and Eve in a certain picture as being "realistic."

"I CAN imagine no worse form of entertainment to an intelligent mind," says Eugene Walter in the motion picture. It is well to add that Mr. Walter's play, "The Easiest Way," has been pictured, thus giving the attack something of a reverse twist that gently soaks him between the left ear and the base of the skull.

BECAUSE Agnes Vernon has brown hair and wears clothes of the same color, she has dropped the Agnes and will hereafter be known as "Brownie." When she tires of "Brownie" we suppose she will change again. Wonder whether Mary Pickford and Charlie Chaplin and Douglas Fairbanks and a few others would be so popular to-day if they had changed their names to suit their sartorial tastes.

The only news worthy the notice of this page from the Fox publicity department this week are the facts that William Farnum has been presented with a Bible, and that June Caprice, nursing a hatred for publicity as is the way with all players, goes to see her pictures incog.
In and Out of Town

Beatrix Michelsen and George Middleton, her director, left New York for the Pacific Coast last Wednesday. Upon their arrival they will immediately start production work on their next feature, which it is said will be released on the state rights basis.

May Allison is expected to grace Broadway with her presence this week on a short vacation jaunt from the Pacific Coast.

H. M. Horkheimer, of Balboa, is a busy man around the 1600 Broadway office these days, having arrived from Long Beach last week.

Frederick L. Collins, of McClure Pictures, has returned to New York from his stay of several weeks in the Los Angeles film colony.

Milton Sills, the well-known star of "The Honor System" and "Patricia" is in town.

Stipulations to Sunday Shows in Iowa

The Iowa State Senate has voted, 27 to 18, to legalize Sunday moving picture shows in cities of more than 500 population, with petition bearing signatures of ten per cent. of the voters asking an election, and the election is favorable to the Sunday shows. This makes it illegal to have Sunday shows in towns of less than 500, and all Sunday shows in towns larger than that are illegal until the petitions are signed, submitted, and the election carried. The House, it is said, is favorable to the bill, and will pass it.

In Nebraska an attempt to amend the State Censorship Bill to prohibit Sunday shows was defeated. The Censorship Bill is still before the Legislature, having passed to the third reading in the Senate. Its passage is expected, as it has been approved by the exhibitors. The exhibitors are now expecting to fight unsatisfactory amendments.

Ince Tenders Aid to Hearst in Recruiting Publicity

Thomas H. Ince last week wired William Randolph Hearst congratulating him on the work of the Hearst papers toward stimulating recruiting, and offering to assist in any way he could. Mr. Ince went on to say:

"In applying practical publicity your chain of papers is doing what no purely governmental bureau could do or is equipped to do.

"How far the motion picture can directly assist and inspire no one can say. That the motion picture is a new social instrument of tremendous importance no one can deny."

Army Assembling Will Aid Exhibitors in Some Towns

The recent recruiting of the militia and the assembling of soldiers at forts are expected to have a striking effect on the business of some of the Kansas exhibitors. One example of these opportunities is that possessed by Ray Lanphere, who has two picture houses at Junction City, Kan. Junction City is only a few miles from Fort Riley—and 40,000 soldiers probably will be stationed at Fort Riley within a short time. There are two good theatres at Manhattan, Kan. Fort Riley is on the electric line that runs between Junction City and Manhattan. So here are two towns, one Junction City, of 3,000 population, and the other of 10,000, that will have to take care of the idle time of these 40,000 soldiers.

Baltimore Accords "Womanhood" Warm Reception

A striking patriotic gathering accompanied the presentation of "Womanhood, the Story of a Nation," Vitagraph's preparedness spectacle, on its presentation here at the New theatre.

Through the efforts of Manager L. A. De Hoff, the Theatre was decorated to suit the occasion. Both the interior and exterior was covered with flags of the nation and the Maryland flag. Soldiers lined the lobby, and the ushers were dressed as Red Cross nurses. The musicians were dressed in military costumes. Special music was furnished.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, producer of the picture, was in Baltimore at the initial showing and made a speech. Robert E. Lee, secretary of Mayor Preston and Lieutenant George D. Riley and other prominent men made an urgent call for volunteers.

Essanay have just completed "The Saint's Adventure," with Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson. Walthall, by the way, is getting ready for the summer by building himself a houseboat. Others at the studio claim that it is to be a submarine chaser.

Terry Ramsaye, Mutual's publicity director, is getting out a t oppy looking, two colored brochure, entitled "Exhibitor's Idea Book." Contained within its sixteen pages is all sorts of advertising and publicity suggestions for exhibitor's running the Helen Holmes' "Railroad Raiders" Serial.

Jesse L. Lasky stopped off in Chicago last week on his way to the Coast, and saw the showing of "Joan the Woman" at the Colonial. He announced that he was going back to get into conference on Geraldine Farrar's next production, which he intimated will be even more pretentious than "Joan the Woman." Work on the next picture will begin early in June.

Following out their announcement of progressive policy at the Studebaker theatre, Jones, Linick & Schaefer now have George M. Cohan in "Broadway Jones" there playing to capacity audiences, with 25 cents the top price.

"Joan the Woman," at the Colonial, is equalizing and even surpassing the success of "Intolerance" there. Business is at the same height as it was in the beginning, and it is the one bright spot among the Loop picture houses.

Merl La Voy's "Heroic France" is now showing at the Bandbox, and doing even better business than at the Strand.
Rioting Marks Cleveland Showing of "Birth of a Nation"

The opening performance of "The Birth of a Nation" in Cleveland was marked by a demonstration of about one hundred and fifty negroes who marched from Central avenue and East Thirtieth street to the Opera House, where they raised quite a disturbance, yelling and singing and crying down the big historic picture, until a call for extra police succeeded in turning the demonstrators home again.

Their hysteria grew as the evening progressed until they finally began throwing stones into shop windows and even stoned a street car at the corner of Central avenue and East Ninth street.

The city council last week passed an ordinance to restrain the showing of "The Birth of a Nation." However, the Opera House filed an injunction against Mayor Davis prohibiting him from interfering with the picture. Common Pleas Judge Foran upheld the injunction against Mayor Davis and Safety Director Sprosty, so "The Birth of a Nation" will continue unmolested at the Opera House, where it will run indefinitely.

Seat Tax in New Brunswick Town Theatres Raised

The Fredericton (N. B.) Common Council has passed an ordinance raising the annual theatre and moving picture house tax from two and one half cents per seat to ten cents per seat, the change to become effective May 1.

The action of the council was based on the grounds that the Fredericton exhibitors could well afford to pay more than they had been putting into the coffers of the city. Strong opposition is being waged against the movement by the exhibitors, headed by Dave Richards and George W. Fennety. The forces of the Maritime Province Motion Picture Exhibitors League have been asked to join in the movement, but the league is powerless to act.

Art Drama Releasing Method in Canada

Arrangements have been made between the Independent Film and Theatre Supply Company, Montreal, a new film distributing company, and Art Dramas Incorporated, whereby the Art Drama program will be handled exclusively in Canada by the Independent Company. The first release will be made in Canada the latter part of April.

The Independent Film and Theatre Supply Company, Montreal, by arrangement with the Perkins Electric Company, whose offices it shares in the leading cities, also supplies moving picture machines, parts and all kinds of moving picture supplies.

"Civilization" Nets $8,000 in One Week in Brazil

The earning power of the Thomas H. Ince spectacle, "Civilization," has reached a new record in Rio de Janeiro, the capital of Brazil. J. Parker Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation, has received cables announcing that the gross receipts for last week's showing of the picture reached the unprecedented total of $8,000.

Big Theatre Converted Into Studio by Ogden Co.

Ogden Pictures Corporation has taken over the Alhambra theatre, Ogden, Utah, recently completed at a cost of $200,000 and will use it as a studio in which to produce the interiors of the company's five-reel comedy dramas featuring Lillian Walker.

The first picture of the new manufacturing concern will have its premiere showing in the Alhambra, changes made in the structure when converted into a studio not having materially affected the seating capacity or interior arrangements.

The possibilities of the modern motion picture theatre as a motion picture studio have been revealed in the conversion of the Alhambra theatre into a studio. With an adequate floor space "back stage" it was only necessary to install a large electric-power light generator in the basement of the building and connect up a series of powerful non-flashing lights to make the theatre into a studio. The lights are arranged in batteries which can be moved from place to place about the stage whenever needed.

Canada Exchangemen's Bodies May Consolidate

The Exchangemen's Association of Manitoba, according to word from Toronto, has been making plans for some time for the construction and consolidation of the various Exchangemen's Associations throughout Canada into a Dominion body, the idea being that the exchangemen will be better able to protect the industry and themselves with the national body, which would deal not only with national questions, but also give assistance in local and provincial troubles.

One of the first things in their plans is a national convention to be held next fall, either in Winnipeg or Toronto. Winnipeg would appear a logical point, as it is about the center of the Dominion.

Exchange Associations are now organized in St. John, N. B., Montreal, Que., Toronto, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man.

The Black Stork Doing Big Business in Large Cities

"The Black Stork," starring Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, and setting forth the theories that led the Chicago surgeon to permit a defective baby to die, has been successfully launched in Chicago, Cleveland, and Cincinnati, in all of which cities it is in the second week of its run. Dr. Haiselden addressed the audiences in both Cleveland and Cincinnati at the launching of the play, and in each city met with an enthusiastic demonstration. At the La Salle theatre, in his home city of Chicago, the surgeon has delivered several ten-minute addresses, telling of the abuses he is seeking to correct, and showing how tainted heredity will affect the nation in the present war crisis.

"I saw today two hundred or more men and women herded together, rushing for marriage licenses," said Dr. Haiselden, in one of his addresses at the La Salle. "I walked from one end of the waiting line to the other. I saw men there with tuberculosis, men showing the effect of dissipation and various resulting diseases, getting licenses to marry. It is against the law to spit on the sidewalks, yet it is permissible for men with transmittable diseases to kiss the pure lips of young women, to infect these women, and to propagate tainted and deformed children, who will be a burden to a nation about to undergo the hardships of war. It is against just such conditions that "The Black Stork" inveighs."

Who's Your Neighbor," Nears Completion

"Who's Your Neighbor?" the initial production of Master Drama Features, Inc., is nearing completion. It will be sold on the state rights plan.

"Who's Your Neighbor?" was written by Willard Mack, author of many stage and screen productions. The cast includes Evelyn Brent, Christine Mayo, Frank Morgan, Anders Randolph, William Sherwood, George Majoroni, Franklin Hanna, Dean Raymond, Mabel Wright, Gladys Fairbanks, and others. S. Rankin Drew is the director.

Edward Small and Herman Becker, organizers of the Master Drama Features, will announce the name of the theatre in which the trade showing of "Who's Your Neighbor?" will shortly be given. The play relates to segregation of vice districts.

Harris Buys Submarine Picture

Zack Harris, a well-known film man of the Middle West, has purchased the rights for Universal's submarine production, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." Mr. Harris plans to open an office at 918 Locust street, Des Moines, Iowa.

The Crisis" Is Booked for Chicago and Milwaukee

The rights for the state of Illinois for "The Crisis" have been sold by Harry A. Sherman to an association of Milwaukee business men for a cash price, said to be nearly double the figure at which the Selig photoplay, based on Winston Churchill's novel, was held when Mr. Sherman first began his sensational campaign for the disposal of this famous film.

"The Crisis" is to be staged in elaborate style in a Chicago loop theatre during the first week in May, and a run extending through the summer is planned. A canvass of the Chicago situation revealed that "The Crisis" is more in demand by the theatres and the public than any film in the market.

The motion picture departments of the various daily newspapers reported that not a day passes without two or three telephone inquiries as to when "The Crisis" is to be put on in Chicago, and two of the largest of the papers told the inquirers that the demands for "The Crisis" exceeded the demands for all other films combined.

There are on file in Mr. Sherman's Chicago office, requests from twenty-three of the largest of Chicago's outlying houses for first runs of the film after the finish of a "loop" engagement.

"The Crisis" becomes more and more timely every minute as the war excitement increases," said Mr. Sherman in conversation with the Milwaukee buyers. "It is not a war play, manufactured for the moment with the bungling inseparable from such productions. Instead, it is a romance of war, leisurely dreamed over by one of the greatest of American literary geniuses. It touches the heart, and that is the final test of dramatic greatness. We are in the second of the two great crises of the American republic. 'The Crisis' deals with the first in a great big way that will appeal to all of us in the throes of the second, which second has now descended upon us as a thunderbolt from a clear sky."

Ince Productions to Discuss Sales Plans April 18

INCE PRODUCTIONS, INC., the new organization headed by Ralph and John Ince, has been active executive work in temporary offices at 1600 Broadway, where they will remain until their newly equipped headquarters in the Fulton theatre are ready for occupancy. A meeting of central interest to state rights and independent exchanges will be held at the Broadway offices next Wednesday, at which time Ralph Ince, who is to preside, will outline the policy of the organization, render full details as to the productions which will characterize their early efforts and the general plan of the company and what is to be expected of its distributing affiliations.

The meeting will not be in the nature of a selling propaganda, which, according to Ralph Ince, is unnecessary. Already a sufficient number of highly important buyers have signified their willingness to enter into the Ince project to assure at least a seventy-five per cent, representation throughout the country.

At the gathering all details essential to the knowledge of buyers and exhibitors will be divulged by Mr. Ince and his brother and plans laid for the immediate exploitation over the country of their forthcoming twelve special productions.

The idea of a meeting, rather than long drawn out correspondence, was suggested by several well known out-of-town buyers who will be in New York at that time and who stated that others of equal prominence would come if advised.

New York City and State, New Jersey and other Eastern territory has already been disposed of for the twelve productions and negotiations indicate the early closing of other states.

An unusual method of exploitation and cooperation has been outlined by Louis Rosenberg, head of Variety Films, for the aiding of his first independent production, "The Price of Her Soul," which is now being disposed of on a territorial basis.

As the picture is of the drug theme, the natural endorsements in cities where the picture will play, would come from local, anti-drug and civic organizations interested in the suppression of the traffic.
"The Black Stork" to Be Sold Through New York Office

The Sheriott Pictures Corporation has decided to market through its New York office at 218 West Forty-second street, "The Black Stork," the picture featuring Dr. Harry J. Haiselden, the Chicago physician who allowed a malformed baby to die, rather than permit it to suffer through life. M. E. Mazur, general manager of the Sheriott Pictures Corporation, in discussing the picture—which opened recently at the La Salle theatre, Chicago, said that "The Black Stork" was not a propaganda picture, but rather a living document calculated to teach as great a lesson as that preached in the churches—moral cleanliness.

Numerous Inquiries Received Regarding "Pokes and Jabs"

An unusually large number of inquiries from exchange men in all sections of the country was the result of the recent announcement by the Jaxon Film Corporation that its single reel "Pokes and Jabs" comedies had been withdrawn from the General Film Company program, and would hereafter be distributed on the open market. According to an official of the Jaxon Company, practically every exchange of any consequence in the country has made application by letter, wire, or by personal call, to handle the comedies.

As yet no contracts for franchise rights have been closed. It is the intention of the Jaxon Company to arrange for the distribution of its pictures throughout the entire country at the same time. Arrangements have already been completed, however, for representation in a large percentage of the territory, and it is expected that the company will be able to announce its exchanges for the whole country in a short time.

"The Libertine," Booked in Moore and Greaves Colorado Houses

"The Libertine," which is controlled in Colorado by the Supreme Photoplays Corporation of which L. Goldstein is general manager, recently completed negotiations for booking that production over the entire circuit of the Moore and Greaves theatres.

Mr. Mazur stated that it was not and is not the intention of the Sheriott Pictures Corporation to exploit pictures which do not have in themselves the appeal to the general public from the amusement standpoint, and if, in addition, a moral lesson was to be taught, that was secondary to the business of the corporation which is the releasing of pictures which shall produce entertainment for the multitude. Dilating further upon the subject, he said "The Black Stork" takes as its basic principle the fact that malformations both physical, moral and mental should not form a part of human existence, and this fact has been self evident for many decades.

Avers "Woman and the Beast." Is Absolutely Clean

"Our initial state right production, 'The Woman and the Beast,' is melodramatic, but clean," writes a representative of the Graphic Features, Room 401, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City. "We will concede that it is in the class of so-called sensational films, but there is nothing in it that anybody would be ashamed to see; in fact it simply deals with a pacifist who showed he could be bold in time of need. It is not a political story, as there will undoubtedly be a flood of political stories dealing with pacifists."

Marie Shotwell, who is the star of the feature, made her first picture hit in "The Witching Hour," then appeared in "Enlighten Thy Daughter" and "Warfare of the Flesh."

Spokane House Strong for Big State Rights Feature

Spokane's Liberty theatre, finding it pays, is going in strong these days for the big features released under the state-rights plan and in the open market. "Ramona," proved a winner, and several others are now announced by Manager Ralph Ruffner as in prospect.

The first of these is "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea." This picture is to start on Easter, "War Brides," "A Daughter of the Gods," with Annette Kellermann, approved at a private run by the local censors, is to start May 20.

"Web of Life," Elicits Many Inquiries from Buyers

Gold Medal Photoplayers, Inc., report heavy inquiries from state rights buyers regarding their production, "The Web of Lime," a five-part photodrama.

In New York the picture is being distributed by the Pioneer Feature Film Company, and although the picture has only been offered to exhibitors a very short time, an unusual number of good houses have arranged for bookings. It will first be seen in a number of theatres in Loew's circuit and in prominent neighborhood houses, such as The Apollo, McKinley Street, and the Grand Opera House.

In eastern Pennsylvania The Electric Theatre Supply Co. has purchased the distribution rights and the picture will be shown first over the Stanley circuit.

The company is already engaged in the production of another feature to be distributed on the states rights plans, and the present intention of the officials is to produce one feature a month as long as the present demand for independent feature productions continues.

"Ne'er-Do-Well" in South

Sol. L. Lesser, who, a short time ago, announced that he would henceforward exploit his production, "The Ne'er-Do-Well" through his own offices throughout the country, except in those territories where he had no affiliations, announces the sale of the southern states to Tandy and Lynch of the Southern Paramount Company.

The states of Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana will be distributed through the New Orleans Exchange, located at 814 Perdido street. North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Tennessee will be distributed through the Atlanta exchange, located at 51 Luckie street. Messrs. Tandy and Lynch announce that they are now prepared to accept bookings on this notable feature, and that for the further advantage of the exhibitor, they have in a number of "Ne'er-Do-Well" condensed to eight reels, instead of ten, as it was in its original form. They report that a lively interest is being shown by southern exhibitors, partly due to the great tide of enthusiasm being manifested throughout the country for all of Rex Beach's works.

"Who Shall Take My Life?" Is Selig's Latest

The Selig Polyscope Company announces the latest of its state-rights features, namely, "Who Shall Take My Life?"

The melodrama presents a plea for the abolishment of capital punishment, written by Maibelle Heikes Justice after she had spent a week in Sing Sing prison and investigated prison conditions, etc. The propaganda carried in the new Selig feature is endorsed by former Governor Dunne, of Illinois; Brand Whitlock, Ambassador to Belgium; Bishop Fallows, Samuel Gompers and others.

The cast includes Tom Santschi, Fritz Brunette, Ed Coxen, Bessie Eyton, Eugenie Besserer and Harry Lonsdale.
Lorch Made Manager State Film Company, Detroit

Harry S. Lorch is the new manager of the State Film Company, Detroit, controlling "Civilization," "The Libertine," "The Masque of Life" and "A Mormon Maid." Mr. Lorch for the past few weeks has been doing publicity work for the State Film Company, and the Butterfield chain of theatres in Michigan. Formerly he handled this work from Chicago.

He is succeeded as publicity man at Detroit by Howard O. Pierce, recently with the Tri-State Film Company, formerly with the Bluebird, and previous to that time with the John H. Kunsky interests, having managed the Washington and Liberty theatres, and edited the Weekly Film News, the house organ of the John H. Kunsky theatres.

Ultra Film in Canada

A. J. Cohe, president of the Ultra Pictures Corporation, concluded negotiations last week with Globe Securities, Ltd., of Toronto, Canada, whereby they take over the Canadian rights for "The Woman Who Dared."
PETITE WINIFRED ALLEN has scored a hit with director Allan Dwan by her clever work, and there are more than mere rumors as basis for the statement that upon completion of "The Man Who Made Good" in which she is featured with Jack Deyveraux, she will be retained for other roles under Dwan's personal supervision.

All of which is not so worse considering Miss Allen is but eighteen, scales an even hundred, and acknowledges a height one inch under five feet.

FINDING that the camera did not occupy all his time, Thomas Meighan, now playing opposite Pauline Frederick in Goldwyn productions, has branched out as impresario. He will shortly present Frances Ring and William Mack in an adaptation of a recently published novel of the "best seller" class will be the next vehicle for Kitty Gordon the World-Brady star. Miss Gordon's work in the recently released "Forget-Me-Not" is reported to have brought an unexpectedly large demand for picture plays in which she is featured.

Bayne five part picture—he is even setting himself a fast pace. Several night sessions have been held at the Metro-Vitagraph studio and in a few days taking of outdoor scenes will be the order. For the past two weeks technical director Will Stevens and a crew of helpers have been busily engaged erecting a village typical of the lumber region in the Nyack district. There will be about forty "shacks" altogether.

The title of this picture has been changed from "The Voice of One" to "Cyclone Higgins, D. D."

ROBERT WARWICK found it necessary to brush up a bit on his knowledge of horsemanship because of the scenario demands for many riding feats in "A Modern Othello." Johnny Breen, famous horseman and riding instructor assisted in the training, and the photoplay star soon found his old skill coming back. Elaine Hammerstein will again play opposite Mr. Warwick in this picture.

Wallace MacDonald, recently supporting Marjorie Rambeau, daily appears before the camera with that star at the Frank Powell Studio on Long Island and nightly, with Miss Rambeau, faces the footlights at the Eltinge theatre in "Cheating Cheaters."
IN AND OUT OF WEST COAST STUDIOS

By J. C. JESSEN

JESSE L. LASKY, vice-president of the Famous Players arrived in Hollywood, Saturday to pay his annual visit to the studio. In other words, Mr. Lasky has not been on the coast for nearly a year, and the sight that met his eye was a brand new producing plant from front to rear and from foundation to diffusers. So many changes have been made that it will take Mr. Lasky practically all of the time he will spend on the coast to give the new improvements the once over. He plans to be at the coast but a short time.

The Lasky Studio was one of the sub-recruiting stations for a home guard regiment this week. The first day of registration, one hundred and twenty signed the roll, the first one being James Neil. Studio Manager Hoffman is in charge of every other day drill, and practically every member of the organization is proficient now in counting fours.

The Lasky players will aid in raising money for the Los Angeles Red Cross by giving an exhibition baseball game, in which the tragedians will line up against the comedians. Lou-Tellegen is to be the umpire because he has proven to all that he knows nothing of the great American game.

Margaret Illington has completed her engagement at the Hollywood Studio, and shortly is to leave for New York where she will probably continue at the Famous Players Studio.

THE Marshall Neilan company is home from two weeks in the woods near Santa Cruz. And the George Beban company, under the direction of Donald Crisp has gone to the mountains for a stay of several days, where the first scenes of the coming Beban Picture will be made.

The William Farnum-Frank Lloyd Fox Company is to next film a decidedly out-of-door story which will require trips to San Francisco, San Diego and Catalina Islands, and the organization has left for the first named city. The cast selected to support Mr. Farnum, includes Jewel Carmen, Mark Robbins, Larry Evans and others.

Richard Stanton has begun the filming of "The Scarlet Pimpernel" which will star Dustin Farnum and Billy Carr, with Farnum, Meta Anderson, Thomas Curra Hura and Tsuri Aoki in the cast.

The Essanay Company working at Culver City has completed the seven or eight-reel Japanese story, directed by Frank Borzage and Billy Carr, with Borzage, Meta Anderson, Thomas Curra Hura and Tsuri Aoki in the cast.

Maverick Terrell has been engaged by General Manager V. R. Day to serve as staff author, and Edmond De Jaive is serving as co-director. Billy Carr, late of the Ince studios, and who collaborated in the direction of the seven-reel Japanese picture made at the Essanay, has been retained as film editor for the Linder Company.

short vacation. Mr. Carlos left Wednesday for an auto trip to San Francisco by the coast route, and was accompanied by P. McGrew Wells, scenario writer. Before his departure Mr. Carlos gave a dinner at Levy's Tavern, Watts, in honor of the visit of Howard Sheehan and Louis Lurie, San Francisco exhibitors. The guests included principals of the Fox executive organization.

Paul Rostaralli, an acrobat of the Linder company, was injured this week to the extent of three ribs being broken when he was run down by an automobile. The accident happened but a few hours after he arrived in Los Angeles from Chicago. He is in a local hospital, and it will be several weeks before he can report for work.

MEMBERS of the Signal staff are taking a very keen interest in preparation for war in Los Angeles. D. H. Wischufsen, a member of the Gulf Company and a former U. S. officer, is organizing a company composed of the members of the Bolo Club of Los Angeles. Producer McGowan has enrolled in Los Angeles Aviation, which is to be held in reserve, and F. L. Hemphill, a veteran of the Spanish-American war, is listed among the reserve.

Abe Stern, general manager of the L-Ko and Stern Studio in Hollywood, has gone to New York for a stay of several weeks. During his absence the studio is in charge of Lewis Jacobs, the business manager.

Three companies are busy at the L-Ko Studio on comedies. One is under the direction of J. G. Bystone who is making a circus picture with Alice White. The first day of shooting for the featured player, she taking the part of a balloonist. To successfully make some scenes it was necessary that the cameraman be tied into the rope of the machine so that he could shoot downward and catch the action going on in the basket. Right behind the basket, and almost that which transpired below the balloon. Edwin Baldwin, a well-known balloon pilot was secured by the company to aid in the making of these scenes.

A SMALL town comedy directed by Bob McKenney is being filmed with Norma Taurog as the co-director. McKenney takes the important part in the one-reel subject.

A beach story is in the making under the direction of Noel and Dick Smith from a scenario prepared by J. G. Blystone, the director general of L-Ko company.

This is a between pictures period at the Rolin Studio, and the technical staff is busy with the making of five elaborate sets to be used for the next Lonesome Luke comedy for Pathe. Several changes are announced from this studio. Dorothy Twist has been placed in charge of the scenario department, and Gilbert Pratt lately affiliated with the Imp Studio, has been engaged. The first day Pratt was working in comedy he met with an accident which resulted in dislocation of fingers of his left hand.

UNIVERSAL city has the appearance of being partially deserted this week, for it so happens that a number of companies finished production and many were absent on exterior location several days during this time.

The new story to be taken up by Director Lynn Reynolds has been titled temporarily “Back to the Primitive.” This, like many of the previous stories made by this director, is an outdoor picture, and the company is leaving for Santa Cruz Island, where a majority of the exterior scenes will be made. Director Reynolds has Myrtle Gonzales as the featured player, with George Hernandez and Jean Hersholt as principals of the supporting cast. Mr. Reynolds is author of this story and it has a very timely

The producing staff of the Kalem Studio at Glendale, has been materially reduced. This is caused by discontinuing the production of “The Stingaree” series and “The Daughter of Daring.” It is not given out that these companies are to be discontinued permanently, but only that work will be suspended two weeks. The companies that continue at the Kalem Studio, are the ones making the Ham and Bud comedies, and another under the direction of James Horne, which has been turning out releases under the title “The American Girl.”

Robert Wells Ritchie, author of the Kalem “The Girl from ‘Frisco” series, was a guest at the Glendale studio this week, while on his way from his home in New York City to San Francisco, where he will spend some time with friends and relatives.

The Kalem organization has a new baseball team, managed and captained by little Bud Duncan. Challenges have been issued to the teams of all the studios and within a week or two the first game will be played.

The Yorke-Metro subject “The Hidden Spring” being completed, the Harold Lockwood company is now taking up the filming of “The Haunted Pajamas,” which will be the second starring vehicle for Lockwood from this studio. With the making of this film Fred J. Balshofer, general manager and president of the Yorke Company, steps in and becomes the operator behind the megaphone. On several previous productions from this studio Mr. Balshofer was in charge of producing, but owing to his absence from the studio, occasioned by his trip East it was necessary to secure some one to take charge of directing the recently made subjects titled "The Hidden Spring." The new photoplay is an adaptation from the story or novel of the same title written by Francis Perry Elliott, and is spoken of as a clever society comedy. Mr. Lockwood will take the role of a wealthy young American, and some new situations will be offered which will give him an entirely new character for portrayal.

The Horsley Club Comedy aggregation started in on its eightieth number this week, which will be titled "Jerry's Trial." George Ovey appears in this number in the guise of a convict, and Claire Alexander is the daughter of the warden who makes possible his escape. Other members of the cast are E. A. Brown, George George, and other Horsley stock people. Of the eighty Cub comedies made to date by Mr. Barney, he has written all but five of that number.

Normand Manning, a late business manager of the Balboa Studio at Long Beach, took up the duties of his new position as general manager at Horsley's Studio this week. The plans already made by Mr. Manning provide for considerable rearrangement of the grounds so as to best accommodate the needs of the three companies working there—the Crane Wilbur feature organization, the Cub Comedy and the Lasalida Film Company, which has Louise Osborne for its star.

The war spirit has become evident at Glendale, where Harry Schenck, as assistant director of the Kalem Ham Comedy Company, is recruiting a company of home guards at the foot hill city. The plans provide for the military organization to drill at the Kalem Studio. Mr. Schenck was sergeant in the Seventeenth Company of Coast Artillery, Federal Reserve, and from his commanders will receive the commission of captain, when the new company is completed.

The comedy in the making is titled "Bear Facts," in which the two comedians Ham and Bud are supported by Ethel Stirling, Henry Murdock and John Stepling. Many of the situations in this story deal with the bear which escapes from the Ringworm circus.

Ed Hearn, leading man of the "American Girl," Kalem Series, became the victim of an accident this week when horses ran away, and one wheel of a heavy wagon ran over his foot. The accident happened when Hearn was struggling with the villain who pursued the heroine of the story. In the scramble he fell from the wagon, causing the horses to run away.
PERSO\NALLY CONDUCTED TOURS IN Flickerville

It became very apparent this week, to us, that all the handsome men identified with the great film industry must to be accepted as health conscious. This idea had been stickin' in our craw, but we never reached a decision until we happened into the big lot on South Main Street. There assembled in one group were five or six men whose beauty would grab them off a price. Dave Horslev, with that coal-black mustache, is ideal for the role of a heavy. "The Butcher Boy"
(Arabcile-Paramount—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

If a flying start will help, the new Fatty Arbuckle comedies are going to cross the tape first in the race for clean, dependable slapstick that will always get the money. "The Butcher Boy" has all the qualities of the funniest, and then some. Mr. Arbuckle as his own director is a success, and he has done something which assures the above-mentioned dependability in casting every part capably and evidently without any jealousy lest some other star outshine the principal.

"Buster" Keaton, as the village pest, well known in vaudeville, makes his entrance into pictures by taking an amazing amount of punishment, as the recipient of Fatty's bouquets, from flour sacks to the ever-present pie. He gets a bombardment that lays him flat in falls that are not fake and would mean a broken neck to any one not in perfect physical shape. Al. St. John also helps the fast and furious action.

Several scenes, and the whole performance is clean yet excruciatingly funny in its situations.

Fatty has wisely surrounded himself with foils who make his work doubly enjoyable to any audience by their snappy work in their parts.

The story has enough consistency to satisfy even the most old-fashioned stickler for "plot," and we cannot imagine a person like mystery stories unraveled for them. Thus will "Mrs. Belfame" please and oblige, for the chief element in the picture is mystery, capably handled, filled with anticipation and interest, with a surprise denouement left for the finish.

One of the big points of value about the production is that there is a "big star" and a good story combined, something generally rare nowadays. The emotional artistry that is Nance O'Neil's is given all the scope it needs for exploitation, and she is backed up by a very capable supporting cast. Miss O'Neil, of course, is cast in the title role. Opposite her is Frank Belcher as her husband, delineating an uncoated, vicious, wife-beating type, whose subsequent death becomes the pivot of the story and the mystery.

Others in the cast are: Robert Elliott, Agnes Eyre, Anna Raines, Alfred Hickman, Grace Gordon, Aubrey Beattie and Elsa Earle.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Mrs. Belfame (Nance O'Neil) is a social leader in a small town. She is much beloved because of her sweet temperament, gentle ways and charming personality. Fate has given her a husband who is unworthy of her. He is dissolute, cruel and abusive, flaunting his wickedness to the rest of the town and to his wife's shame.

Her friends are, however, sympathetic. One, a middle-aged woman physician, has pity, love and respect for Mrs. Belfame and hatred for her husband. She is Dr. Anna Steuer (Anna Raines). Another friend of Mrs. Belfame is Dwight Rush (Robert Elliott). He is aware of the unhappiness of her married life and continually importunes her to divorce Belfame and marry him. She, however, decides to bear it all in spite of the protestations of her friends.

One night Belfame is shot and killed as he enters his home. Circumstances point to Mrs. Belfame as the murderer of her husband. Some strange actions just previous to the shooting and her intimacy with Rush strengthen the theory. She is arrested and tried. Just when it seems that nothing but a verdict of guilty can be brought by the jury in face of the evidence, Dr. Anna Steuer is taken to the hospital seriously ill. She dies, but before dying gives out a statement declaring that she shot Belfame to relieve his wife of the suffering torment of living with him. Mrs. Belfame does not marry Rush. In view of his youth, and although liking him, she sends him back to the young girl who loves him.

"Sunshine and Gold"
(Balboa-Pathé—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This latest Baby Marie Osborne picture presents the little star in a number of episodes both comical and sentimental. For the first reel she plays Cinderella, then she is kidnapped by gypsies and running away from them she encounters her grandfather who lives a hermit-like life. He is a calloused old gentleman, who performe must be melted in various ways by Baby Marie and after that comes her return and a reunion of the three generations.

"Sunshine and Gold" does not possess a story equal to those offered in the previous pictures with Baby Marie in the featured roles. As a vehicle it is all well enough, giving the star plenty of opportunities to display her irresistible charm. It has comedy and snatches of pathos here and there, but in a dramatic way it has certain shortcomings. There is practically no suspense in its makeup while the scenario is decidedly episodic and even discontinuous at times. Under the smiles that greet the child star there will perhaps be just a faint feeling of dissatisfaction. More drama would work no harm on such a pretty picture.

Daniel Gilfether heads the support as the grandfather. He is excellent in his scenes with the child. Henry King, who also directed, as the chauffeur, and Neil Hardin complete a very well balanced cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Little Mary (Marie Osborn) is at first introduced at her birthday party, after she has played the stellar part in a juvenile presentation of Cinderella. The next day while the chauffeur (Henry King) is taking her for a drive, he meets two ladies who are having trouble in getting their car started. He fixes it and drives them a distance to make sure that all goes well. Two stray members of a gypsy band take possession of the deserted car and motor back to camp. Only then is Little Mary discovered. The gypsies plan to hold her for ransom, but with the assistance of a sympathetic member of the band she escapes. She wanders to the hut of Andrews (Daniel Gilfether), who, it develops, is her grandfather, and the next day the chauffeur finds her and accompanies, by the old gentleman she returns to her home.

"The Mystery of the Double Cross"
(Pathe—Seventh Episode)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE are more startling developments in "Into Thin Air." A castle-like mansion with mysterious rooms, heavy doors and creaky floors is the background of much of the action of the latter reel of the episode. There are suspense and thrills aplenty and one can almost hear the ghosts wail so excellent is the entire illusion.

Of special interest is the introduction of Gladden James as Dick Annesley, a reporter. Annesley immediately allies himself on the side of Hale and the Masked Stranger. The part in this episode is a fat one and Mr. James handles it excellently. The comedy business in it he puts over in fine style. He is always natural and is a welcome addition to the cast.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Brewster, Philippa's father, suddenly disappears after a quarrel with Peter Hale (Leon Bary). Philippa (Molly King) accuses Hale of murder and he is arrested. The next morning Philippa withdraws her charge and Hale goes free. Bentley (Ralph Stuart) questions her on this point and she denies all knowledge of having gone to court to withdraw the charge, Annesley (Gladden James), a reporter, who scents a mystery in the peculiar case, accompanies Philippa and Bentley to a mysterious old castle into which the Masked Stranger is seen to have entered. The three find a note pinned between two doors reading,

"Behind one of these doors lurks death. Enter at your peril—The Masked Stranger."

Bentley enters one of the rooms to discover two men encased in armor who move toward him. He retreats in fright. When Annesley enters the men are gone, but the armor is still there. Leaving the house, Annesley is confronted by The Masked Stranger, who reveals himself to him.

Two Educational
(“The Home Aquarium” —600 feet. “African and Indian Elephants” —300 feet.)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"The Home Aquarium" is an educational that will find particular favor in the school. The variety of fish shown ranges from the ordinary gold-fish to the extraordinary ones—those worth between five hundred and a thousand dollars. The camera has caught close views of all the species, and the subtitles are intelligently written, telling interesting facts regarding the fish.

“African and Indian Elephants” is another Ditmars subject that combines instruction with comedy. The spectacle of the three-ton elephants playing with a hose is exceedingly humorous. Enlightening data as to the age the elephants sometimes attain, and the weight of his huge teeth, is given.

"Darkest Russia"
(World Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"Darkest Russia," adapted from the melodrama by H. Grattan Donnelly and Sidney R. Ellis, is an actionful picture that holds the interest continually through several situations that are sensational to say the least. It deals with the nihilists and the viciousness of government officials. The three best characters are sentenced to ten years in Siberia, but pardons arrive to bring on a happy end. Of course "Darkest Russia" is several weeks out of date. When Ilda is ordered to play "God Save the Czar," and she refuses, the situation there is rather humorous. But on the whole the picture offers sufficient thrilling melodrama to appease those not critical as to detail.

The direction is not always up to average standard—if, in passing, there is such a standard. The continuity is rather uneven in places, and a Siberian atmosphere, always difficult to procure, has not been convincingly attained. It takes more than a few beards, uniforms and snow to bring it to the screen. A further directorial flaw is shown in the tendency of many members of the cast to overact. Norbert Wicki, as Ivan, is the chief offender in this line, giving a performance entirely too exaggerated to be realistic, while there are others whose emotions are expressed too heavily in a closeup or two.

The playing of Alice Brady, John Bowers and Lillian Cook is however entirely satisfactory in regard to actual acting. But we don’t exactly know how an audience will take Miss Brady’s supposed violin playing. It is very far from real.
THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Ilda Barosky (Alice Brady) is prejudiced against the Russian government owing to her father's death at the hands of soldiers. Her brother, Ivan (Norbert Willy), a nihilist, is in love with Olga (Lillian Cook), daughter of the minister of police, Constantine (J. Herbert Franke). A secret marriage takes place. Constantine and Paul Nazimoff (Jack D. Satterly), another nobleman and father of Alexis (John Bowers), arrange a marriage for their children. Alexis loves Ilda and refuses. Alexis, Olga and Ilda are arrested charged with being in league with the nihilists. Constantine, furious at the conduct of Alexis, sentences him and Ilda to Siberia. And in return when Nazimoff becomes minister of police, he sentences Olga. Pardons and a general reconciliation follow in a climax of far stronger

Kate Lester, Frank De Vernon, Herbert Barrington and Boris Korlin complete the cast.

“THE LONESOME CHAP”

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

VIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

A MORE thoroughly artistic production will be hard to find than this adaptation by Harvey Gates of Emma Rochelle Williams’ deeply touching story under the direction of Eduard Le Saint. It has every quality of dramatic production. The contrasting characters are finely delineated. Even the careful touch was there of showing that not at once, but only gradually, did the hero transfer his love to the real heroine.

Louise Huff has never appeared more attractive than in this play. And House Peters and his bull terrier, that furnished the silent partner to his lonely life, gave fine account of themselves. There was not a false note in the entire production, from the tasteful titles to the extremely beautiful outdoor California settings made in the Sierras.

The big thrill, a fall off a cliff by the two fleeing lovers, was managed in such a way that audiences will wonder, even in these days, how it was done. Dummies don't cling to cliffs like human beings, if dummies they were, and if it was a real drop into a life net it was a most daring fall.

The story is a sad one, with the big surprise at the climax, for there is nothing to indicate that the girl is not going to accept her natural choice of the young fellow whose manliness wins the sympathy of the audience.

John Burton as the rough mining partner was absolutely true to life.

We believe picture audiences will enjoy this play very much.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Stuart Kirkwood (House Peters), owner of a rich California gold mine, has built himself a fine home for his bride-to-be of the morrow. But a stranger has stolen the affections of the girl (Betty Johnson). A mine explosion takes Stuart’s attention, and Renee D’Armond (Louise Huff) is left an orphan by the noble death of her father, who, with Stuart, effects the rescue of several imprisoned miners.

George Rothwell (Eugene Pallette), meantime runs away with the girl, only to meet and be exposed by his real wife. The girl leaps on a horse and is way, with the man in pursuit. His horse slips and throws him over a cliff, where she comes to try to rescue him, and both fall several hundred feet to their death.

“Doc” Nelson (John Burton), Stuart’s partner, discovers their bodies and notifies Stuart. Stunned by all these happenings, Stuart is cheered by the presence of little Renee, whom he has adopted. He thinks of the girl he might have married but for the stranger’s interference and is sorrowful.

Then Renee returns from school, and he realizes he loves her.

The colored “mammy” sending her boy to war, meeting the same sacrifice as the white mother, showing colored regiments typifying the united strength and universal patriotism, applying to no one section, and breaking down the barriers of North and South are shown.

Finally, intimate views of raw recruits training and becoming finished soldiers are most convincing. Here a toast of comedy is injected, for those who wish to take things in a happy mood, in the raw appearance of the men of all classes drilled in citizen clothes, who may appear as far as young officers can be imagined. The appearance in the scene following “three weeks later” is a thrill for every patriot.

Fully one-half the scenes show actual drilling, gun-practice and camp life of the soldier in the making, describing how he lives, how his comforts are provided for, even to the baking of fresh bread for him in portable ovens, set up behind the lines. These pictures give a definite idea of what the recruit will find in army camp-life and are a most timely offering.

“How Uncle Sam Prepares”

(Hanover Film Co.-State Rights)

VIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THERE is no opportunity for real dramatic action, but chiefly the usual serial fall-back, running around. Why the Great Master suddenly becomes so friendly and trusts his very life to Strong surely increases the mystery. The chapter ends with the Great Master in a deep sleep, simulating death, and Strong worried at the thought that his death might turn out to be real. He and Jane Warren hold the secret of his birth, and Jane has been run over by an auto and is between life and death at a hospital.

Chapter Sixteen, “The Crafty Hand,” follows the astonishment of the crafty Zulph at the death of the Great Master, and completes the development of his plot to murder Jane Warren, through a fatal mistake in operating upon her. The chapter ends with the operation about to be performed.

The hospital scenes, especially flashbacks of administering the patient the ether, will be decided unpleasant to some in the audience, to say the least. These form the last several scenes of the chapter, the close being the impending operation about to be performed and Jane Warren—murdered under the surgeon’s knife.

“THE GREAT SECRET,” Chapters Fifteen and Sixteen

(Metro—Two Reel Each)

VIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

This picture, which comprises forty-two hundred feet of propaganda for army recruiting, is good entertainment in the present crisis. It has every quality of dramatic production. Sam is shown slowly awakening to the present crisis with some clever fade-ins of Lincoln, and other great leaders of the past, and present, who appear to him as in a vision, offering their wise counsel in this great emergency.

Then through a series of titles the idea is worked up of the plans of the men of the country and of the city rallying to the defense of this nation of freedom and liberty. Immigrants manufactured into good citizens without question as to their past, represent this spirit of union.

The colored “mammy” sending her boy to war, meeting the same sacrifice as the white mother, showing colored regiments typifying the united strength and universal patriotism, applying to no one section, and breaking down the barriers of North and South are shown.

Finally, intimate views of raw recruits training and becoming finished soldiers are most convincing.

These pictures give a definite idea of what the recruit will find in army camp-life and are a most timely offering.
THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Chapter Fifteen: Strong (Francis Bushman) shadows Whalen (Tom Blake) to Zulph’s office (Edward Connelly). Sears (Robert Carson), the detective, plants a dictaphone and the Great Master (Warner Oland) is attacked by Zulph. He reveals his identity to Strong, and gives Strong a violin which will bring him back to life. Then he swallows a drug which puts him in a coma. Strong now learns that Jane Warren has been run over by an automobile and perhaps fatally hurt.

Chapter Sixteen: Zulph summoned, visits the home of the Great Master and arranges for the burial in a tomb, also showing his henchmen that the Great Master is really dead. Then he receives a call to operate on Jane.

He conceives the plan of having the operation purposely fail. But the detectives in the meantime take his finger prints by preparing the washing basin where he goes before the operation. The other is administered and the patient is about to be operated on, whether to live or to die we don’t know.

“The Tyrant of Chirachua”

(Kalem’s “American Girl” Series—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE F. WORTS

That a tempting field of screen wealth awaits the director who cares to venture into the wilds of Mexico is shown, or rather hinted at, in the latest episode of the Kalem Western series. According to one director who was chased out of there not long ago, Mexico is plastered with romance.

Frederick R. Bechdolt, the author, and James W. Horne, the director, contrived to present a small Mexican village in action, with many touches of reality. The very sluggishness with which the inhabitants move is convincingly Mexican.

Marin Sais is given the opportunity to prove that she can act, ride, shoot, and appear quite as lovely in the make-up of a Mexican as in her ordinary costume.

The Nurse Demands the Child

(International-Pathe—Fourteenth Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This is quite a different role from Miss Frederick’s recent parts, and we feel it will be received by American audiences in the earlier scenes, but the force of her emotional acting will be felt strongly from the third reel through to the end.

Those who have seen Miss Frederick in the several different kinds of roles which this star has already proven she is past master of will understand that this mother, seeking her child and finding another woman living openly with her husband, has an intensely dramatic role.

Miss Frederick fills this role, as she has all past roles, with utmost credit to herself. Her acting is finished, and to our mind as nearly perfect as the screen can portray. The beauty in her work is not the emotion she can show—we have seen in past cases she is equal to any emergency—but the repression of too wild an emotion, in keeping with the role of a refined even though utterly desperate woman.

Those who are looking for artistic work will find it in this play. We were not as fascinated by it as by some other bits of work we have seen Miss Frederick do, and we do not think the public will care as much for this play as some of the others, but it is well up among her very best, even judged by the box-office standard alone. Hugh Ford directed, and is entitled to full credit for a smooth presentation.

Little Maury Steuart, as the child, added much enjoyment. He seemed to enjoy his part. Thomas Meighan made an ideal lover lawyer.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Edwin Bryce (John Sainpolis), contemptible plutocrat and faithless to his wife (Pauline Frederick), tries to force her to divorce him, after life with him has become unendurable because of his overbearing tyranny. He would prefer his office secretary (Helen Dahl) to his wife. He has no love even for their child (Maury Steuart), who is left to the heartless “control” of a nurse.

Zelma Bryce refuses to permit the divorce, for the sake of the child. Then she kidnaps the child. Bryce sends Joe Giles (Joseph Smiley) to get the child back, and the mother, frantic with grief, finds Giles and the bad woman in the Bryce home, but no sign of the child. Desperate, Zelma has brought a pistol, perhaps with the thought of scaring Bryce, and the bad woman tries to snatch the pistol from her, and it goes off and kills Bryce.

In court the jury acquits the mother after Joe Giles has weakened and confessed the true circumstances of the shooting.

“The Fated Hour”

(Cines—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

This is a story of hate and vengeance, of human sordidness pictured in characteristic Continental style, with Pina Menicalli, of the Miracle, London, in the leading role as “The Woman.” Edgar Mels wrote the scenario.

Pina Menicalli reaches her greatest art in the vampire requirements of her role. She will not seem pretty nor graceful to American audiences in the earlier scenes, but the force of her emotional acting will be felt strongly from the third reel through to the end.

L. Devinci, in the role of Baron Lane, the man who brought upon himself the hate and vengeance of the woman, was acceptable as the hero-villain, for he is both in this play. Blanche Menicali, as the younger sister was attractive in her minor role.

Although classed as a melodrama, this picture is rather depressing than melodramatic. There is a fire panic in a theatre shown very vividly, perhaps too vividly. The suggestive scenes where Marie rouses Baron Lane's lust, throwing herself on the divan, then lighting the bedroom adjoining, then retiring while he peers through the glass French doors of her chamber and begs admittance, is several degrees beyond present American standards. It is not Lewf, but will hardly be accepted as according to the present-day American style of delicacy in handling even our strongest sex climaxes. Miss Menicali reaches the top pinnacle of vampiring art in these scenes, however.

As described in the foreword, this subject is frankly educational, without plot or story. Nor does it result from the accumulated experience screen-given without sensationalism or pretense of spice showing.

Of the greatest physicians and most accomplished nurses. Inasmuch as the presentation is spontaneous, "acting" is not to be looked for. In other portions the care of the prematurely born is taken up.

The entire theme, if there is a theme, is devoted to painstaking portrayal of the care and attention of the new life. Bathing, feeding, and so forth, of the new life are presented in detail through the scientific medium.

The multitude of detail in "Birth" makes it necessary to forbear specific particulars. Even with the restricted showing, there is no doubt that the subject will appeal to the great majority of women, and be of value to those exhibiting it.

"The Desert Man"

(Aince-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A TYPICAL William S. Hart release is offered in "The Desert Man," the story of which was written by Martin Brown and the scenario done by Lambert Hillyer.

"Typical" is used with emphasis, for the picture presents the customary vista of scene that the Hart releases have always offered. The sentimental is accentuated to a degree prevented from reaching the mawkish, Hart's virile acting, and the story in the course of its development allows the good man to defeat the purposes of the bad man in the first reel and again in the last reel to the accompaniment of a mighty supply of suspense. The dance hall scenes are of the spectacular variety so dear to the hearts of the Western fans, and the wild and woolly West is transferred to the film in all its lawlessness.

Mr. Hart in directing equals his acting, which is saying a good deal. He always succeeds in casting an atmosphere of intensity about all his offerings, and "The Desert Man" is no exception to this general rule. In fact, Mr. Hart has offered Mr. Hart in a feature that ably upholds the standard of his previous efforts. The Hart fan is in no wise to be disappointed by "The Desert Man."

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jim (William S. Hart) arrives in the town of Broken Hope on a prospecting expedition. He learns that every inhabitant of the town has become inoculated by the mental state suggested by its name. He meets Jennie (Margery Wilson), whose father (Walt Whitman) is dying. He forces a doctor (Jack Livingston), recuperating in a nearby town, to come to the old man's assistance. His services are useless, however. Jennie's father dies. The doctor gains the confidence of Jennie and elopes with her. Shortly afterwards she discovers his true character, and, shifting from one town to another, she finally serves as entertainer for Tacoma Jake's saloon, which has been built near the town erstwhile known as Broken Hope, but which, owing to the discovery of gold, Jim has changed to Golden Hope. Jim's enemies attempt to take his life, but in a climax of great power he defeats them and regains possession of Jennie.

Little Buster Irving, Henry Belmar, Milton Ross and Josephine Headley complete the cast.

"Birth"

(Euginic Film Company)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. GOULD

As described in the foreword, this subject is frankly educational, without plot or story. Nor does it result from the accumulated experience screen-given without sensationalism or pretense of spice showing.

In its public presentations, some but women are being allowed to witness it. Exactly why this should be so is not entirely plain. The derivation and construction that will be placed on this announcement is certain to be misleading to some people, and is far from a favorable advertisement. More dear as the teachings of the picture are to a woman, yet it would seem the good might be generally spread without restriction.

The whole theme, if there is a theme, is devoted to painstaking portrayal of the care and attention of the young ones. It is truly propagandist. Urge is laid on all women to prepare themselves or their daughters for that greatest of honors—the bringing forth of a new life.

The majority of the scenes are laid in a great New York hospital, where the most up-to-date and experienced methods of care of the child are followed. Bathing, feeding, and so forth, of the new life are presented in detail through the scientific medium of the greatest physicians and most accomplished nurses. Inasmuch as the presentation is spontaneous, "acting" is not to be looked for. In other portions the care of the prematurely born is taken up.

"Tides of Barnegat"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

This story, by F. Hopkinson Smith, makes an excellent picture. While Miss Sweet is not called upon to reach exceptional heights of dramatic feeling in any particular scene, her work throughout is fully as pleasing as anything she has done recently.

The locale of the story makes possible some most attractive beach scenes, and Miss Sweet always looks well in simple costume and roles where a touch of sweet sadness is part of the character. Norma Nichols, in the role of the thoughtless sister, who was willing to let Jane suffer the burden and even the humiliation of bringing up the illegitimate child in a small village where the town folk could not be expected to believe the improbable story of its adoption, has a well cast part. Little Billy Jacobs, as "Archie," will make a great hit with any audience.

"The Tides of Barnegat" is what we would class as considerably above average, though not a wonderful production. It is a good, forceful story, along lines sure to appeal to the great majority of any audience. We do not see how the role of "Jane"... could have been handled more satisfactorily than is done by Miss Sweet in this play.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS.

In the little seacoast town of Barneget, Jane (Blanche Sweet), the much loved school teacher, lives a happy and carefree life, loved by John Cavendish (Elliott Dexter), the young village doctor. Jane's vivacious sister, Lucy, returns from the city, where she has been sent to acquire a musical education, and among others whom she inspires with her talent is wild Bart Holt (Tom Forman), son of an old sea captain (Walter Rogers).

A little outing is planned which includes these two young people, and a night in a small sailboat, during a calm, results in an indiscretion which has serious consequences. Bart meantime has been called to sea and is lost in a wreck.

Jane takes all her savings and persuades Lucy to go to the city. Here a little boy is born (Billy Jacobs), and Jane takes care of him. Lucy never seems to understand the seriousness of her position, and when Sydney Grey, a friend of Dr. Cavendish, visits the girls, he believes the boy is really Jane's child.

Later Sydney marries Lucy, and Jane meanwhile returns to the village and claims to have adopted the child. Not until the school board has dismissed her, and she is on the verge of collapse, is the way opened by an accident to the child, which clears the reputation of Jane. Then, Captain Bart, overcome with emotion, tells the truth and all are forgiven.

"The Great Bradley Mystery"

(Apollo-Art Dramas—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE GREAT BRADLEY MYSTERY" is a well evolved suspense picture written by Edward Ellis. As the greater portion of it is taken up with painting Bradley as a villain of the deepest dye and suggesting various characters that might have just cause to commit the murder, the picture seems somewhat misconceived. However, this is a small item, and in the face of the interest which the continual plotting and counterplotting accumulate is quite negligible. The last reel, given over to the discovery of the murdered man and subsequently to the discovery of the cause of his death, caps the story with a climax of considerable power. There is room for improvement in this final reel in the matter of subtitles.

"The Great Bradley Mystery" is never lavish in setting, but the property requirements of the story have been met to a suitable degree. The photography is average. Of its type the picture is a good one, all things considered. It has most of the elements of popular appeal, and the suspense is well maintained—in fact, unusually well maintained.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS.

Bradley (Edward Ellis) has wronged his stenographer, Lola (Florence Short). Partly by accident he succeeds in casting suspicion on his partner, Collier (Edward Earle). As a consequence, Mary (Alma Hanlon) refuses to see him again. He goes west, and Bradley lies to Mary and tells her that he has been killed. Bradley and Mary are married. After the birth of her child Lola dies. A little later Bradley is found dead. Lola's father, Tony (Bigelow Cooper), the janitor of the building, is accused of the crime. Just prior to his arrest Collier appears on the scene and exposes that in a fight with Bradley the latter had drawn a pistol. In the tussle with Collier the shot was fired that killed him. Afterwards Mary and Collier conclude their interrupted romance.

"Sally in a Hurry"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHAT little plot is contained in "Sally in a Hurry" is so obvious and forced that one is led to believe that A. Van Buren Powell, who wrote it, was in something of a hurry himself. Purposes don't begin to cross until the middle of the third reel and when they do they are guided by the well-known long arm of coincidence. Briefly "Sally in a Hurry" is distantly removed from feature class; its assets being Lillian Walker and some comedy scenes in the introductory reels.

This comedy will in all probability tickle the susceptibilities of Miss Walker's followers. But it is never incident to the plot. The author goes out of his way to introduce the humor and leaves his action out in the cold until he is through trying for laughs. A foundation of comedy is quite proper too. It affords a valuable contrast when the more dramatic situations arrive. But as said, Mr. Powell's drama is not to be watched with any degree of all absorbing interest. It is too trite, too clearly "worked" to create any measurable amount of suspense.

Miss Walker's support is hampered by the characters it plays. Don Cameron's Walter, the opposite lead, is never realistic and never heroic at all. The Bill of Thomas Mills is too studied, while Ethelie Jensen overacts at times, perhaps in an attempt to put a little life in her scene.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS.

Sally (Lillian Walker), waitress in a hashery, meets Walter (Don Cameron), younger son of an English nobleman, whom she believes is a Lord. Bill (Thomas Mills), a crooked gentle- man, peevd at the show of affection between the two, employs Clara (Eulalie Jensen) to lure Walter away. Clara succeeds in her mission, and though Sally warns Walter of her character, he pays no attention to her. At a dinner party where Sally, substituting for a sick friend, is waiting on the table, Clara attempts to make off with the hostess' necklace, but Sally apprises her and reveals her in her true colors to Walter. Walter's older brother conveniently dies, so after all the Englishman inherits a title and makes Sally happy.

"A Magdalen of the Hills"

(Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS would be a production of extra merit if for no other reason than the fidelity of its atmosphere, the unusual manner in which Director John W. Noble has selected the chief characters to fit their "types," and the fine out-of-doors camera work by Herbert Carleton.

But the scenario by June Mathis is one of those sure-fire entertaining stories which keep on going and get somewhere. We are sorry we cannot by any means say as much of the ordinary production nowadays, which often gets by on account of the direction and camera work alone.

Add to the above good qualities very acceptable acting by all the principals, with special commendation of the work of Mabel Taliaferro as Renie and Frank Montgomery as old Mathis, and it will be seen Metro has a very fine offering in "A Magdalen of the Hills."

William Garwood as Eric Southard, the city man and lawyer hero, reverses the usual order of things by gaining the confidence of the mountain folk, and deserving it, by marrying the girl and leaving and afterward coming back, instead of forgetting her for his city friends.

The whole plot is pleasing, as well as highly melodramatic, and makes the mountaineer not an improbable outcast of society, but an honorable and really human being—appealing as hero or heroine.
THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Herbert Grayson (William Black), the head of a big lumber company operating in the Southern timberlands, has done everything in his power to keep the native mountaineers in ignorance and submission to his company, even to murder, and old Mathis (Frank Montgomery) has sworn his daughter Renie (Mabel Taliaferro) to "git" any Grayson that ever steps foot on local soil.

Grayson’s nephew, Eric Southard (William Garwood), is sent by Grayson to buy the lands of old Mathis, which his company must have. Eric is almost "got" by Renie; he returns the shoe from ambush and wounds this sweet girl of the timberlands. Love follows, and a marriage. Bud Weaver (William B. Davidson) returns from the valley to claim his betrothed, Renie, just after Eric has strangely disappeared in answer to a fake telegram from his uncle.

Renie tries to flee, but is stopped by Bud and old Mathis; the fact that Eric is a Grayson is learned. Renie, in desperation, seeks news of Eric from the lumber boss, Peets, who lies to her and then assaults her. In the struggle her gun is discharged and Peets is killed. Eric returns just in time to lend a hand in the trial and prove the truth of her story, as well as the wrongfulness of their marriage.

“A Jewel in Pawn”

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

The producers have provided Ella Hall only a meager vehicle in “A Jewel in Pawn.” A stab at pathos was attempted, but there seem to be no scenes in it capable of provoking a tear. For the most part the various episodes are rich in atmosphere, but, minus any consistent show of drama or comedy, they become rather monotonous as the reels roll by.

Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude wrote the story, while Maie Havey scenarioized it. The production was in charge of Jack Conway. Miss Hall in the principal role acts the child to an excellent degree, and Walter Belasco and Antrim Short contribute good work in congenial parts.

There is, to be sure, some good comedy in the very closing scenes of “A Jewel in Pawn,” but at no other point does it glitter brilliantly. An inadequate story is the real answer.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Nora (Ella Hall) is left in the care of a kindly old pawnbroker (Walter Belasco), while her mother (Mrs. Maie Hall), with the money allowed her on the services of her daughter, goes away to hoarding school, and after a few years attempts to marry her off to a snob. But Nora prefers to go back to Jimmie and the pawnbroker, and grandfather is won over.

“The Wedding Ring Has to Go”

The road life of the theatrical company, the back stage glimpses, the episode, laid in the summer resort, even the newspaper office, stand as points of unusual merit.

“Her Temptation”

(Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

NORMIS SHANNE,- who created this story, evidently has made serious study of psychic phenomena, for he stays within the bounds of the possible in handling his “psychic” theme. For example, he does not have his heroine commit crime under a hypnotic spell, but uses the spell only to make her think she must have committed the crime the villain tells her she committed. The old style “passes” of the hand in front of the subject are not used, either, to give the story a cheap melodramatic thrill. All in all, Richard Stanton has produced a fine picture that will hold not only Gladys Brockwell as the girl and Bertram Grassby as the villain who uses hypnotic power to gain his ends carry their unusual roles with distinction, and the staging of the play is elaborate. As usual, the characters of the play live in wealthy surroundings and have everything money can buy, at the cost of happiness. We have an idea the dear public has seen enough of this sort of theme lately, and still we will say that this story is above average in a general weighing up of qualifications for good entertainment.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Shirley Moreland (Gladys Brockwell) is sought in marriage by Gerald Halstead (Bertram Grassby) because her father is wealthy. When, through misfortune in stocks, her father dies penniless and exasperates as his last wish that Shirley should marry his lifelong friend, Ralph Stuart (Ralph Lewis), Halstead is glad of the opportunity to get rid of a now unwelcome entanglement.

So the sacrifice is made, and her little sister, Helen, is enabled to live a life of gaiety at the cost of her sister’s misery. Then Halstead again comes into her life. Going out one night, they are detained by an accident. A quarrel with her husband follows. A stroke of paralysis results from the shock.

Then Halstead has a diabolical idea. He hypnotizes Shirley, himself poisons Stuart, and waits results. Stuart surprises him by leaving all his money to the younger sister, Helen (Beatrice Burnham), instead of to his wife. Halstead then drops Shirley altogether for Helen.

This is more than Shirley can stand, and although Halstead has told her he will accuse her of the murder, she confides in Walton Maynard (James Cruse), who loves Helen, and at the altar Maynard by sheer force of will compels a confession of the crime. But at this moment, Stuart jumps off the belfry to save Helen’s happiness, so that Shirley’s sacrifice, after all, is not entirely in vain.

“The Easiest Way”

(Selznick—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

“The EASIEST WAY,” an adaptation of Eugene Walter’s drama, proves the best vehicle that Clara Kimball Young has appeared in under the Selznick banner. Mr. Walter’s play, frankly sex in theme but not over-sex in appeal, lends itself to pictorial purposes excellently. As the actress who sacrifices, first, self-respect, and then love, and takes to the Easiest Way to success, Miss Young plays with feeling and emotional depth. She has made the part of Laura Murdock an appealing character throughout, not in the same sense as did Frances Starr in the stage version, but sure, and unbendably sympathetic in her combat with Brockton.

The dramatic situations in “The Easiest Way” are many, and their power is a property that can never be denied. Albert Capellani has pictured the play on a lavish scale. Of particular note is the manner in which he has brought out the reality of every scene. The entertainment in Brockton’s home may not pass muster before certain censor boards, but as a piece of realism it is excellent. The same may be said of every phase of the picture. The road life of the theatrical company, the back stage glimpses, the episode laid in the summer resort, even the newspaper office, stand as points of unusual merit.

Joseph Kilgour takes the part of Brockton, the same which he did on the stage. His is a thorough piece of acting. Louise Bates contributes a fine characterization as Elifie St. Clair, another traveler on the Easiest Way, and Rockfile Fellowes is a fine Madison.

Before certain audiences “The Easiest Way” will undoubtedly be a great hit. There are few people who don’t relish a peep behave him kidnapped at a certain wild western station, and a band of hira, but Billy gets wind of the trick and, enlisting the cowboys to score effectively on the side of humor. There will be some would-be trickers, arc strung out so and there is such incessant laughs in the first reel, when Billy starts selling perfume for a fortune. Disgusted, he denounces her, and Laura seeks consolation in suicide. But before she dies Madison forgives her.

(At the Rialto theatre, where the picture was first shown, the original ending of the play was retained. After Madison has turned her down Laura buries her sorrows and enters the swim of New York's night life.) Laura on fifteen a week, so Madison goes prospecting. In the meantime Brockton influences all the managers so that none of them will give her work. In desperation, she finally goes back to Brockton and Madison finds her after he has made his fortune. Disgusted, he denounces her, and Laura seeks consolation in suicide. But before she dies Madison forgives her.

The story of the second section of "The Railroad Raiders" in which Helen Holmes, the daughter of the rails is featured, and in which promises run high, one is just permitted to guess the outcome. One may plainly see that Steve Arnold, the discharged agent, is to be the thorn in the side of Helen or vice versa, but up to the present she has not been given a chance to display her acrobatic abilities or perform any of her well known dare-devil stunts.

Nevertheless, the theme is there, lines are being laid and there's no reason to doubt that the author has a fund of good material from which to produce something that will redound to his credit and not take an iota from Helen's past prestige.

Reproductions of outlying wayside stations are the same as of yore, and one simply has to wait for developments.

A special train, chartered by Lord and Lady Melrose, is held up by the discharged Steve Arnold and his gang, and the family jewels are taken. Wallace Burke has already secured the gems and substituted paste imitations before the train is held up by Arnold and his new found confederates, who, on threat to dynamite the train compels the travelers to line up on the tracks where they are "covered" by two of the gang, while a third goes through them, and then ransacks the private car, until the supposed genuine jewels are found. The train is then permitted to go its way. Helen's work is now apparently cut out for her, for her father is serving a ten-year sentence for a crime committed by this same gang, and this chapter will complicate matters considerably for there's no positive clue apparent as to the whereabouts of the genuine jewels.

The subsequent chapters will certainly be awaited with keen interest by any and all who have witnessed the opening chapters, and it's a matter of great speculation as to the means Helen will adopt to clear her father's name and bring the marauders to justice.

The author, who was responsible for Helen Holmes' latest success, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," may be depended upon to furnish ample material, however, for Helen to further distinguish herself, and many stirring stunts with this popular star in the foreground may reasonably be expected.

Statement of the ownership, management, etc required by the Act of August 24, 1912, of Motion Picture News, published weekly at New York, N. Y., for April 1, 1917.

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are: Publisher, Motion Picture News, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York City; managing editor, Robert Welch, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City; business manager, H. Ashton Wyckoff, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City; E. K. Gillett, secretary, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

2. That the owners are: Motion Picture News, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C. Stockholders holding one per cent, or more of total amount of stock are: Wm. A. Johnston, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.; E. Kendall Gillett, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.; H. Ashton Wyckoff, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.; Percy S. Alden, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.; Wentworth Tucker, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.; Carl Tucker, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.; Carl Tucker, 729 Seventh avenue, N. Y. C.

3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent. or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: None.

4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners, stockholders and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company, but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embrace all the knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, held stock and securities in a capacity other that of a bond or stock owner; and this affidavit has no reason to believe that any other person, association or corporation has an interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

E. K. GILLETT, Secretary.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 21st day of March, 1917.

We urge exhibitors to write us for copies of some of our reports and compare them with their own judgment as well as the criticism of others. This will convince you of the value of our service.

EXHIBITORS ARE CONSTANTLY WORRIED for fear they will book a poor picture.

Our reports are absolute insurance against this.

This is the only service of its kind in America.

At the low cost of this service exhibitors cannot afford to be without it.

We invite applications from high class film exchange managers as well as high class film salesmen in every territory.

Write, outlining in detail your experience, etc. All letters treated strictly confidential. J. L. D., Box 86, Room 1201, 220 West 42d St., New York City.

BETTER SATISFACTION

This notice is addressed to the minority of our subscribers who do not regularly answer advertisements.

The service described is, however, open and free to all who wish our help.

We do not wish to discourage you from writing direct to our advertisers; in fact, you do not do enough of it for your own good, but we do want you to get the proper goods to fit your needs.

There are many, perhaps you, who are too busy to write each company separately; therefore we are offering our co-operation, which means that you will receive full information on any subject which you may designate by merely filling out the coupon, designating by numbers the goods in which you are interested.

Your inquiries thus received will be forwarded to reputable manufacturers, even though the goods on which you wish information are not advertised in the "News."

THE IMPROVED MODEL MOTIOGRAPH

- IN PERFORMANCE
  It can boast of clear, steady pictures on a long or short throw; its simplicity is spoken of by all its operators.

  The Exhibitor knows that the installation of MOTIOGRAPHs insures him of perfect projection from the very start—NOT trouble for weeks; such as freezing of certain parts of the mechanism, etc.

- ON LOW MAINTENANCE COST
  You don't find die cast or bronze gears or soft bearings on the MOTIOGRAPH. Every part is made from selected material—parts most subject to wear receive a Special Heat Treatment and with ordinary use the MOTIOGRAPH will outwear all other projectors.

- SERVICE
  With each MOTIOGRAPH goes a year's guarantee, and should the machine with no apparent cause become out of adjustment you may send the mechanism to the factory—it will be put in good working order with not one cent of cost to you.

  In buying a MOTIOGRAPH you get the best—remember you can't get a better projector even if you pay three times the price of the MOTIOGRAPH.

THE MOTIOGRAPH REPRESENTS THE ESSENCE OF SIMPLICITY, STRENGTH AND DURABILITY

AT LAST—A CURE FOR FLICKER!

New Negative Carbon Makes Hit With Operators!

It is remarkable what a vast improvement has been made in projection since operators have almost universally adopted the new SILVERTIP negative projector carbon.

The theatre owners themselves are enthusiastic beyond our expectations. They claim its use has given them the much desired, intense white light so necessary for well defined pictures; and, at the same time, has eliminated the disagreeable flicker which formerly meant a steady drain on the patience of the audience.

Such an endorsement from your own ranks is a sure indication that Silvertip has come to stay as the recognized negative projector carbon.

Let us send you our booklet giving its advantages in detail

SIMPLER Projectors
Are Required When the BEST Results Are Desired

A Few SIMPLER Facts

MACHINE
Is heavily constructed, and made with the greatest of precision and accuracy. Gears and shafts are of the highest grade of material.

ADJUSTABLE SHUTTER
Exclusive feature. The Shutter can be accurately regulated or set while the machine is in operation.

ENCLOSED MECHANISM
The Gears of the Machine are enclosed, thereby protecting them from dust and foreign matter, also obviating the possibility of anything accidentally coming in contact therewith.

ARC LAMP AND LAMP HOUSE
Has eight adjustments. Lamp House made of heavy sheet iron, roomy and well-ventilated, double-door, and improved condenser mount.

MOTOR EQUIPMENT
Motors are manufactured by the largest manufacturers of standard motors in the world. Highest quality.

INTERMITTENT MOVEMENT
Is scientifically constructed and built of the most enduring material and will withstand the constant grind required of the Intermittent today.

FRAMING DEVICE
Exclusive Feature. The framing of the pictures is scientifically accomplished by advancing or retarding the Intermittent Movement.

FIRE PROTECTION
Embodies ideal fire protecting Devices. Film guards are not removable, but are part of the mechanism proper. The Automatic Fire Shutter is operated by a governor when the machine is run at normal speed. The shutter operates by gravity.

PEDESTAL
Constructed on correct mechanical principles, easy to adjust in either vertical or horizontal direction by loosening one screw.

VARIABLE SPEED CONTROL
Regulates the speed of Projector from 40 to 120 revolutions per minute.

Another Step in Advance

The line has been crossed. If determination, action, and enthusiasm count for anything, the Motion Picture Industry now has a body of men working in its interests who will be the means of eliminating the present chaotic condition in the mechanical branches of the industry and making of them a smooth running, homogeneous, standardized whole.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers is to be congratulated. The recent meeting in Atlantic City marked the turning point in its career. It was a case of do or die, for, if that meeting had not been a success, the society would have gone out of existence without a doubt.

Progress will be slow—that is natural. There are many factors to be dealt with and an innumerable mass of important details which must finally be taken up and settled. These must wait their turn and will be considered in due course. Some of the most important will come up at the Chicago meeting in July; others must wait, for, as the engineering society of the automobile industry took years in arriving at their present standards and are still working continually on others, so the Engineering Society of the Motion Picture Industry must take time in developing standards upon which it will ultimately stand.

Sixteen men, bent upon one purpose, came together, read papers, which had been prepared for the occasion, and went away with the determination to bring in others who are eligible and in a position to do the industry real service.

They did certain definite things which will be enumerated in the pamphlet which will cover the proceedings of the meeting. This will be off the press very shortly and will be available to every individual in the business.

Aside from the definite actions which were taken there were three important subjects touched upon which mean much to the industry and which the society will ultimately be the means of clearing up entirely.

First—At the present time there are men in the business who are making statements broadcast which science knows are incorrect and have no foundation, but yet at the present time there is no one body or set of individuals who can, with any acknowledged authority, refute the statements which are being made in pure ignorance. This the society will do, with the result that knowledge and not personal theories will be the basis of operation.

Second—We have at the present time certain definite prejudices on the part of the public against Motion Pictures. There is no excuse for them, though no one is to blame except the picture people themselves. People in responsible positions refuse to talk or have anything to do with the “Movies,” yet when you talk with them about motion pictures they are all interest and will listen for any length of time. We have many expressions of this same kind which we in the industry pass over without a thought and accept without a question—“Stars,” why not designate those who play the leading roles in our well known pictures by their proper names of coin a word or group of words which will convey the meaning but which will yet be dignified—“Still,” another slang short cut meant to convey an idea which no one outside the industry would ever suspect was meant. They all do harm and work an injustice to the industry.

Third—The utter carelessness on the part of many builders of theatres and the seeming lack of realization on their part as to why the picture house is built. Their plans are dominated by the architect who goes on the idea that the more money spent the greater is his commission. There is seemingly no thought that “the picture is the thing.” Put the projection room anywhere, but get it out of the way—then fight to doctor the picture and make it passable. The house must be built about the projection and not wait till the house is finished before ever giving it a thought. Every house should be known by its pictures; everything else is secondary.

These three points were discussed at length, and if they are not taken care of all future work of the society will be useless.

We must have the proper foundation for instruction.

We must have the backing of the public.

We must have good projection.

The only other fundamental is in the class of picture which is produced, but this is entirely up to the Motion Picture Manufacturers.

E. K. Gillett.
Film Destroyers What Sherman Said War Was

The time has come for a general agitation on the part of everyone who has the future of the motion picture industry at heart to eradicate one of the most obnoxious and "sloppiest" practices of which an operator could be guilty. Don't misunderstand my use of the word operator; an operator would not really be guilty of such a thing, but there are so many of us that "think we are operators" that we do not give enough thought to the proper care of the equipment and accessories entrusted to our care. One of the most important accessories is the film, and yet so few of us regard it as anything more than a strip of celluloid to be hurried through the machine, and after we have done with it get it off our hands by sending it either back to the exchange or on to the next operator, with little or no thought as to its condition, and all too often that condition is abominable. I am going to try and set forth just a lower slope of the wrong tendency we are giving it a long life and yet remain in first-class condition. Of course, the exchanges must do their share in helping to wipe out this evil, which can be easily done if they will only see that the films are sent out in the best condition initially. This does not apply to first run films, but to those which are sent out on circuit. The first run films should be in as good condition and runs from its issue as on its first day, if given the proper care. I have seen film that has been in service for from three to five years, and is in as good condition today as it was when first issued, and this was because the operator who had it in charge was careful and took pride in his work. There is no reason why our present day operator should not display the same care as the "old timers" for the present day operator has more advantages than the older ones ever dreamed of. In the old days a man could only gain knowledge from experience, but today there are numerous books and an almost unlimited amount of literature dealing on the art of projection which is of great assistance to the operator in obtaining the knowledge that it has taken others long years to obtain through the hard school of experience. The causes of so much damage to film can be enumerated as follows: Oil, improperly adjusted machines, dirty machines, and, last but not least important, punch holes.

Oil is the chief cause of complaint, and there is no doubt but that it does a greater amount of damage than all others combined. It has been repeatedly pointed out that it is not necessary to flood a machine with oil to keep it in perfect running order. One drop or oil will accomplish more than a bucketful if properly applied, and one of the best suggestions regarding the oiling of a projection machine was that issued by the Kinemacolor Company to its operators: "Oil early and often, one drop at a time. No more, no less."

There is no excuse whatever for a machine to become reeking with oil, and operators will admit that it is not an uncommon thing to visit an operating room where the machines were literally swimming in oil, oil in pools being found at the base of the mechanism, and even on the lower magazine, and where a large lower wheel was reeking with this oil as though it were some sort of solution for the preserving of film. Oil will preserve the machine, if used properly, but I have never heard of its being recommended for the preservation of film. Have you?

Improperly adjusted machines do their share toward damaging film, but it is pleasing to note that this evil is becoming less as the operators are brought to a realization that it is only by keeping their machines in proper adjustment that they can hold down their job. Too great tension on the tension springs cause the machine to run just that much harder, and the increased pull on the film causes the sprocket holes to become strained, and sometimes broken. The broken sprocket holes then cause the film to stick, necessitating a new take up belt, and causing considerable money loss to the exchange. This also is true where the take up is not adjusted properly; a take up belt should be no tighter than is absolutely necessary to re-rotate the lower wheel when it is full of film.

Dirty machines, too, must receive their share of condemnation. In the preceding paragraph, under Oil, I might have mentioned that oil can be classified sometimes as dirt, but the fact is that I want to call particular attention to punch holes, as dirt accumulates on the sprockets, and more especially on the interlocking sprocket. This dirt is collected from the film as it passes through the machine and sometimes becomes so firmly packed between the sprocket teeth as to prevent the film becoming engaged by the teeth and preventing its passage through the machine. If not halting the film altogether, it at least has a tendency to give to the picture the "up and down motion" or jumpy film which many complain of. A half-hour spent with the machine before or after the day's run in cleaning it would do much to prevent any such occurrence. I know there are many who object to "working overtime," but this is a matter that is positively up to the operator, and he should keep his machine in the best possible condition at all times. For myself, I always prefer to remain after the show and clean my machines, for in that way I was enabled to feel sure that they were fit to run the next day, and if they were not I had ample time to secure new parts or whatever was needed before show time the next day. Machines will not run forever without attention, and it might also be said that the more attention they receive the longer they will run.

Before getting down to the last great evil, I think it would not be amiss if I were to say just a few words regarding mis-frames. (On this matter I have a suggestion that has been made by an operator, which is being carefully considered, and I hope to have it in more concrete form shortly, so that you can tell me what you think of it—Ed.) Operators in some instances where mis-frames are more the rule than the exception offer the excuse that they are not being paid to inspect films. True, but would it not be better to remove the mis-frames after the first show than to be compelled to watch the screen every minute, with one hand on the framing lever, ready to frame the picture, sometimes framing all the way down and then framing halfway up again, owing to the position of the framing carriage? Or do you think it looks better this way? I am sure the people who are paying their good money to see good work will not agree with you in this latter method. It is just as easy, in fact easier, for an operator to, while watching the first show, take note of the mis-frames and mark them, which can be done by dropping a slip of paper through the rollers of the lower magazine, and then when the reel is to be rewound look for these slips of paper and remove the mis-frames. It only takes a few additional minutes to do this, and you have the added satisfaction of knowing that you are doing your work in a manner to bring credit upon you. Remember, you never can tell who is in the theatre trying to find something to criticize about your work, and if there is nothing to criticize you should feel highly elated. To illustrate: An operator of my acquaintance, and he was a good operator, too, had been trying for some time to secure an increase in salary, without success. One day an exhibitor, who was the nearest competitor of this operator's employer, visited the theatre where this operator was employed, and after witnessing the entire show, called the exhibitor aside and the following conversation took place:

Visiting Exhibitor: "Who is your operator?"

House Manager: "Oh, that's Charlie so and so."

V. E.: "Well, I have watched the entire show, and I must say that you have a first-class man. There hasn't been a mis-frame during the entire two and a half hours I have been here, and his light has been handled better than some of the larger theatres. How much are you paying him?"

H. H.: "Oh, we are paying him a very good salary; eighteen dollars a week."

V. E.: "Well, he can come to me any time he wants a job and I'll give him twenty-five dollars a week, for you have got a prize."

This conversation had been overheard by one of the employees, who lost no time in informing the operator, and the operator, striking while the iron was hot, informed his employer that if the raise was not forthcoming his services would be discontinued at the end of two weeks. The manager, knowing full well that he had saved considerable money through the careful handling of supplies, and conscientious work of his operator, and realizing that if he were worth twenty-five dollars to his competitor he must be worth that to him. The result was that the operator received the increase asked without further parley. One instance where good work met its reward.

Now for the final punch! Punch Holes. It would be almost impossible to estimate the cost of the damage done to films by "punch holes." This evil is common where one operator operates two machines. He has "his mark" on the film so that he may know when to light the other arc. These punch holes are sometimes placed from fifty to one hundred feet from the end of the film; another mess of punch holes is found just before the ending of the film, sometimes ten or fifteen feet from the end. This second set is to let him know that it is time to start the second machine. When one takes into consideration the fact that nearly every operator has his private punch mark and puts it in every film he handles, you can readily see that there is a considerable amount of damage done. And then, there are films whose action is such that the last foot of film must be run if the audience is to follow the story with any degree of "understandableness." It has been repeatedly pointed out to film manufacturers that this evil could be remedied by them if they would only end and begin each reel of film with a subtitle, such as the Vitagraph Company used for a time. It would then be an easy matter for the operator to write out a cue sheet and know the exact moment when he should fade one reel into the next. I personally know operators who have agitated this point, and when no notice was taken have punched more holes than there was any need of just to see if the manufacturers would not wake up and comply with their request. Surely it is not an unreasonable one, or one that would cause any expense to work out, and the manufacturers would be the beneficiaries as well as the film exchanges. Let the film exchanges who suffer from this practice write the manufacturers to try the above suggestion, and then if punch holes appear in the film discontinue the exhibitor's service, and if the operator who still persists in "punching" films will not mend his ways the exhibitor should get one that will. The operator, bear in mind, is the man you must consider, for he can make or break the best picture that was ever produced. Operators will do their share toward protecting the property in their care just as soon as the men higher up are willing to meet them halfway, and it is only by co-operation between exhibitor, exchange and operator that we are ever going to get anywhere.

Enclosed Rewinders

"F. C. North Carolina, writes: "Dear brother, are there any rewinders on the market that are entirely enclosed, that is where the reels of film are entirely hidden from view during the process of rewinding? I have heard that there was such a device, but to be sure am writing you, for you probably get to see these new things before outsiders."" Answer: Your question, or rather the answer to it has "killed" a perfectly good story I had prepared on just such a rewinder as you are seeking information about. But perhaps it is just as well, and I will answer your question by saying. There is. If you had read the News thoroughly you would have seen this device mentioned some time ago in our columns.

The E. E. Fulton Company, Chicago, Ill., are the manufacturers of such a device, and it is something that this department can cheerfully recommend (I should be familiar with this device, shouldn't I, Mr. Fulton, having had one on my hands for several months). The "Fulco" rewinder, as it is called, is a metal cabinet having sufficient room to hold two reels of film, the door of this cabinet drops downward after which the reels are placed on their spindles and the door closed thus allowing the chain-driven gear to engage the rewinding element. The construction of this device is such that it is almost impossible to injure it, and as it is supplied with friction reducing and noise deadening ball thrust bearings its use is continually more into favor each day. The "Fulco" may be operated by hand or driven by motor if desired, and as it cannot be operated unless the door is closed it had been found to be a most practical means of reducing fire risk in the operating room. This device has the approval of the Underwriters, and conforms to the requirements of the Chicago authorities who are particularly strict where the winding of films takes place in the operating room and where the use of enclosed rewinders is compulsory. Prices, etc., can be had from the E. E. Fulton Company upon request.

Noisy Machine

G. W., Illinois, wants to know why his machine makes a noise now when it never did before. Says he has had it all apart and cleaned and oiled it thoroughly, and that now the machine makes a grinding, thumping noise. Will be grateful for any help you can give him.

Answer: Your letter has caused me to lose several hours of sleep. I could not figure out why you should experience this trouble if as you say it was not present before. Then the thought came to me that it was quite possible that the machine had been run for some time and the gears have become worn. In taking the mechanism apart you had not exercised the proper care and when you came to reassemble it, you had placed the gears back in such a position that they did not mesh properly. The best thing for you to do would have been to take a prick point and make a scratch point on each of the gears so that the marks would have corresponded with each other, in this way you could have been certain of replacing the gears in proper relation with each other. The only thing that I can suggest now is that you send the machine to the factory for a general overhauling. It would be next to impossible for you to get these gears back in their relative position again, and it may be necessary for the manufacturer to install an entire new train of gears. These suggestions should be remembered in case you ever do this particular thing again.

Has Anybody Seen Him?

The following letter explains itself:

Novotneyville, Ia., April 4, 1917.

Mr. I. G. Sherman,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

Am dropping you a line asking you for assistance in locating my operator, Charles A. Norton. He disappeared last Thursday and has not been seen since. You no doubt will hear from him soon and will confer a favor by letting me know his whereabouts. Thanking you in advance, I remain,

Yours truly,

W. L. Meyers.

Readers of this department will no doubt remember that Norton is the "small-town" operator who has furnished us with so much amusement lately, and any one knowing his whereabouts is hereby requested to send me his address. Mr. Norton has quite recently fallen heir to a small sum of money through the death of his father and it may be that he has gone to some larger city to try his fortune. I wish him luck, and if he sees this hope he will communicate with me.

SLIDES

The Greater N. Y. Slide Co., 154 West Forty-fifth street, are doing a capacity business on their new line of patriotic glass slides, as well as releasing a complete set of unbreakable Mika slides on every patriotic song.

These slides show the American eagle, shield, flags, etc., in red, with the chorus and verses of the song blended in.

Anticipating the demand and to save the exhibitor time they have distributed an assortment of the various slides to some of the largest supply houses throughout the country, who also handle the products contained in their latest catalogue.

To meet the demand from all parts of the country the Novelty Slide Company of New York have issued a special patriotic number of "Novelty Notes," illustrating and listing several hundred patriotic slides, a number of excellent patriotic film trailers, a splendid line of patriotic posters and an attractive selection of novelties and souvenirs.

This special issue of "Novelty Notes" is a valuable aid to the exhibitor in preparing his daily program in this time of war, and the suggestions and information therein are of great value to every theatre owner and manager.

The Excelsior Illustrating Company of 219 Sixth avenue, New York, has just put out a catalogue, which is both artistic and comprehensive. It includes slides of every description—advertising and otherwise—so very desirable and useful to the exhibitor.

Fireproof Screen

P. W., Pennsylvania, writes: "What is the best way to fireproof a screen? We are projecting an 18-foot picture. Throw is 65 feet. Do you think this is too small a picture for that distance? Our screen is a muslin one, stretched on a frame and placed on pins which are fastened into the back wall of the theatre."

Answer: I don't understand why you find it necessary to fireproof a screen, and I should think you would find it a rather costly experiment to use this type of screen, although if it is not possible for you to make the outlay for a reflecting type of screen, I would think you could project the picture directly on to the back wall and thus eliminate the cost of fireproofing the muslin screen. The wall properly surfaced would not absorb so much light and would not need to be fireproofed.

The screen can be fireproofed by thoroughly saturating it with a solution of phosphate ammonia mixed in the proportion of one pound to one gallon of water. Phosphate of ammonia can be purchased at almost any drug store, the price per pound ranging from seventy-five cents to one dollar. One pound should be enough for your purpose, and in applying it be sure that you get the screen thoroughly saturated, after which let dry and then place in position. When brought in contact with flame the screen will char but will not burst into flame.

The size picture you are projecting, is to my mind, altogether too large. It is unnatural, making the figures grotesque and out of proportion. I should think a picture too or three feet smaller would be more acceptable to your patrons, and there is no doubt that the smaller picture would show up much better on the screen.

Rheostats in Multiple—What Voltage?

J. W., Connecticut, writes: "Please answer the following question in the Projection Department of the News and kindly omit my name and address. Just sign it J. W., Connecticut."

"I have two 38 ampere, 110 volt rheostats connected in multiple supplying one motion picture machine with current. Carbons are National 34½-cored upper and 34 solid lower. My line voltage is 110 volts. How would you figure the amount of voltage I am getting at the arc? Also, how would you figure the resistance of such a connection?"

Answer: In the first place, let me say that the arc voltage is hardly affected by the multiple connection. It has been found that from 40 to 60 volts is necessary at the arc to force the ampere or current over the line, preferably 50 volts, but this all depends upon existing conditions. In connecting the two rheostats in multiple you have doubled your amperage and slightly increased your voltage; this increase, however, is so slight as to be of no great importance. A rheostat for 110 volts generally cuts down the arc voltage one-half, that is 55 volts. The resistance of each rheostat is found by dividing the voltage by the output in amperes. Thus: 110 ÷ 38 = 2.891 or nearly 3 ohms. The two rheostats if connected in series would thus have a combined resistance of 6 ohms. The resistance of the connection as you have it now, you will see, only amounts to the resistance of one rheostat if it were used singly. I hope I have made this clear to you; it is rather difficult to explain, but really quite simple once the principle is understood. If you want any further information, call again.

Perfect Control of Light Volume, Maximum Brightness and Economy For Motion Picture Projection

The Convarc affords the greatest economies and ease of light control for either alternating or direct current.

Operating on alternating current it delivers true direct current, insuring BRILLIANT WHITE LIGHT. PROJECTION OF TRUE COLOR VALUES WITHOUT FLICKER OR FLARE. As it generates directly the proper voltage required by the arc, all current-wasting and heat-radiating resistances are eliminated.

For this reason the Convarc is also most economical for reducing the voltage of direct current circulated to the voltage of the arc.

The Convarc eliminates the handicap of alternating current and pays for itself in savings on both alternating or direct current circuits.

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

Brockton Operators' Union Holds Initial Dance

THE moving picture machine operators of Brockton, Mass., Local 437, I. A. T. S. E., held their first annual ball and entertainment at Canton Hall, Brockton, on Tuesday evening, April 10. This “first release” was a “feature” in an indeterminate number of reels, with Beatrice Roberts of the Atlas Film Company, Boston, as the star, supported by a company of over three hundred. Miss Roberts, who hails from Winthrop, has the distinction of being the winner of the beauty contest at the movie ball given in Boston some time ago, at which there was over 127 contestants. Those present at “437’s” affair heartily endorsed the decision of the judges in proclaiming her a real beauty. Asked how she liked the motion picture work, she replied with enthusiasm, “It's just jorking! I like it ever so much, and I think I am getting along splendidly; at least, everyone tells me so. I have been in three pictures so far, and have just finished a new picture called 'Lanky.' I don't like the title very well, and I would like to tell you all about the plot, only it's a secret.” The evening was full of surprises, many features being introduced at intervals. For instance, during the intermission there was a “cut in,” and Louise Phasse sang two topical songs that went over big. Helen Broussseau also contributed two vocal numbers to the splendid program. Another “hit” was made when Harold M. Moulton sang “The River of Levee Floe On,” and for an encore “America, Here’s My Boy.” During the singing of this latter number two members of the National Guard took their places beside the singer under a large American flag. This, with a dance order of twenty numbers, with many encores, kept the dancers going until midnight, and a ballroom called for refreshments. The committee in charge consisted of Brothers Frank Motta, Roy C. Wenstrom, Robert R. Reid, H. T. Kennedy and George L. Henault.

Wake Up, Ithaca!

ITHACA, New York, the home of Cornell University, needs a stirring up. There are many good operators in Ithaca, but the modern trouble is that they do not give the careful attention to detail that they should. Some of the operators still persist in using soft cored carbons for the negative, whereas it has long been recognized that a solid carbon, such as the “Silvertip” or “Hold-Ark,” produces much better results. Also, not a few of the boys are using two wing shutters instead of three wing. This is entirely wrong. A two wing shutter will admitly give more light, but it will not minimize the flicker as will a three wing whose blades are properly proportioned. The current supply at Ithaca is not at all it should be, but with the willing co-operation of managers and operators the theatres could present pictures of which they might well feel proud. Where the current supply is poor, such as it is in Ithaca, I should think it would be well worth while for managers to try out any one of the various makes of reflecting screens. Their use would help materially in overcoming such difficulties as “poor light.” With a patronage largely made up of students from the University, who are perhaps more critical than any other class of patrons, it behooves the operators and managers to visit adjoining cities, such as Rochester, and see what real projection looks like. An operator cannot deliver the goods unless he has the best equipment; but having that, there is no excuse for his failure to do so. Let us all get together and make the profession of operating an art, and not merely a humble grinds for existence. In other words, “Knock the d out of Grind and Grin.” This department stands willing and ready to lend any assistance in its power to the betterment of projection, and when we better that we likewise better salaries, and that is what we are all looking for, isn’t it?

Sheer Brothers Installed Fotoplayers

The Sheer Brothers, who own and operate three first-class motion picture theatres in Corona, Long Island, have installed American Fotoplayers in all three houses.

The Palace theatre, which was opened to the public several months ago, is one of the theatres owned by the Sheer Brothers.

The other two houses are the Hyperion and the Liberty. All three houses have a seating capacity of six hundred each and show only first run pictures, admission being ten and fifteen cents.

A Photographic Bibliography

OUR oft-repeated contention that the average cameraman is but poorly grounded in the fundamentals of photography has resulted in numerous requests for a descriptive list of the basically important works on the science of the subject, and as a result a list of such has been prepared for the guidance of Camera Department readers.

There are, of course, thousands of books and publications on photography, but the greater amount of this literature is in the form of elementary treatises for the purely elementary worker—or so-called "amateur." Valuable as such books are in their way, it is to be assumed that the average cameraman possesses a greater degree of manipulative knowledge than the amateur, although it appears that cinematographers, as a class, are far from being well versed in the scientific side of their calling.

In the "Cinematographic Bibliography," previously published, the mechanical aspects of cinematography were thoroughly covered, but inasmuch as the whole art of cinematography rests upon the science of photography, it is essential that the cameraman be acquainted with the physical, chemical and optical laws of the latter. To that end we have endeavored to supply a list of works which lead up to and elucidate the important fundamentals of photographic processes and practice, and while the "Photographic Bibliography" is by no means an exhaustive catalog of the scientific literature of photography, we are of the opinion that cinematographers in general will be benefited by the study of such works as are here mentioned.

HANDBOOKS OF GENERAL INSTRUCTION

While the author of this book is, perhaps, little known in this country, he is a sincere and respected investigator, and the basic literature of photography has been enriched by several of his communications. Sterry's booklet, "Photography by Rule," is a guide to the quantitative methods of photographic procedure, and its exposition of this phase of the subject is evidence of the well-ordered mind of the author.

In this treatise the entire field of still photography is covered and the results of its author's extensive experience are set forth in comprehensive fashion. Amongst other interesting chapters is one in which the characteristics and chemical constituency of a great number of developers are given.

The name of Sir Wm. Abney is one to conjure with in the realm of photography and Abney has provided photographers with a sound and valuable treatise. "Instruction in Photography" was first issued years ago, and has gone through many editions, being revised and added to from time to time by the author. Sir William's exposition of the action of light upon cromolans is fascinating to study, and a feature of the book is the section on emulsion making. The literature on the emulsification of silver salts in gelatine has never been extensive, and the forming and instructions for the preparation of gelatino-bromide emulsions will provide readers of Abney's treatise with the data for some interesting experiments.

A handbook which covers all branches of photographic work can hardly be expected to do full justice to any one particular phase of the subject, but of all the photographic "handbooks" which we have seen, Hasluck's compilation comes nearest to being the "cure-all of the classroom."

It is a large volume and was originally issued by the publishers in sections, and finally supplied in one volume. In addition to describing all the conventional processes of photography, such subjects as astrophotography, spectro-photography and cinematography are dealt with in this work. There are chapters on color photography, plate-speed testing and the latent image, and even an advanced student will find it advantageous to precede his excursions into more technical literature with a preliminary consideration of the clearly worded text of "The Book of Photography." A host of excellent illustrations contribute to the undoubted value of the work.

This work is stated by the author to be a modernized version of Vogel's "Chemistry of Light and Photography," and is not exactly in the class of the "handbooks," because working formulae for the various processes are not given. As Garrett's title indicates, he has endeavored rather to sketch the progress of the science of photography and to contrast modern procedure with the practices of former days. Although, as before noted, working data is absent, Garrett has given value to his book by the insertion of plentiful references to important books and papers on the subjects treated in the various chapters. The volume is gotten up in elegant style and is richly illustrated.

SENSITOMETRY

Nos. 6 and 7. "The Journal of the Society of Chemical Industry," Vols. 9 (1890) and 10 (1891). Published in London—may be consulted at Public Libraries.

For many years after the discovery of photography its various manipulations were conducted along lines of rule-of-thumb procedure, but in 1890 photography was changed "from an artistic to a quantitative science" by the publication in the above-mentioned Journal of Hurter and Driffield's first paper on "Photochromal Investigations." Here is to be found the first description of the now recognized H & D system of plate-speed testing and although Hurter and Driffield's sensittometric methods had not been completely worked out in 1890, the principles of the system were clearly enunciated in their first paper (May 31, 1890—Jl. Soc. Chem. Ind.), and the soundness of their deductions is attested by their success in replying to the whirlwind of criticism which followed. (See Vol. 10, 1891.)

It should be here stated that the Hurter and Driffield system is not merely of service in the estimation of the comparative sensitiveness (to light) of photographic emulsions, for in fact all important characteristics of emulsions are investigated by this method, as well as the action of development and other operations which can influence the quality of photographic results. In the practice of the H & D methods of sensitometry, numerical data is secured which can be put to good use in the preparation of photographic emulsions possessing qualities suited to various classes of work. Although recognition was slow in coming to Messrs. Hurter and Driffield, the publication of their results revolutionized the photographic industry, and no photographer can claim to be well informed if he is not acquainted with the basic principles of the H & D system.

In the various papers read by Hurter and Driffield before learned societies the results of their work were set forth in such manner as to render them more or less unintelligible to those who were not well versed in the higher mathematics. Appreciating the desirability of a more simplified exposition of the H & D system, which could be read with profit by the average photographer, the above-mentioned monograph was prepared by Driffield. It covers the entire working of H & D's system and is the best article on the subject in sensimetry which can turn to. While the paper in the J. S. C. L. of May 31, 1890, is the most important historically, this later treatise is of greater value for instruction, since details which had not been completely worked out in 1890 are thoroughly elaborated in the later work.

This volume contains the theses and sensimetric papers of Mees and Sheppard, and is, perhaps, the most important contribution to the literature of modern photography. The experiments of Hurter and Driffield were repeated by these painstaking investigators with especially constructed apparatus of extreme precision, and the findings of Hurter and Driffield are confirmed and elaborated upon.

Of special interest is the description of the improved and highly accurate exposing apparatus, standard light, and spectrophotometer used by Mees and Sheppard in their examination into the characteristics of the photographic plate. These instruments, or similar ones, are nowadays employed in the research laboratories of the large photographic concerns.

In addition to their searching inquiry into development, fixation, the ripening of emulsions and the nature of the latent image, Messrs. Mees and Sheppard have also included some chapters on color-sensimetry and color sensitizing which are of inestimable value to the worker on color photography (or cinematography).

"Investigations on the Theory of the Photographic Process" is the connecting link between the classical researches of Hurter and Driffield and the modern industry of photographic manufacturing, and this work can be read with profit by all photographers, whether amateurs or experts.

Here is a paper which will serve to show the average photographer what a fascinating field for study and experiment is encompassed by the purely physical considerations of photography and the characteristics of light-sensitive photographic emulsions.

Conjectures are made by Dr. Mees as to the actual structure of gelatino-bromide emulsions and the nature of the latent image, while the behavior of emulsions upon exposure to light is graphically explained. A most important feature of this paper is the information on the size of the Ag. Br. grain in emulsions of various degrees of sensitiveness, which, of course, leads up to the question of photographic resolving power. This latter subject is one of prime importance in cinematography and merits the consideration of all cinematographers.

President Wilson’s Message

The patriotism of every theatre man is at this time at its highest pitch and all are striving to show their feelings in every possible way. The Kraus Manufacturing Company of 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, is encouraging this by bringing out a copy of President Wilson’s recent proclamation with the President’s face done in water colors at the top. The American flag in colors is also wound in most artistically. The whole is framed and ready to be hung in the lobby where it will be read by all who pass. It is a movement worthy of the greatest praise and one which should meet with success by the country’s picture theatres, as it doubtless will. Such stunts are well timed to the exigencies of the hour, and should prove valuable to exhibitors.

Our "Live Wire Exhibitors" department shows that all over the country are very much interested ... and character, so we believe that the message, handsomely framed, will make a most suitable and welcome lobby display, combining as it does the dual benefits of timeliness and dignity, and for the latter reason especially will prove suitable to all types of lobbies.

Music for Western, Railroad and Other Outdoor Pictures

Music for Western, railroad and outdoor scenes in general are crowded with vivid action and dramatic incident. In their musical treatment, absolute synchronisation, as recently published here, and an intelligent employ of contrasting music is the great cue to success. In choosing his music for such scenes the musician should first decide which kind of action predominates in the picture to be illustrated, slow or rapid action. From this standpoint he should make his choice. Once selected he should not change his music, but his tempo. In a railroad hold-up, the bandits lurking in ambush, waiting for the train to flash by, call for a mysterious (in treatment and tempo, if not in name). The gallop or quick allegro of Western hold-up scenes can often be made to express a totally opposite mood by changes in tempo and inflection. Good heavy 2/4 time moderato movements are excellent for cowboy scenes and others of rougher character, and a liberal use of tympani rolls can also be recommended. In bar-room dance scenes improvisation on a standard not "popular" rag is advised. In shooting affrays involving a number of men, and either slow or rapid shooting by a crowd, two small ratten sticks beating continuously against a leather chair-bottom give a perfect reproduction of revolver or gun fire. In detective scenes, where mystery, secrecy, and the atmosphere of intrigue dominates, the pizzicato and "croom" are invaluable, and in their climaxes and, for that matter, climaxes of any kind, the tympani can be relied on for a maximum of effect.

High Class Music—Performed on a Bartola One-Man Orchestra

We are in receipt of an interesting musical program from Charles T. Morgan, furnished on the Bartola Orchestra Organ and performed in the Ceramic theatre, East Liverpool, Ohio.

This program consists of numbers written by only one composer, as explained in the following notice, which is taken from a story in one of East Liverpool's newspapers:

A Program of Merit

Charles T. Morgan, organist at the Ceramic theatre, will present a series of programs this week of unusual interest to music lovers. Each program will consist of the composition of one artist, living American composers being chiefly represented.

Today a Victor Herbert program will be rendered, as follows:

1. Estella — Valse Pathétique
2. Selections from "Mlle Modiste" — Air de Ballet
3. Three dances from the opera, "Natoma Habanera" (Mimnet, "Pannello" — Valse la Moda
4. Neapolitan Love Song (T’Amo) from "The Princess Pat"
5. "Whispering Willows" — Yesterthoughts

Mr. Morgan highly endorses the one-man Bartola Orchestra, and is also a great admirer of the better class music in picture shows.

Mr. Morgan has sent us the following comments in reference to the Bartola Orchestra:

Music in the "movies" is rapidly leaving the state of being a mere fixture of the theatre. Its evolution has made necessary so reasonable in price as to warrant its use by the managers.

Prices, utilizing generally at first, have failed to meet the increasing demands of film devotees. Orchestras for the purpose are prohibitive for the most part because of their cost. This has been materially increased recently by the arranging of special scores for the various pictures produced.

Pipe organs, too, though frequently used, are held to be of little success unless there is a high salaried artist at the console. They soon lose their interest to the audience. Heard too often, they have a depressing effect.

To procure the effect of an orchestra, with a minimum of cost, has been the goal long sought by promoters. This has been attained by the placing on the market of instruments so built as to place under the control of a single person every instrument ordinarily used in an orchestra. With mechanical devices the player can instantly make any change required by the picture—always with the effect of a full orchestra, but with none of the discords, abrupt stops, or ragged "get-aways" into the next number that are frequently noted in the offerings of a human orchestra.

These so-called "one-man orchestras" meet admirably and successfully the need for superior music at a greatly reduced rate of production. Reference is not here intended, however, to the type mechanically operated by a perforated roll. "Canned music" is always a nuisance and carries with it the single virtue of not requiring a player. Aptly dubbed "Infernal Machines," they have not met the required need.

Of the other class, those played from the manuals by a performer, the writer is acquainted with and has played upon every type now utilized. Of all these he believes the demands of producers, managers, and "fans" are more nearly met in the "Bartola Orchestra," manufactured by the Bartola Musical Instrument Company of Rockefeller, Wis., than in any other instrument now upon the market.

Indiana Theatres

The Alhambra theatre of Elwood, Indiana, one of three theatres owned by the Mossman Brothers, was completed in 1911. The theatre is operated by the Alhambra Amusement Company under the management of H. F. Mossman.

The theatre measures 35 feet in width by 132 feet in depth, is constructed of concrete and brick.

The theatre has a seating capacity of 500.

The projection room is equipped with two Powers 6 A projectors, the length of throw is 105 feet on to a Gold Fibre screen. Electricity is used for lighting, the indirect system being used.

Heat for the house is obtained from a central heating plant operated by the city. Steam heat is used to heat the house furnished by the Municipal heating plant.

An orchestra furnishes the music most suitable for the pictures being shown.

Paramount, Vitagraph, World and Artercraft productions are shown, admission price is ten cents.

The theatre is located in the business section.

Philadelphia's Frankford Attractive

The Frankford theatre, 4715 Frankford avenue, takes its name from the Philadelphia suburb in which it is situated, an old part of the town that boasts of its community spirit and likeness to the city proper.

Thus it has to be catered to in a different manner from a metropolitan audience, and it did not take to vaudeville, for which this house was built.

The Frankford, built in 1913, stands on a large lot and has an imposing front of granite-trimmed brick with a handsome canopy to the curb of glass and iron. It was given over to pictures in 1916, and since has been a success.

Inside, the vaudeville adjuncts are shown in the inclined lobby, the gallery seating 600, the 12 boxes seating a hundred, and the large stage. There are 1,800 seats in all.

This lobby is not an asset to a picture house being large and rather bare looking. The effect has been much improved, however, by recent decorations of palms, hanging baskets and vines of good quality artificial flowers, while pictures of stars in gold frames enliven the walls which are prettily frescoed in yellow with contrasting borders.

There is a marble wainscoting and a concrete floor. The ornamental chandeliers are of gilt and bronze. The side box office is still in use with roll tickets.

Inside the theatre the effect is rich and handsome with ivory walls frescoed in good taste, dark green carpets and leather upholstered chairs, old rose, plush curtains, many bronze and crystal chandeliers.

The lighting system is direct from the ceiling and on side walls; steam heating is used.

Ventilation is by ten large fans and many vents direct to the air. There are twenty exits. The building is fireproof.

The organ is entirely concealed, being built in two of the boxes. This alternates with a piano. Richard Bach is organist. A special musical recital is given twice a month and an overture before each feature.

This theatre is a beautiful one, with one exception, and that is the position of the operating room which is on the roof. The picture must be thrown at an awful angle thereby distorting it greatly. It would be bad enough to have the projection room at the rear of the balcony. Then again it has its good points.
In case of fire in the projection booth there would be no immediate danger to the rest of the house. The equipment consists of two Simplex, model S, motor-driven projectors, equipped with Gundlach lenses. The length of throw is 125 feet on to a Rembrandt Crystal fibre screen.

Louis Dammeyer, chief operator, is a member of Local 307, I. A. T. S. E.

There are eight reels shown at each of the three daily performances. Matinee prices are ten cents, nights, ten, fifteen and twenty. Children same prices.

It takes fifteen employees besides the manager to care for the Frankford.

The neighborhood is both business and residential. The theatre is controlled by The Frankford Realty Co., of which Wm. Fruehoffer is the principal owner.

Columbus Stamper is managing director and H. R. McKenna, resident manager.

John Allen, of Philadelphia, was the architect.

Extensive advertising is used by the Frankford in the form of a mailing list, posters, hand bills and window cards, with hill boards on special productions. Daily advertisements in the leading Philadelphia papers, supplemented by advertisements in the two local, weekly papers and in monthly school papers are also used.

Paramount, Metro, World and special features with Keystone, Chaplin and Drew comedies, besides educational and news weeklies are run with three weekly changes. "Civilization" was a big success.

Other recent popular pictures were "Pride of the Clan," "Snow White" and "Miss George Washington."

Marguerite Clark is a prime favorite, with Mary Pickford a close second. Mabel Taliaferro, Pauline Frederick and Wallace Reid are also popular. The longer runs have proven more successful than the daily change in vogue at first.

The Strand, a New Utah House

The Strand theatre of Tooele, Utah, a town with a population of nearly three thousand, was completed...
The stage is somewhat larger than the old Colonial stage, and the addition of twenty feet onto the left will permit the use of scenery in the local playhouse that is used in the larger places.

KANSAS

A $20,000 moving picture house is being erected at Council Grove. The owners are hedging the enterprise about with considerable secrecy and concealing their plans.

KENTUCKY

Contract for the remodeling of the old Gem theatre building, at Paducah, for Bright Brothers has been let to Contractor J. W. Lockwood, and the Lassiter-Om Company will furnish the material. A. L. Lassiter & Brother are the architects for the building, and E. W. Eichman, of Decatur, store efficiency man, will have charge of the interior arrangements. All of the details have been arranged and work will start soon on the building. Bright Brothers will occupy it by August 1.

Articles of incorporation of the Booker T. Washington Amusement Company, with a capital stock of $25,000 divided into 5,000 shares of $5 par value, were filed recently at Louisville. The corporation proposes the operation of a theatre for colored people to be located somewhere in the territory bounded by Preston, Shelby, Roadway and Breckinridge streets, and is authorized to incur an indebtedness not to exceed the capital stock. The incorporators are R. T. and G. W. Berry and Robert Peters, each with sixty shares of stock.

NEW YORK

Robert Jardin has been granted a permit by Edward Wheeler, Jr., fire marshal, to erect a brick building at Lake avenue and Latta road, Twenty-third ward, Rochester, to be used on the ground floor for a motion picture theatre, with two stores additional. It will be of brick and two stories in height. The second floor will be used for apartments. The structure will be 71 feet by 132 feet and 26 feet in height, of an estimated cost of $35,000.

OHIO

Plans for converting the Majestic opera house, Lorain's largest theatre, into a motion picture house have been made the Cleveland interests who own the building.

The theatre has been leased to the proprietor of one of Cleveland's largest motion picture theatres who plans extensive alterations and improvements, and a strictly movie policy. A contract to erect, to cost $60,000, will be awarded to Toleto on Lagrange street, near Central avenue. The new house will have a seating capacity of 1,328 persons.

Charles L. and M. A. Bradley will erect a motion picture theatre in East Ninth street, Cleveland. The new house will be known as the Gaiety and will seat 400 persons.

The Gem theatre, Maysville, which has been closed since early last summer on account of being involved in bankruptcy proceedings, was re-opened on Monday, April 9. The new management is composed of Mr. Lloyd Smith, the former manager, and Mr. Walter Boughman, both of Circleville, Ohio. They are not new in the motion picture business and are determined to assure Maysville people that they will show good pictures all the time.

PENNSYLVANIA

Work is rapidly progressing on the new Edgmont theatre at Fourth street and Edgmont avenue, Chester.

Carr & Schad have decided to name their new theatre, which is being constructed at Penn street, near 12th street, Reading, the Colonial. The owners recently put the name up to a public vote and Colonial was the name which received the most votes.

RHODE ISLAND

Emery's New Majestic theatre, Providence, was thrown open to the public with an elaborate program, Monday, the 2nd of April. The theatre has been leased to the proprietor of one of New Orleans' largest motion picture theatres, and will be known as the Gaiety.

The stage is somewhat larger than the Colonial stage, and the addition to the left will permit the use of scenery in the local playhouse.

NOVA SCOTIA

Operations were started last week at Amherst, on the construction of the new $5,000 Empress theatre, to replace the one destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. The new building will be modern and fireproof, and will have a seating capacity of more than 1,000. John W. Moore will be the proprietor, and Fred G. Spencer, who held a lease on the house at the time of the fire, will renew it and continue a policy of motion picture features.

ONTARIO

The Garrick theatre, College and Dovercourt road, is Toronto's newest house or rather one should say one of Toronto's two houses made new. As a matter of fact the Garrick has been nameless ever since its construction, being built but never operated. However, one of the local theatre syndicates has secured it and is remodeling and equipping it with the expectation of opening very shortly.

"It's in the Stars."

When a man had a hard problem in ancient times, he consulted the old astronomers. If the problem was as hard as that of the average exhibitor today—they would tell him they knew their advice was good because "it was in the stars."

They knew a thing but couldn't logically explain why.

The answer is just as good today, except that it can be explained logically—by the best logic in the world—profits.

Paramount Pictures always "outdraw" the opposition.

"It's in the Stars."

The newest and one of the greatest stars for Paramount Pictures is Mme. Petrova. In her many screen successes, it has been sheer dramatic power and histrionic force which have carried her forward to personal triumphs.

"The Undying Flame" has been selected as the title of Mme. Petrova's first Lasky production and it is scheduled for release in May.

Mme. Petrova's initial Paramount Picture, the first of a series of Petrova-Paramount triumphs, will undoubtedly be her greatest screen success to date.

Book Paramount Pictures now.
Famous Players
The Most Important Announcement Since September

In response to the great national demand for Paramount pictures, I take great pleasure in announcing that the Paramount Pictures Corporation will adopt the open-booking system of distribution to take effect August 5th, 1917.

For this important action we have been laying definite plans for months. The effect of this decision will be that after August 5th, exhibitors may obtain Paramount Pictures in series; booking the plays which they select, and the stars whom their patrons prefer.

The best in motion pictures, through this epoch-making plan is available to all the theatres. I feel that this is the most important announcement that has been addressed to the exhibitors of America since September 1st, 1914, when the Paramount Program was inaugurated.

In connection with the above announcement we state that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has acquired the Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

Paramount and Artcraft in the future will co-operate to the best advantage of the exhibitor in their booking arrangements. The release dates of the extraordinary stellar and box office attractions obtainable through Artcraft will be adjusted so as not to conflict with the Paramount releases.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation acquired Artcraft to make it possible for the exhibitor to present the great Artcraft roductions without paying for Paramount Pictures of the same release dates.

To the present Artcraft attractions which include the photoplays starring Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and George M. Cohan, will be added Elsie Ferguson, Cecil B. DeMille-Geraldine Farrar productions, and the forthcoming personally directed D. W. Griffith productions.

The Paramount roster will comprise Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Mme. Petrova, Marie Doro, Billy Burke, Fanny Ward, Margaret Illington, Mae Murray, Anne Pennington, Sessue Hayakawa, Jack Pickford and Louise Huff, Vivian Martin, George Beban, Wallace Reid and Kathleen Williams, and other illustrious stars to be announced as added.

For months the work of mobilizing the foremost literary and dramatic masterpieces of the day, selected from among the efforts of the world's greatest and contemporary writers, has been unceasing in order to provide most advantageous and popular vehicles for the stars and producers mentioned above.

The most complete producing department, under the management of our Vice-President, Mr. Jesse L. Lasky, and working under the direct supervision of Messrs. Hugh Ford and A. A. Kaufman in the Eastern studios, and Messrs. Cecil B. De Mille and M. E. Hoffman in the Western studios, will be maintained for the creation of the greatest screen triumphs ever yet presented to exhibitors and public.

I feel that by this one step the motion picture will have been advanced ten years in artistic promotion.

Paramount Pictures Corporation

TO THE EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA:

I am confident that I need not emphasize to exhibitors the values and advantages to be derived by them through the adoption of the open-booking system of distribution by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, and the system we have created by which Paramount Pictures and Paramount stars will be booked in co-ordination with Artcraft stars and productions.

Exhibitors will also be pleased to be relieved of the necessity of shelving pictures to exhibit others of current release, due, heretofore, to conflicting release dates. This burden upon the exhibitor is now removed.

Exhibitors may obtain detailed information regarding the new system of distribution from their local Paramount exchanges on and after May 15th, 1917.

The devotion of the principles of service and co-operation to which Paramount was dedicated from its first introduction to the trade will be most scrupulously maintained and furthered.

Besides the unsurpassed Paramount feature productions, we will constantly advance the merit of our shorter reel subjects, including the already nationally popular Paramount-Arbuckle Comedies, the Klever and Black Diamond Comedies, Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelogues and Paramount-Bray Pictographs.

I wish to congratulate exhibitors and the public upon the possibilities for advancement which the New Paramount policy contains.

HIRAM ABRAMS, President

Artcraft Pictures Corporation

TO THE EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA:

The plan that co-ordinates the booking arrangements between the Artcraft Pictures Corporation and the Paramount Pictures Corporation, announced on the opposite page, is, in my opinion, the greatest step for the welfare and advantage of the exhibitor ever taken in the entire history of the motion picture.

Besides the unsurpassed cinema attractions which Artcraft intends to release, exhibitors may book, by a co-ordinated system, the great Paramount Pictures which set the first standard for consistent screen excellence throughout the world, thus presenting photoplays week in and week out, year in and year out, that will make exhibiting competition utterly out of the question.

To the superb roster of Artcraft stars, now including Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, the Cecil B. DeMille-Geraldine Farrar productions, and George M. Cohan, will shortly be added the beautiful and gifted favorite of the American public, Elsie Ferguson, and the photoplay conceptions of that master of screen creation, D. W. Griffith.

To these stars and productions will also be added the greatest triumphs of the screen which we will make available to ourselves from the independent studios of the world whenever or wherever such productions can be secured as compare with the ambitious standard of Artcraft.

Artcraft Pictures have given the silent drama a new definition in the world of art. The artistic policy that made this advancement possible will be carefully nurtured in the future so that we can present to the photoplay public such screen master-pieces as were hitherto impossible to conceive.

The Most Famous Writers of Modern Fiction Bring Their Genius to Vitagraph Photoplays

The Vitagraph Company, by a series of new contracts for the works of world famous authors, has insured its program for Exhibitors to an extent that places Vitagraph features in the class of guaranteed securities.

Robert W. Chambers, the most widely read author of our day, has sold to the Vitagraph Company the right to film any six of his stories which have not yet been screened, for its regular program. In addition he will write two new scenarios for Special Vitagraph productions.

Sir Gilbert Parker’s greatest story, “The Judgment House,” will be produced as a Vitagraph feature.

Alfred Henry Lewis’ “Wolfville Stories,” those wonderful tales of the West, will be found on the Vitagraph program.

At least four of O. Henry’s best stories will also be found among forthcoming Vitagraph features.

Work is now under way on productions from the best works of other writers, the details to be announced later.

The enormous investment in this unsurpassed scenario material assures Vitagraph stars of dramas worthy of their talents, and gives Vitagraph the quality of material its splendid production facilities deserve.

And this gives to Exhibitors an unbroken line of offerings of supreme box-office value. Best sellers, whose waiting audiences run into the millions, assure Vitagraph Exhibitors the dominating position in their territory.

“Greater Stars, Greater Plays, Greater Vitagraph” has been realized, and for the exhibitor this combination means “Greatest Profits.”

The Biggest Opportunity Ever Offered to Exhibitors for Long Runs at Enormous Profits

OPENS AT THE BROADWAY THEATRE, NEW YORK SUNDAY, APRIL 29th
There was a man once, who in an hour of shame, wronged a woman most mercilessly. She passed out of his life as quickly as she had come into it. He forgot—nor did he ever dream that the slow, grim round of Fate would bring his crime back to him. He found supreme happiness in his career, his home, his wife. But the day of reckoning came. In the very sanctity of his home the seeds of the sin he had sown years before were harvested.

And how did he pay? Fate did not ask his life as a penalty, nor did he suffer torments of the flesh, nor was his wealth taken from him. Is there no other way of retribution? The answer—Fate's challenge—comes with the overwhelming force of an avalanche in the tremendous climax of "Her Secret."

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS EXCHANGES

LA SALLE COMEDIES
Starring Popular Comedians Under Direction of M. De La Parelle
RELEASED BY MUTUAL

A brand new series of Mutual Featurettes has just been arranged for. Negotiations have been completed by which Mutual will release LeSalle Comedies produced by the LeSalle Film Company of Chicago and Los Angeles. The new series of Featurettes will begin with three two-reel comedies to be released weekly, because the vogue is returning to the use of short subjects, and through and through, with a lot of the rough and ready life of the West and detective fiction thrown in. It is all that Mr. Hutchinson guaranteed and then some more. The LeSalle series will be so well produced that we shall be able to see the first chapter, and return to view the rest of the fifteen installments of the best work Miss Holmes has yet done.

What Julian Johnson Says about Helen Holmes

"stands out like the great architect's perfect circle"

"perfectly logical"

"genuine art slipped into a tale of the iron trail."

"for the essentials of human nature Mr. McGowan rivals Charlie Van Loan."

"admirable discretion in fitting star to story."

15 Thrilling Chapters. First Chapter Released April 9th. Directed by J.P. McGowan.
In the dazzling days of the Italian Renaissance, a mighty cathedral was to be built in a city of Northern Italy. In our pages we would call the word which went through the grand peninsula an invitation for beauty; accordingly, architects whose renown is still bright though they have sheltered many hundreds of years, contributed wonderful plans and drawings. All save one especially prominent builder. He submitted nothing, where he was expected to contribute a most interesting pencil-projection. The reason. "Take this to your masters," he said, "and tell them that you saw me do it."

I do we need to conclude our parable? Of course the wizard who could draw a perfect circle built the cathedral! A perfect reproduction of life, or any phase of life, is so rare in the arts that whatever the subject, it commands instant attention.

I recommend to the photodrama leagues, and to the professors who are straining their timid eyes to find a little art on the screen, that the first sight of a picture by the great architect's perfect circle against ruins of any cathedral demands. To do one thing as no one else can do it is to be individual, and a success. McGowan has stuck to the rails for years, and no one can challenge him on his right of way.

A complaint is brought to the General Offices of the K. & W. railroad that stealing is going on at Garden City. It's the fourth complaint inside a month. Really, the climb is the station agent, Steve Arnold, who does a thriving business in Indian baskets, blankets and pottery by taping eyes of canned goods and wrapping tomatoes of all for barteric utensil. Conducting a specific instance, we see the general manager's private car bearing down on Garden City, while Arnold, unloading a railroad car, lets it drift out of the "house track" to the main line. The general manager's special singly demolishes the car, for-fishing out the stolen goods, and then in perfect leisure to theatteest the damage. This is the way, one cannot do it.

Small Exhibitors Can Pay Goldwyn's Prices

There are a great many important "first run" exhibitors in the United States, and there are thousands of the smaller exhibitors. These small exhibitors are vastly more important to any wise and far-seeing company.

Goldwyn hopes to play the important "first runs"—but our greatest desire is to have all of the smaller exhibitors play Goldwyn Pictures.

Goldwyn’s rentals will make this possible. Our prices will be fair and equitable.

We are charting and combing America with experts who are building a system of rental schedules that will enable every theatre in the country to play Goldwyn Pictures at a profit to the exhibitor as well as ourselves.

Our idea is not to squeeze the exhibitor, but to establish a partnership with him—with profit to both.

FAIR JUNE CAPRICE TO BE SEEN NEXT IN “A SMALL TOWN GIRL”

Little Fox Star Of One Year On First Anniversary Of Her Debut Makes Best Picture Of Her Career

Winsome June Caprice has completed just one year as a screen star and in “A Small Town Girl” has excelled anything she has previously done. It was only twelve months ago William Fox announced that he would make her one of the best known stars in the film world. That she and he have made good, exhibitors from every quarter of the globe testify.

Miss Caprice’s work in “A Small Town Girl” outshines every effort of the past and will add materially to her host of admirers. “A Small Town Girl” is a superlative picture, superlatively acted and directed. It is a picture in which exhibitors may have the greatest confidence.

The story is one with human appeal and tells of the hopes and joys of a winsome little western girl drawn into the fascinating and enthralling glamour of the Great White Way. Your audiences will like this picture.

WILLIAM FARNUM COMING EAST

Noted Fox Star to Produce Next Photoplay at Fort Lee

On the completion of the photoplay on which he is now working at the Fox Studios in Los Angeles, Cal., William Farnum, star of many super de luxe productions, will come east. He will work in the Fort Lee Studios in New Jersey.

Mr. Farnum went west in December, 1915, and made the first plays in the Fox studios on the Pacific Coast. His home is at Sag Harbor, Long Island.

HAS A DRESSING ROOM AUTO

Gladys Brockwell has designed and had built a dressing room automobile for her use when on “location.”

“A ROMAN COWBOY” NEW FOXFILM COMEDY

Tom Mix “Comes Back” As a Comedian After Plunge into Drama

Tom Mix, world champion cowboy, “comes back” as a Foxfilm comedian in the release of May 6, “A Roman Cowboy.” Tom recently jumped out of the comedy corral to support Dustin Farnum, Fox star, in a dramatic production.

Practically the entire cast that supported Mix in his first Foxfilm comedy, “Hearts and Saddles,” is with him in “A Roman Cowboy.” Rena Rogers, a new leading woman, will play opposite him.

The rest of the cast will include Sid Jordan, Pat Chrisman, Boss Glen, Chet Ryan and others.

The burro that played such a prominent part in “Hearts and Saddles” is also “cast” in “A Roman Cowboy.” Thus far, the burro is nameless, but he doesn’t seem to mind it.

“Roman Cowboy” is another of Mix’s rollicking western comedies. The great outdoors furnishes him with “sets” that fit his characters. Those who saw “Hearts and Saddles” will agree that an entire state is not much too large for the Mix type of comedy.

BARA STARTS NEW SUPER FILM

Drama to be a Sensational Offering for Fox Exhibitors

Theda Bara has begun a new super de luxe picture under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. This picture, together with one already completed and which will shortly be advertised for release, will be a veritable cinema sensation to exhibitors. Watch for the release advertisements of these super de luxe specials.

Coming—George Walsh
In "The Book Agent"

"Smiling" George Walsh, the athletic William Fox star, whom you all remember in "Melting Millions" and "High Finance," will be seen in "The Book Agent."

He appears as the wandering peddler of books, who combines a genial personality with keen business ability and after many thrilling adventures, including a romance, stops selling books.

Mr. Walsh is as wholesome, genial and carefree as ever, and his athletic prowess is in evidence throughout the picture.

PEARSON'S GOWNS OUTGROW HOME

Virginia Pearson is moving back to her country home because she cannot find room for all her gowns in her apartment in the city.

THE HONOR SYSTEM
ON STATE RIGHT BASIS

Cinemelodrama now being Booked For New York and New Jersey

That sensational cinemelodrama, "The Honor System," which has set all New York talking and which has had a four months' run at the Lyric Theatre, Broadway and Forty-second Street, is offered by William Fox on a state rights basis.

Bookings are now being made direct for the city and state of New York and New Jersey.

This production has received the unanimous praise of the New York City newspaper and trade press. Never in the history of motion pictures have such complimentary things been written about a picture. Some of the dramatic critics declared that it eclipsed even "The Birth of a Nation," while others wrote that it was the motion picture at its best.

The picture owes its great success to its heart interest and the human appeal it makes to every class.

This master drama of Director R. A. Walsh offers real stars—Miriam Cooper, Gladys Brockwell and George Walsh, people whose names mean something.

THE HONOR SYSTEM OFF APR. 29
End of Run at Lyric Sets New Record for William Fox

In completing the run of "The Honor System" at the Lyric Theatre April 29, William Fox has accomplished a feat no experienced theatrical man believed possible. He has occupied a first-class New York theatre an entire season with two spectacular films—"A Daughter of the Gods" and "The Honor System."

This is the most extraordinary record in filmdom. By it Mr. Fox has placed the motion picture on a par with the so-called legitimate attraction.

FOX “KIDDIE” FILMS TO BE RELEASED SOON

Famous Child Players Will Have All Leading Roles in New Wonder Pictures

William Fox announces the early release of a sensationally beautiful series of "kiddie" features in which all the important roles will be taken by the world's best known and most talented screen children.

These will be known as "Fox Kiddie Pictures," and will delight the "grown-ups" as much as the youngsters. Mr. Fox will present the new pictures on an extravagantly beautiful scale and in them will be seen all the children who have become so popular in regular Fox releases. In addition there will be numbers of "kiddies" who will for the first time appear under the William Fox banner.

Mr. Fox promises that these productions will be the equal in every respect to the standard which he has fixed.

The "kiddies" will do everything their elders do—and will add to it the charm of childhood. These pictures will be the treat of the year to motion picture audiences. The gorgeous sets will be built on a scale to correspond with the "kiddies" who make the pictures. There will be all sorts of stories interpreted by the youngsters—fairy stories—adventure—love—nursery rhymes, and all the beautiful children stories that delight both young and old.

Grown-ups will be used like furniture or decorations—only as necessary evils.

GENERAL PUBLIC

It is readily apparent to the most casual observer that the successful pioneer in any field attracts a horde of followers. This has proven true in the case of the Thomas H. Ince Triangle Productions. I have striven to make the name INCE a by-word for the highest attainable photo-drama, and in this connection I wish to emphatically state and impress on the minds of all concerned that any photo-dramas bearing the name of Ince Productions Inc. are NOT in any manner or form to be connected with the Thos. H. Ince Triangle, Triangle Ince or Ince Triangle Features, which are produced only at my studios in California.

EXPECTS to get your business in the near future, Mr. Exhibitor;

BECAUSE we have abolished the cash deposit system which has been your chief complaint against present day methods of distribution;

BECAUSE we are putting into operation a flexible modification of the heretofore rigid "program" booking plan, which will enable you to show productions of the more pretentious type without having to pay for your regular program service when you lay it on the shelf unused;

BECAUSE we are supplying you with productions which are productions in every sense of the word, not merely stars with some weak, badly produced "vehicle" written around their limited personalities; these productions are being made under the supervision of such master craftsmen as Thos. H. Ince, Mack Sennett and Allan Dwan, directors who are recognized as supreme in their fields;

BECAUSE

BECAUSE we are fighting hard all the time for ethical, constructive business policies in the film industry and are proving our sincerity by inaugurating such policies whenever and wherever practicable;

BECAUSE we are thinking of your success as well as our own and not trying to exploit you in order to get a little immediate "easy money."

THINK IT OVER, MR. EXHIBITOR
[P.S.—Ask us to show you some of our current releases and let us know where you can duplicate such pictures either on a program or in specials, "Happiness," "The Pinch Hitter," "The Snarl," "Sweetheart of the Doomed," "The Desert Man," and others. If you have the right kind of a house you must have the right pictures.

MACK SENNETT-KEYSTONE

RELEASED ONLY BY TRIANGLE DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

How can an advertiser continue advertising? By giving YOU value.
WHEN a film producer or distributor tells you that he loves you and is working for you alone, he is talking like a politician before an election.

For years we have known many exhibitors—we like, respect and admire them, but we do not love them. There is little sentiment in successful business.

THE PARALTA PLAN IS NOT A SENTIMENTAL PROPOSITION—IT IS THE RESULT OF HARD THINKING BY A GROUP OF LEVEL HEADED BUSINESS MEN WHO HAVE SOUGHT TO FIND A WAY TO PROTECT THE EXHIBITOR FROM FAILURE AND THUS MAKE MONEY FOR THEMSELVES.

Our purpose has no other thought behind it but our self-preservation. If the exhibitor fails, where is the producer and distributor to look for their money?

WE are out to make all the HONEST MONEY we can. To do that we must help the exhibitor.

Co-operation is the basic principle on which the Paralta enterprises are founded.

The Paralta Plan and Paralta Plays are inseparable—each forming an important part of the other.

The Paralta Plan will prove a practical help to you in the management of your theatre. It will save you money in rentals of feature films. Paralta Plays will increase your profits by providing attractions that draw to capacity.

The Paralta Plan means that you can absolutely control big feature films in your exhibition territory and play repeats at your discretion, at substantially no greater cost than you now pay for your first run of special productions.

THE Paralta Plan points the way to a revolution in the operating costs of the motion picture theatre—the passing of Dictation and the coming in of democratic co-operation in the production, distribution and presentation of motion pictures.

We can help you if you are ready to help yourself. If you are losing money, or just breaking even, there's a reason.

You can help yourself by STUDying the Paralta Plan. There is always strength in sincere cooperation. The Paralta Plan means actual and effective co-operation between the producer and distributor and the real backbone of this industry—the exhibitor.

It costs you but one red copper cent to learn every detail of the Paralta Plan. A postal card will do it. You assume no obligation.

STUDY!!!

THE PARALTA PLAN

Be sure to mention "MOTION PICTURE NEWS" when writing to advertisers.
A certain wise New York contractor, in making a bid to build a concrete dam, figured to do the work at actual cost to him. All he asked for was the empty cement bags.

He was willing to make his profit out of the waste, which, in this instance, amounted to $120,000.

The Paralta Plan Utilizes Waste—it is simply a method of turning waste into cash. We are willing to share with you all we can save in fighting waste, which is sucking like a vampire the very life blood of the exhibitor—bleeding him white and taking from him every chance to make a dollar for himself.

And in considering waste, Mr. Exhibitor, do not forget that it is all shouldered on to you—in the final reckoning you pay the bill.

Waste in motion pictures first shows itself in production. It results in poor quality films and the exhibitor feels it first in increasing film rentals.

High cost of production and an unsound system of distribution constitute the very fountain head of waste, which shows in the big rental prices of film, increased operating overhead, decreasing box office receipts and "closed" signs on theatre fronts.

This waste runs right down the line—the patron, the exhibitor, the distributor and the producer all lose. But the exhibitor loses most.

Why have 4,000 moving picture theatres closed their doors since last May? The answer is waste from the first day a picture is planned right down the line to the exhibitor, and he pays all the bills—till he bleeds to death.

The big exhibitor staggers and the little exhibitor drops dead under the load of waste that is crowded on to him.

Who profiteers by all this? No one. Waste is killing a business of wonderful possibilities. It is running patrons away from the box office and closing theatres every day. The bankrupting of both producers and exhibitors must follow as an inevitable result.

The survival of the fittest? Surely! Just Study the Paralta Plan and fit yourself to survive.

The Deemster, which had its premiere at the Broadway Theatre, is simply Hall Caine shown in its true light. The story is an excellent vehicle for acting and has few claims to artistic perfection. It is, in effect, a photocollage, and the handling of good photography. The story of the Deemster's heroic actions and the many opportunities it afforded to the actor are well depicted and executed.

FIRST GRAPHIC FILM
CLEAN, SAY MAKERS

"Our initial State rights production, 'The Woman and the Beast' is melodramatic, but clean," states a representative of the Graphic Features, Room 401, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City. "We will even concede that it is in the class of so-called sensational films, but there is nothing in it that anybody would be ashamed to see; in fact, it simply deals with a pacifist who showed he could be bold in time of need. It is not a political story, as there will undoubtedly be a flood of political stories dealing with pacifists, but our pacifist is a peace-at-any-price husband who has a war-like wife, and the moral is pointed without the slightest reference to the present political situation of the United States."

Marie Shotwell, who is the star of the feature, made her first picture hit in "The Witching Hour." Then came her appearance in "Enlighten Thy Daughter" and just prior to her engagement in "The Woman and the Beast," a stellar role in Edward Warren's production "The Warfare of the Flesh."

The Warfare of the Flesh

Hundreds of women wept at the Broadway last Thursday morning. All were in accord that it is a great picture for women.

The critics are Unanimous... All say it is a high class picture and a Big smashing Box-Office Winner.

WID, SAYS:

A MONEY-GETTING TITLE WITH A PRODUCTION THAT DOES NOT OFFEND... THE ALL-LYING SCENES WELL HANDLED WITH PINE NATURAL BACKGROUND... THE UNDER-LYING MOTIVE LIFTED THE OFFERING INTO THE SPECIAL CLASS... THE STORY DEVELOPMENT PROVIDES A NICE ELEMENT OF SUSPENSE WITH A GREAT SURPRISE TWIST.

GEORGE W. GRAVES OF MOTOGRAPHY SAYS--

The Warfare of the Flesh offers both interesting entertainment and a pointed moral argument. A cast of notable players is uniformly strong... a worthy picture and a money-maker for the exhibitor...

GEORGE N. SHOREY OF THE MOVING PICTURE NEWS--

Most unusual story—Has deep human appeal and interest—Will satisfy the most refined and has enough punch for the sensation seekers—Many sympathetic touches—Good all around entertainment.

ROBERT WHITTEN IN THE NEW YORK CLIPPER--

A high standard of feature film—it is in many respects a remarkable picture—the story is away from the beaten track—it is well constructed and well told—the acting is excellent and the direction is a credit to Edward Warren.

ADAM HULL SHIRK OF THE DRAMATIC MIRROR--

Well conceived prologue—strong modern story with distinguished players as interpreters of remarkable theme—AS A STATE RIGHT PROPOSITION THE FILM SHOULD PROVE A DECIDEDLY PROFITABLE INVESTMENT.

Everything that money could supply in the way of a fine cast and expensive setting has been given the feature.

CHARLES WAGNER SAYS IN THE TRADE REVIEW--

Each character is vividly portrayed and the whole story blends with strong contrast. It entertains throughout, and while the theme is unquestionably blunt it is so powerfully and artistically handled that it will please even the most prudish. All in all it is box-office attraction of premiere quality.

MISS AGNEW, MORNING TELEGRAPH--

It reveals a strength of purpose which can only be appreciated by a personal view. The "eternal story" is told in a novel and wonderfully impressive way and set in a production that is remarkable in every detail. It is another triumph for the photographic art. Many women in the audience wept. Mr. Warren has handled a delicate subject in a delicate way.

MILTON R. LOWENTHAL OF THE NEW YORK STAR--

Edward Warren has handled the subject conceded by all motion picture directors as the one most difficult to accurately and conscientiously pictures, and he has done this with a finesse and skill quite unequaled in motion picture annals. To mix the allegorical and every day in such proportions that neither is lost sight of requires genius that Edward Warren seems to be endowed with. The Warfare of the Flesh is a picture that will draw not only to the box-office but to the heart as well.

A Picture The People Want! — Mr. State Rights Buyer

therein lies its assured success—the people ultimately must be satisfied for you, the exhibitor, distributor and producer to make money—its more profitable for you and us to sell what the people want rather than to teach them to buy what we may happen to have to sell.

Today the successful photoplay must be foursquare—the play, player, product and policy must all measure up to the standard—it's easier to sell and better to buy—this is common sense you'll admit. The George Backer Film,

The SIN WOMAN
With Irene Fenwick

is a "Foursquare" picture—and it has to be strong on every side—for instance the play—The "Sin Woman" is all action—no padding, couldn't be trimmed—suspense to the last foot—it has an unusual theme—clean but vital, human and absorbing—The "Sin Woman" reaches the heart and brain—thoughts and feelings.

EXHIBITORS!

We are working out a new policy in which the price you want to pay and the number of days you believe you can profitably use the picture are going to count. In some cases we will even permit you to sub-rent in order to profitably complete the showing of the photoplay in your district. Read THE COUPON.

The Players—Irene Fenwick, particularly, Reine Davies and Clifford Bruce, need no introduction. They are not rankers but leaders. Their work is their guarantee and as for production, George Backer and George W. Lederer have entrenched themselves as producer and director by their faithful, artistic, accurate and almost lavishly costly production to give the "Sin Woman" the atmosphere and quality its character as a special feature demands. And lastly, the Policy of M. H. Hoffman is to help you and your exhibitors to make money on Foursquare pictures—this must be done or the transaction is not completely profitable. M. H. Hoffman has a reputation—he can do what he says—and will—let him outline his policy in detail as well as quoting prices. Write or wire today.

It throbs with the sincerity of Edgar Lewis's earnestness. It glistens with the brilliancy of his insight.

"The Bar Sinister" is one of the biggest pictures of the season. The exhibitors may depend upon its drawing under any and all conditions.

Edgar Lewis's "The Bar Sinister" is superb; a worthy addition to his long line of successes.

One of the few big features of the year.

A directorial triumph.

Its masterful and vigorous direction and vivid story make "The Bar Sinister" a photoplay distinctly above the average, and which, once viewed, will make the viewer want to see it the second time.

"The Bar Sinister" helps to elevate the motion picture industry to a height and dignity new in its history. Superlative direction, extraordinary photography, and a human story have set a standard in "The Bar Sinister" which Edgar Lewis may hope to match, but not beat.

A remarkable picture, tense and appealing, with touches of humorous pathos and comedy. It leaves the onlooker with a pleasant sense of having seen life as it is.

"The Bar Sinister" is one of the best things that has ever been seen on the screen.

Author and director are deserving of sincere congratulations. Mr. Kelly's story contains a strong human appeal and an unbroken list of expert characterizations. Mr. Lewis has transferred the scenario to the screen with a fine appreciation of its attractive possibilities and the result is well nigh flawless.

"... worthy in every respect of its multiple reelage,... Leaves one impressed by its bigness... cannot be judged by the reviewer's usual blind "the average."... Superlatives are justified.

It is a feature that will have a tremendous drawing power.

Mr. Lewis wishes to acknowledge his indebtedness to the artists, photographer and technical staff, who, by their untiring efforts helped to make "The Bar Sinister" the success it is.

LOOKING IS BELIEVING
A Million in Minneapolis

There are those who believe that, some day, this industry will have one concern, a sort of American News Company, to distribute its films.

Minneapolis seems to point a big finger to this, or to some other radically new scheme of distribution.

Our correspondent there has compiled some figures—and they are startling, even to those who know of Minneapolis as a top-heavy exchange center.

In the Northwest territory, which Minneapolis serves, there are still less than 4,000 picture theatres.

There are forty exchanges serving these theatres, or one to about each one hundred theatres.

These exchanges employ 1,200 persons. Of these one hundred are traveling salesmen, or one salesman to each forty theatres. This sales force exceeds that of any of the leading businesses and industries of this section.

These exchanges occupy a combined floor space of sixty-three thousand square feet; more than that occupied by the leading wholesalers of groceries furnishing a very large part of the daily food of the people of this district; more than that of the several largest milling concerns furnishing flour for the world; more than that of a large interstate railroad serving the freight and passenger demands of this same territory of the Northwest.

An official of this railroad declares that more literature is distributed by the picture exchanges than by all the railroads entering Minneapolis.

And there’s a vital point involved here: This literature doesn’t reach the box-office public except in the form of heralds circulated in dark theatres, unread, and thrown to the floor; it goes for the most part to the employees of the exchanges and of the theatres.

It is not publicity—to the end of increasing the box-office receipts; it is for a considerable part an unnecessary expense to be tacked on to the already big middle-man cost.

Here’s a pretty situation.

One million dollars a year won’t cover the distribution cost of Minneapolis.

The positive print has to bear this tax, and the burden falls in some proportion upon both exhibitor and exchange. In many cases the film rental received cannot cover the high cost of handling the print.

Why this big middleman waste?

Why not a common roof over this enterprise—as in other businesses—and the consequent elimination of much overhead, together with greatly decreased costs in handling.

Why not a centralized market place for the exhibitor?

We are fully aware of the argument that individual film needs individual salesmanship.

Very true—true of all lines of merchandise.

But individual roofs are not needed; nor do the varieties of goods in any other line have them.

Let the selling effort go on—though, surely, a salesman isn’t needed for every forty theatres. Let us have selling competition. We will have it, anyway. It is necessary and beneficial. But why not the lessened cost and increased efficiency of a well-ordered, single clearing-house?

Distribution cost is a great drain to-day, so great that other lines of waste seem small by comparison. We are trying to check lots of them while the big leak goes merrily on.

The distribution fault is a great one. It makes other defects, such as wrong selling policies. It creates hostility between exhibitor and producer.

Who will clear the way for the clearing-house—for the common roof over exchange centers?

Wm. A. Johnston.
Speaking Editorialy:

Preaching at the Exhibitor

The president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is reported to have stated before a gathering of exhibitors in Seattle that the distributor is the natural-born enemy of the exhibitor.

If this statement was made, it is enough, in our opinion, to disqualify any man as leader of any exhibitor organization.

The exchange man is not the enemy of the exhibitor, nor is the exhibitor the enemy of the exchange man.

We hold no brief in this particular instance for either exhibitor, producer, or distributor, but we do affirm that neither is the enemy of the other. It is high time that the preaching of such nonsense was stopped.

Exhibitors will be wary of the man who preaches either love or hatred at him. That is a well-worn device of the politician.

Producers and exhibitors neither love nor hate each other. They are business associates—that's all. They should be business friends, because their prosperity is interdependent.

If they are not business friends it is because of the fundamental faults of the business. Each is oppressed by them; neither is wholly to blame.

Let the man who honestly and conscientiously addresses the exhibitor tell him how these business faults may be corrected—if he knows how. Let him talk business—the exhibitors' business.

But at least let him stop preaching rancor and business anarchy.

The Other Half Per Cent

"Inety-Nine and one-half per cent. of this industry is decent," said Wm. A. Brady the other day, "and the other half per cent. ought to be thrown into the Hudson River."

We agree with Mr. Brady, and suggest that the immemorial have been made a permanent one.

We have this one-half per cent. with us. It makes objectionable pictures. It has no principles, no honesty, no ability, no knowledge of the picture market. It is sordid, ignorant, and dirty-handed. It doesn't dare look the rest of the industry in the face. It is skulking, cowardly—a plain and festering parasite.

Censorship is not needed to eliminate this scurf. But regulation is demanded; and that regulation should and can come right from this industry, without any outside interference whatsoever. We've got to do it, however, and the sooner we begin the less legislative fights we shall face.

Intolerance!

The motion picture certainly catches it.

Recently we had the rare spectacle of a large lobby of clergymen assailing the picture with uncured malice and bitterness.

Now comes Mary Ahern, editor of Public Libraries, who says it is the worst menace of the day because in its "insidious, quiet way" it attracts the young people—away from libraries, we presume.

We have an increasing respect for the saloon-keeper. The motion picture has hurt his business far more than the business of the church or the library, yet he hasn't attacked it—as yet, not openly, at least.

New Rental Policies

The most striking sign of the times, in the picture business, is the serious effort being made to provide a more elastic system of film rentals.

The effort is quite general. Some big distributors are foremost in it. Some new companies make this their basic policy.

Motion Picture News has for some time been interested in the problem. A serious consideration of the question of longer runs has led us to believe and to state editorially that a change, radical or otherwise, from the hard and fast specifications of program booking was necessary if longer runs were to be made possible in a large way.

The advertising pages of this issue show plainly the trend. It is a sane and healthy development.

Specialize!

Charles Pathe gives a striking presentation in this issue of the present photoplay situation. We recommend a thoughtful reading by everyone—since it concerns everyone whom the motion picture concerns.

To our mind this is the widest angled and most logical appeal we have as yet read for that end desired by all who have at heart the best interest of the motion picture—namely, fewer pictures and better pictures.

To this end Mr. Pathe—and his long and vital experience add much weight to his words—insists upon specialization—specialization in scenarios, production, and distribution. It is especially interesting to note his vigorous separation of production and distribution.

We might add another specialization—namely, specialization in the exhibition of pictures. We cannot have fewer and better pictures until we have longer runs. And we cannot have longer runs until pictures are sold so that longer runs will be made possible—which in turn demands specialization in the selling of pictures.

The Latham Loop Decision

It is a striking commentary upon the swift and forgetful advance of this industry that an issue once so thrilling and vital as the Latham Loop patent case should now, when finally settled, receive less attention than the latest flop of a sky-salaried star.

The outcome of this lawsuit once involved the business interests of all exhibitors and the very existence of many producers.

It is only fair to state and emphasize the fact that the Universal Film Manufacturing Company instituted and successfully finished this long and hard-fought action in the interests of the majority, unaided whatsoever, and solely at its own expense.

Profits vs. Patriotism

An interesting sidelight on America's entrance into the war is the complaint that several pictures, produced when the United States was a neutral and opposed to war on abstract grounds, are now found to be contrary to the national spirit.

It is pleasant to know that the producers are unanimous in saying that if the films are found guilty of discouraging enlistment, they will be withdrawn.
TWO hundred representative film men journeyed to Albany last Thursday morning to make a strenuous effort at killing the Wheeler Bill, which was before the Senate Judiciary Committee, where it now rests. Two hundred film men returned to New York last Thursday evening with the opinion generally expressed through the corridors of the long special train that the Wheeler Bill would secure a favorable report from the Senate committee.

"We have but one hope," said one film man, who expressed the sentiment of many. "Our fight rests in the hands of the exhibitors—the men on the ground. If he will pound, pound, pound—quickly and strongly—at his local legislators we can kill this obnoxious bill."

"If a day is lost the bill will come out of the committee with a favorable report, and go to the floor of the Senate and Assembly. If an avalanche of protest from exhibitors and prominent local citizens piles on in Albany immediately we can possibly kill it in committee, and simply prevent the action in the abbreviated days that are left before the close of the session."

Following this plan of campaign, the National Association on Friday sent broadcast appeals for speedy action to the exhibitors of New York State. "There is no time to lose," said the report from Executive Secretary Frederick H. Elliott. "Communicate at once with every business connection, relative or friend you have in the State, requesting that they write or wire to their Senators and Representatives urging them to call upon the members of the Judiciary Committee, protesting against the license-tax bill."

Thursday's hearing was featured by a ringing address delivered by William A. Brady, president of the National Association. "Tax all entertainment and we're with you, body and soul," he said. "Tax the cab-resulting in the impossibility of imposing the tax. I've been in the industry over forty years. I know its purpose, for he rested his entire case on the sworn testimony of film men taken at the hearings in New York. Declaration made by Benjamin B. Hampton, formerly of General Film, and Frank Marion, of Cooper, that every film company were found. A complete list follows:

"But it the State needs money we are willing to stand our share, only don't make us pay it all. Are we outlaws? Look us over! Do we look like criminals? Why levy taxes that will find their way only to the shoulders of poor insignificant devils who are striving with small picture shows to clear twenty dollars a week and working eighteen and twenty hours a day to get it."

Martin W. Littleton, who appeared on behalf of the Association's Censor Committee, and P. A. Powers, of Universal, also made telling speeches. Mr. Littleton condemned the bill as in violation of Article 5, Section 8, of New York's Constitution, which prohibits the delegation to any one agency of the power of absolute regulation over any business. "Never," he declared, "have I seen a bill which imposed such lofty heights of regulation. Never has a legitimate business—not an outlaw business, mind you—faced such an appalling attempt at autocratic control."

"This bill will cost me $27,000 annually, and the plain fact is that I am not making money enough in my New York exchanges to pay it," was the statement of P. A. Powers, appearing for the exchange interests.

"In addition, this bill is a tax on capital, on the very tools of the industry, and not a tax on either profits or incomes. It is a tax on the initiative and the desire to do business in New York State."

The American rights to "The Manx Man," the photoplay produced in England by George Lorne Tucker, have been purchased by Henry J. Brock.

"The Manx Man" is already being shown in England. "The Manx Man" is based upon the novel by Hall Caine.
Jaxon Film Adopts Merchandising Sales Plan

Pokes and Jabs One-Reel Comedies to Be Sold as Merchandise—Flexible Contracts Give Exchanges Better Opportunity

A DEPARTURE from conventional methods of film distribution has been made by the Jaxon Film Corporation, the producers of the single-reel "Pokes and Jabs" comedies which feature Bob Burns and Walter Stull. The Jaxon Company announced that the exchanges that are to handle the pictures would not be required to contract for the territorial right to the pictures for any specified length of time, but that they would be at liberty to discontinue handling them at any time they did not prove entirely satisfactory.

Under this arrangement the exchange purchases as many prints as are required for the territory served by that office.

The Jaxon Company will sell the pictures as long as the exchange abides by the terms of sale and the restrictions regarding territory. The producer also agrees to secure for the exchange territorial protection in its district.

The letter sent to the exchanges by the Jaxon Film Corporation announcing this new plan says in part:

"No producer of motion pictures that are released regularly, either on a program or on the open market, has ever attempted to sell his product on a business basis. We sell the pictures to you as the producer of any other product sells to his jobbers, and only as long as you care to buy them. While you are buying the pictures you will have absolute protection in your territory. We require a two weeks' notice of intention to discontinue handling our productions and a deposit to cover the two weeks' purchase of prints—beyond that, nothing. The producers of "Hats, I's, And, or Buts" in this proposition. We're putting our business on the same common sense basis on which every other well-founded business is conducted."

One of the officials of the Jaxon Film Corporation said:

"The exchanges all over the country have expressed great satisfaction with our system of distribution. Harry Schwalbe, of the Electric Theatre Supply Company of Philadelphia, advised the Board of Directors that this step as a most equitable arrangement between manufacturer and distributor, and one that inspires the exchange man with great confidence in the future quality of the "Pokes and Jabs" pictures. This sentiment has been echoed by exchange men from all sections, and we feel that our plan, though quite radical, will be a success."

Parents Blamed If Children Attend Los Angeles Shows

If a Los Angeles child goes to see a harmful picture in the future, it is probable its parents will be prosecuted, as the Los Angeles City Council plan to place the responsibility on the parents, and not the exhibitors. This proposed legislation is the outcome of the protest filed by the Los Angeles exhibitors, asking for the repeal of an ordinance which prohibited children under fourteen years of age from attending theatres unless accompanied by parents or guardians. With the repeal of this ordinance, early last week, the statute books of the city were cleared of all legislation pertaining to motion picture theatres that was found objectionable to the interest of motion pictures and the public generally.

"Wowsers" Try to Close "T" Australia House

With the statement that the class of pictures screened in the Lyceum Hall, Sydney, were unfit subjects for a hall that is used at times for religious services, the recent Methodist Conference in Sydney endeavored to prevent this theatre from being leased further as a photoplay house. A pamphlet was issued drawing attention to the objectionable features, the scenes specified in most cases being fights, struggles and compromising situations—but the criticism applied to the films was in no way justified.

The board of trustees of the Lyceum decided in favor of the lessees, Union Theatres, Ltd., and screenings of Triangle Plays continue as usual.

Omer Doud Back in Film Ranks

Omer Doud, a pioneer among motion picture publicity men and executives, after an excursion into other lines, is back in film ranks, handling the marketing of the products of the Frazier Film Corporation of Chicago. Mr. Doud, who has been in the industry for his long connection with George Kleine's interests.

Corporations of the Week

Among the new corporations reported to Motion Picture News by the Corporation Trust Company of New Jersey, are the following:

Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, incorporated in New York by Samuel Goldfish, Gabriel E. Hess and Arch Selwyn.

Prizma Film Corporation, incorporated in New York by Bud Fisher, A. A. Fisher and Wilbur A. Brook, all of New York.

Film Advertising Service, Inc., incorporated for $100,000 in New York by A. C. Keen, Karl W. Kirchwey and Jesse H. Phillips.

Frank Hall Productions, Inc., was incorporated for $125,000 in New Jersey by Frank G. Hall, George A. Enright and John B. McNamara.

Reid Motion Pictures Service Corporation, a moving picture exchange, was incorporated in New Jersey for $125,000 by Robert H. Reid, William F. Edwards and George J. Stillman.

The Lewis J. Setnick Productions, Inc., of Missouri, was incorporated at Richmond, Va., for $300,000 by John H. Bocock, James W. Mullen and Murray M. McGuire, all of Richmond, Va.

Motion Picture Advertisers Win Praise for Campaign

The work of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers in preparing for the "Wake Up America" day in cooperation with the Mayor's Committee, won such unlimited and enthusiastic approval from that committee that they insisted that the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers occupy immediately an office on the same floor with them. Their only stipulation is that the A. M. P. A. holds itself in readiness to plan and execute any publicity and advertising campaign which they have in mind.

For its part, the association has placed at the disposal of the Mayor's Committee all of the material which it has originated and put in shape so far, including posters, slides, moving picture leader and trailer, stock advertisements in proof and mat form, and the plans for the several patriotic features which it has in mind.

Exhibitor Circuit Directors Are Elected

The directors of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, organization of which was exclusively announced several weeks ago in Motion Picture News, were elected Monday.

The seven directors, who will pass upon films to be used by the circuit members are: Fred Dahmken, San Francisco; T. L. Tally, Los Angeles; Aaron Jones, Chicago; Harry Schwalbe, Philadelphia; Robert Lieber, St. Louis; A. Hulsey, Dallas, and S. L. Rothnagle, New York.

Scientists View Prizma Films

National Issue When Pennsylvania Calls 3 Films Unpatriotic

Pennsylvania has raised an issue of national importance in criticizing three films on the supposition that they contain scenes or themes which will influence men against enlisting. The three films are "War Brides," "Civilization," and "Patria."

On April 15, the Pennsylvania Board of Censors advised the respective representatives of the three companies that unless they voluntarily discontinued the films, they would be compelled to do so, on the ground that they tended to discourage enlistment in the United States Army and Navy.

The three producers immediately got in touch with Attorney General Francis Shank Brown, who, as ex-officio advisor of the Censorship Board, wrote the letters. Lewis J. Selznick, owner of "War Brides," did not seem to view the situation with much alarm. When a News representative asked him what he intended doing, Mr. Selznick said:

"I have received the letter, and if "War Brides" proved to be detrimental to America's spirit of patriotism, I will withdraw it not only from Pennsylvania but from every other state, without waiting to be told.

In order to determine whether or not the Pennsylvania censors are correct in their stand against the picture, I am having a national investigation made through my exchanges. Road men are ascertaining from the exhibitors what attitude the public is taking towards the picture, as regards its influence upon patriotism. This investigation will be conducted with absolute impartiality."

Later in the week Mr. Selznick told Motion Picture News that at a Board of Censors meeting in Chicago, resulting from the Pennsylvania agitation, "War Brides" has been viewed and approved. It is probable that his investigation will not be completed in time for a report to be published in this issue.

Mr. Selznick said he had no knowledge of a new development in Pennsylvania, taking the form of an edict which is said to have been issued for the suppression of "Civilization" and "War Brides." A dispatch from Pennsylvania to Motion Picture News says, that no further bookings are being taken at the exchanges for either picture.

Protest against "War Brides" is said to have been made in Kansas City, Mo., by Army and Navy Recruiting Officers, who have asked the War Department to suppress the picture, giving as their reason that it tells a story which causes women to influence their sons and sweethearts against recruiting.

The New York "Civilization" office informed Motion Picture News that "Civilization" has not stopped Pennsylvania bookings; and that, after having made a few minor deletions of scenes and alterations in titles, Attorney General Brown had said that the film was entirely satisfactory. The New York office mentioned having received a report from New Orleans, that "Civilization" had been questioned by the censors in that district, but after being passed, was passed without changes.

The representatives of Pathe informed Attorney General Brown that "Patria" had been approved by Secretary of State Lansing, with the exception of a few minor scenes which could be altered or removed easily.

It is understood, that Mr. Brown wired Secretary Lansing and that Mr. Lansing gave his approval of "Patria," if the stated changes were made. At the Pathe offices it was stated that "Patria" has resumed Pennsylvania showings.

The changes of scenes and titles of "Patria" do not alone affect Pennsylvania but all of the United States."

A copy of the letter that Attorney General Brown sent to the producers of "Patria," "Civilization," and "War Brides," follows:

"I am informed that the exhibition of the film entitled ( ) is having been the cause of a hearing held behind closed doors at the Mayor's office last week, and the reported calling to account of W. F. Rudolph, manager for Zambreno and Dunn."

It is said that the censor board took objection to reference to the fact that the picture had been weeks in passing some censor bodies. It is understood that Mr. Rudolph was ordered to discontinue the style of ads he had been running.

AN INDEX OF VALUE!

A complete index to all pictures released during April, with references to the reviews and music charts, will be found on Page 2868 of this issue. This handy film guide is a permanent feature of Motion Picture News that you should file for constant reference. The index to May's releases will appear in the issue dated June 2nd.

An Import Tax on Films in Australia

Under the provisions of a new act passed in Australia, every film, be it one, two or three reels on ever a five-hundred-foot cartoon subject, are subject to a new tax of five shillings ($1.25) each film.

In addition to this duty, the company importing the subject must submit a detailed synopsis of every film, even the gazettes and one-reel comedies. When the synopses have been inspected by the censor, and the duty paid, the importer is allowed to release the film. This act has only recently been enforced, but it has already proved troublesome enough.

Jack Johnson, Ex-Champion, Is Now Spanish Film Agent

Jack Johnson, ex-champion heavyweight fighter of the world, has entered the motion picture industry in Spain, as an independent territorial salesman. His headquarters are at Barcelona, where he is now making his residence.

The first subject to be handled by the ex-pugilist are the releases of the Lincoln Motion Picture Company, which contain two and two-reel subjects. In both of these productions negroes play all roles. The stories pertain to the uplift of the colored race.

It can be safely said that film "pirating" with these films is not likely to occur in the vicinity of Barcelona, Spain.

Edison Takes Stand Against "Scenario Schools"

A campaign on the part of the large motion picture producing concerns, to be directed against the scores of fake scenario writing schools that are operating throughout the country and that are making victims of thousands of people of little means, is advocated by L. W. McChesney, manager of the studios of Thomas A. Edison, Inc., who asserts that the concern with which he is connected will be glad to take a prominent part in the movement of a character that may be organized.

Unless such a campaign is set under way, an active effort to secure the conviction of some of these swindlers, who are compelling large numbers of poor and comparatively ignorant people out of their hard-earned savings, is going to be made directly by the Edison Company through the U. S. Post Office Department.
Wm. M. Lewis Now Treasurer of Educational Films
Former President of Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company Buys Interest in Educational Film Corporation—Will Broaden Educational Field

WILLIAM MITCHELL LEWIS, founder and president of the Mitchell-Lewis Motor Company, which was his main business interest until last year, Mr. Lewis started to look the industries of the country over with a view of making a considerable investment. The motion picture industry, as the newest and fastest growing, appealed to Mr. Lewis very strongly, so he selected the Educational Films Corporation of America for his business activities.

"It is not altogether certain," said E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation of America, "as to whether we shall have Mr. Lewis' active attention immediately."

"This is due to the national crisis, and it is understood, that, because of Mr. Lewis' military experience as Captain of Volunteers in the Spanish-American War, he will be called upon to fill an important post, should the volunteer system be adopted."

Mr. Lewis, when interviewed, said:

"I like the motion picture business, and I like the field that Mr. Hammons has developed so notably the best of all, and was glad to get the chance of making possible the enlargement of his business.

"We are now in a position to purchase practically every educational negative of value that the market has to offer."

"In addition to this, we shall no longer be content to receive goods from the foreign markets only as it happens to be offered in this country, but will immediately open special agencies abroad for the purpose of collecting all good educational material that is in sight.

"All these efforts must have only one result, and that will be seen in an impetus that will push the educational moving picture ahead, and by so doing elevate the motion picture generally."

"Mr. Hammons and myself want to give you notice now of the greatest campaign both buying and selling, ever waged in behalf of half of educational films."

Film Executives See Boom to Trade in War
Freuler, of Mutual, and Berst, of Pathé, Express Optimism Over War's Influence on Pictures—Confidence Everywhere

JOHN R. FREULER of Mutual and J. Berst of the Pathé Exchange, have issued statements in order to set at ease the minds of exhibitors who may be worried over the possible influence of the war upon their business.

"Far from having anything about which to be alarmed, there is a lot for the exhibitor to expectant and hopeful about," said Mr. Freuler.

"It is my observation that anything which shakes the people out of routine, anything which tends to awaken them, also tends to help the motion picture theatre. Among the so-called luxuries and amusements the motion picture theatre, because of the extremely low price of admission as measured by the entertainment value offered, is the last to suffer in periods of financial stress."

"Meanwhile the war period promises not financial stress but general prosperity."

"The war," stated Mr. Berst, "will hasten the changes that had to come, but that, under circumstances, have been delayed for years. We all know that there is a vast amount of waste in the picture industry. Some waste is necessary to the production of good pictures, but the recklessness with which it is done, unfortunately, is the present, is a sign of an unhealthy condition within the industry. The burden falls alike upon the exhibitor, producer and distributor. The public too, suffers by reason of the poor quality of the pictures that result from carelessness and extravagance.

"The present situation means that the business will have to settle down to a solid foundation, and do it without delay. There are already many indications that this is being done.

"While I am inclined to look on the situation optimistically, I feel this is the time for the greatest possible caution. We have no thought of curtailing our activities."

Open Booking, Not State Rights, for Goldwyn
Owing to the exigencies of press time, the article entitled "Goldwyn. Will Sell All Pictures on Open Market," which appeared on page 2642 of last week's Motion Picture News, contained a regrettable error. Goldwyn has no intention of selling its product on the state rights plan, as stated in the first paragraph of the article. The slight similarity in meaning of the two terms caused the mistake.

Mr. Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, stated in the article that exhibitors will be given an opportunity to see Goldwyn productions in plenty of time to decide whether or not they are worth while.

Harry Buxbaum Promoted
Harry H. Buxbaum, formerly manager of the New York City Exchange of the General Film Company, has been promoted to the position of business manager for the General, with headquarters at 440 Fourth Avenue. Mr. Buxbaum has had many years of service with this company in various capacities and is well qualified to fill the position.

Brooks, Westinghouse Accountant, to Work Out Paralta Costs
W. H. Brooks, public accountant, latey associated with the Westinghouse Company, will be the head of the accounting department of Paralta Plays, Inc., and the Paralta Plan. Mr. Brooks has been studying the accounting systems of profit picture production and distribution during the past two years, coincidentally with the investigations of Carl Anderson, Herman Fichtenberg and Nat I. Brown as a basis for the formulating of the Paralta Plan.

Mr. Brooks has worked out a system of computing costs in connection with a production which, due allowances for contingencies, will give the producer a practical, progressive working cost sheet, showing almost to the dollar what a picture will cost, if the original script is adhered to by the director.

Mr. Brooks has also worked out distribution systems on lines that will eliminate waste and unnecessary expense. His work has been to demonstrate in figures the results of the inquiries and investigations made by Messrs. Anderson, Fichtenberg and Brown. Whenever they have developed a feature of waste in the moving picture industry Mr. Brooks has been called upon for consultation, and has been a specialist in studying and applying a corrective. Mr. Brooks' work will have a very conspicuous place in the development of the Paralta Plan.

Leah Baird's Gown Creates Excitement at Ball
The first appearance of Leah Baird, at the head of the grand march at the Movie Charity Ball last Monday, April 16, created an excited buzz throughout the feminine members of the audience. The cause of this proved to be the creation Miss Baird wore. The leaders of the march were Leah Baird and Earl Williams, Virginia Pearson and Roscoe Arbuckle, and the sweeping train of Miss Baird almost proved the undoing of "Fatty" several times when he stepped too close to the front.

The gown was canary yellow, with black slashes and jet black bead strands over shoulder and arms, A huge bouquet of American Beauty roses, intermingled with small American flags completed the ensemble and the many admirers of Leah Baird had cause to squeal.

Starting in the motion picture business at the age of eighteen, Miss Baird has spent five consecutive years in the realm of stardom.

Philadelphia Salesmen's Body in Embryo
At a meeting of the Philadelphia Motion Picture salesmen held last week at the Fox Exchange, a committee consisting of J. and G. Smith of Metro and G. W. Booth of Fox, was appointed to draft a suitable Constitution and by-laws for a permanent organization, which is proposed to call the Philadelphia Motion Picture Salesmen's League. It is hoped, that this number comprising practically the whole selling force of Philadelphia exchanges.
Zukor Absorbs Artcraft; Open Bookings for All Films

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Now Controls Artcraft—Paramount to Release all Pictures on Open Booking Plan—Change Takes Effect August 5—Statement by Zukor

AFTER long deliberation, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has announced its intention of releasing all pictures on the open booking plan, beginning August 5. The releasing medium will continue to be Paramount.

Simultaneous with the announcement is another which has been expected for some time, that Famous Players-Lasky would absorb the Artcraft Pictures Corporation of which Walter E. Green is, and will continue to be, president.

By this step one of the greatest groups of producing and stellar personalities that has ever been associated with the screen will be offered to exhibitors under a plan that is said to promise economies of a material sort. It will make possible, through an arrangement of releasing the Artcraft productions, for any or all exhibitors to show Artcraft attractions without舍lying any of the Paramount releases. In other words, the release dates of the two distributing organizations will be so arranged that there will be no conflict.

"For this important action we have been laying definite plans for many months," said Mr. Zukor. "I feel personally that this is the most important announcement that has been addressed to exhibitors since the elaborate program system inaugurated."

Announcement is made also for the first time that the attractions which are to be presented through Artcraft Pictures Corporation will be strengthened by the addition of some notable names. To the list that includes the plays starring Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks and George M. Cohan, there will be new productions by Cecil B. De Mille, in which Geraldine Farrar will appear as the star, the new series of plays starring Elsie Ferguson, and the personally directed pictures made by D. W. Griffith, which will be started on his return from England. The Paramount group of film stars will consist of the stars who have led its program and several new ones as well. The roster includes Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Mme. Petrova, Marie Doro, Billy Burke, Fannie Ward, Margaret Illington, Mae Murray, Sensie Hayakawa, Jack Pickford and Louise Huff, Vivian Martin, George Beban, Wallace Reid and Kathryn Williams, Ann Pennington and others to be announced as engaged.

The acquisition of Artcraft Pictures Corporation by Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which some months ago gained control of Paramount, will not mean an amalgamation of the two big distribution bodies, Mr. Zukor explained. Their individuality will be clearly indicated to the public as well as to the exhibitor. It is possible, however, under the new arrangement to create economies of a nature reaching for the exhibitor, with the privilege of selection from one or both organizations without incurring unnecessary financial obligations.

Mr. Zukor said that at the same time the plans for distribution were under discussion, the work of synchronizing the four big studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been perfected by Jesse L. Lasky, who is now in California. The Western studios will be under the supervision of Messrs. Hugh Ford and A. A. Kaufman, and the Western studios at Hollywood and Los Angeles, under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille and M. F. Hoffman.

Announcement was made by Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation, that complete information concerning the new booking plans may be obtained by all exhibitors from the Paramount Exchanges on and after May 15.

School Shows Aid Exhibitors, Says Seattle Man

A. T. Lambson, the Chicago convention Who Went on Record as Being Opposed to School and Club Shows

THAT the exhibitors who went on record at the last Chicago convention as being opposed to exchanges renting films to clubs and educational societies have an attitude of "Alice in Wonderland" with school children and educational associations, is the opinion of A. T. Lambson, a prominent exchange man of Seattle.

"I am certainly surprised that any sane exhibitor or exchange man should take this attitude," said Mr. Lambson in an interview for MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "We have proved beyond a possible doubt that this is one of the greatest makers of motion picture fans that the trade has ever had, owing to the fact that there are so many narrow minded people who have never been in picture shows, and still believe that it is only run by the devil, but when the Parent Teachers' Association or the Mothers' Clubs go behind the pictures and get this class of people in to see just what the pictures are they will convert them into moving picture fans.

"Sometime ago, while with Pathe I made a specialty of selling this class of programs to the exhibitor in order to build up his Saturday matinee business. I can cite a special instance, the Dream theatre at Aberdeen, Washington, wherein the manager of the theatre more than tripled his business on Saturday by putting on children's programs, selecting, of course, only pictures that were high class and clean, educational and entertaining.

"The Rogers school, Billings, Montana, is another theatre that went into this very heavy, and I believe they are continuing same at the present time, having established this program on each Saturday with the co-operation of the Children's Clubs and the Parent Teachers' Association, and has made it a permanent feature of his theatre, using the program every Saturday afternoon.

"In Seattle at the present time the Parent Teachers' Association is commencing a performance in the Moore theatre: this is the legitimate theatre in Seattle, wherein all large road attractions play, using such subjects as "Alice in Wonderland" with school children and educational associations, and small little comedies. They are also using a number of the residential houses to take care of the residential district. They are also giving these performances in the Tacoma theatre at Tacoma.

"We know that there is not a single exhibitor in the city of Seattle or Tacoma, who will say that these programs are detrimental to his business, or that they draw away his business from him. In fact they are so handled that they are continuously creating more interest in the motion picture business as a whole and bringing in new fans so that the end who are trying to run their houses on a high class plan are deriving a great amount of benefit from the extra efforts put forth by the Parent Teachers' Association and the Mothers' Clubs to get children, and especially the older women interested in the motion pictures.

"The programs as a whole used by these people are such that they do not interfere with any exhibitor, for the reason that if they want to see a special picture that is being shown in any special theatre, they must go to that theatre to see it, and if they take a chance on waiting to see it shown at one of these Parent Teachers' Associations programs, the chances are they never would be able to see this type of picture, owing to the fact that the programs are picked with extreme care there is nothing in any of the pictures that could be the least bit offensive.

"My office is going to make a special effort to cater to this class of business, and is going to quote the Parent Teachers' Associations and the Mothers' Clubs throughout our territory a price on service that will justify them in using the programs more extensively, and in every way, you should have an inquiry from our territory as to where these programs can be gotten, I certainly would thank you to notify the person inquiring, that the Lambson Film Exchange, Inc., has gone on record as wanting to help them, help them, shape and form. Would like to hear what some of the other exchanges have to say regarding this matter.

Triangle Praised for Killing Deposit System

EXHIBITORS' associations were quick to respond to W. W. Hodkinson's announcement, through R. W. France, general manager of the Triangle Distribution Corporation, that that concern would substitute a nominal bond for the burdensome advance deposit system. The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New Jersey wrote a letter to Mr. France, from which the following extracts are taken:

"Permit me to extend my congratulations to you upon the adoption, by your company, of the plan to abolish the Deposit System. It is a marked mile-stone in the development of better relations between the producer and the consumer, and, while it does not go far enough, and is still tinged with the distrustful idea that the crooked exhibitor dominates the industry, it is so far in advance of the present methods, that I have no doubt that the immediate results will be a closer relation between your firm and the exhibitor, reflected in a corresponding increase of business for your corporation.

"It has long been a question, in the mind of every student of this question who has given any time or consideration to its various angles, whether the underlying principle involved in the exacting of a deposit was honestly presented.

"I sincerely trust, Mr. France, that this letter will prove to you, as well as to your exhibitor, the value of any effort made in his behalf. I can honestly say to my fellow exhibitors, that, without holding any brief for the Triangle company or any one else, nevertheless, expediency should teach us to patronize and assist those worthy, and discourage, and drive out of the business, the leeches who thrive on the business blood of their victims.

"Wishing you all success in your new association with the Triangle Company, I have the honor to be,

"Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) "H. CHAS. HESPE,
"Pres., M. P. Exhib. League of N.J.

The following telegram from the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Chicago also shows that the new policy is meeting with full appreciation there:

"We fully appreciate the action of Triangle in abolishing deposits and substituting bond at nominal cost to exhibitors. We commend you for this progressive step."

Blumenthal Ready to Buy Any American Film

Back on American soil after his fourth trip abroad since the European war started, Mr. Blumenthal is now on his way to New York. The Australasian Film Company will use a new Cub subject each week indefinitely.

New York, this week concluded negotiations with the Australasian Film Company for the sale of Cub Comedies to that firm. Mr. Blumenthal is ready to bid for the foreign rights to any American-made film. Although an American, Mr. Blumenthal has spent many years in Europe, and is now fully appreciated in business, about five of which have been devoted to films. He speaks most of the Continental languages.

He will also exploit in this country productions on which he has arranged to secure the American rights from abroad. Of these, he says: "The American market is now in about the same condition as Europe was before the war. A production stood on its merits alone, and sold like other commodities on the commercial sample basis. I do not think that the current theory about foreign films being in disfavor will hold water if the foreign picture happens to be of better than ordinary quality. I intend to prove it by showing foreign-made pictures to the trade, and the Australasian will bear spectacular exploitation with as good reason as any made here."

From his headquarters in Paris Mr. Blumenthal saw film possibilities broadly enough to, not only conduct branch offices in the large cities of Europe, but he also sent representatives to Mexico, Argentine and Brazil. He acquired the entire output rights to the products of Cines and Milano, which found him before the war to be the largest exporter in Europe. His last trip abroad was to arrange for several Cines productions in America, the first of which he has already sold to A. H. Woods, but it is not policy to divulge its nature until the film arrives in this country.

Mr. Blumenthal is now negotiating for the complete outputs of a number of American manufacturers.

Bruner Goes with Hampton

Frank V. Bruner has resigned his position as publicity director with the General Film Company to take charge of publicity and advertising for the Rex Beach Pictures Company. Mr. Bruner is more innovatively new in the motion picture field, Mr. Bruner has been successful in handling the publicity for the General.

"The Auction Block" is now being filmed at the company's Weehawken Studio. The work will be started shortly on another of the Rex Beach novels, all of which are to be made into ten-reel features by the Rex Beach Company.

Before entering the picture field Mr. Bruner was identified with many theatrical concerns and has handled important attractions for Charles Frohman, Oliver Morasco, H. B. Harris and Selwyn & Co.

Goldfish in New York World

An interesting interview with Samuel Goldfish, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, appeared on the "celebrities" page of the New York Sunday World, Sunday, April 15.

Mr. Goldfish recounted various of his experiences before and after entering the motion picture business, and pointed out the possible ways in which the industry may seek and find its logical level. He remarked, among other things, that as far as development in the industry is concerned, the surface has only been scratched.

Lack of Scenario Specialization the Greatest Menace

By Charles Pathe

Chevalier of the Legion of Honor—Head of the House of Pathe

Motion pictures are passing through a serious crisis. This condition is not local, but exists everywhere—in France, America, England and Italy. In every country the cause of the condition is the same and in every country, in proportion to the importance of the business done, the effect is the same. It is, therefore, more serious in America than elsewhere. The root of the evil lies in the scenario end of the business, and there only.

Knowing the cause of the trouble it might seem that the remedy would be simple and easily applied. This is not so, however, and it is the duty of those publications that depend either wholly or in part upon the motion picture business to indicate the remedy to the producers.

The dividends paid to their stockholders by the American motion picture companies are insignificant, if any at all, first because the capital invested in this industry is so large, and, secondly, and of greater importance, because there is an overproduction of negatives; thirdly, because the written scenarios, as in other countries, are not sufficiently well thought out, and lastly because the profits from good productions are wiped out by other negatives of little or no value which, not withstanding the large demand of the American market, are not profitable because of the excessive quantity.

In America, as in France and elsewhere it is customary to divide the enormous general expenses of the motion picture industry over an exaggerated footage in order to care for the high cost of production.

The production of negatives would be reduced at least 50 per cent, if each producer would understand the necessity of studying with more care each of the 200 or 300 scenes which make up a four or five reel photoplay. The producer, in the interest of the author and the distributor as well as his own, would attain a standard of good quality if he would make it a rule to only undertake the production of a scenario when convinced of its eventual success. Naturally he might sometimes be in error, but even if it were not a masterpiece his picture would at least be an interesting work rather than a mere triviality.

This would result in a considerable decrease of the production of negatives, and would increase in the same proportion the income from each negative.

All the scenarios which I have had the occasion to read were, in my opinion, not sufficiently developed. Nothing should be left for the director to improvise. It is my belief that development which each four or five reel scenario requires should constitute sufficient material for a volume of 200 to 250 pages in octavo.

By the adoption of this system the motion picture author will write two or three scenarios per year, for he may neglect the literary quality or style of his work, and the time so gained may be spent on the details which should be given to each picture.

The detailed description of a motion picture requires a much greater development than the description of a drama or comedy for the stage, the latter being rehearsed 15 or 20 times by the artists before being played in public.

The motion picture scenario should indicate the length of the scenes, the different foregrounds of the artists, the lighting effects, and the locations to be chosen. To this last the author should give particular care and sketches are sometimes necessary. In other words, everything should be put into which is likely to facilitate the work, and the director, with all the above information, will have made good use of his time if he completes four to five photoplays during a year.

In America, as well as in France and in other countries, the author, who is frequently a director, usually produces double this amount, and all the harm comes from that fact.

The director, as well as the author, is too frequently paid per scenario; in other words, per foot. It would be to the advantage of the producer to interest through royalties the director and the author in the final result of their work in a similar way as the publisher of a book associates the author with the results obtained from the publication of his work.

Without a doubt, up to the present time the restricted number of photoplay authors having sufficient knowledge of the profession, did not permit this arrangement, but I believe that the time is drawing near when these matters will be considered from the point of view I mention.

I notice with pleasure that in France and America the number of intelligent producers who are really interested in our art has increased in appreciable proportions, and I think the time is not far off that a co-operative association of authors, directors and producers will write scenarios direct and produce negatives which the distributors will send out on the market in close collaboration.

The time is past when producers were both authors and businessmen. With the exception of travelogues, educational and scenes, which require important and special material, they will be obliged to look to one who adapts scenarios from stories (scenario writers), pending the time when there will be real authors for motion pictures.

The time has come where the distributor must take care of his own line, which is totally different from that of the producer. Each of these professions requires particular experience and knowledge.

To combine in one person the distributor with the producer, what would one say if McClure, Doubleday Page, or other publishers wished to write works similar to those of Anatole France, Marcel Prevoast, Edmond Rostand, Kipling, Winston Churchill, and Henry James, authors with whom they may have contracts by which the writers bring their special talent in exchange for the business training and ability of the publishers.

This would evidently be ridiculous, and still this is exactly what has been done up to the present time in our industry and this must be stopped.

But you will say, the motion picture author requires financial assistance to proceed with his work. Marcel Prevoast and Anatole France write works at small cost, which to put into photoplays would require an advance of not less than 50,000 francs ($10,000).

Until a co-operative association be created the distributors could advance capital to the producers with whom they are connected, of course with certain precautions. There are certain producers, of whom I know several, who could easily obtain the assistance of distributors.

As far as I am concerned, I would be disposed to consider offers and to make some if the producers who would associate themselves with me could come to the idea that it is greatly to their interest to produce well rather than to produce much.

Our industry would then be for some time, if not for always, on a sound basis if the exhibitor was willing to associate his interests with those of the producer and distributor, paying for his program in proportion to the receipts which he realizes; in other words, on a percentage basis to be determined upon, following the same system used for the legitimate stage.

My conclusions, as you see, are very different from the results of recent investigations, where it has been decided that the chief handicap of the business was "lack of capital."

There is only one way to fight effectively against overproduction—produce well, and, better still, more than well.

Attendance Poor in Kansas

The war, the weather, and the prospective shortage in the Kansas wheat crop, are uniting to reduce the patronage of Exhibitors not pessimistic, but they are hoping for weather which will help to guarantee good production of crops yet to be planted.
"Watch the Orient," Says Film Man from East

D. P. Howells Returns from Asia with Interesting Message for American Film Producers—Far Eastern Countries Deserve Better Treatment

D. P. HOWELLS, who has returned to New York after a stay of ten months in India, China and Japan, has a word to say to American film producers who desire to exploit their works in the Far East.

Mr. Howells believes that America is neglecting a rich field in the Orient. The neglect, he says, is due to their under-estimation of the real value of that territory.

In a talk with a Motion Picture News representative, Mr. Howells said:

"The independent film salesman has a pretty hard row to hoe in the Orient, because he is not sure to what extent the producer will protect him. Producers sell films in China, Japan and India at a low rate and make no pretense of protecting the territories."

"Another error that should be corrected is the habit of American producers to ask higher prices for such territories as India than the American representatives in England demand."

The general conditions in the oriental territory, according to Mr. Howells, are improving. The native public is becoming educated to pictures. The demand is growing, interest is extending to new territories. Cheaper admission price, due to the low wages paid natives, is one drawback.

"Not many of China's four hundred million will enjoy motion pictures," said Mr. Howells, "until better means of protection are afforded theatre owners. Picture shows exist only in treaty ports, and attempts to open theatres in the interior cities are almost always disastrous."

Mr. Howells went on to say that the conditions in Japan are healthy, as far as Japanese producers are concerned.

"As soon as American producers invent some new type of picture, the Japs hasten to imitate it. Japan has several producing companies, including a Japanese Charlie Chaplin company. A demand continues to exist for sensational American films."

In fact, the Oriental demand is limited almost exclusively to sensational pictures. The Eastern mind, with its peculiar viewpoint, cannot grasp the meaning of American sex pictures. The moral code of the East is different from that of the West. For example, a wealthy Chinese of Shanghai once saw a picture in which an American, after providing luxuries for his wife, paid attentions to a lady of the vampire type. His duplicity was the central idea of the play.

"My Chinese friend, after viewing the picture, said: 'I don't understand this thing. The gentleman gave his wife a fine home and all luxuries. Why should any object to his taking another wife if he could afford it?'

Goldwyn Charts America on Film Rental Basis

The Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has conducted a thorough investigation of the country in order to obtain accurate data upon the motion picture value of various territories, all of which heretofore have been sold on a "catch-as-catch-can" basis. It is interesting to note that the investigation which has just been completed by Goldwyn is directly in accord with the editorial suggestion made by William A. Johnston several weeks ago in the New York Times. Mr. Johnston pointed out the folly of selling territories on the present plan, and indicated the necessity of complete knowledge of territorial conditions and values.

In a statement issued from the Goldwyn office, it was declared that one of the most important findings of the investigation was that no fixed tariff for film rentals is adhered to in any section.

Goldwyn, according to its announcement, intends to produce pictures far above the average, and they will not be cheap rental productions. The chief intention of Goldwyn is to obtain the greatest possible distribution, and to keep the films in circulation as long as the territories are active.

This explains the basic reason for Goldwyn's efforts to rechart America on a scientific salesmanship basis. All cities and towns in all of the film distribution territories are being catalogued for rentals on the basis of actual conditions in the communities themselves. To illustrate: Des Moines or Milwaukee each has a status of its own that is determined by Des Moines or Milwaukee conditions and the conditions in Dallas, Tex., or Barre, Vt., are purely local and cannot be approximated or "averaged" by merely striking certain levels for the country at large.

When this task of price-cataloguing America has been completed Goldwyn expects to possess a tariff as complete and thorough as are the railroad rate tariffs established by the Interstate Commerce Commission or the Department of Commerce and Labor.

President Compliments Bioscope

The American Bioscope Company of Chicago, sent a sample of their sixty foot patriotic film with its three presidents, war hero quotation, the national anthem and a waving Stars and Stripes to the White House at Washington. The film was shown to the President, and on last Friday the American Bioscope president, J. E. Willis, received a note of thanks and congratulations for the patriotic and timely stunt.

Advertising that Keeps the Public Away from Your Theatre

By Kenneth MacGowan
Motion Picture Editor, Philadelphia Public Ledger

Editor's Note—The point of Mr. MacGowan's article is simply this: Analyze your appeal, pick out its strongest appeal, and then hammer away with that at the public. Concentrate your fire; don't scatter it. The weakest advertising line in the world is "greatest in the world," and its various equivalents.

Next week, the fourth article in the series, "Real Service That Distributors Are Anxious to Give," will appear.

Every day one sees the lobbies and fronts of theatres be-spattered with gory designs ready screaming the news of crime, infidelity, sexual attraction, danger and destruction; and trade papers find their advertising columns full of just such stuff. And every day the exhibitors who go out of business steadily increase—and big producers tell legislative committees their troubles.

Why? Because the appeal of the motion picture has, in most instances, been marketed to the public—and to the exhibitor—on the lines successfully used by the advance agent of a circus.

The exhibitor of today has to sell his films. And too many of his films cannot be sold—he dares not take the wrappings off them; 10 per cent., 20 per cent, and 23 per cent. of the audience.; 2nd, a publicity campaign which has a vitality punch conquers all.

A film; 3rd, the intelligent co-operation of the exhibitor, who should be coached to work along the lines of the plan laid down; 4th, the production of the daily change, so that producer and exhibitor alike may get the benefit of the publicity.

The man who buys a seat in a motion picture theatre takes a chance. Too often he's stung. The fact that out of twelve visits he sees eight good shows only in ten days he had received requests for 50,000 copies of the free booklet containing the first three chapters of the story. He added 10 per cent. to the paper's circulation on the day the story started. In other campaigns I have seen him run, he has added 15 per cent., 20 per cent, and 23 per cent. to the circulation of his paper by advertising serial stories—compared to which the boosting of a good film is as a Tin Lizzie beside a Pullman car.

One of Rider Haggard's old Quatermain stories. Can you imagine anything more difficult to create a stir about than a ten-year-old story published in serial form in a one-cent evening newspaper? Now watch the way Mr. Brooks gave an air of mysticism and pulling-power to his ads. See the reproduction on this page. In one week he had the town stirred up; in goes the circulation of his paper by advertising film; 3rd, the intelligent co-operation of the exhibitor, who should be coached to work along the lines of the plan laid down; 4th, the production of the daily change, so that producer and exhibitor alike may get the benefit of the publicity.

Deposits and War Cause Indiana Meeting

Mutual Insurance Organization for Protecting Theatres is Arranged

Plea to Let Exhibitors Help in War Is Sent to Governor Goodrich

A well-attended meeting of Indiana exhibitors, held in Hotel Severin, Indianapolis, last Wednesday, a substitute for the undesirable advance deposit system, a mutual insurance association, and a desire to help Governor Goodrich recruit an army for the German war were the principal topics brought up for discussion.

The association appointed a committee, composed of L. H. O'Donnell, Washington; C. R. Andrews, Muncie; H. H. Johnson, Lafayette; H. Kornblum, Evansville, and John Victor, Indianapolis, with authority to arrange for the organization of a mutual insurance company within the organization to insure and take over the insurance of the theatres and contents of members of the association, at forty to fifty per cent. less than the present underwriting rate.

The committee also was authorized to bond a company within the organization for the purpose of bonding the members of the association and guaranteeing the payment of their obligations to film companies, in a system of advance cash deposits. The committee has arranged to meet at an early date.

F. J. Herrington, former president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and now national organizer for the league, attended the meeting and delivered an address.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

Thirty-two Representatives and Alternates Picked at April 6 Meeting After Constitutional Wrangle, but Only Now Announced

The list of delegates and alternates named to represent the Illinois Exhibitors' League at the coming National Convention was announced from the Chicago League headquarters on Thursday, April 19. The entire personnel had been picked by a committee of five and elected at the State Convention held Friday, April 6, but the names were not made public until last week. One of the reasons advanced for this from one quarter, was an objection made by one of the members on the floor of the convention that the Illinois League was not entitled to that number upon the basis of its actual membership. This objection was met by a count of the membership rolls, which are said to allow sixteen delegates and the same number of alternates on the basis of one delegate for every twenty-five members and five delegates and alternates-at-large, making the twenty-one.

It was emphatically denied at the league headquarters that any of the delegates would go to the convention from Illinois, instructed as to their vote.

The alternates are: A. Balaban, Mrs. M. McFadden, Joseph Trinz, Julius Alcock, Fred W. Schaefer, Max Schacht, Julius Alcock, Charles Schwab, George Moore, Walter Johnson and Sid Selig of Chicago; W. Bradley of Ottawa; William Savage of Alton; A. Sigfried of Decatur; Harold Johnson of Jacksonville; M. M. Brun of Joliet and W. E. Burford of Aurora.

Chicago Exhibitors Move to Abolish Deposit

TIE Exhibitor's League of Chicago in a session last week again took up the question of the deposit system. The special committee, appointed some time ago, to devise ways and means for substituting another and feasible plan to replace the deposit system now existent, made a report to the meeting that was favorably voted upon and concurred in by those present. The news of the recently announced change of policy by Triangle to abolish the deposit system and substitute the bonding method of insurance against loss put a new and more sanguine face to the situation when the committee made its report.

The main plan of the Chicago League, outlined and developed before the Triangle announcement, is for much akin to Triangle's step taken to abolish the evil. In its gist, it was first aimed to make the league a sort of an automatic assurance of faith and indemnity to the exchanges. The league was to be the sponsor for all of its members. A much favored addition was then suggested to this plan, that of having a fidelity and insurance company join with the league in assuming risks. This is what the deposit committee had considered and reported on at the meeting last week when the news came of Triangle's new policy.

The announcement of the adopting of a practically similar plan by this company delighted the members of the Chicago League and they have endorsed it on all sides. It is being hailed as the first tangible step toward abolishing an evil that exhibitors all over the country have been protesting against for some time. Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago League, and who has taken a great interest recently in seeking to abolish the deposit system, said after the meeting: "The Triangle departure has put a most roseate face on the situation. It was a ray of sunshine that came unexpectedly but greatly pleasing to all exhibitors. It is now up to the exhibitor who has felt the burden and the injustice of the deposit system to back Triangle and its reform and force the other companies to adopt the same satisfactory mode of dealing. We will not drop our plans started in this direction but will keep right on working upon and putting to application the steps we have outlined."

Movie Charity Ball a Complete Social Success

THE Movie Charity Ball, held under the auspices of the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Greater New York, for the benefit of the American Red Cross, took place on Monday night, April 16, at Terrace Garden. The affair was well attended, most of those present being connected with the picture business in offices or studios. The boxes on the mezzanine floor of the Garden were contracted for by representatives of the business, and were occupied by such stars as Roscoe Arbuckle, Mitchell Lewis, Virginia Pearson, Earl Williams, Wally Van, Leah Baird, Kathryn Adams, Hobart Henley and Stuart Holmes. Mr. Arbuckle and Miss Pearson led the grand march, which was as usual the spectacle of the evening. Previous to this the professionals present were introduced from the platform. Following these formalities the dancing became general and lasted late into Tuesday morning.

The musical program for the entire evening was arranged by Samuel Rothapfel of Rialto theatre.

The heads of the various committees follow: President, Samuel H. Trigger; Chairman, Sidney Ascher; Manager, Harold W. Rosenthal; Chairman Reception Committee, Ike Haristall; Chairman Floor Committee, Morris Needles; Floor Manager, Grant W. Anson; Assistant Floor Manager, Charles Mayer; Publicity Director, Harry Reichenbach; Chairman Entertainment Committee, Samuel Rothapfel.

Convention Plans of Exhibitors of Northwest

All in Readiness for Three Day Gathering in Minneapolis—Ruling to Prevent Waste of Convention's Time—Entertainment Tickets to Be Free

In connection with the annual convention of the exhibitors of the northwest to be held at Minneapolis the first three days in May, President Gilosky has made an emphatic ruling that every exhibitor intending to bring up any matters on the convention floor must have some typewritten with a duplicate to cover every resolution or constitutional amendment. This plan has been adopted to avoid confusion and to prevent waste of time.

W. K. Howard, manager of the Vitagraph Exchange, and Harry Rathner, of the Supreme and Selznick Exchange, appeared before the exhibitors last Tuesday and each tendered a subscription of one hundred dollars to help entertain the visiting exhibitors.

At Tuesday's meeting of the Convention Committee the program for the three days' meeting was adopted, and all final details arranged.

There is to be no charge for the various entertainments this year and every exhibitor who is a member of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest, whether he lives in Montana or the Twin Cities, will receive one combination ticket admitting him to all entertainments free of charge.

Each film exchange and supply house that contributes toward the entertainment of the delegates will receive two course tickets complimentary. To others who desire to attend the entertainments the course tickets will cost $3.00.

All the trade journals will be provided with tables just outside the convention hall and their press representatives will have a long press table at their disposal inside the hall.

Plea to Organize Against Penn. Age Limit Bill

Broadcast appeal to exhibitors and leaders of the motion picture industry has been made by the Exhibitors' League of Pennsylvania, to forestall enactment of the bill prohibiting children under sixteen going to picture theatres unaccompanied by a minor, which is now before the legislature of the Keystone state. Urgent request for funds is made.

In a statement distributed broadcast, the league says the Civic and Moral societies endorsing the bill, there is required financial assistance of the exhibitors and the trade in general, as obnoxious laws are injurious to the business in general and affects every branch.

"There are many other proposed bills to look after. I just made mention of the above to attract your attention. Get in the league and help those who are helping you."

Mid-West Theatre Men Not Perturbed at War

In spite of the perturbed condition of International affairs, Motion Picture Exhibitors and Exchangemen are most optimistic over the condition of the trade throughout the Middle West. Longer runs and better pictures are gaining in popularity and motion picture houses are enjoying the same amount of patronage as in more peaceful times.

Part Proceeds to Red Cross

The Midwest Photoplay Corporation is devoting a liberal portion of gross proceeds from all Iowa bookings of "War Brides to the Red Cross Fund. Recently "War Brides" played a return engagement at The Garden theatre in Des Moines under this plan and met with unusual success.

New Stage Setting for Strand, New York

Messrs. Gates and Marange have designed for the Strand theatre, New York, a new stage set of great beauty and dignity. Traditions of architecture have been followed, yet a twentieth century up-to-dateness is apparent. A high-domed interior is the result of large vaulted arches supported by marble columns, with gold capitals, and lunettes carrying decorations especially appropriate to the time.

"The Glorification of Fraternity," showing the warring nations at peace, occupies the center lunette, while to the left "The Arts of War," and to the right "The Arts of Peace" surmount drapings of soft, rose colored velour, which open to disclose a lake of cerulean blue. Bordered by snow-capped mountains, with peaks glimpsing against a wonderful background, this is first revealed in a mysterious dawn, that gives way to the flush of morning, followed by the brilliancy of the full day-light. This in turn melts into a poetic sunset, yielding to a soft moonlight, with its romantic rays rippling in the peaceful bosom of the lake.

Complete and Modern Theatre Now Building in Chicago

Chicago will have another modernly constructed motion picture theatre added to its already long list upon the completion of Balaban and Katz's Central Park theatre in the near future. It has been in the course of construction for several months and the roof is now being put on it. It is expected to be ready for opening by October 1.

This new house is located at Twelfth street and Central Park avenue, outside the Loop, but in a high class neighborhood section. It will front on Twelfth street with a 75 foot spread, and will have a depth of 160 feet. The building will be three stories high, the floors above the ground floor to be used as offices. The interior of the house is to be reconstructed and decorated in the most modern and pleasing fashion. It is being endeavored to make it a composite of some of the best houses in the East and West, and will have a seating capacity of 2,600.

Besides the lower floor there will be a balcony with boxe boxes on both sides.

Iowa Blue Laws Advocating Sunday Closing Fail

Through the efforts of W. D. Ingledue, acting president, and W. C. Eddy, acting treasurer of the Iowa Motion Picture Exhibitors Association, who have for the past month been devoting a considerable amount of their time in lobbying against the Blue Laws, motion picture houses in Iowa will continue to exhibit on Sunday.

The Blue Laws, prohibiting exhibitions of any kind on Sundays, were opposed by Red Cross organizations in the Thirty-seventh General Assembly, but a large portion of the credit for their defeat belongs to the Iowa Motion Picture Exhibitors Association.

If you want organization work done, anywhere, note the date of Mr. Herrington's arrival in your city and write MOTION PICTURE NEWS. We will forward your letter to Mr. Herrington on the road.

Also, you can aid greatly by filling out and mailing us the coupon below. We will publish the information thus received and thereby let you and all exhibitors know the country-wide sentiment toward organization and the Chicago Convention.

This is the year to organize. It is now or never.

Make the Chicago Convention a big and representative exhibitors' gathering. Send your delegates there uninstructed. Eliminate all politics in advance.

Let the convention be a wide open one—free and able to choose the best leaders, men who will act for you and not capitalize the League for themselves.

Appoint committees who will work, and who will take up the box-office problems now confronting you, and settle them, as practical business men, to your advantage.

It can be done. And it's worth your trip to Chicago—or your delegates' trip—to see that it is done.

Indiana has just had a rousing convention. Committees were formed who will do things. This State has already won Sunday opening.

Fill out and send this coupon in to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 729 7th Avenue, New York City.

Special Story by Newspaper Reproduced as Herald

One of the most powerful exhibitor helps we have seen is a reproduction of Rev. Thomas B. Gregory's feature story on "Enlighten Thy Daughter," being used as a herald or throwaway in conjunction with the showing of this picture. Appearing to be a clipping of the New York American of January 30, 1917, the article carries a special two-column head, "Enlighten Thy Daughter, a Moral Epic." Subhead: "Most Tremendous Force for Good, ... of a picture, devising new ways and means to help the exhibitor, ends with the first run showing.

When producers realize that the second to a hundred and second showing of their pictures are what give the producer his reputation they may wake up.

"In Again, Out Again" Books Free to Exhibitor Proposition

Artcraft, in conjunction with the Britton Publishing Company, is giving away a limited number of copies of the dollar books for exhibitor co-operation. The Rialto, New York, is to give a few copies to the first patrons attending every morning, for example, and advertises the book by mention in its house program.

A large quantity of the books have been shipped to Artcraft Exchanges. The live wire who boosts the sale of this book is boosting his own business, even without the courtesy of the publishers extended in this very liberal manner.

Tin-Cam Matinee Season

Live Wires are reminded that it is spring cleaning time, when it is customary to let the kids in for a string of tin cans gleaned from the back alley. The Empress, Hollidene, Okla., has already started the ball rolling. Flies of tin cans in front of the theatre, with a prize for the biggest pile, is the best way to get real advertis- ing out of this idea. If there are different boys’ organizations in town, let them compete as clubs for the prize—then all their friends and folks will come down to see the results of the boys’ work.

Stanley Sells Tickets Subject to Agreement to Respect Flag

The Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, has found a new way of expressing patriotism. The front page of "The Stanley Theatre News" contains the following conspicuously displayed "The management desires to call attention to the fact that tickets are sold with the express understanding that the purchasers' behavior towards the President of the United States, the flag and the military forces sworn to uphold the Constitution, be respectful at all times.

This course of conduct, together with that of rising and standing at attention when the orchestra plays "The Star Spangled Banner," is not only the duty of every patriot, but it should be the pleasure of everyone to show such honor in this "time of the great war." International's publicity department is authority for the note of the "war extras," and why they should see "Joan the Woman" at the Colonial. Everyone of the envelopes was emblazoned outside in red with the phrase: "She wasn't too proud to fight!"

The Academy theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., J. H. Michael, manager, recently held a "contest," practically all the big laugh makers were there—on the scene—and it is claimed Charlie Chaplin won the "contest." Easy Street was the Chaplin comedy selected.

Flag Information as Souvenir

The Third Street theatre, Easton, Pa., recently presented its patrons with an up to the minute souvenir, explaining the customs and observances regulating the use of the flag, with special days and holidays when the flag should be displayed.

Stop, Look, Listen! Ingenious Ad Set Up from Boston

In a recent issue, we noted the establishment of a special print-shop for turning out throwaways, heralds, etc., for the Modern, Beacon and Shawmut theatres, Boston, Mass., and the Colonial, Nashua, N. H.

Besides the economy of this plan, claimed to amount to forty per cent, all kinds of unusual type set-ups are naturally encouraged, as for instance, an ingenious imitation of the familiar "Stop, Look, Listen!" sign-posts at railroad crossings, recently used in Shawmut theatre hand-bills as an attention catching head.' This was done by specially arranging the plain rule, such as is used for borders of ads. and pages.

One's own printer, thinking up novelties of this sort, specially for your own use, should become particularly clever at it. Small-town managers, and managers who do business with a small print shop, or are able to get the work done by one man, can get together with him and scheme a lot of things worth while. Printers type, rules and borders lend themselves wonderfully to novelty set-ups. We will appreciate all who take this hint sending us their results, for mutual benefit.

This Week's Prize Tale

From Macon, Ga., comes the story that a girl usher in the Macon theatre so closely resembles Mollic King, her friends have decorated her with a "Double Cross" on the right arm—and what's more all Macon society feminity is wearing double crossed tattooed arms. We hope when the alleged "fad" is over, the "India Ink" will come off. Picture to yourself mothers and grandmothers of Macon, in years to come pointing to this romantic mark of the "time of the great war." International's publicity department is authority for the statement that Manager O. P. Hall's personnel was threatened with complete disruption for several days.

Middle West Theatres Using Patriotic Phrases

"Call to the Colors." "Wanted, Patriots to Follow," and similar patriotic phrases are being used in the Middle West to boost the war pictures and some of the serials which have a war interest. Nearly every theatre of importance has hooked up to the spirit of the "support the President" movement in some way or other.

Globe, Boston, Uses Mailing List

While the weekly mailing list form of advertising the week's bill at most of the metropolitan houses has been looked on skeptically by house managers, Frank Meagher of the Globe, who carries a weekly mailing list of 2,000, claims that the "small town" form of advertising pays in Boston.

Southern Paramount Circularizes in Behalf of Exhibitors

The Southern office of Paramount, which employs as publicity manager Mrs. Gracine Wyden Vaill, is mailing out personal letters direct to possible patrons of exhibitors just taking on Paramount in that territory, or who have weak nights they want to boost.

The important feature of this service is that every letter is individual, written by Mrs. Vaill, as she would write to a Southern acquaintance, in a personal style peculiar to Mrs. Vaill, who has the "Dixie" accent in her writings.

Reports are that these letters have "brought home the bacon," which is another way of saying that Mrs. Vaill has succeeded in infusing into them some of her own personal charm feminine. No better illustration could be given of the advantage of localizing publicity.

Mrs. Vaill has suggested many live wire stunts to Southern Paramount exhibitors.

Triangle Exhibitors Favor Rotogravure and Small Herald

Practically all heralds and other exhibitor aids from Triangle, except the lithographed posters, are now done in Rotogravure process, either green or brown. John W. Hanson, manager of supplies, says exhibitors have shown a decided appreciation of the more artistic effect to be gained by this process, in the most practical way possible, by increasing their orders.

The new 3½ x 5½ heralds are just a convenient size, once folded, for milady's handbag, or for mailing in a "regular" envelope. And the small size herald, even in Rotogravure, costs less than the old style.

Shrieking Newspaper "Fake" Available for "The Whip"

"Terrific Smashup," etc., etc., with pictures of a wrecked train and quite the most sensational "headlines" we have yet seen, are shown in a fake herald imitation newspaper, double-size available to exhibitors of "The Whip," wishing to play up and connect the melodramatic reputation of this former stage thriller with its picture presentation. The shriek of this sheet will cry out even above the strident note of the "war extras."

A Display of Acumen

Ralph Kettering, Jones, Linick and Schafer's (Chicago) press agent sent out circular letters and announcements to 15,000 Chicago school teachers, members of women's clubs, civic and other organizations last week telling where they could and why they should see "Joan the Woman" at the Colonial. Everyone of the envelopes was emblazoned outside in red with the phrase: "She wasn't too proud to fight!"
Ingledue Takes Great Pains with Program Announcement

We have before us a program from W. D. Ingledue, Strand theatre, Marshalltown, Iowa, which represents the utmost in painstaking in program announcement. A stock design in pale blue and pale yellow, with orange and pink and green shadings, and a dark blue imprint of the star (Mary Pickford, in "The Poor Little Rich Girl") to be changed for each different attraction decorates the front cover, with light blue border design for inside and back. The Morton Picture News Screen Examination of the picture is used as the basis of description of the fine points which patrons may expect in the play, and the times of performance are included. The back page is devoted to coming big attractions.

Noticeable particularly is the advertising or "superlative" reiterations are eliminated. Which is possible, of course, when pictures are selected that measure up unqualifiedly given due credit, and "In Again Out Again" is announced as the "First Art-craft Production." Otherwise, the sound of the press agent boosting his particular wares is absent.

We feel certain that always "delivering the goods," with a becoming modesty in exploiting their merit, the enterprise of the Iowa housekeeper and her employees, the Ingledue Strand of Marshalltown, is being successfully carried to the public.

Original Stunt of L. W. McCuan, Kozy Theatre, Dresden, Tenn.

Special "Woman's Number" of Paramount Progress Scores

More men exhibitors mind your "p's" and "q's," for Paramount has issued a most convincing brief showing that mere men is not in it when it comes to running a theatre or exchange. Why? For the very obvious reason that woman, lovely woman, is the natural born housekeeper and sees details to perfect and keep in order that the rougher sex naturally must overlook. And we all know details make the show business a success, or failure. Then there is woman's intuition, and her vastly valuable knowledge of what woman herself wants, which no man ever professes to know—if he is truthful.

And so the "Woman's Number" of Paramount Progress should be read with great interest by the incompetent male, who will glean therein some idea of his shortcomings as an exhibitor and handler of motion pictures and their allied uses.

Seriously, Harry Day has gathered together a fine collection of timely articles by women, that will make the reader, man or woman, respect the large usefulness of woman in the picture business. We know many theatres where the "boss" does not wear trousers, and business is good, too.

Whether or not the winner of the match accepts the offer. President Scowcroft has gained his end, for the newspapers saw a miniature flag to wear in his button hole with instructions not to enter the house without the pin attached to his coat. An innovation in the patriotic overtures is being tried out there this week and according to Manager Soriero it is a winner. With proper captions each war President of the United States, from George Washington to Woodrow Wilson, is thrown on the screen. The finale of the overture comes with a map of the United States, bearing the caption, "America for Americans," with Old Glory waving over the whole.

Cahil-Igoe Company of Chicago Pursues Aggressive Methods

Hustling methods, inventive genius and the effort to please is giving the Cahil-Igoe Company of Chicago a place in the motion picture exhibitor's sun as manufacturers of novelty and printed matter. Badges, buttons, rings, bracelets and a hundred and one other attractive publicity stunts they are daily evolving for the benefit of the exhibitor and house manager have been attracting widespread attention.

They endeavor to solve the exhibitor's advertising problems and in a great way succeed. One of these mediums is a complete program service to subscribers of twelve different designs, and the synopsis and advertising notices for the picture is included in the service. Another of their newest stunts has been "Filmette," a new style of folder designed to take the place of the customary heralds furnished by producers. "Filmettes" are furnished on Paramount release only.
Boston Theatres Use Flags

The lobby of the Globe theatre has been the center of commendable talk during the past week owing to the patriotic display. The whole front of the house has been decked with flags and bunting, and according to Manager Frank Meagher it will remain so until something more definite breaks regarding war.

Patriotism has caught the moving picture houses all over the city, but the biggest demonstration yet attempted is scheduled at the Modern next week, when Manager Samuel Finanski has arranged for the unfurling of the second largest flag in the city. Manager Finanski has arranged with the R. H. White Company, across the street, to fly this mammoth flag on a steel cable between the two buildings over Washington street. Mayor Curley has promised not only to address the meeting but will pull the string which will throw Old Glory to the breeze.

Paralta Issues Booklet

General Manager Nat I. Brown, of the Paralta Corporation, has written four little pamphlets of 600 words each on screen plays, stars, sales and publicity, which will be distributed to exhibitors as a part of information relating to the Paralta plan of distribution. These little books are more remarkable, perhaps, for the thought they suggest than what they actually contain. They were written to make the exhibitor think—and think hard.

A THOROUGH understanding of the principles of good farming is a long stride toward the successful advertising of the moving picture theater," writes J. Stuart Woodhouse, who is widely known in Minneapolis territory for his progressive methods of boosting state right and other productions. Mr. Woodhouse says he gets his inspiration for his advertising from the scientific methods of the farmers of his home state, Iowa. The parallel is unique, to say the least, but will be plainly understood from the following comparison of farm methods with theater methods.

Nowadays when everybody's attention is directed to the necessity of raising better crops, the allusion is timely.

For any kind of fruition there must be, FIRST, a preparation of the ground; SECOND, a planting of the seed according to the kind of crop wanted; and, THIRD, cultivation every minute until the full crop is harvested.

Have you ever thought of the application of this idea to growing a crop of patrons for your theatre? Yes, and you can even go farther and say you must keep the strains pure and save the best seed for the next crop.

There is much that can be done before the arrival of a star or picture play, through securing the cooperation of the newspapers in publishing live screen news. Do you remember how the newspapers prepared the people of every community for "The Birth of a Nation?" Curiosity was aroused by reports of litigation and trouble because of the theme of the story. Much of the present interest in Theda Bara's rights picture has jumped from oblivion to wide notoriety because the mayor, or the school superintendent, thought "nobody ought to see it.”

Here is how Theda Bara was promoted in Minneapolis. Two weeks previous to presentation Mr. Woodhouse inaugurated a "character study contest" in a Minneapolis paper. "Would you trust your life with the owner of these eyes?" was asked, over an illustration showing only Theda Bara’s eyes. Next day, "Would these lips lure you to matrimony?" was asked, with the lips only shown.

The following day a complete picture of Theda Bara was shown, with the question, "Would you marry Theda Bara?" Prices were offered for the best letters justifying either answer, "Yes" or "No." The next day came stories about Theda Bara, following day after day with description of her likes and dislikes. In the worst rain and hail storm of the year the box-office record was broken with this FIRST picture shown with this star.

Later the same theatre canceled the program Miss Bara was appearing in, and a similar three weeks' campaign enabled Olga Petrova to break the Theda Bara records. A "double" contest to find a likeness to Theda Bara was started, with the question, "Who would you marry Theda Bara?" Prizes were offered for the best letters justifying either answer, "Yes" or "No." The next day came stories about Theda Bara, following day after day with description of her likes and dislikes. In the worst rain and hail storm of the year the box-office record was broken with this FIRST picture shown with this star.

Establishing the reputation of the theatre itself is most difficult "plowing," but good music, comfort, safety, can be impressed on people, and this will help even here if you can connect the personality of the theatre with news value. When war interest was at fever heat Mr. Woodhouse's theatre published pictures and information as to the nationality of its musicians, who were largely of foreign parentage or birth.

The "seed" of publicity is efficient advertising. Careful testing, selection of proper "soil," planting seed suitable to the "soil," and rotating the crops, are rules in farming that need no explanation as to their application to theatre advertising.

Don't overplant. Three seeds to a hill is right in Iowa, for corn. A whole handful would give no better crop, and would better be used in right proportion to the fertility of the soil.

As to rotation. Don't let the soil go stale with the same kind of planting year after year. Keep everlastinglly at it with new, everchanging seed. Don't advertise in the same way to the same people over and over. Make cultivation. Don't let the crop grow wild. Just because you have good luck and it grows fast with the first spring rains and sunshine, don't quit work. Cultivate the women's clubs and fraternal organizations, ministers, school teachers, and all classes of persons.
Unusually Large Universal List Week of Apr. 30

"Birth of Patriotism" Timely War Feature, and Gold Seal Subject
Head List—Bison, Big U and Joker
Aggregations Add Lively Films

TIMELY in its interest and with a sustained plot, "The Birth of Patriotism," from the story of I. A. R. Wylie, heads the Universal schedule of releases the week of April 30. Irene Hunt and Leo Pierson star under direction of E. Magnus Ingleton.

The feature tells the story of a young man who abandons home and wife and disregards social and moral codes. At the outbreak of war he enlists, leaving behind two women between whom a patriotic conflict grows up when news comes of the man's death. The report is false, and there follows a sacrifice on the part of one of the women as a fitting end to the picture. Numbers of battle scenes are said to be realistically shown.

"What a Clue Will Do," a Nestor Comedy, with Lee Moran and Edith Roberts, will also be released on April 30. In this comedy this fun-making trio have one of the best opportunities that has been given them in many months.

The program feature for Tuesday, May 1, is the Gold Seal three-reel Western drama, "Bill Brennan's Lament," in which Neal Hart and Janet Eastman are jointly featured. This story of claim jumping, from the pen of Shelly Sutton, prepared for the screen by Charles Wilson, Jr., was directed by George Marshall. The supporting cast includes Joe Rickson, Raymond Witaker, Jack Walters, Tom Grimes, Bud Osborne and Bill Gillies.

A Victor comedy, "The Cabaret Scratch," featuring Dan Russell, will be released.

Ince Presents Dorothy Dalton in New Subject

Dorothy Dalton soon will be presented on the Triangle program, by Thomas H. Ince, in "Wild Winship's Widow," a comedy-drama by John Lynch. This play is announced as being the first in which this star has been cast in a comedy role. The story has to deal with a widow, who, worshipping at the shrine of the dead departed, finds that her idol has feet of clay. Her disillusionment eventually brings happiness, and the plot shows the folly of worshipping false gods.

Rowland Lee, a newcomer to Ince-Triangle plays, Joe King, Lillian Hayward and Alice Taffee are seen in the cast. Charles Miller was the director.

Comming O. Henry Stories in Film Scheduled

Ten of the O. Henry stories to be released on General Film program have been completed, three of which "The Third Ingredient," "Friends in San Rosario" and "Past One at Rooney's" have already been released. These finished, and yet to come are:

"The Marionettes," written in scenario form by Elmer W. Bergman, and directed by Thomas R. Mills, featuring Mildred Manning and J. Frank Glendon; to be released on April 28.

"The Green Door," enacted by Walter Mcgrall and Mildred Manning, under the direction of Thomas R. Mills, and was pic- turized by A. Van Buren Powell; released on May 5.

"The Guilty Party" is a drama of life in the underworld, produced by Thomas R. Mills, with Patsey De Forest and Frank Brule in the leading roles. The scenario is by Katharine Reed, and the picture will be released on May 12.

"The Copy and the Anthem" was adapted for the screen by Elmer W. Bergman, and Thomas R. Mills is featured, also having directed the picture. Will be released on May 19.

"A Service of Love," release of May 26 was produced by John Robertson from the scenario by Katharine Reed, with Mildred Manning and Walter Mcgrall in the leading parts.

Bible Film Gets C. S. Edwards as Director-General

C. S. Edwards, one of the pioneers of the moving picture industry, has resigned his position as manager of the Pathe Exchange at St. Louis, Mo., to become director-general of the Bible Film Company, at Las Vegas, New Mexico.

Mr. Edwards will bring to the concern, which will produce religious and educational pictures, an experience of twelve years in the different branches of the industry. Until October 1, 1917, his headquarters will be in Kansas City, after which he will take up his residence in Las Vegas.

Pathes Picture a Lesson

Just what our country can do, now that war has come, is said to be revealed in detail in the Pathes two-reel patriotic picture, "Our Fighting Forces," released April 28. Claim is made that conditions are shown as they are, and not as pacifists would have them.

A Demure War Bride

First honors as a war bride, so far as the picture industry has reported, go to Betty Schade, one of Universal's leading ladies, who has wed Ernest Shields, a sergeant in the Hollywood Coast Artillery.
Patriotic Subject Features May Bluebirds

There is a desirable element of timelessness in the presentation of "Treason" on the Bluebird Program, May 14. Allen Holubar directed the feature and shares with Joseph Girard the leadership of the cast. The subject is intensely patriotic, with battle scenes and tense situations based upon military necessities of a country at war.

"Little Miss Nobody," featuring Violet Mersereau, is the Bluebird for May 7, and on May 21 Dorothy Phillips makes her regular appearance on the program, this time directed by Ida May Park, Bluebird's new woman producer, in "The Flashlight." Lynn F. Reynolds offers a character study "in "Southern Justice," May 28, with Myrtle Gonzalez and George Hernandez carrying the leads.

Franklyn Farnum and "Brownie" Vernon will present "Bringing Home Father," June 4, offering a comedy drama written by H. O. Davis, general manager of Universal City, where Bluebirds come from. Later on Ella Hall will present another story by Mr. Davis, to be called "The Little Belgian," ready now for release, but awaiting schedule.

What will doubtless be considered the most important Bluebird of the period, will be "A Doll's House" to be shown June 11, with Dorothy Phillips appearing in the role of Nora Helmer, played with such marked success on the dramatic stage by Mrs. Pitke, Nazimova and Eleanor Duse.

Margaret Illington in First Paramount Subject

The screen debut of Margaret Illington, anticipated for some time, is to take place on the Paramount program for the week of April 30, when she will be seen in the Lasky production, "Sacrifice," written by Charles Kenyon. The week also marks the return of Marie Doro in a Famous Players production, "Heart's Desire," a story of Brittany.

The title "Heart's Desire" refers to a species of rose which plays an important part in the story. Paul Le Roque, nephew of the wealthy Henri Le Roque is jilted by Helene Blanche, and goes to the island of his uncle's home to cure him of an affliction of the heart—although in reality the old man suffers only from an abominable temper. Among Henri's oppressed tenants is Fleurette, who earns a livelihood by selling flowers. After many trials and adventures Helene is forgotten, and the happy ending of a romance between Fleurette and Paul ensues.

Appearing in the cast are: Mario Majeroni, Albert Roscoe, Jean Gautier, Helen Dahl, Gertrude Norman, Ida Darling, Edwin Sturgis and Harry Lee. Francis Grandon directed the production.

"Sacrifice" is the first of a number of plays which Charles Kenyon will write for Margaret Illington. The star portrays a dual role, appearing as Mary Stephianni, daughter of an important personage in the little kingdom of Zandria, and, as Vesta Boris, a notorious dancer in a neighboring principality. The two countries are at war, and intrigue and plot abound through the picture. Jack Holt, Winter Hall and Noah Beery are principal players in the supporting cast.

In the sixty-fifth of Burton Holmes's travelogues, the spectator is taken to "Curious Columbia."

Completing the week's offerings is an interesting single-reel Black Diamond comedy, entitled "Her Iron Will."

Gail Kane in "Whose Wife?" More than ordinary interest is attached to the release on April 30 of the first American-Mutual production featuring Gail Kane, which has been more than three months in the making, and will be the star's first screen appearance in almost a year.

"Whose Wife?" is the title of Miss Kane's offering, and so much importance was attached to this initial picture of the star by Mutual that during production both John R. Freuler, president of the corporation, and Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film, made trips to the Pacific Coast.

Rollin Sturgeon has overseen the filming of the story which is by Cecil Henry Bullivant, English playwright and author.
Warde, Linder and King in Pathe Pictures May 6

FREDERICK WARDE, in his first modern role; Mollie King in an episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross"; Max Linder in a comedy, a Combitone scenic release, a specially timely International cartoon and scenic split reel, and two releases of the Hearst-Pathe News, are the strategic points in Pathe's advance for the week of May 6.

"Hinton's Double," in which Frederick Warde is seen, is a Gold Rooster play, produced by Thanhouser. The picture was produced under the direction of Ernest Warde, and the author is Lloyd Longman, the well-known scenario writer.

The strong cast includes Wayne Arey and Kathryn Adams. The direction of William Parke, with Molberg, the well-known scenario writer, produced by Thanhouser. The picture is the eighth episode of "Mystery of the Double Cross," produced by Astra, under the direction of Er VARIETY, and then more variety, is the aim of Art Dramas, which in the past two months claims each release to have been as different as possible in theme, story and treatment. This same ideal is to be continued, it is promised.

Starting with "The Law That Failed," a story based on a little known technicality of law, many varied themes have been pictured. "The Inevitable," released April 12, was a drama of revenge and love.

Then on April 19 came "The Great Bradley Mystery," a story of crime and detection—a sleuth story of a new order. Followed "A Mother's Ordeal" on April 26, in which Jean Sothern appeared as a mother and daughter.

"The Auction of Virtue," to be released May 3, is described as a modern problem play, treating of a young girl's struggle between love and luxury. Marian Swayne appears on May 10 in "Little Miss Fortune," a comedy drama telling of a little orphan girl who dreams of going on the stage and finally realizes her ambition.

The Apollo picture for release May 17, not titled, is described as a strange story of a morbid mind, the plot dealing with the little known region between consciousness and unconsciousness. In "The Mystic Hour" an artist awakens with the belief that he has killed his friend, and, rushing to the man's room, finds him dead. The next Apollo production, scheduled with the working title of "When You and I Were Young," depicts the struggles and pains of youth and its triumphs and joys as seen through the eyes of the aged.

Past and Future Art Dramas

Mutual to Release La Salle Comedies

All comedies produced by the LaSalle Film Corporation of Chicago and Los Angeles will in future be released by Mutual. Negotiations have been completed by which the Mutual Film Corporation will release LaSalle comedies, produced by the LaSalle Film Company of Chicago and Los Angeles.

The first series will consist of three two-reel comedies to be released bi-weekly, beginning May 7. They will be followed by a series of fifty-two two-reel pictures, to be released weekly, beginning June 12.

Each Gaumont Single-Reel is represented by "Sleeping Bags for Soldiers" which the government has adopted. "Lifting a Locomotive" shows the ease with which giant cranes are worked. "Protocols of a Big City" delineates how New York city cares of its feeble-minded children. "A Submarine Oil Field" is warlike in a sense, since it shows the source of much of the oil for the navy. "Making Grape Juice" completes the reel.

First Number of Edison Conquest Pictures

The first program of the Edison Conquest pictures, released through Forum Films, Inc., comes to the screen April 30. The dramatic feature, "The Half Back," is, as the title indicates, a story of the gridiron. Yale Boss, Jessie Stevens and William Wadsworth are the principals.

The program also includes "Captains of Tomorrow," showing a dress parade of cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, West Point; "The Dinorah and the Ba-boon," humorous mummikin stunts; "The Sea Horse," study of a little known fish; "A Vanishing Race," taken on the Blackfoot Indian reservation, and "Puss in Boots," a fairy tale told in silhouette.

Pauline Frederick Back to Screen
May 21
"Her Better Self," a dramatic story written especially for Pauline Frederick by Margaret Turnbull, will be the Famous Players' star's new vehicle on the Paramount program. It is scheduled for release by Paramount on May 21.

Thomas Meighan, who has appeared opposite Miss Frederick in her most recent productions, which were "Sapho," "The Slave Market," and "Sleeping Fires," again plays opposite the star in this picture, in which he plays the role of a young doctor. Alice Hollister and Maude Turner Gordon are among the cast in this production, which is directed by Robert Vignola.

Miss Frederick plays the role of a wealthy, imperious society girl who finally is forced by love to make something of herself.

Big Essanay, "The Trufflers," Set for May 7
"The Trufflers," Essanay's seven-reel feature originally set for release several weeks ago, is definitely scheduled for first run on May 7. This is a picturization of Samuel Merwin's series of stories of life in Greenwich Village, New York's famous Latin quarter.

Nell Craig and Sydney Ainsworth play the principal roles. In the supporting cast are Patrick Calhoun, Harry Dunkinson, John Cossar and Virginia Bowker.

Universal's Aquarium Pictures
Though a half-dozen attempts have been made to photograph the fish in the great Aquarium at Battery Park, New York, with resultant failure, U. K. Whipple, Universal Animated Weekly cameraman, succeeded, and wide interest in the pictures obtained is reported by theatres showing the Weekly.

Two Drew Releases
Metro's comedy releases for April 23 and April 30, respectively are "One of the Family" and "Safety First," both being Metro-Drew productions, with Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew as stars.

Butterfly Releases Must Make Merit Standard
Universal Exciting Efforts to Set Quality Mark—First Three Subjects of Brand Scheduled—Four in Preparation—Variety in Themes

"QUALITY ONLY" is the watchword of Universal in connection with the new feature brand productions bearing the trade mark "Butterfly Pictures," the first of which, "Eternal Love," will be offered May 7, according to an announcement made last week. Extensive plans were made for a definite standard for each picture. Any falling below the mark required will not be released under this brand.

The most competent and experienced directors of Universal have charge of the production of these features, and players of proven ability only are assigned to the casts. Original scripts from well-known writers both in the picture and magazine world are being considered for their screen adaptability. The same standards are to be maintained in the choice of stories as prevails in the production.

There will be a wide variety of subjects offered in Butterfly Pictures, but uppermost in the mind of the producers will be themes that are interesting and clean. Promise is given there will be nothing of any nature in a Butterfly photodrama that will offend the most fastidious.

"Eternal Love," the first release, is a romance of Brittany, and tells of the love of an artist for a simple peasant girl. Her sacrifices for him when he is entangled in the most fastidious.

"Environment," the second release, will be a study of nature, and tells of the life of an artist for a simple peasant girl. Her sacrifices for him when he is entangled in the most fastidious.

"Promise is given there will be nothing of any nature in a Butterfly photodrama that will offend the most fastidious."

Mary Miles Minter at Best in "Environment"
In "Environment" Mary Miles Minter as the daughter of the town drunkard, is said to exceed any performance she has yet given on the screen. The picture is a Mutual-American production, and scheduled for release on April 16.

The story is laid in a New England town. George Fischer plays opposite Miss Minter, and Margaret Shelby, the star's sister, also appears in the subject.

Others appearing in support of the little star are: Harvey Clark, George Periolat, Emma Kluge, Arthur Howard, Al Vosburgh, Lucille Ward and Jack Vosburgh.

Director Baker Appears as an Actor
"Sowers and Reapers," a Rolfe production in which Emmy Wehlen is the star, is released on the Metro program May 7. It is described as a play within a play. Besides being the author of "Sowers and Reapers," Director George D. Baker appears in the play as an actor. It has been many years since this director appeared as an actor.

In the cast are Frank Currier, Peggy Parr, Harry Davenport, Walter Horton, Kate Blanche and David Thompson.

A SUBMARINE SPASM

Joker Comedians Do a Burlesque of "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea"

DARINGLY original and screamingly funny is the latest Joker contribution in the comedy field. It is a broad burlesque of the Universal's stupendous spectacular drama, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," and in every conceivable way it outdoes all previous comedy burlesque made for the screen. The fake submarine; the crazy diving suits; the "Polites Cafe" at the bottom of the ocean; the morning delivery of milk and the daily paper at the door of the under-water boat; the wild woman who lives in a hut with a grand piano, and every element of luxury there are a few of the wildly absurd and laughable stunts, situations and scenes that will make this picture the talk of the world of moving pictures. Gale Henry as an East Indian Princess and William Franey as Captain Creme of the sub submarine have the opportunity of their lives to display their peculiar brand of fresh comedy. The title in itself will attract a lot of attention. It is "The Cross-Eyed Submariner, or 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Book this and boost it hard.
Mystery Masterpiece Makes Money!

Exhibitors Report Crowds at All Episodes of "The Voice on the Wire" Serial

Pictures that are popular advertise themselves. Once you put on a serial that has the life, punch and vitality of 'The Voice on the Wire', the people will talk about it enough to assure you good business at every episode. This latest Universal serial has been called by the public, by Exchange men and by Exhibitors the best serial the Universal has ever released. That is high praise because the Universal has put out the biggest serial successes in the history of that popular form of entertainment. It is the supreme excellence of Universal serials that makes multi-part subjects popular. In spite of the flivver serials that have flooded the market during the past year the Universal has scored success after success, because Exhibitors know that the name Universal on a serial means a picture that will get the money. "The Voice on the Wire" is founded on the famous novel of the same name, which was written by the noted author Eustace Hale Ball, who novelized that great success, "Traffic in Souls" and many others. Ben Wilson, the popular Universal star, plays John Shirley, a scientific investigator, who, in opposition to the Chief of Detectives, attempts to solve the mystery of "The Voice on the Wire." With each episode the mystery grows under the capable direction of Stuart Paton, who directed that masterly undersea drama, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea." Book "The Voice on the Wire" and boost it hard before showing the first episode. Write your nearest Universal Exchange for full particulars and props, etc.

Always first to consider the real needs of every class of Exhibitor, the mighty Universal has prepared a new kind of series to help you. Each installment is based on a central character, but EACH A COMPLETE STORY IN ITSELF. The series is founded on the popular "Yorkie Norry" stories by the noted author George Bronson Howard, which were published in a popular fiction magazine of tremendous circulation a short time ago. Mr. Howard, who wrote the literary sensation, "God's Man," directed the entire series and has shown the inner workings of the Secret Service. The leading character is played by Kingsley Benedict, supported by a different woman star in each drama.

Popular Subjects Please the People

Unprecedented Success of Universal Screen Magazine Due to Originality and Careful Editing

Though the Universal Screen Magazine was originally intended for a twice-a-month release, it jumped into such instantaneous and overwhelming popularity that after the third release it was put out once a week to meet the popular demand. Careful editing and long experience in feeling the amusement public pulse enabled the editors to present such subjects as pleased from the very start. This week's subjects include among others—"An Ostrich Farm—showing 300 of these awkward but beautiful birds." "Building Auto Bodies—Milady selects an exclusive design." "Paper Bag Cooking—demonstrated by an expert." "Newest Inventions for the Household—A combined lamp and phonograph." "Miracles in Mud." Sculpture made before your astonished eyes. Every issue is greeted with the deepest appreciation. Everyone in the moving picture business has heard stories of people express their preference for this form of entertainment as against the average dramas, etc. You all know that the people will go to see new pictures like the Universal Animated Weekly and Magazine pictures like the Universal Screen Magazine when they will not go across the street to see anything else. Wise Exhibitors all over the country are taking advantage of this preference and showing both these great one-reelers and boosting them hard every week. There is always plenty of opportunity to do this. Any Universal Exchange will always be glad to give you the necessary advance information to enable you to put these great subjects over in the way that their merit deserves. Send today for an attractive booklet—FREE to all bona fide Exhibitors, which shows you what you get on the Universal Screen Magazine—the class and character of subjects and what other Exhibitors think of it. Write your nearest Universal Exchange today or address the Universal Screen Magazine, 1600 Broadway, New York.

— is making a smashing clean up for hundreds of Exhibitors. In Brooklyn, N. Y., in the Marcus Loew Houses in which matinees on "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" were advertised for 2 P. M. they had to begin the performances at 11 A. M. to avert a riot.

No film spectacle in the history of the industry can show the tremendous smashing record for crowds and profits to Exhibitors as "20,000 LEAGUES." Film men admit it's the knock-out of the year. No production can touch it. It's got them all beaten by miles. HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

"Joan" and "20,000 Leagues" Break Newark Records

What will undoubtedly prove new records in attendance and box-office receipts for motion picture houses in Northern New Jersey were established during the past week in both Newark and Elizabeth. "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" recently finished a two-weeks' run at the Strand theatre in this city. Its manner of reception by the Newark public is best described by the fact that the Strand management has been forced to run an extra show daily to accommodate patrons who were unable to gain admission to the regular performances. An admission price of 25 to 75 cents was charged at all exhibitions.

At Proctor's Broad Street playhouse in Elizabeth, "Joan, the Woman," also met with a most flattering reception. At the conclusion of its original run in Elizabeth, the Proctor management immediately booked it for a return engagement.

Closes Neat Contract for Runs of Selznick Pictures

One of the largest deals consummated in Pennsylvania was closed recently by C. F. Schwerin, manager for the Lewis J. Selznick Productions, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, whereby Clark & Roland theatres will use all Selznick Productions for eleven days. There are eight of these houses.

Mr. Schwerin reports immense business through his territory on Clara Kimball Young Pictures.

Legitimate Houses Want to Book "God's Man"

An indication of the interest manifested in the Frohman production "God's Man," may be found in the report, that in the state of Ohio alone, twenty-three theatres which have heretofore played nothing but speaking stage attractions have applied for booking of this picturization of George Bronson-Howard's novel. Similar requests are coming from other legitimate houses in the United States and Canada.

Vita Re-issues Draw Well

From Detroit has come further confirmation of the wisdom of the Vitagraph policy of re-issuing in de luxe form some of the earlier successes of the company. "A Million Bid" booked into the Family theatre for two days packed the house at every performance, according to reports. Downtown houses held what might be designated an "Anita Stewart" week, "The More Excellent Way" playing an entire week at the Liberty and "The Girl Philippa," having a four-day run at the Regent. At Peoples and the Eagle, two other large houses "The Juggernaut" and "The Glory of Votanda" were presented.

"Birth" Before New Rochelle Mothers' Club

Mrs. Theodore C. Tuck, chairman of the New Rochelle, N. Y., Baby Week Committee, has arranged with the Eugenic Film Company for a showing of this film for two performances on Sunday afternoon, April 29, under the auspices of the Better Baby Committee and the Mothers' Club of New Rochelle, at Loew's theatre, that city. Dr. A. Hoyt, the city physician of New Rochelle, will deliver a ten-minute lecture on the birth, life and care of the baby before the showing of the picture.

Scores After Fairbanks Subject

To date more than ninety first class theatres have arranged showings for the week commencing April 30, of the initial Fairbanks-Arctraft Picture. "In Again, Out Again." Among the houses giving pre-release showings the week of April 22 is the Rialto, New York, and the Triangle theatre, Brooklyn.

"Her Secret" on Rialto Bill

The Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "Her Secret," starring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey, has been selected by Director Rothapfel of the Rialto theatre, New York, to head his program the week of April 29. Perry N. Vekroff wrote and directed this subject.

"Double Cross" Going Big All Over Country

Some of the largest houses in the country have sent glowing reports of the quality of "Mystery of the Double Cross" to the Pathé Exchanges. The American theatre, biggest house in Salt Lake City, is running the serial together with "Patria." The Fountain theatre in Terre Haute, Ind., reports capacity audiences when the serial is being shown. Manager Meighan, of the Star theatre, of Portland, Ore., declares it to be the greatest serial ever produced. H. H. Johnston, of the Luna theatre, Lafayette, Ind., states that he waited for three years to get hold of a serial that really satisfied him. He found one in "Mystery of the Double Cross" and booked it.

"Enlighten" Breaks Records

Past Buffalo records for exhibition of feature films were broken when "Enlighten Thy Daughter," playing at the Family theatre in the week of April 8, drew gross returns of $3,570.

"Country Life" Film at Strand

"The Spring Idyl," one of the Paula Blackton "Country Life Series" was run at the Strand theatre, New York, the week of April 15, as a special added attraction.
Pre-Release View of Goldwyn Film for Red Cross

Late in June, at a price of five dollars a seat, Goldwyn Pictures will offer its first Maxine Elliott picture for private exhibition to society folks at Newport, R. I., for the benefit of the American Red Cross. Two showings will be given under similar auspices and arrangement at Bar Harbor and Narragansett Pier. A group of famous social leaders will superintend the showings, and if possible, Miss Elliott intends deferring a scheduled European trip for a week or ten days to attend the initial presentation.

In addition Goldwyn is seeking, in conjunction with the Red Cross officers, to offer this picture in seventy cities in the country simultaneously, for a single performance at advanced prices—the entire proceeds of course to be devoted to relief work.

Miss Elliott's first film production is the work of Roy Cooper Megrue, author of half a dozen successful plays, and was directed by Allan Dwan. It is heralded by Goldwyn as being the first of a "new type" of motion pictures, and in it will be revealed a style of scenic investure which Arthur Hopkins, Hugo Ballin, and their associates are bringing into screenland.

Nathan's "As We See It" for Lasky Production

Negotiations opened by Jesse L. Lasky before his departure for the Pacific Coast have just been completed by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation with George Jean Nathan, the editor of Smart Set Magazine, for a photoplay formed on Mr. Nathan's "As We See It"—"A Synopsis for an Interesting Play.

The subject has been assigned to Marguerite Clark, and it is planned to have it produced by the Famous Players Film Company upon the completion of the "Sub-Deb" stories, photoplay rights of which were recently purchased from Mary Roberts Rinehart. Miss Clark is now engaged at the Famous Players studio upon an adaptation of Sir Arthur Pinero's comedy, "The Amazons," in which she is starring in the role of Tommy.

Fox to Make "Kiddie Features"

Special productions to be known as "Fox Kiddie Features" are soon to be released on the Fox Program. Youngsters will enact all the roles. These pictures will seek to entertain the elders as well as the children.

While in California Mr. Fox organized a children's company to film the stories of the land of make-believe. In addition he has opened a school where expression and elocution will be taught the little mummers. Another company of children will be established in one of the Fort Lee Studios. The release of one "Fox Kiddie Feature" monthly is expected.

Theda Bara Works Secretly in "Cleopatra"

THEDA BARA, premiere vampire of the screen, has completed in secret a production of Cleopatra which will be released by the Fox Film Corporation on June 4. Miss Bara and J. Gordon Edwards, the director, have been engaged in the task of fitting Cleopatra for the screen for several months. The picture is complete, with the exception of final cutting. Because of the elaborateness of many of the sets, which were exceedingly costly, the length of "Cleopatra" has not yet been determined.

Although Cleopatra's part in history is already well established, Miss Bara has come to the defense of Egypt's Queen and insists that she is a much maligned person, and should not be stigmatized by historians.

"Ambition was Cleopatra's life," declared Miss Bara. "She was willing to sacrifice all for her dream of world empire. Though her faults were many, she was not the woman of popular belief. "Cleopatra was a brilliant, beautiful, charming woman, perhaps a bit unscrupulous at times, but she was not the daughter of His Satanic Majesty, who from her lair in the East attempted to entrap and ensnare the heroes of Rome for the pure love of conquest. She strove to unite Rome and Egypt into one vast empire, not alone for herself but for her people.

"To further her dream of empire, she deliberately captivated by her beauty, wit and grace, two of the greatest men in history—Caesar and Antony."

Miss Bara has done the best work of her career as "Cleopatra," so those who have seen parts of the production, say.

Feminine Club Day at "Birth" Presentation

Feminine Club Day at "Birth" Presentation

Thursday, April 19, was the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs' day at "Birth," the Eugenic Film Company's offering at the Eltinge theatre. The four boxes were occupied by the presidents of the various prominent clubs which go to make up this organization. Among the guests of the management were: Mrs. John Francis Yawger, president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian, secretary, and Mrs. Lyman Oils, chairman of the Committee on Movies.

Goldwyn Closes Deal for "Thais"

After a long conference last week between Edgar Selwyn and Adolphe Osso, the latter representing Anatole France, the Goldwyn Picture Corporation acquired the screen rights to "Thais," which it has been angling for since the signing of Mary Garden. A record price is said to have been paid for the manuscript.

Universal Girl on Hire for 40,000 Recruits

Prior to starting last Saturday on her trans-continental hike to seek 40,000 men for the Army and Navy, Dora Rodrigues, "The Universal Film Girl" invaded Broadway in course of her patriotic work. For three days she lectured in Loei's New York theatre, and an increase in enlistments nearby recruiting stations was reported as a result.

Dora's itinerary for her cross country jaunt takes in the largest cities, including Cleveland, Columbus, Cincinnati, Detroit, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Salt Lake City and San Francisco. Numerous patriotic societies have wired their intentions to aid in her work.

Mutual Releases "Hedda Gabler."

May 7

May 7 has been set by the Mutual Film Corporation for the release of "Hedda Gabler," the screen version of Henrik Ibsen's play, in which Nance O'Neill is starred. This is the second production in which Miss O'Neill has appeared on the Mutual schedule, the first being "Mrs. Belffams."

In support of Miss O'Neill appear Aubrey Beattie, Lillian Paige, Einar Linden, Ruth Byron, Alfred Hickman and Edith Campbell Walker.
Women Believe in Bernstein Clean Film Idea

The "clean film" idea, which is the motto followed in Bernstein productions, has received a great deal of publicity in Los Angeles of late. Several women's clubs have been particularly vigorous in its cause.

Once a month representatives from practically every woman's club in Southern California meet to discuss the situation and to lend aid to the producers turning out wholesome films.

At the April meeting Miss Griffith of the Studio Club in Hollywood spoke of the influence of the moving picture on American national life, and Florence Ryerson from Bernstein's told of that studio's fight for "Clean Films for the Clean Minded."

Christie Companies Actively at Work—May Releases

The latest Betty Compson-Neal Burns picture has been finished and titled "A Bold, Bad Knight." This gives Betty and Neal opportunities to wear some fetching masquerade costumes, the latter's being a suit of armor.

Al E. Christie is now directing Margaret Gibson, Neal Burns, Ethel Lynne, Harry Rattenberry, Eddie Barry, Stella Adams, in a picture to be called "A Lucky Slip." Margaret and Neal are in love, but Neal's father, Harry, disapproves of Neal's marrying at all, though Harry has never seen Margaret. Harry overhears an appointment of the young lovers—the park at two. Margaret's mother, Stella, also finds it out. She goes to the park, as does Harry, and Stella's slipping upon a banana-peel brings Harry to her assistance, so that they meet without knowing that they are, respectively, father and mother of the young people.

The youngsters are each sent off to school, but it happens to be the same school, where enters Professor Ed. (Barry). Their clandestine meetings get them in trouble, and the parents are sent for. They arrive, having already discovered a mutual interest, and, finding in each case that it is the other's offspring that their child wants to marry, a different face is put upon the whole matter, and both couples are happy.

The Christie Film Company announces May releases: May 7, "With the Mummies' Help" (Margaret Gibson, Eddie Barry); May 14, "The Magic Maid" (Betty Compson, Neal Burns, Stella Adams); May 21, "The Milky Way" (Margaret Gibson, Neal Burns, Eddie Barry); May 28, "His Last Pill" (Betty Compson, Eddie Barry, Neal Burns, Ethel Lynne, George French).

Picturized by National Film

The National Film Corporation formerly with headquarters at Los Angeles, and for his later production of the Smiling Bill Parsons comedies.

The National Film Corporation, through Mr. Parsons, has purchased the Oz Manufacturing Company's plant at Los Angeles, situated on Santa Monica Boulevard, where "Tarzan of the Apes" will be produced. Mr. Parsons expects to be in New York City within a week or two to interview directors and players. A number of prominent business men throughout the West are said to be interested with Mr. Parsons in his new production plans.

Announcement that Mabel Urner's stories, "The Journal of a Neglected Wife" and "The Woman Alone" were to be filmed by Pathe as a serial under title of "The Neglected Wife," has been received with interest by exhibitors and public alike according to reports from the producers. The production of the series is being completed by Balbo. Ruth Roland is the featured player, supported by Roland Bottomley.

Spiritualism Unmasked in Bray Pictograph Series

Under the title "Unmasking the Mediums" the Bray Studios, Inc., announce an interesting series of releases as part of their screen magazine, the Paramount-Bray Pictographs.

Hereward Carrington, the American authority on psychic research, a man who has spent his lifetime in the study of the science, will co-operate with the Bray Studios in this work, and many of the tricks that have fooled eminent scientists will, before the penetrating eye of the camera, be disclosed.

Mr. Carrington has actually been able to prove that more than ninety-eight per cent. of all so-called phenomena are fakes, pure and simple, and that the remaining two per cent. are in nowise of spiritual origin, but are merely due to an as yet unexplained power on the part of the possessor, which permits of accomplishing the somewhat startling effects which follow the bringing into play of such powers.

"Skinner's Bubble," April 23

Critics reviewing "Skinner's Bubble," which is set for release through K-E-S-E service on April 23, have gone on record as saying that it is an even better picture than "Smile." The major players, Washburn, and Hazel Daly in the leading roles, arc responsible for the excellence of the production.

A QUISITION has been made by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of interesting photoplay material, written by such well-known playwrights and authors as George Broadhurst, George Middleton and Pearly Poor Sheehan. From George Broadhurst, there was purchased the photoplay rights to "The Law of the Land," one of the greatest stage successes which this playwright has written. Two photoplays have been purchased from George Middleton, namely "At First Sight" and "The Love That Lives." "The Whispering Chorus" by Pearly Poor Sheehan, is a novel soon to be published by one of the Munsey productions, "The Love That Lives." As soon as she has completed the Middleton picture, Jesse L. Lasky who has direct supervision of all productive activities of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, plans to have Miss Frederick begin work upon the Broadhurst play.

Mae Murray, who recently came East to complete an adaptation of Ruth Sawyer's "The Primrose Ring" at the Famous Players Studio, is already beginning work upon "At First Sight," under the direction of Robert Leonard who accompanied her East from the Lasky Studio.

"The Whispering Chorus" was purchased by Mr. Lasky last week, but has as yet not been assigned to any star. The story tells of how a man who has committed an evil deed is haunted by the reproach of his conscience. It contains an intrigue of an unusually complex and fascinating nature. Mr. Sheehan, the author of "The Whispering Chorus" was the co-author with Robert Davis of the very popular book "We Are French." Plans are being considered by the producers and the Munsey publications to bring out the printed version and the photoplay adaptation of the story at the same time, which should make a double strike in filmdom.

Forsyth, who has been in the Lasky Studio upon one of Middleton's photoplays, "The Love That Lives," as soon as she is the star of a Gold Rooster Play, he benefits not only by whatever advertising he has done in the past, but by the favorable impression she has made upon his patrons.

"Hereafter our stars will be identified by their work in one picture for us, in another for a competitor tomorrow, and in a play on the stage the day after. We will select them most carefully, and they must answer every requirement of ability, experience, attractive personality, reputation and box-office value.

"By being able to concentrate our advertising and publicity upon these players, it will be much more profitable to the exhibitors, and they may rest assured that the Pathé Program, when our present plans are completed, will be second to none in the country in box-office value. Our policy will be to have stars who are more than a mere name in every section of the country. National and not local celebrity and popularity will be our aim."
Selznick Spring Plans Include Four Big Productions

The Selznick spring campaign got into full swing last week, and announcement was made of the release plans for the next month or six weeks.

Four Selznick Pictures are nearing completion, one of which "The Silent Master," with Robert Warwick, an adaptation of E. Phillips Oppenheim's story, "The Court of St. Simon," will be given its premiere before the end of April. Leonce Perret makes his American debut as director on this feature, in which the star is supported by Anna Little and Olive Tell.

Herbert Brenon's production of Louis Joseph Vance's story, "The Lone Wolf," in which Hazel Dawn is featured, will follow the Warwick picture. Final scenes of this are now being taken. The story is modern in every way, and described as a crook drama.

The second May release will present Norma Talmadge in an adaptation of Cynthia Stockley's story, "Poppy," a tale of South African life. Edward Jose is the director, and the cast of players contains the names of Eugene O'Brien and Frederick Perry.

The latter part of May or the first part of June will see the release of another Robert Warwick picture, "A Modern Othello." This is an original story by Director Perret, and the production is well under way. Elaine Hammerstein appears opposite the star.

Strong Publicity Campaign

Ten leading newspapers in the largest cities of the country have distributed with their Sunday sections more than two million six-color photographs of Alice Joyce, star of Vitagraph's preparedness spectacle released in September, 1915, by Vitagraph-V-L-S-E, have been called in and will be re-edited and restyled. The picture, after it has been rehabilitated, will be renamed "The Battle Cry of War."

This announcement of the change in name is made by Selznick Pictures in order that exhibitors who may book the picture under the new name will not be misled in any way. They will be booking "The Battle Cry of Peace," with certain matter eliminated and certain titles changed in order that the picture will be even a greater lesson to show the men of the United States why they should hasten to enlist in one of the three branches of the service.

Essanay Announces "Night Workers" for May 21

"The Night Workers," Essanay's photo-dramatization of the serious side of night life in a metropolitan city, will be released May 21. The filming of this production, in which Margarette Clayton is starring, has just been completed. The Kline-Edison-Selig-Essanay forces are handling its bookings.

Many of the scenes for "The Night Workers" actually were filmed in the editorial and press rooms of a big Chicago morning newspaper, adding many interesting details in the mechanism of real journalistic work. The whole is bound together by a good love inner-plot which brings about a happy ending to the drama.

Immediate Production Announced for Billie Burke

Billie Burke starts work on her first Famous Players picture April 23. The story is an adaptation of Gelett Burgess' "The Mysterious Miss Terry." This is that author's first contribution to the screen.

In "The Mysterious Miss Terry" Miss Burke will play the role of Mavis Terry, a part offering many opportunities for her talents in comedy and containing many charming sentimental episodes. The story is said to be highly novel and amusing, and contains an interesting love theme. The heroine is one of the idle, bored rich, sick to death of the class of men she is accustomed to as suitors. She breaks away from the conventions of her set and explores the world outside the portals of the wealthy.

At the beginning of the story we find her a mysterious character in a cheap boarding house. Her true love from among her humble suitors and fellow lodgers, how she plays the Lady Bountiful to the poor of the neighborhood, and how she finally, after many interesting episodes, finds her romance and happiness form the basis of the plot.

J. Searle Dawley will direct Miss Burke.

Re-edit and Title "Battle Cry of Peace"

All prints of "The Battle Cry of Peace," the preparedness spectacle released in September, 1915, by Vitagraph-V-L-S-E, have been called in and will be re-edited and restyled. The picture, after it has been rehabilitated, will be renamed "The Battle Cry of War."

This announcement of the change in name is made by Selznick Pictures in order that exhibitors who may book the picture under the new name will not be misled in any way. They will be booking "The Battle Cry of Peace," with certain matter eliminated and certain titles changed in order that the picture will be even a greater lesson to show the men of the United States why they should hasten to enlist in one of the three branches of the service.

Substitute Picture for Clara Kimball Young

It is announced by Selznick Pictures that Clara Kimball Young will not film "Why I Left My Husband," the Virginia Terhune Van Der Water story as previously advertised, as her next screen venture. The name of the substitute feature is not announced, but it is said to be from a story of modern American life by a noted author.

Kitty Gordon's Second

The second of the series which Kitty Gordon is making for World-Brady Pictures is in course of filming under title of "The Beloved Adventurer." The promise held out by this newest subject, and the success accorded the first production with Miss Gordon's "Forget-Me-Not" makes it practically certain the manufacturing concern will exercise the option held on the star's services for a further term.
Filming of Latest Feature with Lockwood Starts

Harold Lockwood, Metro star, has begun work on his eighth picturization of a popular novel at the Metro-Yorker studios, Hollywood, Calif. This is "The Haunted Pajamas," from the novel of the same name by Francis Perry Elliott.

"The Haunted Pajamas" provides Mr. Lockwood with an interesting role and a story of swift-moving incident. It has the further appeal of mysticism. The haunted pajamas, which have been sent to Dick Hudson, the hero, were made in the Far East. There they were inscribed with Chinese characters by a sorcerer, and thus they became a curse to any one wearing them.

Music Score Compiled for "God's Man"

By special arrangement with S. L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto theatre, New York, and Hugo Reisenfeld, conductor of the Rialto orchestra, the Frohman Amusement Corporation has compiled the special musical arrangement for its latest production, "God's Man," in which H. B. Warner has made a success. This compilation is from the arrangement used in the special trade and professional screening of that Frohman masterpiece at the Rialto theatre several weeks ago.

Fourth Rambeau Subject Ready

"The Mirror," fourth of the Marjorie Rambeau production for Mutual, has been finished at the Frank Powell studios.

The story is by Clara S. Beranger and deals with theatrical life. The surrounding cast includes Robert Elliot, Paul Everton, Irene Warfield, T. Jerome Lawlor, Aubrey Beattie, Agnes Eyre and Frank Ford.

Frohman Headquarters Moved

On May 1 William L. Sherrill and the executive staff of the Frohman Corporation move from their present offices at 18 East Forty-first street, to a spacious suite covering the entire northern part of the third floor of the Times building.

Exhibitors to Choose Stories for Production

Vitagraph Believing Theatre Managers Know Public's Desires, Invites Them to Name Six of Chambers' Stories as Blue Ribbons

The decision as to the kind of picture Vitagraph should produce in future lies with the exhibitor. Not in an abstract, but in concrete form will the theatre managers of the country indicate their preference.

A list of "best sellers" has been given the exhibitors, and they are requested to name six of these books which they desire to have screened as Blue Ribbon features.

This plan to allow the exhibitors to name the pictures they desire was made possible through a contract recently entered into between Greater Vitagraph and Robert W. Chambers, the fiction writer, through which Greater Vitagraph purchases the right to screen any six of the Chambers' books which have not been screened.

Not only has Vitagraph purchased the privilege of screening a selection of the Chambers' books, but the company has engaged Mr. Chambers to write two scenarios which will be produced as Special Blue Ribbon features, and probably will be screened in eight-part lengths.

Vitagraph, in submitting the idea to exhibitors for their consideration, has had a form printed on which the names of all the Chambers' books appear. This form is being sent to every exhibitor in the country with a request that he desires screened and return the checked list to Vitagraph headquarters at 1600 Broadway, New York City.

The list submitted to the exhibitors from which they are asked to make a selection of six to be screened, comprises twenty-eight of Chambers' novels.

Exhibitors at many meetings of state branches of the M. P. E. L. A. have criticized some of the producing companies holding, that they are not making pictures that are uniformly good box office attractions. In justification of their complaint, they have declared they are closer to the general public than the manufacturer, and hence are in a position to know what the fan wants in the way of screen amusement. Among the expressions of commendation received by Vitagraph on its announcement, is one from George L. Madison of the John R. Thompson chain of theatres in Chicago.

"Vitagraph is the first of the big producing companies to realize that the exhibitors, who are on their toes, know their audiences. The plan to allow the exhibitors to name the Chambers' books to be picturized is splendid. Chambers is widely read and is well liked by the magazine reading public. I shall make it my business to get in touch with the audiences of our three Chicago theatres and ascertain from the patrons, themselves, which of the Chambers' stories they wish to see on the screen.

Besides making the contract with Robert W. Chambers, Vitagraph now is engaged in screening the novel "The Judgment House" by Sir Gilbert Parker, and Alfred Henry Lewis' Western dramas known as the "Wolfville" series.

Business Story Next Vehicle for Blanche Sweet

"The Silent Partner," a story of big business and love, directed for the Lasky Company by Marshall Neilan, is to be released by Paramount on May 24, with Blanche Sweet in the stellar role.

The story tells of a private secretary, a girl, who saves her employer from ruin in the stock market at the hands of his dishonest partner, only to find he is married. Eventually all ends happily.

Thomas Meighan, George Herbert, Ernest Joy, Mabel Van Buren, Florence Smythe and Mayme Kelso are among the players.

To Write Clean Plays

Guy McConnell, magazine writer, and author of "Pearl of the Army," the Pathé serial, has been engaged to write the stories and scenarios to be filmed and released on behalf of the International Child Welfare League, Inc., of which Mrs. Mary Austin is president.
